■ Although there are no Negroes on the Army football team, there are seven Negroes enrolled in the Academy. However, General Davidson said, "Nobody from the corps of Cadets is going (to the game.) It's too far . . . it's a matter of economy."

The General did say that West Point would not put any restrictions on the sale of its tickets although he admitted he is aware of the Louisiana jim-crow law.

■

KISEDA ASKED the general: "Are you aware that no Northern college has played down there since the law went into effect, that, in other words, there has been a boycott? The General said, "Well, we made our contract four years ago and we're going to abide by it . . . Our responsibility is to play the game. Our policies, insofar as the corps of cadets is concerned, are equal opportunity for everyone."

Kiseda also asked, "But what is your policy on the U. S. Military Academy participating in a segregated sports event such as this?

• "I don't think I'd want to comment on a hypothetical question that hasn't arisen, yet. I just know that we're going through with the game. I think that should answer it."

Kiseda's final shot was, "Aren't you embarrassed somewhat that the U. S. Military Academy will be the first Northern college to play there since the law went into effect?"

Replied the General, "Oh, no. Not a bit. We contracted this game with the university and we are going to honor our contract."

The game at Tulane was scheduled four years ago by Col. Earl Blaik who is coach and athletic director at West Point.

REP. EDWIN WILLIS
Calm Approach

Louisianian Will Direct Court Probe

Advertiser P. 1
Mon. 7-15-57
Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTON, July 14 (AP)—An unsterotyped Southerner with a trace of French accent and a reputation as a lawyer's lawyer heads a congressional inquiry now being organized into recent Supreme Court decisions.

Rep. Edwin E. Willis (D-La) emphasizes on every possible occasion that the job he is supervising is just that—and not "an investigtion of the court."

The stocky, 52-yer-old congressman with the short-cropped graying hair does his parliamentary work vigorously but at low emotional pressure.

Typically, he organized his views on what some of his colleagues call the Supreme Court crisis in 1-2-3-order:

Not deliberately, but in effect, he said, the court is usurping power.

NOT INTENDED

"It is evident from the reaction in Congress that laws are being given effects not intended for them," he told an interviewer. "In the past, when there was an imbalance of power, it was either because of a strong president—you think of Jackson or either of the Roosevelts—or because Congress pushed ahead when the powers of the presidency were not vigorously being used.

"But in either case, the balance was restored by the other elected branch, by the people acting either through Congress or the president.

"We have no real precedent for an imbalance in favor of the third branch, the court. What do we do in such a case?"

P. 8-a

NO ENTHUSIASM

Willis showed no enthusiasm for some proposals already made in Congress to clip the court's wings quickly by constitutional amendment.

"First," he said, "the Senate should and I think will make fuller use of its power to grant or withhold consent to appointments. It will consider the philosophy, ability and judicial temperament of persons nominated to the Supreme Court.

"No presidential appointments now are rejected except for politics—that's a bad use of the 'advice and consent' power; it could just as readily be used well. But of course this is a long-range matter."

The second job to be done, Willis said, is the sort assigned to his subcommittee, but on a continuing basis: "Congress will have to study the decisions handed down to see whether they are consistent with its own legislative intentions and make whatever adjustments are necessary."

Only after these possibilities have been fully developed, Willis said, should congress consider "constitutional reform"—and he added quickly, "I'm not advocating it; I'm only saying that would be the point at which it might be discussed."

His Judiciary subcommittee opens hearings Thursday. It was set up early this month to inquire into the court's much-debated decisions on antisubversive laws, congressional investigations, FBI records, prompt arraignment of prisoners, and other matters.

In his nine years in Congress Willis has worked at such tasks as chairmanship of the virtually cloistered subcommittee on Revision of Laws. He likes putting laws in order—"maybe because I was brought up on the Napoleonic code." Louisiana alone among the states uses a code based on the tidy, all-inclusive French civil law structure.

Willis' home is St. Martinville, one of the few remaining sizable Louisiana towns where the visitor hears as much French as English and candidates had better be bilingual.

Child Beaten For Breaking Jim-Crow Law

Courier P. 4
Sat. 8-31-57
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SHREVEPORT, La.—Mr. and Mrs. Matt Johnson of Tulsa, Okla. have filed in behalf of their son, O. C. Johnson, a $15,000 damage suit against D. D. Hollis, operator of the Hollis Garage here.

Hollis, the parents charged, severely beat seven-year-old C. J. Johnson when he attempted to use a rest room reserved for whites. The incident happened Aug. 9, said the Johnsons.

Following the beating the small boy was treated by a Tulsa neurosurgeon for a severe concussion of the brain and injuries to his right ear and other parts of the body. He was hospitalized.

The petition charges that Hollis struck the boy with a broom despite the fact that the youngster did not know he was violating rules and regulations.

The incident happened in the garage operated by Hollis.

Stand Up And Fight For Rights Writes La. Weekly Reader

Weekly Sat. 8-24-57 P. 6
New Orleans, La.

In the late mail just before deadline time, came a letter signed by C.W. Johnson, that perhaps best expresses the feeling of the majority of Negro citizens that yearn for first class citizenship.

Written simply, sincerely and with dignity, the letter tells of the hopes, disappointments and also the faith of a forward moving people. It tells of progress that has been temporarily impeded by the opponents of the Civil Rights Bill. It also tells of faith for the future when all races live in true freedom.

Probably the most important aspect of the letter is the suggestion as to what the Negro should do to aid the fight for full equality.

Mr. Johnson expresses doubt as to whether a Civil Rights Bill should have to be enacted in a Democratic country, but accepts the fact that there is need for one and consequently it should be passed. It is shameful, he says, how many of our Senators have done everything to keep the bill from passing. The bill is just about dead and has little or no use to the Negro if passed.

Granted that they have won a victory, he continues, but their victory is a false one. What they won is a defeat of our country's crusade for world respect and recognition.

Turning to President Eisenhower, the author of the letter describes him as a "see saw", first up and then down. Johnson commends the President's administration for the progress the race has made but raps him for not taking a firmer stand on the Rights issue.

From the President, Johnson turns his attention to what should be done by our people. He lauds Rev. Martin Luther King for calling a meeting of Southern leaders to map plans for a drive for registration of Negro voters. To the Rev. King's proposal he adds his wish that all Negroes everywhere to become registered voters.

"We can also stop going to segregated entertainment, back or side windows to buy, or to stores that do not appreciate our patronage," he continues. "We would be surprised at what could be gotten if we stuck together," Johnson declared.

Johnson asserts that he becomes angry when he hears that "we are not ready for freedom." A man is born ready for freedom and each day grows with it.

In conclusion the author says that it is time that all our people "stand up and fight for our rights in a Christian way."

"Of all my acquisitions on this earth, what I would have most are Christianity and freedom."

So ends the letter of one man. He has proposed a challenge. Can we answer his challenge?

Athlete Will Leave School Over Race Ban

Daily World Sat. 9-2-57

Atlanta Ga.

BATON ROUGE, La., — (INS) — Louisiana State University officials disclosed Thursday that the school will lose its star sprinter Jack West because of a Louisiana ban on racial mixing in athletic contests.

In a letter written to LUS track coach Al Moreau, West stated he plans to transfer to the University of Kansas this fall because he feels that he should go to a school which permit him to seek national honors in track.

The fleet-footed sophomore from Memphis, Tenn., based his decision on a state law which prohibits white athletes from competiting against Negroes within the state. The school ,additionally, bans LSU athletes from competing with any Negro athletes anywhere.

This policy prevents West from participating in the Drake Relays, NCAA Championships or the U. S. Olympic trials.

West who has equallde the university record of 9.5 seconds for the 100-yard dash and has been clocked unofficially at 9.3, expressed regrets at leaving LSU. But he said he had to make the change in fairness to himself, although it will cost him a year of eligibility in varsity competiton.

West, presently at home in Memphis, won the 100 and 220 yard events in the freshman division of the Southeastern Conference championships at Birmingham last spring.

Both LSU athletic director Jim Corbett and Moreau said they are attempting to persuade West to remain at LSU but so far had no success.

Free Negroes In Early La. History Tops

Daily World Sat. 9-2-57

New Orleans La.

By Marcus Christian

In 1810, four years prior to the first Battle of New Orleans, the city and the entire territory were predominantly Negro. For instance, there were 7,585 free people of color and 34,660 slaves, as compared with 34, 311 whites. Already their wealth, culture and general education--as well as their numbers--placed them far in advantages gained by this group, particularly during the comparatively liberal rule of Spain, became the special desire and envy of Negroes in all parts of the Union. Even when the more rigorous American rule set in, their wealth ease of living attracted free Negroes from other states, who were willing to face even imprisonment in order to take a chance on slipping into the state unobserved and becoming a part of the general population. The fast-increasing wealth of planters in the sugar regions--among whom were many free men of color--made them the awe of Northern cities, in which parts they were referred to as "sugar barons."

Many aspects of Spanish rule in those early days might even be compared with a full bestowal of civil rights upon the Negro in our present day. This was one of the reasons why Spanish rule was met with much hostility by French-speaking whites of Creole birth. The fact that the Spaniards also monopolized administrative government positions was also a bone of contention, but one which could not be chewed very closely. Therefore, most of the charges hurled against them were mainly in regard to the Negro population, free and slave. By the time Governor Estevan Miro (1785-92), had acquired a French Creole wife, he had also acquired a French Creole's outlook in regard to free Negroes. (It might be well to point out here that although the terms, "free Negro" and "free person of color" are used here synonymously, it was not at all so in the early days or even later ante bellum years. Then a free Negro was a free black, while a free person of color always showed some admixture of white blood.) It was against the free women of color that Governor Miro issued some of his sternest decrees--a group whom the white women seemed almost on the verge of losing out to.

There are three acknowledged facts which mainly account for the rise colored class and and the hatred of this class by white Creoles. The first extraordinary fact is that only under Spanish rule could a slave bring suit for his own freedom, provided that he or an interested person had the necessary purchase price. The second was the entry into New Orleans in 1809 of 1,917 free Negroes who had originally emigrated from the islands of Martinique and St. Domingue. The authorities, apprehensive of the large Negro population already in their midst, sought to turn the tide of immigration--particularly the Negro part of it--to other ports. A third fact accounts for the rise of the free colored class in the social scale. - You will never find this fact mentioned in your popular histories or accounts of Louisiana. This third fact was the existence of a Spanish law which was closely akin to the later ante bellum one of "whites by law." But here was the great difference: under the American rule one could not pass over into the ranks of "pure whites" until they had proved to the satisfaction of the courts and absence of the Negro drop, whereas the Spanish authorities seemed interested only in the amount. Edward Byron Reuther, in his book, The Mulatto in the United States, mentions the old Spanish law of "que se tenga por blanco," which operated in Spanish colonies, whereby a colonist was reckoned as being white when he had only one-sixth of Indian or Negro blood in his veins. The ranking white Creole, Bernard Marigny, once placed this privilege at the point when a person of color had "become within four degrees of a white man." and publicly declared in 1845: "I could name several families whose color depends on that law to recognize them as white." Yet, in these so-called "enlightened days," a strong democratic central government in Washington cannot do for a sorely-harassed Ralph Dupas an act which one hundred and sixty years ago would have been considered as a matter of course by the local officials of a monarchial government in far away Spain! Today, in modern, democratic Louisiana, if a man can be proved to possess as much as one-thousandth of a drop of Negro blood, he is by law still a Negro. And there are legions!

Negroes were so well treated under Spanish rule that, as late as 1814, Governor Claiborne was still apprehensive of their attachment to Spain--rather than to the United States, which had only pushed them farther down in the social and political scales. It was this rumored disaffection towards the United States, and what had already transpired in St. Domingue, which motivated the governor more strongly towards a policy of mildness and kindness to the free colored group. Although he was a far greater republican than subsequent histories have shown, his interest in this racial group was not altogether altruistic. He had hopes, openly stated and documented, that this free colored group could provide him with about 800 soldiers for the hard-prest American forces. He had been struggling to get free men of color enrolled as an integral part of the territorial militia for many years, and his success in this direction was mainly due to his continued treatment of colored persons as human beings and American citizens.

(See Next Article: GENERAL JACKSON AND THE FREE MEN OF COLOR.)

Police Arrest 22 In Violence Outbreak

Wed. Sat. Tues. Ala. P.

Sat. 11-30-57

ALEXANDRIA, La. — (INS) — Police arrested 22 persons Wednesday as a result of the outbreak of violence between Alexandria Negro civilians and Negro airmen from nearby England Air Force Base.

Assistant Alexandria Police Chief Martin R. Hickman said those arrested were part of a mob of some 50 Negroes who Tuesday chased four Negro airmen with sticks after one of the airmen fired a pistol in a cafe near the downtown area. The airmen was arrested and charged with firing a pistol within the city limits.

It was the second such incident within the past week. An Air Force spokesman at England described the situation existing between civilian and Air Force Negroes as "tense" and added that the incidents "are being investigated."

Police, emphasizing that the latest outbreak was not a gang war, said the city Negroes chased the airmen some 10 blocks and then abandoned their pursuit.

Most of those arrested were juveniles, police said, with 10 of them booked on disturbing the peace charges.

Officers said they were as yet unable to learn the cause of the ill feeling between the civilian Negroes and the Negro airmen, but an Air Force official expressed the belief that it was due to "economics."

He said he felt that the city Negroes resented the England Negroes because of their "greater incomes."

Police stressed the fact that no white persons were involved and that it in no way involved racial antagonisms.

Archbishop Refuses To Comment On Anti-Integration Petition

Daily World Sat. 8-10-57 Atlanta, Ga.

P. 1

NEW ORLEANS, — (INS) — Archbishop Francis J. Rummel refused Thursday to comment on a petition sent to Pope Pius XII by a group of Catholic Laymen requesting the pontiff to order the Archbishop to cease attempts to integrate New Orleans Parochial schools.

The Archbishop said the group, association of Catholic laymen, an organization he has ordered to disband under the threat of excommunication, has the "recognized right" to petition the vatican.

He added, however:

OUT OF DEFERENCE

"We prefer, as interested party and out of deference to the holy see, not to comment on the manner in which the appeal is couched or the accuracy of its contents."

Jackson G. Ricau executive secretary of the pro-segregation group, announced yesterday that the appeal asks the Pope to decree that segregation is not morally wrong.

The appeal stems from the Archbishop's declaration last year that "segregation is morally wrong and sinful because it denies the universality of the redemption."

Ricau said the group, whose declared aim is to "determine if communist are associated with the integration movement," is also appealing the Archbishop's order that it disband. He ordered it last year to discontinue its activities because it opposed church policies.

MATTER OF MORALS

In their appeal to the pontiff, the association declared that "no bishop has the authority to define a matter of morals, but is limited to teaching that which has already defined by papal authority."

Referring to the Archbishop's aim for integration parochial schools as a "strange new doctrine," the petition stated:

"...The clergy and the church itself have participated and are participating in the perpetuation of this type of segregation by... sanctioning the establishment and maintenance of separate schools and churches."

EDUCATED CATHOLICS

The petition went on to say that Archbishop's stand has "demoralized educated Catholics and scandalized uneducated ones."

The association stated that "considerable propaganda" has spotlighted segregation in the South and ignored racial discrimination in other sections of the country and in areas throughout the world.

To implement the declaration that segregation is "sinful," the archbishop ordered the parochial integrated on a gradual basis. Church leaders have indicated that some of the white Catholics schools have admitted Negro students but refused to say how integration has been accomplished because it would cause "embarrasment."

The church leaders have stated that there would be no widespread integration this September when the school re-open.

There have been reports that Catholic schools fear a drop in attendence if they integrate on a large scale before the public schools do because parents who oppose integration would take their children out of the church schools and place them in the still-segregated public schools.

Laymen in New Orleans Bypass Bishop, Ask Pope Stop Integration

Constitution Fri. 8-9-57 Atlanta, Ga.

P. 2

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. — (AP) — The Association of Catholic Laymen—bypassing its archbishop—today asked Pope Pius XII in Rome to stop racial integration in the church.

In a letter that challenged the right of Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel to define a matter of morals, the group of New Orleans Catholics asked:

1. That Archbishop Rummel be requested "to take no further steps" toward integration of white and Negro Catholics pending a papal pronouncement, and,

2. That the papacy decree that segregation is not morally wrong and sinful as the archbishop has said it is.

The letter also listed types of segregation in regions of the nation and the world outside the South.

Archbishop Rummel said he had no immediate comment. He said he would issue a statement later.

"For over two years now," the letter to Pope Pius said, "conscientious and sincere Catholics in the archdiocese of New Orleans have been confronted with the strange new doctrine, propounded by our archbishop, his excellency, Joseph Francis Rummel, that the segregation of the white and Negro races is 'morally wrong and sinful.'

"Indeed, this concept is both new and strange, for even the clergy and the church itself have participated and are participating in the perpetuation of this type of segregation by, among other things, sanctioning the establishment and maintenance of separate churches and schools.

"Despite the fact that no competent attempt has been made to offer a conclusive proof to establish the validity of the principle, nor to demonstrate a bishop's authority to define a matter of morals, Catholics have been admonished that they are bound in conscience under pain of possible serious sin to accept it."

As a result, the letter said, educated Catholics have become demoralized and uneducated ones scandalized.

"For the good of souls," said the letter, "something must be done and done swiftly."

The letter said some clergy had advised the laymen that the Pope would not consider the question worthy of direct attention, but "we can not be convinced that this is so."

Catholic consciences, the letter continued, seek to find out "whether the separation of any people or race from any other people or race is in itself 'morally wrong and sinful.'"

"We respectfully submit that, viewed in this light, the resolution of this question of worldwide significance becomes a most serious obligation of your holiness," the letter said.

Jackson G. Ricau, association executive secretary, said the letter closed with an assurance that the association would accept as final any papal decree.

The association's letter came only a few weeks before the start of the 1957-58 parochial school year.

The archbishop, however, indicated that conditions must be right before he would order integration. There has been no indication whether the traditional segregation would be abolished when Catholic schools open next month.

Emile Wagner Jr., association president and a New Orleans lawyer, said the association was formed in the spring of 1956 and its membership numbered "some thousands." He later estimated membership at 2,000 to 3,000.

Wagner, who made the letter public, said the association had ceased operations when Archbishop Rummel last year issued a decree ordering its discontinuance.

The letter emphasized that it sought not only a ruling on the morals of segregation as it affects the Southern Negro, but said that while segregation of Negroes from whites "obtains openly here, it is equally true that it obtains throughout the rest of the nation, although great pains are taken to deny the fact in many areas."

"Besides," it said, "there are other types of segregation in this country as well as in the rest of the world: The American from the Mexican in Texas; the Caucasian from the Oriental on our Pacific Coast; the Caucasian from the Indian in the Midwest and Northwest; the Christian from the Jew in the Northeast; the white from the Negro in Africa, and, among others, the caste system in India."

Archbishop Rummel has been a leader in efforts to integrate Catholics in the archdiocese of New Orleans. In October 1955, Rummel suspended masses at St. Cecilia Mission at Jesuit Bend, 12 miles south of New Orleans, after parishioners objected to a Negro priest's being assigned to the mission by the archbishop. The suspension is still in effect.

Pope To Rule On Segregation

NEW ORLEANS — "For the good of souls, something must be done (about a bishop's integration order) and done swiftly."

That was the crux of a letter written to Pope Pius XII in Rome last week by the Association of Catholic Laymen — bypassing its archbishop — demanding that he stop racial integration in the Catholic Church.

In its letter, which challenged the right of Archbishop Joseph F. Rummell to define a matter of morals, the group of New Orleans Catholics demanded:

* * *

1. THAT ARCHBISHOP Rummell be requested to "take no further steps" toward integration of white and colored Catholics pending a papal pronouncement, and

2. That the papacy decree that segregation is not morally wrong and sinful, as the archbishop has said it is.

The letter went further and listed the various types of segregation practiced in regions of this country and the world outside of the South.

Approached by newsmen, Archbishop Rummell said he had no immediate comment, but indicated that he would issue a statement on the controversy at a later date.

* * *

"FOR OVER TWO YEARS," the letter said, "conscientious and sincere Catholics in the Archdiocese of New Orleans have been confronted with the strange new doctrine propounded by our archbishop.

"His Excellency Joseph Francis Rummell (holds) that the segregation of the white and colored races is 'morally wrong and sinful.'

"Indeed, this concept is both new and strange, for even the clergy and the church itself have participated and are participating in the perpetuation of this type of segregation by, among other things, sanctioning the establishment and maintenance of separate churches and schools.

* * *

"DESPITE THE FACT that no competent attempt has been made to offer a conclusive proof to establish the validity of the principle, nor to demonstrate a bishop's authority to define a matter of morals, Catholics have been admonished that they are bound in conscience under pain of possible serious sin to accept it."

As a result, the letter added, educated Catholics have become demoralized and uneducated ones scandalized. "For the good of souls, something must be done and done swiftly," it said.

The group told the pope that some clergymen had advised that he would not consider the question they put to him worthy of direct attention but added that "we cannot be convinced that this is so."

* * *

CATHOLIC consciences, it said, seek to find out "whether the separation of any people or race from any other people or race is in itself morally wrong and sinful."

"We respectfully submit that, viewed in this light, the resolution of this question of worldwide significance becomes a most serious obligation of Your Holiness," the letter declared.

Jackson G. Ricau, executive secretary of the association, said the letter closed with the assurance to the pope that the association would accept as final any papal decree.

Emile Wagner Jr., association president, who made the letter public, said the organization had ceased operations when Archbishop Rummell ordered its dissolution last year.

He said its members number from 2,000 to 3,000.

Jim Crow Law Bars Negro From World School Meet

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Jim Crow laws this week prevented a colored school administrator from attending an international convention here.

Oliver Wilson, a Los Angeles county school administrator, was turned away from a meeting of the Association of School Business Officials last Monday after he was told by the executive secretary of the group that racial laws prohibited his attending the convention.

WILSON, A native of Plaquemines, La., said he would not try to force the issue, but returned to California. He said he anticipated the incident would happen, but added that he felt a moral obligation to make an attempt to attend the meeting.

"I came here in pursuit of academic experience that would help me do a better job," he said. "My school boards authorized me to come."

HE SAID he hoped convention authorities would remedy the situation by meeting in cities that permit integration.

Wilson is a graduate of Southern University, near Baton Rouge, La., and the University of Illinois. He also attended Louisiana State University, the University of Southern California, Los Angeles State College and is presently at Southwestern Law School in Los Angeles.

He was named business manager of the Enterprise School District in Los Angeles County July 1.

Principals Turn Down Segregation Request In New Orleans; Pupils Attend Concert

By O. C. W. Taylor

New Orleans — School principals and heads of partne-teacher associations of seven public and parochial schools in New Orleans turned down a plea for them to have their children stay away from the concert given recently at the Booker T. Washington high school for Negro children.

The principals said that they received the plea only on the morning of the concert and if they had wanted to act they would not have had time to re-organize their plans.

Principals never act in these matters, said another, "This is always in the hands of the parent-teacher organization, and there was not sufficient time for them to consider the matter.

Three Negro girls in New Orleans and Baton Rouge had been refused the honor of singing with the all-white symphony orchestra as has been the custom for years. This was due to the recent law in Louisana against race mixing in athletics and entertainment. Many citizens and organizations had requested that the school's just refuse to send their children to these concerts to show the resentment of the Negro group against unjust discrimination. No statement was made as to why the matter was so late in being considered.

Some few years ago resentment was caused in schools because Negro children at the McDonogh monument on Founders' Day were forced to stand until all white children had passed and then allowed to pass the monument and deposit their flowers upon it.

Organizations including the Mothers' clubs and other Parent-Teacher organizations objected and as a consequence every school in town except one refused to go to the monument. Since then not a single child has attended these ceremonies because they have not changed the line of march.

Big Town Talk

By BUTCH CURRY

New Orleans, the Sleeping Giant

NEW ORLEANS — Cuddling lazily in the crescent bend of the Mississippi River near the delta are some 200,000 and more Negroes dozing in a dreamless sleep while anti-segregation fights erupt around and about them. Their sleep brings them contentment and happiness in a false sense of security, knowing not what tomorrow may bring.

That crescent bend in the river harbors the bustling city of New Orleans, cocky and proud of its French and Spanish descent, with its Negroes intermingled in many ways and another for hundreds of years. They were in Bienville's group when Le Sieur laid out the old city. As is customary of the French, relations between the races were of the best when it came to intermingling.

■

DOWN THROUGH the years and following the American purchase of what is now Louisiana, there has been a sort of subtle understanding between the people here. There developed what is called the "Creole," a real conglomeration of mankind—Indians, Africans, French and Spanish — which soon branched out into different groups and finally settled into two races following the American concept of racial identity — Negroes and whites.

But it was in the "off element" that resulted in the intermingling that brought about the racial differences. Some branched off into the white group, while others blended into the Negro group. There developed friction and hatred.

■

IN THIS stands the story of present-day New Orleans. Unidentified Negroes against unidentified Negroes and, vice versa, the whites. So when the time arrives that integration becomes the foreword, a general mix-up is the picture. The two races in the crescent bend of the river at its delta, nestling in a cozy thought of pleasant racial relations, are at the crossroads. To drop the racial barrier becomes a real problem.

While Negroes in Montgomery, Birmingham, Tallahassee, Baton Rouge and other urban centers of the South forged ahead in the legal battles to develop human and civil rights, New Orleans remains the sleeping giant as hundreds of thousands of its citizens snooze, resting in the belief that everything is all right. New Orleans Negroes do not possess the racial pride and fighting spirit of which other Negroes elsewhere in the South are proud and for which they are willing to subject themselves to the sacrifices involved. Integration will be hard, and probably last, coming to Bienville's city.

■

SIDEWALK MEMENTOS: Three killings and eight shootings marred the Christmas holiday season in the Crescent City —all involving Negroes. Another can be added to this as police authorities investigated the death of a 16-year-old femme whose body was found Christmas morning on the Agriculture St. dump. She had been beaten to death, and a large piece of blood-stained concrete was discovered near the body.

There has been only one test of the local bus lines, and that was made by the Rev. A. C. Alexander several weeks ago when he rode the Freret and Jackson lines in the sections ordinarily reserved for white patrons. Nothing happened and consequently nothing developed. It seems it will have to be done on a mass scale. In the Rev. Mr. Alexander's case, one white patron objected and got up and moved to another seat.

Belated acknowledgement of holiday greetings from Houston's Pat Henderson, Yvonne LaFargue in Los Angeles, Dillard and Xavier Universities, Lorraine Laiche of Reserve, La.; YMCA's Bill Rucker, Ballantine Ale's George Hopkins in Philadelphia, Baton Rouge's Jimmy Vaughn, public relationist Earl Wright, civic leader Lura Manning, Louisiana Life's prexy, Atty. Prudhomme Dejoie; former prizefighter Don Robertineo, National Bank of Commerce, Delta Mercury, Inc.; Jack Fisher.

Park Suit Postponed Again, Feb. 6

Hearings on a suit seeking to open the New Orleans City Park Golf course on a democratic basis for all linksmen was postponed and reset for February 6, 1957 in Judge J. Skelly Wright's division of federal district court.

The motion for postponement was made by Attorney Louis B. Porterie, counsel for the defendants. Attorney A. P. Tureaud brought the suit in behalf of Mandeville Detiege and the Crescent City Golf Club.

The delay was granted when Porterie asked for a continuance because he had another case on the date of the scheduled hearing which was January 16th.

The original suit was filed nearly seven years ago before Judge Wright. Five years ago the federal judge ordered the park officials to halt their "cat and mouse" schemes with Negro golfers who wanted to use the links. As a result, Negroes were permitted to use the facilities on "Tuesdays and Fridays."

But in light of action taken in other southern cities, this arrangement is out of step with the trend of the times. Golf links in Houston, Louisville, Atlanta, and Charlotte are now available to all without restrictions.

No Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS—There'll be no King Zulu or any other participation of colored people in the Mardi Gras celebration this year if the United Clubs Inc., have their way.

Spurred by the Rev. T. J. Jemison, money generally spent on carnival frolicking and other social activities will be diverted to a "total freedom fund" to finance legal attacks on his and other segregation laws of Louisiana.

Injunction Sought To Make City Comply With U.S. Law

A halt to Jim Crow city streetcars and buses was asked in a suit filed in federal district court last Friday, spotlighting the veiled hypocrisy of Southland Democracy which forces certain citizens into legal action before they can acquire constitutionally-guaranteed rights.

The joint action was taken by the Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., president of the New Orleans Inter-Denominational Ministerial Alliance, and Dr. W. R. Adams, head of the New Orleans Improvement League through Attorney A. P. Tureaud.

Other attorneys assisting Tureaud included Earl J. Amedee, I. M. Augustine, Louis Berry, Robert F. Collins, Alvin Jones, Revius O. Ortique and A. M. Trudeau.

Named defendants in the suit were Mayor DeLesseps S. Morrison; Councilman Paul Burke, Fred Cassibry, Glenn Clasen, Walter Duffourc, James E. Fitzmorris, Jr., and Victor H. Schiro; Paul Ristrop, director of the city's utilities department; Police Supt. Provosty A. Dayries; George S. Denwiddie, president of the New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and the corporation itself.

The suit asked that a three-judge court hear the case, asking also for an injunction restraining city officials and others from enforcing state laws requiring segregation on buses and streetcars, and for a declaratory judgment defining the rights of the plaintiffs.

In seeking a speedy hearing, the plaintiffs contend that Negro citizens suffered great injury, inconvenience and humiliation as a result of the denial of their constitutional rights to use such facilities on an unsegregated basis without fear of intimidation."

The document charged that the plaintiffs have no "plain, adequate or complete remedy to redress these wrongs other than by this suit," noting that any other remedy would "be attended by such uncertainties and delays as to deny substantive relief and would involve a multiplicity of suits and cause further injury, damage and inconvenience."

The suit explained that Negro leaders met with NOPSI officials on Janury 9 and were told by Dinwiddie "that the applicable laws of Louisiana have not been reviewed by the U. S. Supreme Court and must...be complied with."

Showing further the need for justice and fairplay, the suit asked that the three-judge court declare "any and all practices and usages" pursuant to which the plaintiffs and all other Negro citizens of New Orleans are segregated on buses and streetcars null and void and in violation of the 14th amendment of the constitution.

Louisiana Would Kill Segregation Law Suits

BATON ROUGE, Feb. 9 (AP) — Louisiana asked dismissal yesterday of suits striking at two laws designed to force out Negroes attending white colleges.

But U.S. District Judges Herbert Christenberry and J. Skelly Wright delayed a ruling, giving both sides 10 days to file briefs and 10 days more for answering the new pleas.

Who Are Perez 'Negroes?'

Weekly Pilot New Orleans, La.

Last week the Citizens Council reached the height of silliness and utter ridiculousness.

The first sign of silliness was indicated in Leander Perez's remarks "Can you imagine them bringing that fellow-traveling, Negro agitator in here, a rabble rouser who will stir up OUR Negroes?"

Times 2.16.57

Since when do We Negroes belong to Perez or any other of his cohorts. Slavery went out of existence many, many years ago. Negroes in this state or anywhere else do not belong to Perez despite the fact that he might think so. If he was talking about owning the white and colored citizens in his parish, that would sound more like the truth, but even that is being strenuously doubted these days.

Another point of ridiculousness is that the Citizens Council disapproves of so-called "outside agitators", yet they have repeatedly brought in outside agitators from Georgia, North Louisiana, and Mississippi, to rabble rouse our whole community of decent, Negro and white, law-abiding citizens. Since "free speech" is one of the basic freedoms guaranteed under the U. S. Constitution (which everybody else seems to clearly understand) no one has opposed the importation of outside white rabble rousers, by the Citizens Council. Fair play and justice is something they have little knowledge of and the featured speaker, Sen. Willie Rainach, a small time upstate politician with big ambitions, has none.

A third point of silliness was found in Dr. Irwin's remarks that he does not believe "our people should be called upon to contribute to the support of organizations which advocate and practice integration". Reference here is made to the Urban League and the YWCA.

We wonder if Dr. Irwin believes and would urge that members of the Citizens Council not pay Federal taxes because they support our armed forces and federal agencies on the grounds that they practice and advocate integration. To be consistently ridiculous, he should.

Further, the Rev. Martin Luther King, whom Perez smears as a rabble rouser, is a law-abiding minister of the gospel, who is dedicated to non-violence in the Negro's fight for the dignity of first class citizenship. Even though he has been the object of two or three bombings to snuff out his life, he has not advocated violence. Instead, he has asked only prayers of forgiveness for those frustrated and distorted souls who sought to take his life. Obviously, Perez does not know a rabble rouser when he hears one. If there were any men in Perez's crowd of the character, courage and caliber of Rev. King, Leander, the "Great White Father," wouldn't be leading them around by the nose.

Perez, Rainach and Irwin need to read up on their world history and find out what has been going on outside of Louisiana in the last half of this 20th Century. Oppressed people, black and white, all over the world are stretching their muscles peacefully for freedom. Maybe they haven't heard of the Hungarians, of the Africans, Indians and Indonesians. They are tired of self appointed dictators, bigots and the like exploiting them in a world of plenty. They want to live in security, peace and dignity. They have the faith in the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God that the above mentioned sneer at and fear.

Climaxing this sorry spectacle was Dr. Irwin's belief that the Council should oppose the Observance of National Brotherhood Week in the City Schools. How silly can you get?

Finally, two inconsistencies in the reporting of the story were noted in the fact that the place of the meeting was omitted and no mention was made of the fact that the White Citizens Council has undergone a change in name to just plain Citizens Council, deleting the word white. Perhaps they have integrated those rare Negroes Sen. Rainach said "realize" he is "working for" the Negro in his frantic efforts to maintain segregation.

Courts Delay Action On Dixie Segregation Cases

Call Fri. 2-15-57 Kansas City, Mo.

By HARRY TRIMBORN

NEW ORLEANS. — (INS) — Courts in Louisiana and Alabama Friday delayed final action on criminal and civil suits stemming from the broiling segregation controversy.

In Baton Rouge, Negroes seeking to have a Louisiana segregation law designed to keep members of their race from attending white colleges declared unconstitutional were told by a federal court that they would have to wait 10 to 20 days before a decision could be reached.

At the same time, a Montgomery, Ala., city court decided to turn over the case of seven white men accused of hurling bombs into Negro churches and homes to the next county grand jury.

Also pending court action are identical suits in New Orleans and Baton Rouge seeking a federal declaratory judgement on bus segregation in both cities.

In Friday's federal court action in Baton Rouge, a two-judge panel continued a temporary injunction restraining four state colleges from denying admission of Negroes who do not have so-called "eligibility certificates" for at least 10 days.

The court held the additional time was needed to allow both the Negro plaintiffs and state officials to file additional pleadings. The court also ordered another 0 days to allow both sides to submit additional briefs in the case.

The court action stemmed from a state law, passed last year, which requires all students, both Negro and white, to submit "certificates of eligibility and good moral character" to officials of colleges they wish to attend.

The certificates are to be signed by officials of the students' graduating high schools. But a companion law makes any such official signing the documents on behalf of Negroes liable to dismissal from his job. The law states that any school official can be fired if he "aids integration."

State officials at the hearing maintained that the certificate law is not unconstitutional because it applies to all students regardless of race. They pointed out that a number of white students have been denied admission to colleges because of failure to submit the certificates.

In the Alabama city, the recorder's court ruled at a short preliminary hearing of the seven accused bomb-tossers—an action growing out of the famous year-long bus boycott which resulted in a federal court order striking down racial separation on the city's buses—that the case be turned over to the next session of the Montgomery county grand jury.

The court ordered the grand jury to consider the charges against all seven men, which range from misdemeanors to felonies, including charges against two of the men which carry capitol punishment sentences.

The suits seeking an end to bus segregation in the two Louisiana cities have as yet not appeared on court calendars.

Plaintiffs in both suits ask that a declaratory judgement be rendered declaring the state's bus racial laws be declared unconstitutional in view of the Montgomery decision.

State and transportation officials have maintained that the Montgomery decision is of no effect in Louisiana, and voiced their determination to continue operating the buses under state segregation laws unless a "court of competent jurisdiction rules otherwise."

APPEALS COURT HITS LOUISIANA SEGREGATION

Daily Tribune Page

Orders Integration in New Orleans

Times 3-2-57

Chicago Ill.

New Orleans, March 1 (U.P.)—The United States 5th Circuit Court of Appeals today declared Louisiana's school segregation laws unconstitutional.

The court ordered New Orleans to desegregate its public schools "with all deliberate speed."

The court's opinion upheld a ruling by Federal District Judge J. Skelly Wright. The Orleans parish [county] school board had appealed the ruling.

O. K.'s "Reasonable Steps"

The appeals court, in an opinion written by Judge Elbert Parr Tuttle, said the school board, if it shows good faith in accepting the principle of desegregation, would be allowed "such reasonable steps in the process of desegregation as appears to be helpful in avoiding unseemly confusion and turmoil."

The appeals court overruled every objection raised by the school board.

Tell Board's Arguments

Board attorneys had said:

1. Negroes could not sue the state of Louisiana.

2. Negroes did not exhaust all possibilities of relief before suing.

3. Louisiana segregation laws were constitutional.

Guest Editorial

Registration, Respect, Responsibility

"Honor thy neighbor as thy self" has been handed down to us throughout the centuries as one of the teachings of Christ as He appeared upon this earth. However, when we reflect upon the ill-respect with which so many of us treat ourselves, the disregard for neighbors and peers is viewed as commonplace.

As we observe, it appears that we have been prisoners of our history and victims of a dual society for such a lengthy period that we have become almost totally blind in accepting the back door entrances, buying through little slits in the wall, sitting behind signs labeled "For Colored Patrons Only", working in specified menial jobs and well defined professional positions—living as second class citizens. For the most part our total environment — home, church, school, community, etc., by their separate and by no means equal nature,—has promoted and contributel to a false security and semi-satisfaction for many years to varying degrees in most of the forty-eight states. It is this type of understanding that Earl Long, governor of the State of Louisiana, referred to in his statement to the press that, "We in Louisiana get along with our Negroes. We understand each other."

The United Clubs, Inc., and its one hundred-fifty associated clubs, recognize the fact that changes are coming about in rapid fashion through federal legislation and public opinion. But it is easily observed that minority groups are, for the most part, not keeping pace with the change by corresponding changes in their individual attitudes and values. There appears too little personal effort on the individual's part to improve his quality of thinking; to voice his objection to the bold and defiant action of school boards to comply with the Supreme Court decree; to thoroughly prepare himself to meet the challenge of coming social changes; to take advantage of the gains already won. As long as we follow this outdated mode of thinking and acting we are following the pattern of making righteous men out of the racial bigots who say that Negroes are satisfied and do not want to live as first class citizens. We are giving cause for attention to those political demagogues who brand us as heathens, only a few decades past, eating our young.

Develop more self respect by thinking, acting, dressing, and behaving as first class citizens of your community. Do not buy from merchants who insist that you stand outside and spend the same money that others are using for legal tender inside. Demand that your dollar purchase the same comfort and position as those spent by others or respond by your absence from those recreational or even cultural events where the opposite is the case. To ignore existing conditions is to condone such and escape from expressing discontent.

Equal job opportunities is a constant concern of the United Clubs. It is one thing to talk about these conditions but actions speak louder than words ever dared. Registration in large numbers and turning 'Bloc Votes' in the direction of the candidate for mayor who assures equal opportunity to Negroes for jobs in the new City Hall and other municipal jobs will promote more respect to each participating individual and the group as a whole than ever previously held.

It is believed that Negroes spend more for whiskey and beer than any other group. If this is true, it is only another means of escape from reality. Why not spend this money (if we must) with those companies which hire Negroes as salesmen, brewmen, managers, helpers, etc. Token employment should not be accepted. Within two weeks breweries who do not employ Negroes in any self respecting capacity would be so hard hit that they would soon fall in line with the Negroes' bid for respect. But it will take sacrifice on the part of all who want to act, think and believe as first class citizens of the United States of America and the State of Louisiana. Join the United Clubs', Inc. bid for Registration Respect and Responsibility. Demand more education, economic security and respect by casting aside the apathy that has been ours and using our ballots and dollars wisely.

—Raymond B. Floyd

Scientist Won't Bow

'I won't be jim crowed' --Dr. Young

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 4-20-57

BALTIMORE

"I will not, as a scientist, be jim crowed and shoved around with any special consideration when I have a scientific contribution to make to this society—it's their loss—not mine."

These were the words used by Dr. M. Wharton Young, distinguished scientist and a member of the medical faculty at Howard University, as he made clear his decision not to attend the American Association of Anatomists meeting here April 16th to 19th.

Dr. Young will not attend the meeting because of the hotel discrimination existing here in Baltimore.

He has a confirmed reservation for the Lord Baltimore Hotel but he has been informed by Dr. Vernon Krahl of the University of Maryland Medical faculty that your "reservation at the Lord Baltimore may not be honored and you will not be welcomed at this hotel which is headquarters for the meeting."

* * *

DR. KRAHL told the AFRO that he had returned Dr. Young's $2 registration fee only to get it back in the mail from Dr. Young with a memo declaring that if he (Dr. Young) had wanted his check back he had "intelligence and initiative enough" to ask for it.

Commenting on his decison to bypass the meeting Dr. Young told the AFRO:

"From what the man (Dr. Krahl) has said...what the Governor (McKeldin) has said and what the Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems has said, they don't intend to treat me as any other guest in the hotel. So I don't intend to come."

* * *

THE REFERENCE to the Governor was the result of a letter that Dr. Young wrote to the state's chief executive asking him to investigate the matter.

The Governor replied that he was distressed by Dr. Young's telegram and is wholeheartedly against such discrimination. The letter was referred to the Interracial Commission which informed Dr. Young

"We regret that fact that you have been placed in the position of possibly being embarrassed when you request your reservation to be honored in April to the Lord Baltimore Hotel...

"We apologize for the practice of our local hotel owners," the Commission said through William Rogers Sr., the chairman.

Mr. Rogers reported at the Commission meeting on Wednesday that he had contacted Nelson Busick, manager of the Lord Baltimore and had been informed that the hotel's policy would remain the same regardless of who might be involved.

The chairman also said that when he asked why the Lord Baltimore continues to accept "mixed" conventions, the reply was that the hotel "needs the business."

* * *

TO PREVIOUSLY voiced suggestions that Dr. Young and other colored scientists stay in Washington and commute to Baltimore for the meeting, Dr. Young said

"They're always willing to let you act in a jim crowed way to accommodate them. But I'm a scientist, I'm not going to let them push me around. Now I'll either be accommodated as other scientists are accommodated or I won't come to Baltimore—that's my position.

"I took that position originally and I don't intend to retreat from it one iota."

A MEMBER of the American Association of Anatomists for over 20 years, Dr. Young was scheduled to present four papers, one of them dealing with "The Role of the Brain in Baldness," an area in which he has done extensive research.

Restating his intention of either fulfilling his reservation at the Lord Baltimore or not coming to Baltimore, at all, Dr. Young said that he was planning to fly to Chicago to the meeting of the Federation of Scientists which is to be held at the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

"The Federated Scientists have taken the position that we will not meet any place where scientists will be embarrassed or humiliated when they come to report for their original research. So I'm planning to go to Chicago."

(The Chicago convention is being held at the same time as the one in Baltimore.)

* * *

INFORMED THAT the Sheraton-Belvedere in Baltimore had recently lodged several colored guest, Dr. Young said

"Let them, the anatomists change their headquarters to the Sheraton if the Sheraton is a more liberal hotel. That's what they should do, or either hold all their activities on the Johns Hopkins University campus."

"They could do," Dr. Young continued, "they'll never shove me around. And we've got to meet this issue some time sooner or later and I think it's time we meet it now."

* * *

DR. YOUNG, who had three places on the international program in Paris, and represented the Anatomists in Tokyo, where he taught for a year, was blunt in his assertion

"I just will not come to Baltimore, although it's only 40 miles away."

Dr. Young had also been requested to give a demonstration of an original technique involving the making of a metal cast of the inner ear, but he said he was rejecting the request rather than attend the meeting under the present circumstances.

"I'm going to be treated and act like any other scientist is treated. And my withdrawing from the Association meeting this year is their loss, not mine.

"You see it makes a difference whether you go there with your hand out to get something or whether you're going to give something. And so I've taken the position that I'm too old to be jim crowed."

"It's entirely too late in world history and certainly in my own life to compromise with these Ku Kluxers and what-have-you."

The 52-year-old doctor also said:

"We have no appreciation for scientists here. The only thing we appreciate is somebody like Elvis Presley or somebody who can sing and dance."

Dr. Frank H. J. Figge, membe of the committee on arrangments, has said earlier that "hotel discrimination reflects on us and it's giving me a headache."

It was also reported by Dr. Figge that a Dr. Amorora of London, an African, will attend the meeting but will stay on the Hopkins campus.

Hit him where it hurts

Afro-American p. 4

AN EDITORIAL

We doff our hats to Drs. Wharton Young and Montague Cobb, both of Howard, for declining to attend any meeting of the American Association of Anatomists as long as it is held in a place like Baltimore where hotels discriminate against colored patrons. Baltimore, Md.

Both are important men in the anatomy field and have considerable influence in the association.

Had Dr. Young attended the Baltimore meeting, it was his plan to read a paper expounding his theory that baldness is due to the fact that growing brains push out the roots of hair.

It is his belief that older men not blessed with shiny domes are really fat heads whose brains are not expanding.

Not being experts on the subject, we do not feel qualified to express any opinion on Dr. Young's theory. Sat. 4-27-57

We think, however, that it might be a good idea for Dr. Young at some later date to come over and examine the brains of certain Baltimore hotel owners.

As to the American Association of Anatomists, we are confident that delegates this week will vote never to meet in a city like Baltimore again.

If this protest initiated by Drs. Young and Cobb is followed long enough, it is certain to make an appreciable dent in the lucrative convention business that otherwise would go to jim-crow cities.

In this way, we can hope to hit jim crow where it hurts him the most—in his pocketbook.

DR. M. WHARTON YOUNG

"I refuse to be jim-crowed . . . It's their loss, not mine . . ."

Community Pool Excise Tax Killed

Post & Times Herald p. 1-B
Thurs. 5-16-57
Washington D. C.

By Laurence Stern
Staff Reporter

A Federal District Court judge, in a ruling which may affect thousands of swim-conscious families throughout the Washington area, ruled yesterday that a Rockville community pool club is exempt from Federal excise taxes.

Baltimore District Judge W. Calvin Chesnut held that members of the Twinbrook Swimming Pol Corp. do not have to pay the 20 per cent levy which now applies to social, athletic and sports clubs under Federal law.

In ruling for the exemption, Judge Chesnut said the pool group's "predominant purpose is not social but the conduct of a swimming pool as a recreation center for the benefit of a certain community."

He noted that the Twinbrook pool club is a "non-profit, non-stock corporation" which was founded "to provide a swimming pool or pools and other facilities for its members."

Members of community pool organizations now must pay the 20 per cent excise tax on all initiation fees and annual memebrship dues in excess of $10.

Since the community pool ilea first swept the Washington area in 1952, suburbanites have invested an estimated $10 million for neighborhood swimming facilities.

By the start of this summer 16 pools will be in operation in Montgomery County. More than 40 will be in use this year throughout the area.

Congress is also due to take action soon on a measure aimed at exempting pools from botoh the excise tax and a 10 percent levy on admissions.

Introduced last year by Rep. George M. Rhodes (D-Pa.), the bill has been included in an omnibus excise tax bill which now awaits final House action.

The Twinbrook case was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. McIntyre, of 5074 Stillwell rd., Rockville, who sued to recover tax payments of $25 each on their $125 memberships.

Ralph R. Sachs, attorney who argued the case and himself a member of the Twinbrook pool, said that members will be entitled to $1500 in refunds if the Government does not appeal.

Justice Department officials declined to comment on their appeal plans pending a study of Judge Chestnut's opinion.

Anti-Bias Group Reports Progress In Maryland

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 6-12-57

WASHINGTON — (ACP) — Initial progress in the establishment of an Equal Job Opportunity policy by the ERCO Division of ACF Industries, Inc., at nearby Riverdale, Md., was reported by the President's Committee on Government Contracts. The corporation is under contract to the Navy Department and is a producer in the electroniecs field.

P. 2

The President's Committee had asked for and received three investigative reports of ERCO from the Navy Department since a complaint charging descrimenation was filed by the NAACP, on September 7, 1955. The Committee is concerned with the elimination of discrimination because of race, religion, color or national orgin in work done under Government contract.

The last investigation revealed that the company now employs eight Negroes, including three in skilled positions. Prior to the complaint, the company had not employed Negroes in any capacity.

The President's Committee also reported continuing progress in extending Equal Job Opportunity in Government Services, Inc., which operates cafeterias in many Government buildings in Washington.

The complaint was filed against the company in 1953. The employment of Negroes in skilled and supervisory positions has been increased since then and today they are employed as supervisors, cashiers and clerks. One is employed as assistant manager of a cafeteria.

Bethesda Ministers Issue Anti-Segregation Paper

Post
Washington D.C.
P. A-12
Aug. 11-19-57

A group of Bethesda ministers issued a joint statement last night in which they pledged to resist any organization which incites race prejudice and undermines respect for law."

They condemned enforced racial segregation as un-Christian and committed themselves "to uphold the enforcement of law and order in the community."

The statement, called "Our Ministry of Reconciliation," is scheduled to be distributed to the congregations of 14 churches today. In all, 18 members of the Bethesda Council of Churches, representing the 14 churches, signed the statement.

The Rev. Lloyd G. Brown, president of the Bethesda Council of Churches, stressed that the ministers were not aware of any undercurrent of racial trouble in the large suburban community.

But, he said, recent events elsewhere—as in Little Rock, Ark.—showed that trouble could erupt in places where it was not anticiapted by clergymen or the public.

Mr. Brown, minister of Bradley Hills Presbyterian Church, said such assurances as the ministers' statement might be helpful to public officials who might otherwise only hear from organizations trying to incite racial trouble.

The carefully worded statement is the result of two months of discussion by the ministers. Mr. Brown noted that the signatures of some members of the Council are not included on the statement. This does not indicate their opposition, he said, but primarily means that those members were not present at the meeting when the statement was approved and signed.

Woman's Racial Stand Defended in Petition

Star, Washington, D.C.
Sun., 11-24-57, p. A19

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 23 (AP).—Nearly 300 Anne Arundel County residents have come to the defense of a county commissioner who had been criticized for her stand on racial matters.

A total of 282 persons have signed a statement criticizing a local Democratic club for charging that Mrs. Paulina W. Remey, 7th District commissioner, spoke and acted "in violation of her duties as a public official" in connection with recent anti-integration incidents at Deale.

Mrs. Remey, only woman commissioner on the board, is a resident of Deale, a small bayfront community 20 miles south of here.

Earlier this month 50 members of the 6th District (Annapolis) Democratic Club indorsed a resolution by its Executive Committee censuring Mrs. Remey. The club members agreed not to support her if she seeks re-election as a Democratic member of the board of commissioners.

That action was taken after Mrs. Remey, an attorney and supporter of States rights blasted Gov. McKeldin for promising State police protection to a Negro doctor if he would reinstate his son in a Deale school.

Dr. Harry N. Jones had withdrawn his 6-year-old son from the white school after bricks were tossed through the school window, a cross was burned in front of his home and he received threatening telephone calls.

The 282 county residents came to Mrs. Remey's defense through an advertisement in an Annapolis newspaper.

The statement said there had been no report that Mrs. Remey condoned or incited violence. "(She) Simply stated that violence could be expected as a result of the disturbed condition of the people with varying deep and fixed opinion," it said.

The advertisement said Mrs. Remey had not violated any of her duties as a public official and it contended that "she has not abrogated her right to freedom of speech as an individual by accepting public office."

The statement said the 182 signatures were those of "registered Democrats of the various districts" of the county. It said the signers consider this action by 50 members of the 180 - member Sixth District Democratic Club as being "out of order."

A rule that can't last

Afro-American P. 13 Sat. 7-27-57

(An Editorial)

BALTIMORE

Under pressure of Governor McKeldin and Mayor D'Alesandro and the decision of a score of national organizations never to meet here until the situation was changed, some members of the Baltimore Hotel Association took a half-way step last week.

The hotel owners announced their doors would be open to delegates attending conventions and colored professional and collegiate athletes traveling with their teams.

Their plan is to restrict acceptance of these guests only to the use of sleeping facilities, denying them access to the dining room, coffee shop or bar.

At first glance this new policy appears to be an insult to home town people. The hotel owners appear to be saying we will with some reluctance accept out of town persons as guests, but not residents of Baltimore city.

One of the hotel men is quoted as saying, "Any talk about limiting hotel facilities is plain stupid. It simply won't work."

We certainly agree.

Experience after experience has proved that there is no such thing as a "little integration," or as Thurgood Marshall indelicately has been wont to say, 'a little bit of pregnancy.'

The rule is not only stupid, it is silly and can not last.

* * *

THE CAMPAIGN against these hotels should continue until they agree to accept all travelers.

Some hotel owners have indicated they will apply their inane new rule rigidly.

Others say they will accept guests from now on without regard to race, residence or occupation.

We therefore caution all persons who apply for hotel accommodations in Baltimore to make their reservations by telegram or letter, never by telephone.

More importantly, insist that the hotel confirm the reservation in writing.

And when they appear at the hotel for registration, present this written or telegraphed confirmation at the desk.

Only these precautions will enable guests of color to avoid embarrassment and undue humiliation.

Young GOP backs Gov. on hotels

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 6-8-57

BALTIMORE

The Maryland Federation of Young Republicans went on record last week as supporting Governor McKeldin in his efforts to eliminate segregation in the hotels of Maryland.

Meeting in the Lord Baltimore Hotel, which does not accept colored guests, the Young Republicans took the action through the adoption of a resolution identified as a product of a member of the Anne Arundel County delegation.

There was no discussion of the resolution which noted that though Maryland's colored residents "have made a substantial contribution to the Republican party" they were not admitted to the hotel in which the State GOP maintains headquarters.

* * *

PASSAGE OF THE resolution came after the keynote address by State Sen. Harry A. Cole of the Fourth District.

"It was a contradiction of all the principles in which we say the Republican party believes to hold a convention on premises which do not apply to all of its (the party's) members the same courtesies.

"As Young Republicans it is our responsibility to point the way for enlightened leadership and to suffer the inconvenience if need be to uphold the principles of the Republican party.

"We shouldn't hold the meeting where part of the people are being segregated, it would be better to hold it in the middle of a park," Senator Cole declared.

* * *

HE ALSO cited the GOP as the party that had accomplished the most in the field of civil rights and paid notice to Democratic claims that this party is dedicated to the interest of big business with the statement:

"The grappling iron we need to free us from this mire of prejudice, the sole weapon we need to combat this slander, the only serum to immunize the public against this poison is truth."

Shooed by Whites, Negro Boy Drowns

World-Telegram & Sun P. 2

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 31.—Police and firemen today recovered the body of William A. Thomas, a 10-year-old Negro boy who apparently drowned while recrossing a stream at the direction of a group of white boys.

A companion of the dead boy said the white youths told them "they did not belong" on the east side of the stream, and the Negro boys ran into deep water as they waded back across Jones fall yesterday.

Williams' companion, Thomas Jones, 12, said one of the white boys used a pole to help him out, but when he turned to Williams he had disappeared.

HOTELS TO CURB BIAS

Baltimore Group Will Admit Athletes and Delegates

BALTIMORE, July 13 (AP)—The Hotel Association of Baltimore announced yesterday that its members had approved a policy of admitting Negro athletes and convention delegates.

The association's members include all major hotels in the city. They had previously denied accommodations to all Negroes.

A spokesman for the organization said the management of each hotel would decide whether to accept the policy. But the three biggest downtown members said they would do so.

Nelson Busie, president of the Lord Baltimore, said association members "felt we had to go along with the way the public felt." The Lord Baltimore is where six of the seven American League baseball teams stay when visiting Baltimore.

The New York Yankees stay at the Hotel Emerson, whose officials said they would admit Negro athletes.

A Break in Baltimore

Courier Baltimore Sat. 7-27-57

The first time a Negro was admitted to a Baltimore hotel was when John B. Russwurm, first colored college graduate and darling of the Maryland Colonization Society, was guest of honor at a banquet given by his white friends on the eve of his departure for Liberia and the governorship of its state of Maryland.

Last week the Hotel Association of Baltimore voted to rent rooms to colored athletes and convention delegates, the bonifaces feeling that "we had to go along with the way the public felt."

Mr. Russwurm would be glad to know that some of the freedom which he sought in Liberia's Maryland has now reached the "Mother" state.

3 of 4 Howard Johnson inns in Baltimore serve all

BALTIMORE

There are four Howard Johnson restaurants in the Baltimore area.

AFRO reporters on their visits Thursday afternoon were denied service at one restaurant, served courteously at others.

The waitress in the restaurant at Washington Blvd. and Caton Ave. declared, "You can take it out but you can't eat it here."

She was talking to two reporters seated at the front counter. Outside were parked mostly Maryland cars.

* * *

HERE IS the conversation the AFRO had with the waitress:

Waitress — You want to take it out?

Reporter — No, we want to eat it here.

W—I'm sorry, I can't serve you, it's orders.

R.—Why is that?

W—So far we haven't sir, only go out orders.

R—May I see the manager?

W—I don't know where he is, sir.

* * *

HOWEVER, in the restaurants in the 5800 block of Pulaski Highway and the one on Governor Ritchie and Crain Highways, and in the 4400 block Reisterstown Rd., the reporters were served in a matter of minutes.

At the Pulaski Highway restaurant, colored persons worked in the kitchen. As the reporters entered, the help took turns peeking at them.

Once the reporters were served, they whispered among themselves and then went back to work.

* * *

AFRO NEWSMEN were served almost immediately, with respectable but abbreviated courtesy at the Governor Ritchie and Crain Highway restaurant.

No one was at the counter, but in the corner booths several white couples dined. Conversation was as brief as the courtesy when a reporter attempted to talk with the tall waitress behind the counter.

She smiled and walked away when the reporter mentioned the outcome of the World Series baseball game.

A youthful colored man and woman working in the kitchen peered out at the reporters and th looked again, as if they ' certain of what they'

* * *

AND THE reporters were

'We serve them,' says manager of Howard Johnsons

The policy of Howard Johnson restaurants in the Baltimore area is to serve all persons, Orin S. Kenney, general manager, told the AFRO on Thursday.

Afro Features

Here is the conversation the AFRO had with Mr. Kenney:

We understand you are the general manager of Howard Johnson restaurants in the Baltimore area, is that right?

A—Yes, what is the trouble?

Q—What is the policy on serving colored people?

A—We serve them.

Q—What do you mean, serve them?

A—We serve them just like any other customer.

Q—Do you limit them to take out service only?

A—No, no . . . do you have a problem?

Q—Yes. At the Washington Boulevard restaurant today two persons were advised that the only circumstance under which they could be served would be to take it out.

A—I'll look into that.

Q—Then what you're saying is that so far as you you know the Howard Johnson restaurants in this area serve all people?

A—That's right.

---

given prompt and courteous service at the restaurant in the 4400 block of Reisterstown Rd.

As they entered the hostess asked: "Service for two?" The reporters were directed to a booth, and immediately a waitress brought water and menus. A few minutes later she returned to take the orders.

Upon completion of the meal, she placed the check upon the table with a polite: "Thank you."

* * *

THE CASHIER also was polite as the bill was paid, saying: "Thank you, sir."

When the reporters entered there were 11 persons dining, nine in the booths and two at the counter. Two or three of them looked up quizzically.

Two Elvis Presley type teenagers, with sideburns and candy-strip shirts, left without being served.

An elderly, white-haired woman in a booth near the reporters winked at the woman with her when the newsman and newswoman were seated.

The kitchen help is colored. One of these employees, apparently leaving for the day, abruptly returned to the kitchen after seeing the reporters.

A few moments later a number of the kitchen employees came out to see for themselves.

* * *

LATER, Michael Burgess, manager of the Washington Boulevard branch where the reporters were refused service told the AFRO: "We serve everybody.'

When advised that a young woman who said she was in charge during his absence had advised two colored customers they could only be served if they took the food out, Mr. Burgess said:

"That's right. We serve people who stay there and we serve people to take out.

This conversation followed:

Q—What would happen if a colored person came in the restaurant, would they be served?

A—Yes. They have in the past. They'd get service to take out.

Q—In other words, you will serve colored only to take out?

A—No, they can't.

Q—Now what is it? Do you or don't you serve colored?

A—We serve them upstairs, downstairs, back rooms all over.

Q—Can they eat in the restaurant?

A—Sometimes no.

* * *

Q—WELL, SIR, what is your policy?

A—My policy is to serve anybody anywhere, but if I don't think they should be served, I won't serve them. The way people act sometimes . . . I was told they acted like a bunch of hoodlums so I don't think they should have been served.

Q—Who acted like a bunch of hoodlums?

A—The word I got from someone.

Q—Who are you talking about?

A—I don't know who they're talking about. The way I get it is they came in and wanted to be served.

Q — We understand there were two people in there and the young woman said the policy kept her from serving them.

A—We serve them at the fountain to take out.

REFUSED SERVICE — AFRO reporter leaves the Howard Johnson restaurant on Washington Boulevard after being told by waitress, "You can take it out but you can't eat it here."

Sees early death for hotel barriers

BALTIMORE

A complete end to every vestige of racial segregation in Baltimore hotels in a year's time was predicted on Monday night.

The prediction came from Herbert L. Fedder, who was retiring after three years as president of the local chapter of Americans for Democratic Action.

Mr. Fedder reviewed for some 60 ADA members attending the organization's annual meeting in the Christian Center at Morgan State College the progress made in breaking down hotel racial bars since ADA undertook the project two years ago.

He recalled that when ADA first urged that segregation be dropped, the Hotel Association refused to go along, but later the association compromised to the point that colored persons with conventions or athletic teams would be housed.

"We don't like the idea that the hotels have so late offered so little," Mr. Fedder commented.

He pointed out that a similar ice-breaking policy was adopted in St. Louis and that in a year's time the hotels broadened their policies after finding the limited policy impossible to enforce.

While the Hotel Association has not changed the convention-team policy, some local hotels have announced that they would accept all reservations. Some hotels reportedly still limit the use of facilities of colored guests.

* * *

GUEST SPEAKER for the annual meeting was Gerald W. Johnson, author and retired newspaper editor, who decried what he termed "a lack of vision" on the part of the Eisenhower Administration.

HOWARD MURPHY
New ADA president

Mr. Johnson said the current administration's policy has been: "In the presence of a crisis, do nothing and perhaps it will go away."

He said the recent Democratic administrations were examples of "vision in places of leadership."

Mr. Johnson said it is up to the "little man" to demand leadership.

* * *

HOWARD H. MURPHY, business manager of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers was elected president of the ADA chapter. He has been a member for ten years.

He is a member of the national board and served as treasurer for three years.

Other new officers are Jack Levin, vice president; Mrs. Mary L. Allen, secretary; Una Corbett, vice president; Herbert Fedder, to the national board, and William Engleman, treasurer.

Dr. Arthur Lovejoy and Dr. Frank Don Fenn were named honorary presidents.

Afro Features

Here is the conversation the AFRO had with Mr. Kenney:

We understand you are the general manager of Howard Johnson restaurants in the Baltimore area, is that right?

A—Yes, what is the trouble?

Q—What is the policy on serving colored people?

A—We serve them.

Q—What do you mean, serve them?

A—We serve them just like any other customer.

Q—Do you limit them to take out service only?

A—No, no . . . do you have a problem?

Q—Yes. At the Washington Boulevard restaurant today two persons were advised that the only circumstance under which they could be served would be to take it out.

A—I'll look into that.

Q—Then what you're saying is that so far as you you know the Howard Johnson restaurants in this area serve all people?

A—That's right.

---

given prompt and courteous service at the restaurant in the 4400 block of Reisterstown Rd.

As they entered the hostess asked: "Service for two?" The reporters were directed to a booth, and immediately a waitress brought water and menus. A few minutes later she returned to take the orders.

Upon completion of the meal, she placed the check upon the table with a polite: "Thank you."

* * *

THE CASHIER also was polite as the bill was paid, saying: "Thank you, sir."

When the reporters entered there were 11 persons dining, nine in the booths and two at the counter. Two or three of them looked up quizzically.

Two Elvis Presley type teenagers, with sideburns and candy-strip shirts, left without being served.

An elderly, white-haired woman in a booth near the reporters winked at the woman with her when the newsman and newswoman were seated.

The kitchen help is colored. One of these employees, apparently leaving for the day, abruptly returned to the kitchen after seeing the reporters.

A few moments later a number of the kitchen employees came out to see for themselves.

* * *

LATER, Michael Burgess, manager of the Washington Boulevard branch where the reporters were refused service told the AFRO: "We serve everybody.'

When advised that a young woman who said she was in charge during his absence had advised two colored customers they could only be served if they took the food out, Mr. Burgess said:

"That's right. We serve people who stay there and we serve people to take out.

This conversation followed:

Q—What would happen if a colored person came in the restaurant, would they be served?

A—Yes. They have in the past. They'd get service to take out.

Q—In other words, you will serve colored only to take out?

A—No, they can't.

Q—Now what is it? Do you or don't you serve colored?

A—We serve them upstairs, downstairs, back rooms all over.

Q—Can they eat in the restaurant?

A—Sometimes no.

* * *

Q—WELL, SIR, what is your policy?

A—My policy is to serve anybody anywhere, but if I don't think they should be served, I won't serve them. The way people act sometimes . . . I was told they acted like a bunch of hoodlums so I don't think they should have been served.

Q—Who acted like a bunch of hoodlums?

A—The word I got from someone.

Q—Who are you talking about?

A—I don't know who they're talking about. The way I get it is they came in and wanted to be served.

Q — We understand there were two people in there and the young woman said the policy kept her from serving them.

A—We serve them at the fountain to take out.

REFUSED SERVICE — AFRO reporter leaves the Howard Johnson restaurant on Washington Boulevard after being told by waitress, "You can take it out but you can't eat it here."

Sees early death for hotel barriers

BALTIMORE

A complete end to every vestige of racial segregation in Baltimore hotels in a year's time was predicted on Monday night.

The prediction came from Herbert L. Fedder, who was retiring after three years as president of the local chapter of Americans for Democratic Action.

Mr. Fedder reviewed for some 60 ADA members attending the organization's annual meeting in the Christian Center at Morgan State College the progress made in breaking down hotel racial bars since ADA undertook the project two years ago.

He recalled that when ADA first urged that segregation be dropped, the Hotel Association refused to go along, but later the association compromised to the point that colored persons with conventions or athletic teams would be housed.

"We don't like the idea that the hotels have so late offered so little," Mr. Fedder commented.

He pointed out that a similar ice-breaking policy was adopted in St. Louis and that in a year's time the hotels broadened their policies after finding the limited policy impossible to enforce.

While the Hotel Association has not changed the convention-team policy, some local hotels have announced that they would accept all reservations. Some hotels reportedly still limit the use of facilities of colored guests.

* * *

GUEST SPEAKER for the annual meeting was Gerald W. Johnson, author and retired newspaper editor, who decried what he termed "a lack of vision" on the part of the Eisenhower Administration.

HOWARD MURPHY
New ADA president

Mr. Johnson said the current administration's policy has been: "In the presence of a crisis, do nothing and perhaps it will go away."

He said the recent Democratic administrations were examples of "vision in places of leadership."

Mr. Johnson said it is up to the "little man" to demand leadership.

* * *

HOWARD H. MURPHY, business manager of the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers was elected president of the ADA chapter. He has been a member for ten years.

He is a member of the national board and served as treasurer for three years.

Other new officers are Jack Levin, vice president; Mrs. Mary L. Allen, secretary; Dr. Arthur Lovejoy and Dr. Herbert Fedder, to the national board, and William Englehman, treasurer.

Frank Don Fenn were named honorary presidents.

Una Corbett, vice

Gov. McKeldin hits racial segregation

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 2-9-57

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

NEW YORK — "The practice of racial segregation in the South, whether right or wrong, has damaged the prestige of the United States in other countries and thus has been a handicap in our death struggle with communism.

P 20

"This throws the burden of proof upon the segregationists, for to maintain any practice that is seriously damaging to the country as a whole can be justified only by extreme necessity.

"Unless it can be proved beyond a reasonable doubt that segregation is indispensably necessary to the preservation of civilization in the regions where it is practiced, it ought to be abandoned simply because it is hurtful to the country.

"I doubt that the segregationists can prove this, but unless they make a serious effort to prove it they are abandoning their case."

* * *

THESE OPINIONS were expressed by Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland in a thought-provoking lecture on "The Basic Issue In Segregation" at Town Hall on Wednesday morning.

The nationally known Republican leader of Irish-Scot descent, whose grandfather fought in the Union Army against the Confederates and was killed in battle in Virginia, used as the basis for his lecture these words in Gunnar Myrdal's widely quoted book, "The American Dilemma."

"The N—o problem is an integral part of, or a special phase of, the whole complexity of problems in the larger American civilization. It cannot be treated in isolation."

* * *

APPLAUDING the findings of the Swedish sociologist, Governor McKeldin declared:

"I agree that they (American racial problems) are crucial. In fact I think they are the most important part of Myrdal's contribution to the question; and "I believe that our neglect of what they imply is responsible for most of our difficulties, perhaps four fifths of our difficulties, in dealing with issues involving race relations.

"The development of a correct understanding and a conscientious application of this idea is, therefore, the basic issue in segregation, or in anything else involving minority rights."

* * *

THE MARYLANDER added: "All men are 'created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights.'

"These words from the Declaration of Independence are, I believe, the pivot on which the whole American system turns.

"Reject them and all the rest promptly comes apart.

"Reject them and the whole history of the republic loses its meaning. They cannot be rejected without rejecting Americanism.

* * *

"THEY ARE however, merely a general statement of principle and all general principles must be interpreted before they can be successfully applied in specific instances.

"It is in the business of interpretation that disputes give rise to problems.

"We have been disputing the meaning of 'inalienable rights' ever since the government was founded, and the rights of the colored minority are only one part, although a very large part, of human rights in general."

* * *

AT THIS point, Governor McKeldin called attention to the fact that, in the debate over segregation, the distinction between "inalienable" and "unlimited" rights "seems to have been lost."

"Nobody who speaks English," he said, "would claim that the words 'inalienable' and 'unlimited' mean the same thing.

"We have extremists on both sides who appear to be obsessed with the notion that no rights exist except their own and whenever men allow themselves to cherish that delusion conflict is inevitable.

* * *

"BUT THE remedy for this condition is not in law; it is in persuading the deluded to accept the truth, to recognize the fact that their rights, while inalienable, do not cover the earth; their rights end at the exact point where your rights begin.

"The determination of that point is, therefore, the basic issue...

"For the border line between your rights and mine cannot be fixed . . . it changes with changing circumstances and its location is a matter of continuous adjustment."

* * *

GOVERNOR McKELDIN had this to say about the violence that is current in the South because of the Supreme Court's rulings in favor of integrated schools and bus accommodations:

"I cannot share the pessimism of those who are in the depth of woe because the rejection of the principle of racial segregation in the schools has provoked dissent so vigorous that sometimes it edges into violence.

"I regret this disturbance. I regard it as potentially dangerous and I am anxious about the outcome.

"But I consider it perfectly natural and I do not believe it is a symptom of any new and terrible infection that has invaded the body politic."

* * *

ADMITTING THAT "blundering incompetence in administration of the law could multiply that danger (violence over integration) many times," the governor recommended three steps to avoid "fatal blundering" in this matter.

1. "To realize to what a very limited extent this dispute is justiciable.

* * *

2. "An admission that what the Declaration of Independence calls 'a decent respect to the opinions of mankind' is a binding obligation on us in all the relations of life, including race relations.

3. "A reversion to the first principle, I will not say of Christianity, but of every spiritual religion that has ever existed.

* * *

"THIS IS THE principle that a man is responsible before God, if you are religious, or before the judgment of mankind, if you are merely ethical, for his own conduct—

"So the development of his own moral character is his first duty, whether to God or to society."

Governor McKeldin told a cheering audience that he disagreed with those among his fellow southerners who are depending upon "racial segregation in the schools" to preserve white supremacy.

"I do not question," he said, "either the honesty or the intelligence of those southern white men who are perturbed about the future of the white race.

* * *

"BUT I DO differ with those among them who are relying on racial segregation in the schools to secure their future.

"I believe that it is a method of dubious value.

"I believe that any race aspiring to dominance throughout the predictable future can achieve its aspiration by one method only;

* * *

"AND THAT is the method of strengthening its own character by according equal and exact justice to all men, under all circumstances, at all times."

Agreesng with Myral that racial segregation is primarily a white man's problem, the governor said.

"This is so because the overwhelming weight of power, social, political and economic, is in the hands of white men in this country; and where power lies, there also lies responsibility.

"The colored minority is too small and too weak to have any hope of success in an appeal to force.

* * *

"THE FINAL appeal is not to the Supreme Court, as representing the power of law, but to the conscience of the white man."

In the question and answer period that followed his lecture, sponsored jointly by Town Hall and New York University, Governor McKeldin defended the right of any American who wishes to intermarry and praised the "remarkable" progress colored Americans have made under terrific odds.

His illuminating answers will be found in another story elsewhere in this edition.

Segregationist Bills Shunned

Washington, D.C.
Post Times Herald P. 2-1

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 24 (AP) While legislatures of other states enact pro-segregation laws, Maryland segregationists have run into a stone wall in their General Assembly.

Wash. 2-25-57

"They give us a sympathetic ear and agree with us, but none of them has guts enough to introduce our bills," C. Maurice Weidemeyer complained.

Weidemeyer, an Annapolis attorney, has been active in the Maryland Petition Committee, which has been trying to get a five-point program before the Legislature.

Its key point is a resolution to express disapproval of the Supreme Court decision that outlawed segregation in the public schools and ask Congress to enact a constitutional amendment leaving the issue up to states.

No Takers

But the Committee can find no takers, although Weidemeyer says he is "satisfied 85 per cent of the Legislature and a majority of the Colored people are opposed to integration of schools."

There were indications this weekend that at least one of the Committee's bills might come in. It would give Marylanders the right to petition the legislature to introduce bills no one would otherwise sponsor.

But to get such legislation before the Assembly at least 10 per cent of the number who voted in the last general election would have to sign a petition.

This bill makes no mention of segregation and would apply to any matter voters wanted to bring before the Assembly. It is called the "right of initiative" in Midwestern states which now have such practices.

Potential Sponsors

The Petition Committee thought it had found two sponsors for the bill, but the legislators concerned said they had not made up their minds.

Weidemeyer says what the Committee is most interested in is local option on the question of segregation. In Western Maryland, where Negro populations are small, counties probably are unconcerned with segregation. In Southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore, the situation is different, he contends.

The Committee also wants to reintroduce two bills which failed in 1955: to amend the compulsory education law so that no child could be compelled to attend an integrated school, and to provide a county payment of $100 and state payment of $100 to any child wishing to attend a private school for this reason.

Integration 'may move too fast' Governor McKeldin

Afro-American Sat. 5-2-57 P.6

Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE

"Even when you are moving toward an ideal, it is possible to move too fast. Perhaps it ought not to be so, but it is so, and every realist knows it."

That statement was made by Governor Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, referring to the ideal of racial integration that might "move too fast" in this country.

Governor McKeldin made the statement Sunday through his executive secretary, Thomas S. Carr, who delivered the prepared text in the absence of the governor at Howard University.

* * *

MR. CARR said a delayed flight schedule prevented the governor from delivering his own words to a capacity audience at morning service in observance of Brotherhood Week at Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel.

Governor McKeldin couldn't keep the engagement here in view of another at Valley Forge, Pa., Mr. Carr explained.

* * *

"THOSE PEOPLE who claim that we have recently moved too fast cannot be dismissed as insincere and not entitled to a reasoned and logical answer," Governor McKeldin stated.

"The ugly fact is that relations have deteriorated between the two largest racial groups in this country, those of European and those of African descent."

He said, "I am perturbed by reports that come to me of the recent loss of influence by interracial organizations of many kinds, whose work in some cases, has been all but paralyzed by the tension of the times.

"This is a fact that we should look squarely in the face. It is not enough to explain it by saying that a certain emotional strain is inevitable when very old social patterns are being radically changed."

segregation decisions were "inevitable" in face of the American "proposition that all men are endowed with certain inalienable rights."

* * *

"BROTHERHOOD is not a law," Governor McKeldin said. "It is a spirit, a light within the individual mind and heart. Yet in the final analysis it is the thing that gives power and efficacy to the best legislation."

He said that integration would be "no great boon" if it brings on "an intensification of hatred between the races."

Clashes must be "confined to the least reputable element on both sides," the governor said. "If we do that, we may rest assured that American civilization will survive. It will emerge from the ordeal enriched and strengthened."

THE SPOKESMAN for the governor shared the platform with the Rev. Daniel G. Hill, dean of the chapel. The choir sang under the direction of Warner Lawson.

Jail jim crow ended

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By T. J. SELLERS

The Baltimore City Jail Board voted to remove the jim crow visiting hours sign on the front of the building and instructed the warden to proceed to desegregate all jail facilities where possible "with all deliberate speed."

This action was taken at the monthly meeting of the board Wednesday night.

All of the recommendations regarding the desegregation of the facilities were unanimously endorsed by six members of the seven-member board in attendance.

MEMBERS PRESENT were: R. Bruce Livie, president of the Mt. Royal Motor Sales Buick Co., chairman; David T. Mason, attorney;

Miss Esther Lazarus, director of the Department of Welfare; Samuel T. Abrams, vice president, Abrams and Sons' Clothiers; Dr. Damian P. Alagia, Catonsville physician; and Foster H. Fanseen, attorney.

Charles P. Price, warden, met with the Board. Lewis Rabai, a retired baker, was absent.

The meeting was held in the small, but comfortable Warden's office up on the second floor of the jail and lasted from 8 p.m. until 10:30 p.m.

The matter of segregation in the city jail was placed on the agenda of the board after two stories had appeared in the AFRO which called attention to the sign on front of the building.

Specifically the action taken by the board Wednesday evening means this:

(1) The present sign which has visiting hours for white and visiting hours for colored

Color Line Sagging in Baltimore

Herald P.5-B Miami, Fla. Fri. 4-12-57

BALTIMORE—(AP)—The Baltimore City Bar Assn. appears ready to end a 78-year-old ban on women and Negro members.

Although a proposed resolution to end the ban was ruled out of order, H. Paul Rome, president of the association, said he had "no objections to thoughts stated in the resolution."

Rome said the matter should be handled according to the association's bylaws which provide for a committee on admissions to screen all applications for membership. He said the committee has applications pending from one woman and three Negroes.

Attorney Hyman Pressman, who offered the resolution, said he will force a vote by the entire membership if necessary to gain membership for women and Negroes.

But sentiment expressed after the meeting by most of those in attendance made it appear that such a move will not be needed. Rome said he expects the question will be resolved at a special meeting next month.

McKeldin Warns Segregationists

Fri. 4-12-57

BALTIMORE, April 11 (AP)—Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland has urged top legal officers of 17 Southern states to administer the law "with reason instead of passion" in the segregation issue.

The separate but equal status is finished, McKeldin said. "Schooling has qualified the Negro for integration."

McKeldin addressed the opening session of the Southern Regional Conference of Attorneys General last night.

In many states represented at the Conference, the attorneys general offices are formulating legislation to circumvent the Supreme Court's decisions against segregation in public schools and public transportation.

Park officer is fined for boy insult

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 6-22-57

BALTIMORE

"He was fined ten days' pay and he extended his sincere regrets to Mr. Wallace."

James C. Anderson, president of the Board of Recreation and Parks, was telling the AFRO on Thursday of the action taken in the case of Sgt. Ellsworth D. Johnson.

Sergeant Johnson, a resident of 1246 Riverside Ave., and a veteran of 26 years service on the Park Police force, had been under suspension since May 26 for discourteous treatment of a teacher who had come to the park police station to register a complaint.

He had been suspended by Charles A. Hook, superintendent of Parks, who overheard him speaking discourteously to Thomas D. Wallace, Sollers Point High School teacher of 3009 Gwynns Falls Pkwy.

* * *

MR. WALLACE, in company with another teacher, Miss Hilda Barrett of 3121 Gwynns Falls Pkwy., was parked in Druid Hill Park after 12 midnight when they were approached by an officer who said ,"All right, boy, move on . . ."

At the time, Mr. Wallace said he did not know of the midnight curfew, and went to park headquarters to register a complaint about the 'boy' remark and the officer's loud voice.

(Grown men consider the 'boy' term insulting.)

Sergeant Johnson, who was the same officer on duty the night before was also on duty at headquarters.

* * *

BOTH MR. WALLACE and Miss Barrett were present at the Thursday hearing which was closed to the press.

The board met in an executive session at 2:30 p.m., an hour before the scheduled 3:30 p.m. regular meeting.

In reporting the results of the meeting, Mr. Anderson said:

"I apologized to Mr. Wallace on behalf of the board.

"The Board also told Sergeant Johnson that the manner in which he spoke was wrong and that he was unduly rude.

"Sergeant Johnson was reprimanded, and then reinstated as of 10 days following the date of his suspension."

Mr. Wallace reiterated his previous statement that he did not know of the midnight curfew in the park and said that he would not knowingly violate the regulation.

Members of the board who heard the case were Mr. Anderson, S. Lawrence Hammerman, James H. Georges, J. Alvin Jones, George G. Shriver, Gerald S. Wise, Mrs. William J. Rysanek Sr., R. Brook Maxwell and Joseph J. King.

Detroiter Indicted On Charge Of Circulating 'Racial Letters'

Advertiser 2 Ed. 1-9-57
Montgomery, Ala.

DETROIT, Jan. 8 (AP)—An advertising man who worked as a volunteer for the Michigan Minutemen for Eisenhower in the 1956 political campaign stood mute at his arraignment in federal court today on charges of circulating anonymous material described by Democrats as "poison pen" or "racial hate" letters.

Bald and stocky, John R. McAlpine, 41, had nothing to say to the charges. But Judge Arthur J. Koskiski entered a plea of innocent for him and released him on $2,500 personal bond to await trial. No date was set.

McAlpine, who is unemployed presently, was arraigned shortly after a federal grand jury indicted him on two counts. One charged that he caused the literature to be distributed and the other that he caused it to be distributed in interstate commerce.

George E. Woods, chief assistant U. S. attorney, said the indictment was based on about 6,000 letters sent mostly to registered Negro voters in racially mixed Detroit neighborhoods on the eve of the Nov. 6 election. The letter urged the recipients to support the Democratic party "because the Democratic party keeps the colored in their place."

The letters were mailed from Atlanta, Ga., and signed, "Council of White Citizens of Atlanta, Ga."

Woods said an FBI investigation showed there is no such organization and that the letters were prepared and addressed in Detroit and taken to Atlanta for mailing.

Michigan Democratic and Republican leaders alike denounced the letters at the time as an appeal to racial prejudice. Democrats called them propaganda with a reverse twist to sway the normally Democratic Negro vote in Detroit to the Republicans. In the election the Detroit Negro vote remained about the same proportion Democratic as in 1952.

Woods said the content of the letters was not an issue in the indictment. He said the offense was a misdemeanor under a federal statute prohibiting the circulation of anonymous campaign material.

The penalty upon conviction could be a $1,000 fine or one year in prison, or both, on each count.

McAlpine told newsmen that he worked without pay for Minutemen for Eisenhower in the November campaign. He said he served as campaign director for Michigan Republicans in 1952 and was employed by an advertising agency that had a Republican account in 1954.

JOHN R. McALPINE
Indicted By Jury

Girl Poses As Jew In Prejudice Experiment

Defender Chicago, Ill. p. 5
Sat. 2-16-57

BERKLEY, Mich. — (INS) — A Berkley, Mich., high school coed who posed as a Jewish girl for six weeks in a test of local anti-semitism will received the annual brotherhood award of the Oak-Woods B'Nai Br'ith for her fight against intolerance.

Seventeen-year-old Karen Deslandes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deslandes, got her idea after seeing a revival of "Gentlemen's Agreement," a motion picture which tells the story of a magazine writer who poses as a Jew for six months to study anti-semitism and the attitude of people about him.

Karen said:

"I thought it far-fetched that a Jewish-sounding name should make its owner unwanted. I thought things like that just don't happen any more."

FRIENDS CHANGE

The spunky teen-ager decided to find out for herself. Her father had given her a charm bracelet and when schoolmates asked what the charms represented, Karen simply told them that they were "Jewish symbols." she explained:

"I said nothing else. I am of Scotch and French ancestry and attend the Berkley Community church. But many of my friends immediately assumed I was Jewish. For six weeks I let them think so "I was a different world."

Karen said she noticed a complete change in her friends almost immediately. Girls who had long been friendly suddenly became cold and aloof.

"My social life suffered," Karen said, "people just 'forgot' to invite me to affairs. There was no one to walk home with from school and when there was a stray companion it was strained."

When Karen and a friend were talking about their baby-sitting jobs, the friend told Karen what she usually charged and asked Karen about her rates. Karen said that she usually asked for more.

"Oh," sneered the girl, "that's probably because you sit for your friends in Huntington Woods." (Huntington Woods is a well-to-do Detroit suburb which includes a sizeable Jewish community.)

Although Karen's parents were unaware of their daughter's experiment, they noticed that, unexplainedly, many of their friends also seemed too busy for social calls. They wondered about it. Karen explained:

"My small sister ran into rejection from her friends, too. None of my family knew what I was doing and I didn't tell them because I was afraid of the reaction. Now that I look back, I'm sure that my parents would have encouraged me as they have encouraged learning all my life."

TELLS TEACHER

After six weeks, Karen felt she had learned enough to confirm the truth of "Gentlemen's Agreement." She went to her speech teacher in Berkley high school, Ray Adler, and told him the entire story.

Adler spoke to school officials who were at first astonished and then sympathetic to Karen's plan. They arranged a full school assembly. None of the students knew what was in store for them when Karen was introduced.

Then, she told them about her six weeks as a Jew. She told her schoolmates how they had reacted and the treatment she and her family had received.

"What caused this assortment of reactions?" she asked, "Now I understand that prejudice is more than a word in the dictionary. I understand how it warps and twists; how it can result in the hideous burnings of Jews in Germany, the mob violence against Negroes, the man-against-attitudes of Communists and fascists."

MAKES SPEECH

When she finished her speech, all of Karen's friends and many strangers gathered around her in the auditorium. She said:

"Between our hugging and crying, they asked me many questions. Most of all, they asked: 'But I didn't do those horrible things, did I?' I couldn't answer those unhappy and ashamed people while so full of sorrow. All I could do was suggest that they search their own souls."

Since that assembly meeting, Karen has told and re-told her story to many civic and religious groups.

For her bold and enterprising journey into anti-semitism, Karen will receive the Brotherhood award Feb. 19 from the preceding year's winner, the Rev. Jesse Dewitt of Faith Methodist church.

Defender Chicago, Ill. Sat. 2-16-57 38a Mich.

KAREN DESLANDES, 17, of Detroit, who posed as a Jew for six weeks, earnestly discusses her experiences, telling what's it like to be a Jew. She said she never told anyone she was Jewish, she never told anybody she wasn't. She wore a Jewish bracelet to Berkley High School one day and let human nature take its course. (INP Soundphoto by Frank Lyerla).

The Michigan Way Of Life

Advertiser p. 2-6
Sun. 7-28-57
Montgomery, Ala.

No doubt you remember Hizzoner Mayor Oryille Hubbard of Dearborn, Mich. Not a single Negro citizen is allowed to reside in Dearborn. Mayor Hubbard is proud of this record and last year had his salary almost tripled by grateful constituents in a referendum, whereas raises for the other city officials were rejected.

Mayor Hubbard gave The Advertiser a remarkably frank interview on the subject of total Negro exclusion from Dearborn, despite the fact that thousands work their by day. This total exclusion may have seemed somewhat rigid to Montgomerians, for here Negro citizens reside in peace just two houses removed from the mansion of the governor.

Anyhow, Mayor Hubbard is now campaigning for reelection. He has sent The Advertiser two remarkable campaign documents—two full page newspaper advertisements reproducing an article from the July 26 edition of U.S. News & World Report.

The article? "When Federal Bayonets Did Rule The South."

It is a vivid historical account of the hideous crimes committed against the South by the Washington government during Reconstruction.

Mayor Hubbard's campaign ad bore the injunction, "Now Open Your Eyes W-I-D-E And Read This!"

It is not clear to us why this indictment of the Washington federals has appeal in Dearborn, but we do know that Mayor Hubbard is an able, victorious politician and that we should not look the gift horse in the mouth.

Fight In Negro Area Injures 19 In Detroit

Advocate
Sat. 7-24-57
Jackson, Miss.

Detroit, Mich. July 15 — Nineteen persons, including eight policemen were injured Sunday night in street fighting. The outbreak developed out of efforts by the police to stop what they called an unauthorized street gathering in the Negro district on Detroit's East Side.

The episode was touched off when the police received reports that between 200 and 300 "unruly people" were blocking a street corner where a Negro orator was making a speech on racial issues.

Police Sgt. Max Neuendorf said he had told the speaker, Elijah Walker, 29-year-old, that no permit had been obtained for the meeting. The Sergeant asked that it be halted.

Advocate

"He kept talking, so I turned to the crowd to order them to disperse," Sergeant Neuendorf said. "Someone hit me on the back of the head and dragged me to the ground. My officers rushed over to help me and the melee was on."

Arthur Johnson, executive secretary of the Detroit branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he believed the officers had been "unduly violent".

Police Commissioner Edwards S. Piggins said "the assembly was not only unlawful but constituted a breach of peace."

Roll Call On By-Passing Eastland

Call P.1

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) —The Senate roll-call vote Thursday night to bypass the Senate Judiciary committee, of which Senator James O. Eastland, Dixiecrat, of Mississippi, is chairman, and place the House approved civil rights bill on the Senate calendar where a motion may be made at any time to take it up for debate and vote follows:

FOR BY-PASSING—45

Democrats—11

John A. Carroll, Colorado
Frank Church, Idaho
Paul H. Douglas, Illinois
Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., Missouri
Joseph S. Clark, Pennsylvania
Hubert Humphrey, Minnesota
Henry M. Jackson, Washington
Pat McNamara, Michigan
Richard L. Neuberger, Oregon
John O. Pastore, Rhode Island
Stuart Symington, Missouri

Republicans—34

George D. Aiken, Vermont
Gordon Allott, Colorado
Frank A. Barrett, Wyoming
J. Glenn Beall, Maryland
Wallace F. Bennett, Utah
John W. Bricker, Ohio
Prescott Bush, Connecticut
John M. Butler, Maryland
Frank Carlson, Kansas
Clifford P. Case, New Jersey
Francis Case, South Dakota
John Sherman Cooper, Kentucky
Norris Cotton, New Hampshire
Carl T. Curtis, Nebraska
Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois
Henry C. Dworshak, Idaho
Bourke B. Hickenlooper, Iowa
Roman L. Hruska, Nebraska
Irving M. Ives, New York
Jacob K. Javits, New York
William E. Jenner, Indiana
William F. Knowland, California
Thomas H. Kuchel, California
Edward Martin, Pennsylvania
Thruston B. Morton, Kentucky
Charles E. Potter, Michigan
William A. Purtell, Connecticut
Chapman Revercomb, West Virginia
Leverett Saltonstall, Massachusetts
Andrew F. Schoeppel, Kansas
Margaret Chase Smith, Maine
Edward J. Thye, Minnesota
Arthur V. Watkins, Utah
Alexander Wiley, Wisconsin

AGAINST BY-PASSING—39

Democrats—34

Clinton P. Anderson, New Mexico
Alan Bible, Nevada
Harry F. Byrd, Virginia
James O. Eastland, Mississippi
Allen J. Ellender, Louisiana
Sam J. Ervin, North Carolina
J. Allen Frear, Delaware
J. William Fulbright, Arkansas
Carl Hayden, Arizona
Albert Gore, Tennessee
Lister Hill, Alabama
Spessard L. Holland, Florida
Lyndon B. Johnson, Teras
Olin D. Johnston, South Carolina
Estes Kefauver, Tennessee
John F. Kennedy, Massachusetts
Robert S. Kerr, Oklahoma
Frank J. Lausche, Ohio
Russell B. Long, Louisiana
Warren G. Magnuson, Washington
Mike Mansfield, Montana
John L. McClellan, Arkansas
Wayne Morse, Oregon
James E. Murray, Montana
Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming
A. Willis Robertson, Virginia
Richard B. Russell, Georgia
W. Kerr Scott, North Carolina
George B. Smathers, Florida
John J. Sparkman, Alabama
John C. Stennis, Mississippi
Herman E. Talmadge, Georgia
Strom Thurmond, South Carolina
Ralph W. Yarborough, Texas

Republicans—5

Barry Goldwater, Arizona
George W. Malone, Nevada
Karl E. Mundt, South Dakota
John J. Williams, Delaware
Milton R. Young, Nevada

Not voting but announced as paired: A. S. Mike Monroney, Democrat, Oklahoma, against by-passing the committee, and Homer E. Capehart, Republican, of Indiana, for.

Not voting, not paired but announced as against the point of order: Matthew M. Neely, Democrat, West Virginia; William Langer, Republican, North Dakota; Thomas Martin, Republican, Iowa; Frederick J. Payne, Republican, Maine; H. Alexander Smith, Republican, New Jersey, and Theodore F. Grant, Democrat, Rhode Island.

Eastland Says Negroes Set State's Race Policy

Daily News, Mon. 7-29-57 P.1

Jackson, Miss.

By HOWARD SUTTLE
Daily News Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON — Mississippi's system of racial segregation operates today under laws enacted by a Reconstruction Era Legislature that was controlled by Negores, Sen. James Eastland told a national television and radio audience on the weekly "Mike Wallace Interview."

And the system is now "endorsed by 99 per cent of the members of both races," who practice segregation as "a matter of choice in the Magnolia State" Eastland declared.

The Mississippi solon's appearance was part of the plan by senatorial opponents of the pending Civil Rights bill to take all possible advantage of invitations to appear before national audiences during the current senate debate to get over to the nation the "true story" of racial relationships in the South. The program originated in Washington, Sunday night, but was slated for later rebroadcasting by some stations.

Introduced by reporter Mike Wallace as a major "spokesman" for the "segregated South," Eastland was quick to contend "the Negro has made more progress in the South than in the North."

In answer to a question by Wallace concerning charges that Negroes are denied the right to register and vote in Mississippi, the senator cited that his state "has no voting qualifications based on race."

"Then how is it," Wallace shot back," that only four percent of the Negroes in your state are eligible to vote?"

Eastland replied that while it's true that slightly more than 20,000 Negroes in Mississippi have qualified to vote in the Democratic primaries, Negroes in the Magnolia State have a "long history of Republicanism." As Republicans, he pointed out, they are not eligible to vote in Democratic primaries. He added that the Republican Party has not entered candidates for local and county offices in Mississippi in many years.

To Wallace's question concerning his feeling toward the Ku Klux Klan, the Mississippian declared he is "against any organization that promotes racial and religious hatred and bigotry." He said there is "not a single klan" organization in Mississippi.

Eastland also took occasion to criticize the Seaboard White Citizens Council, which has no connection with the Mississippi Association of Citizens Councils. He said the Seaboard organization, established under leadership of John Kasper, self-styled segregationist "agitator" of Washington and New York, is "anti-Semitic."

Daily News P.2

As for Kasper, he added, he would "not kick a man while he is down, but I'm against his tactics." Kasper was recently convicted of criminal contempt, in a federal court trial at Knoxville, Tenn., as a result of charges growing out of racial incidents at Clinton, Tenn. He is under a one-year jail sentence as the result of a prior contempt conviction on charges of interfering with "orderly" integration of Clinton High School.

The senator, in reply to an inquiry by Wallace concerning what segregation "does to our prestige abroad," charged that "Communist propaganda" is responsible for circulation of defamatory and untrue reports concerning relationships between the races in the South.

Wallace read from the official Soviet Newspaper "Pravdo," charges that while the United States proudly proclaims its democracy to the world, Negroes are mistreated and relegated to "second class " citizenship.

SOVIET PRACTICE

Eastland countered Communists have charged repeatedly that working people in America are "serfs" a charge, he declared, which is obviously false.

"There are more segregated schools in the Soviet Union," the Mississippian declared, "then there are in the United States."

In support of his contention that most members of both races in Mississippi prefer "A segregated society," Eastland traced the history, during Reconstruction days of legislation to require separation of the races.

He recalled that a Reconstruction Era Legislature, dominated by Negroes in both the Seate Senate and House of Representatives, had enacted four laws, designed to promote Segregation, as follows:

1. To require segregation on trains, then the only major form of mass public transportation.

2. To maintain segregated public schools.

3. To provide for a poll tax as a prerequisit to voting.

4. To make racial intermarriage a felony, with punishment fixed at life in the state penitentiary.

The Mississippian then cited that similar laws were passed in other Southern states by Reconstruction Era legislatures with Negro majorities.

Wallace asked the senator why Southern white citizens are willing to employ Negroes as servants, to cook and do household work, nurse their children and work with them on their farms, yet are opposed to eating with them in restaurants, riding with them in public conveyances and associating with them socially.

'MATTER OF CHOICE'

Eastland replied segregation "is a matter of choice".

"Choice by the whites?" Wallace asked.

"No," the senator quickly answered, "Choice by both whites and Negroes.

"A vast majority of the Negroes want their own schools, churches, restaurants—'

"Buses?" Wallace again interrupted.

Eastland replied it would not be "economically feasible" to operate separate public bus systems for whites and Negroes. He again insisted, however, that "99 percent' of the Negroes in Mississippi prefer segregation.

The Senator contended that in Mississippi and other Dixie states, the Negro has "absolute economic equality". He cited that there are "more Negro property owners" in the South than in any other section, that many of the area's most successful business men, doctors, farmers, and professional persons are Negroes. He added the "biggest business in my home county" is a Negro-owned insurance company.

"I employ a Negro in an executive capacity," he explained, obviously referring to the Negro overseer at his Doddsville plantation.

When Wallace read statements by Superintendent Carmichael of Louisville public schools that segregation is "working" better than expected in the Kentucky City, Eastland countered that race mixing has not been successful in the public schools of Clay and Sturgis, Ky., and at Clinton, Tenn.

"Where you have a real racial problem," the senator contended, "it (integration) will not work."

Wallace brought up the time-worn charge that in literacy tests, given in some states to determine voter qualifications, Negroes had been asked such questions as: "How many bubbles in a cake of soap?"

Eastland scoffed at the charge, said the "bubbles" charge had been published in the leftist magazine, "The Nation," several years ago, but had never been proven.

The Mississippian contended that such charges, when aired, were "given wide publicity," but when proof of their falsity was brought to light, it was not given the same emphasis.

He recalled that during hearings on the civil rights bill before the Senate judiciary subcommittee, a Negro witness charged three Negroes had been murdered in Mississippi as a result of their efforts to qualify to vote.

But when the witness was asked to return for cross-examination Eastland charged, he "was spirited out of the city of Washington" the night before he was slated to be cross-examined. Eastland obviously referred to Gus Courts, former Belzoni Negro, whose charges concerning the murder of three Negroes were disproven at subsequent hearings.

Asked by Wallace whether he believes "in your life time," there will be "an integrated south" Eastland replied emphatically: "No'".

'Negroes of South Like Segregation' ...Eastland

Call Fri. 8-7-57 P.1

Kansas City Mo.

NEW YORK (INS) — Sen. James C. Eastland (D., Miss.), asserted Sunday night that segregation in the South is "endorsed by 99 per cent of the people of both races."

Appearing on "The Mike Wallace Interview" on ABC TV, the southern Democratic leader was asked:

"The Negro in the South wants segregation?"

"Yes, sir," Eastland replied. "They enacted the segregation clause."

At another point, Eastland was asked whether the South would filibuster if it did not get what it wanted in the way of modifications to pending civil rights legislation.

He told Wallace:

"Mike, I have been in the Senate for many years, and I have never engaged in a filibuster. The southern senators have never filibustered, but we have shown already the grave faults in this bill through a campaign of education to bring the facts to the people."

Eastland explained that the low percentage of Negro voters in the South as stemming from the fact that they "have a Republican history", and hence cannot vote in southern Democratic primary elections. The senator denied that Negroes get tougher literacy tests in qualifying to vote than whites.

No Crisis on Race Issue, Dairymen Told

Times-Picayune 7-27-57

By W. F. MINOR

(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

TYLERTOWN, Miss., June 26—Dairy farmers were told here Wednesday that Mississippians should not become "emotionally wrought up" by the segregation issue and forget their major problem of developing more economic opportunities.

State tax collector William Winter, principal speaker for the Dairy Field day honoring the Walthall county dairy industry, said that Mississippi is facing no "crisis" at present on the segregation issue.

"The only crisis we have in this state now is providing jobs for our people," he declared.

Winter cautioned that Mississippi "is not going to get anywhere by adopting a defensive or negative attitude." He charged that "sometimes we get so pre-occupied with the race problem that we forget about all other problems, especially economic opportunities.

Winter, former state legislator from Grenada county praised Walthall county's $3,000,000-a-year dairy industry as an example of "using our hands to develop the resources that are available to us."

'Graduates Leaving'

The industry, he said, "illustrates the job we have to do in Mississippi if we are going to survive the economic competition we face today."

College graduates in Mississippi are leaving the state annually in "tremendous numbers," he said. Unless the trend is stopped, "we are not going to become the prosperous state we all want," he declared.

Winter was introduced by Rodney Berry, of Gov. J. P. Coleman's staff of civilian colonels in Walthall county.

The field day was a feature of week-long festivities here honoring the county's vital dairy industry. Walthall county, with 336, leads all other counties in the state in the number of grade A dairies.

Most of the 16,000 gallons of milk produced daily in the county goes into the New Orleans milk shed.

Dr. John Buckalew, dairy expert at Mississippi State college, said that the future of the dairy industry in the state "will depend upon our ability to improve the quality of our livestock."

Urges Breeding Methods

He said that the industry must adopt breeding methods to get both bulk and quality in order to develop strains with high milk production capabilities.

A. L. McLaughlin, extension dairyman at State college, said that, under average Mississippi conditions, a cow must produce more than 4000 pounds of milk "or it will not pay us a return for our labor."

Feed costs represent only about one-half the cost of producing milk, he said. "We need to consider costs as they influence the per-hour return that we get for our labor."

Continuous effort toward quick cooling and attention to health of the dairy herd were stressed by O. B. Elliott, field man in Walthall county for the Borden company.

Dr. Walter Crawford, president of the recently-organized Walthall county Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the group. County agent Ansel Estess acted as master of ceremonies.

An open-air barbeque, with Walthall county-produced milk and ice cream, was served on the grounds of the W. R. Brumfield farm near here, which was the scene of the meeting.

DOCTOR-NAACP LEADER QUITTING MISSISSIPPI

Commercial Appeal 7-23-57

Battle Charges U.S. Failed To Protect Rights

Memphis, Tenn.

GREENVILLE, Miss., July 22.—(AP)—A Negro doctor and former NAACP leader says he is moving out of Mississippi because the Federal Government is doing nothing to protect his civil rights.

Dr. C. C. Battle said FBI agents made only "apathetic" investigations of civil rights violations in Mississippi.

Dr. Battle said he is moving to Kansas City after five years of practive at the Delta town of Indianola. The 32-year-old Mississippian was once a leader in a Delta Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said he contacted the FBI agents after his ballot was taken from his hand before he could drop it in the ballot box in the 1955 election for governor. He said the balolt was placed in an envelope.

"But they (the FBI) sent a man who was born and raised in Mississippi to investigate," Dr. Battle said. "He told me I should tell the sheriff. Those FBI men aren't going to make charges against their friends and neighbors.

"When I saw that the Federal Government wasn't going to do anything about the violation of my civil rights, I decided I may as well move out of the state."

He telephoned the Greenville, Miss., Delta Democrat-Times from Memphis because he said he wanted to be out of the state before raising his charges. He said his wife adn small daughter already are in Kansas City where he said he will be a resident in surgery at General Hospital.

Dr. Battle said that after his NAACP activities became known around Indianola, many plantation owners warned their Negro tenants they would be fired if they went to him for treatment.

Negro Doctor Charges Pressure

Advertiser 7-23-57 Montgomery, Ala.

GREENVILLE, July 22 (U.P.)—A young Negro physician complaining of "pressures of militant pro-segregationists" left the state to practice in Kansas City. He charged in a statement before leaving that FBI agents are making only "apathetic investigations" of civil rights cases.

Dr. C. C. Battle, 32, moved from Indianola where he practiced for five years to take a residency in surgery at the Kansas City General Hospital.

He left a statement charging whites in the area of bringing pressures on him for his activities in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Battle said he would have left his native Sunflower County sooner but was compelled to stay under the state's medical scholarship program. The state pays the cost of medical schooling in return for five years practice in rural areas.

Negro Doctor To Leave South As U.S. 'Not Protecting' Rights

Advertiser Tues. 7-23-57 P. 2-B

Montgomery, Ala.

GREENVILLE, Miss., July 22 (AP)—A Negro doctor says he is moving out of Mississippi because the federal government is doing nothing to protect his civil rights.

Dr. C. C. Battle told the Greenville Delta Democrat-Times in a telephone interview from Memphis yesterday that FBI agents made only "apathetic" investigations of civil rights violations in Mississippi.

Dr. Battle said he is moving to Kansas City after five years of practice at the Delta town on Indianola. The 32-year-old Mississippi native was once a leader in a Delta chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

He said he contacted the FBI agents after his ballot was taken from his hand before he could drop it in the ballot box in the 1955 election for governor. He said he ballot was placed in an envelope.

"But they (the FBI) sent a man who was born and raised in Mississippi to investigate," Dr. Battle told the Delta Democrat-Times. "He told me I should tell the sheriff. Those FBI men aren't going to make charges against their friends and neighbors.

"When I saw that the federal government wasn't going to do anything about the violation of my civil rights, I decided I may as well move out of the state."

He said he waited until he got to Memphis to telephone the newspaper because he wanted to be out of the state before raising his charges. He said his wife and small daughter already are in Kansas City, where he said he will be a resident in surgery at General Hospital.

Dr. Battle said the NAACP chapter in which he was active withered away after Gus Courts, Belzoni, Miss., Negro grocer and NAACP leader, was shot two years ago. Courts, who recovered claimed he was shot because he refused to take his name off voter registration books.

No charges were ever filed in the Courts case. Courts moved to Chicago.

In Memphis, Julius Lopez Jr., special agent in charge at the regional office, declined comment. Indianola lies in the Memphis FBI district.

ANTI-RECALL GROUP CONFERS IN JACKSON

Commercial Appeal

Meeting With Patterson On Attempted Ouster To Be Today

Memphis, Tenn.

By KENNETH TOLER

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., July 15.—The battleground in a move to recall Sheriff George Rutherford Jr. of Prentiss County was centered here Monday, where principals opposed to the effort conferred in preparation for a meeting with Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson Tuesday.

Major clarifications sought by three of the five supervisors, who have delayed calling an election ordered by a three-chancery judge removal council named by Gov. J. P. Coleman, are whether the board has authority as a "tribunal" to conduct a hearing on the charges and the legality of the recall petition.

Board members have received statements by attorneys for Sheriff Rutherford based on assertions that Governor Coleman refused to publicize affidavits in which he challenged Circuit Clerk Nick Rutherford's elimination of some petition signers. Mr. Rutherford is a distant relative of the sheriff.

Action Is Delayed

Pending the conference with Attorney General Patterson, the county officials have delayed action. They have held open until July 31 their regular July meeting.

Mandamus action to force the supervisors to call the election on grounds their action is "merely ministerial" is planned at Booneville, according to reports. Such a move could force the issue as to constitutionality of the 1956 recall law.

Meanwhile, the sheriff's attorneys questioned the Governor's statement that he has taken no interest in the case.

They have made records of "blind copies" of letters he sent to the adjutant general and a highway patrol investigator directing them to co-operate with J. A. Cunningham Sr., attorney of Booneville, who is heading the citizen movement to oust Sheriff Rutherford. The two officers are reported to have directed a National Guard raid in Prentiss County. It was a forerunner to the recall movement.

Plan To Get Records

"We plan to get the records held by the Governor on which he challenged the removal of names by Circuit Clerk Rutherford as not being qualified electors by mandamus action," said state Representative Eck Windham. Mr. Windham heads the sheriff's legal counsel. "We think we are entitled to those records," he said.

Sheriff Rutherford's attorneys contend that if the documents are made public they will show less than the required 30 per cent of qualified electors signed the petition.

They also said the sheriff has agreed to resign from office if the documents are made public and it is shown that 30 per cent of the signers are qualified electors.

Here with Mr. Windham are Donald Franks and Thomas Comer, attorneys of Booneville, who represented Sheriff Rutherford before the removal council.

Sheriff Rutherford is in Jackson with the delegation.

The three attorneys revealed they have been employed to oust state Representative Milton Grisham, the other Prentiss County legislator. He is secretary of the citizens' group seeking removal of Sheriff Rutherford.

Final action on a move to oust Representative Grisham would likely wind up in the Legislature, which has final say on qualifications of members.

Libel Suits Filed

Counsel for Mr. Rutherford, in challenging constitutionality of the 1956 recall law, contended it is in conflict with two sections of the state Constitution.

Sheriff Rutherford's

contend the removal council is not constitutional and without power to order the ouster election.

Since filing of the recall petition, Sheriff Rutherford has filed libel suits totaling $2,250,000 against citizens who signed the petition.

'NEGRO'S GREATEST NEED'

Negro Editor Issues Call For 'Uncle Toms' In Race

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 24 (AP)—A Negro editor has suggested "more Uncle Toms are the greatest need of the Southern Negro."

Percy Greene, editor of the weekly Jackson Advocate, said the term "Uncle Tom" has been derisively applied to those Negroes whose attitude toward "responsible white people" has been friendly and respectful.

In an editorial in this week's Advocate, Greene said this friendly and respectful attitude toward whites has won "their help and cooperation in laying the foundation for the great progress of the Negro since his emancipation from slavery.

"What this new and brash Negro leadership has succeeded in doing more than anything else is losing whatever welcome they might have had in the councils of authority.

"Though somewhat slowly, the masses of Negroes of the South are beginning to see that they are being led over a precipice by he siren calls of the New Negro whirlpool of hatred, fear, frustration and bewilderment."

The editorial said in the minds of this new Negro leadership "any Negro is an 'Uncle Tom' who . . . seeks to maintain a friendly and respectful attitude toward the responsible white people of the community."

'UNCLE TOM' WASHINGTON

Greene said that by these standards, Negro leader Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute, would be classed as an "Uncle Tom" along with most of the educational and business leaders among Southern Negroes.

He said, "Their prime target for such a designation is Prof. Laurence C. Jones, founder and head of the now world famous Piney Woods Country Life School at Piney Woods, Miss."

Deep South Negro Leaders Lashed For Attacking NAACP

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 1. — A United Press story published in the July 28 edition of the Jackson Clarion Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to either group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Greene of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Mr. Greene, the story says, has lost both distributors and advertising, while Mr. Hume, a Baptist minister, is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state ministers' group, the report says.

"Humes accepted a contribution from the (State) Sovereignty Commission for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation," the UP report continues.

"Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social, conditions.

" 'I couldn't have made the trip otherwise,' Greene said.

"He also sold the (State Sovereignty) commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP . . . and he was paid by the commission for printing a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes."

DR. JACKSON TELLS MISSISSIPPI NEGROES TO TAKE A FIRM STAND ON INTEGRATION

Jackson, Miss — "If rebellion against the laws of the nation continues, Washington will send troops to Mississippi," said Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention, recently in an address to the Mississippi Baptist Convention.

He continued, "The ballot cannot be in the hands of one group. We must either deny the democracy of freedom or give every body the right to vote."

More than 5,000 crowded the Lynch Street Masonic Temple to hear one of the world's foremost religious leaders of the day call upon his constituency and others to stand firm on integration and keep fighting for voting rights.

He said, "We can make certain concessions to people who don't believe as we do, but there is a point in democracy from which we cannot retreat if we are going to have a democracy."

Dr. Jackson spoke on familiar ground — a type of homecoming — since only a few years ago he came to Jackson to pursue a college education.

He was born in Coahoma County and has gone far from his humble beginning. His educational achievement includes an A.B. degree from Jackson College, a B.D. degree from Colgate Divinity School, Rochester, N. Y., and M.A. degree from Creighton University, Omaha, Neb., and a D.D. degree from Jackson College. The Rev. Jackson is an author, world traveler and one of the world's most effective and distinguished preachers and lecturers.

His book, The Eternal Flame, a widely distributed volume, gives his impressions of Russia as seen during a preaching mission throughout the Soviet Union in 1955.

Simultaneously being president of the largest Negro organization in America, the National Baptist Convention, U. S. A., Inc., Dr. Jackson pastors one of America's largest congregations, the Olivet Baptist Church, of Chicago.

Under the dynamic leadership of Dr. Jackson the church has come to new heights in membership, giving and building. Within the last 4 years more than 5,000 members have been added for a total of more than 12,000. In January 1957 the church undertook a $100,000 expansion program and by June 30, 1957, $57,000 had been deposited with enthusiastic assurance of reaching the entire goal before the year's end.

New recognition has been given NBC under Dr. Jackson's forward leadership. He sits as a member of the Executive Committee of the Baptist World Alliance and as a member of the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches which recently met in New Haven, Conn.

As a dedicated leader, Dr. Jackson has spoken throughout America on civil rights, nuclear weapons testing and stockpiling, juvenile delinquency and other moral and social issues.

He closed his address to Mississippi Baptists by saying, "we cannot remain a democracy with one half of the people living in contempt of court and the other half living for the court."

NEGROES WILL ORGANIZE

Ex-Mound Bayou Physician To Head Chicago Group

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 16.—An association of Mississippi Negroes living in Chicago will be organized there by Dr. Theodore R. Mason Howard, formerly of the Negro Delta town of Mound Bayou.

Dr. Howard is practicing in Chicago where he is president of the National Medical Association. He told a Chicago newspaper he left Mississippi "because of the danger that he might suffer professional, economic and physical harm as a result of his work for Negro rights."

Dr. Howard said he plans to form an organization of Chicago Negroes who were born and reared in Mississippi. He estimated there are 200,000 in Chicago.

He has opened a medical center in the Chicago southside and was quoted as saying he "believes Chicago offers wider opportunities, politically and economically." He did not reveal the objectives of the association he plans to form.

Dr. Howard was born at Murray, Ky. He was professor of health at the Agricultural and Industrial State University at Nashville, Tenn., when he moved to Mound Bayou. He left Mississippi several years ago after selling his properties at Mound Bayou.

Coleman To Speak On Racial Issue

JACKSON, Nov. 14 (U.P.)—Gov. J. P. Coleman will go before the Legislature again Monday to explain why he thinks a new constitution is needed in the state's efforts to maintain segregation.

Both House and Senate adjourned today until 2 p.m. Monday after it was announced that Coleman wanted to address a joint session on new developments in the segregation issue.

The Senate was prepared to tackle tomorrow an administration bill calling for a convention of elected delegates to meet Sept. 2 and rewrite the 1890 Constitution. But the senators said they would wait and see what Coleman has to say.

The governor sent word he needed the week-end to prepare his talk.

Sen. John Clark Love of Kosciusko, an administration leader, said the governor wanted to "discuss an angle of this issue that has not been discussed before."

In his first message to the special session Nov. 5 Coleman did not mention the touchy racial issue but centered his arguments for a new charter around the state's need for industry.

ACE HARMONY THEME IS CITED

Miss. Legion Commander Urges Negro Vote

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 27 (AP)—A Negro American Legion post commander today urged that Mississippi Negroes take advantage of the harmony between the races described by Gov. J. P. Coleman and Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.).

The obviously tongue-in-cheek statement was issued by Albert Powell, commander of William Walker Post No. 214 of Jackson. Coleman and Eastland, in a television appearance last night, said Mississippians are united in opposing integration. Both also said there is harmony between the r[illegible] in Mississippi.

"In the face of the open admission of existing harmony," said Powell, "we feel that Negroes of Mississippi can now go about the [illegible] of their voting rights without fear of intimidation, economic [illegible] or other forcible re-[illegible]."

Powell has said he doesn't believe a Mississippi Negro is [illegible] to vote. Powell said "There are several counties in our state where a single Negro vote is [illegible]."

MAYOR THOMPSON
Give Them Our Side

INSIDE CITY HALL

Segregation Battle Rages; Jackson Remains Fortress

By ED GOINS
Clarion-Ledge Staff Writer

The South is rapidly becoming pock-marked by battles in the integration-segregation war.

But the city of Jackson—a citadel of the deep South—remains unscathed.

The question inevitably arises—why?

One theory is that the proponents of integration are attempting to whittle away the border states and some of the southern states until only Mississippi is left.

This may be the case.

But Mayor Allen Thompson has another explanation, at least where the city of Jackson is concerned. There is no racial trouble here. Whites and Negroes live side by side in contentment. Jackson has one of the largest Negro populations of any large city in the nation and has done more to improve living conditions of the Negro. He has emphasized these points time and time again.

Last week, the mayor said the South must take on a missionary zeal in telling its side of the story to other parts of the country.

He had not planned to attend a meeting of the American Municipal Association in San Francisco, he said, but later decided that the South should be represented at such meetings. He will go and tell the South's story, he added.

Earlier, he told newsmen that his remarks on segregation at a meeting of the Utah Municipal League were well received. As a matter of fact, he got a distinct ovation.

HITS FELLOW MOYORS

Mayor Thompson had words of criticism for mayors of two of the nation's larger cities.

He had worked alongside Mayor Joe Clark of Philadelphia in the American Municipal Association. They thought alike on most issues. "Then he became one of the worst enemies the South has," Thompson declared.

He said that he was partly responsible for the election of Mayor Robert Wagner of New York as president of the AMA, succeeding himself, but that now Mayor Wagner "comes out lambasting the South."

NO APOLOGY

Turning to less-controversial issues such as taxes, the mayor stated: "I have no apology about this tax rate."

He was referring to a 2.5 mills increase approved by the City Council last week.

"Considering all the new improvements," he said, "I think that's good."

FIND THE MONEY

Mayor Thompso said he hopes an auditorium committee will do more than just recommend a location.

"They have come up with a couple of sites," he said, "but I hope they are going to help us find how to get the money and how to put it over."

NOBODY HURT

Concerning budget cuts, the mayor said no one has been hurt, including the police department.

"We are going to streamline all our departments. We will do our work efficiently, but we will not let any department suffer."

CAMPBELL PLEASED

Commissioner Lake Campbell said he is pleased with the progress in modernizing the city's fire department. Demolition of station three on East Fortification and station five on North State is under way. Plans are on the drawing board for station four on West Porter.

Still missing and unaccounted for are plans for the modernization of the city's fire alarm system. A study has been under way for more than a year and Commissioner Campbell stated that he expects a report in the near future.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Items still uncompleted:

1. Selection of an auditorium site.
2. Acquisition of remaining property for the Roach Street extension.
3. A comprehensive zoning ordinance.
4. Billboard ordinance.

Businessman-Cleric Tells Why He Stays In South

By ERNESTINE COFIELD

NEW ALBANY, Miss. — "This is my home; I was born here and will not leave."

That is the statement made Tuesday by a successful minister and businessman who resides in Mississippi, a state dreaded by many.

Although Rev. J. L. Tolbert, an official in the CME church, has been called a communist, intimidated and his home fired on a number of times, the most recent time last Halloween, he still finds the courage to remain in the state.

The Tolbert case of Mississippi closely parallels that of the L. C. Bates, of Little Rock, Ark. Several years ago intimidation started against the Bateses. Their home was fired on, picture window broken, crosses burned on their front lawn and economic pressure exerted on them. Yet, they have vowed to remain in Little Rock and fight for the rights guaranteed them by the Constitution.

Soberly dressed Rev. Tolbert, (he wore a black suit, black tie, black shoes and white shirt) said, "Once a white man asked what did I think of integration, I said I don't know what the word means and I on't think any of first class citizenship, I want that. I want a good home, good clothes, a good car, good schools and everything else you want. Yes, I want first class citizenship."

Rev. Tolbert and his wife of 25 years, Mrs. Ossie Adlaeigh, live as quietly as possible in New Albany, Miss. He is the founder and owner of Tolbert Funeral home and Tolbert Supreme Burial association, which has more than 10,000 active policy holders in all parts of the state.

Some activities credited to the minister, who has been a funeral director since 1934, are the establishment of the first Negro funeral and burial association in Oxford, Miss.; the first churchstore in Columbus, Miss., in 1933; the Tolbert-Bobo funeral home in Tupelo, Miss., in 1951 and the Tolbert-Foster-Webb funeral home in Ripley, Miss., in 1952.

A religious leader, Rev. Tolbert was ordained a minister in Rainces, Tenn., in 1929. He has served as pastor of Anerson chapel C. M. E. church in Holly Springs; Sanders chapel, Columbus and Lane chapel, Tupelo.

The mortician has served as presiding elder of the Tupelo district; dean of the Mississippi's Leadership Training school, vice president of the National Youth conference of the CME church; trustee of the Mississippi $ndustrial college, general secretary of the Board of Evangelism of the C. M. E. church, U. S. A. and a member of the joint department of the Evangelism of the National Council of Churches of Christ in America. He aspires to the bishopric.

Civically, he has served with a number of organizations in the community, white and Negro.

He was advisor to the registrant for selective service during World War II.

Rev. Tolbert was the first Negro notary public in Mississippi. This year, his application was turned down by Governor Coleman. In the corner of the application, Rev. Tolbert said the initials of a white attorney, who is a member of the Watchdog committee and one of his bitter foes, was penciled in.

The minister's troubles began in 1954 when Mercury magazine carried an article naming him and 600 other church leaders as signers of a peace petition during World War II, which was submitted to the President. The article was entitled "Churches vs Reds".

Whites in the community spread the rumor that he was a communist. Gradual pressure was brought to bear on him.

Jokingly and with a twinkle in his eye, Rev. Tolbert said, "On I think I have the goodwill the q. t., I have a cold war on of the better thinking whites. I can still go to banks in the neighboring towns and borrow money."

Asked about voting, the mortician said he and the few that voted had no trouble, but "someone goes around the Negro community and scares them and keeps them from paying their poll tax."

A graduate of Mississippi Industrial college and a holder of an honorary doctor of divinity from the same school, Rev. Tolbert's philosophy is:

"I believe that even though justice is not meted out fairly by all people in the South that there are many of the better thinking people of both races who can gradually work out a solution for our problems by education, religion and business relationships.

"This I have pledged myself to do M to remain in the South with my brothers and sisters to help them find a new way of life".

This is the creed of not only Rev. Tolbert and the Bateses but many "new Negroes" in the old South.

REV. J. L. TOLBERT, mortician and minister, has been intimidated, had his home fired at and felt the economic pressure of his white neighbors in New Albany, Miss. But like the Bateses of Little Rock, he said, "This is home, I was born here and I will not leave".

Senator Eastland's Plan

Daily News P.6

Senator Jim Eastland has introduced in the Senate a bill relative to cotton crop control. It may not receive consideration at the session now apparently drawing to a close but it will be fresh on the calendar when Congress again convenes in January.

If price and acreage control are to be continued as a governmental policy, Senator Eastland has a plan which he is confident will provide increased acreage without reducing prices. Its provisions are applicable only after cotton growers have voted on proposed acreage quotas.

The Eastland bill provides that a cotton grower will have an option, as an individual, of operating under the present limited acreage and marketing quota law, or accepting the new program.

If he elects to remain under the existing law, he will stay within his acreage allotment and accept the price supports determined by the expected supply situation.

If, however, he elects to take the alternative proposed by Senator Eastland, he will receive an increase in allotments amounting to 25 per cent of his original allotment.

In doing this, however, he waives all right to price supports and will receive none directly from the Department of Agriculture:

It is simply: limited acreage and high price supports, or increased acreage and no supports.

In application the bill is not expected to lower the price of cotton at all.

It is estimated that farmers producing something more than a third of the cotton would elect to stay within the high supports, low acreage brackets.

This would leave less than the domestic supply unsupported. The supposition is that the price level of this unsupported cotton would be just under the loan level and that until it had moved into market the loan would take up the high supported cottons.

This would mean, it is argued, that farmers who took the option of higher acres would receive very close to the [illegible] level for their production.

There would be no appreciable reduction in the price. In fact, with the parity level increasing and with the percentage of supports expected to be higher in 1958, the farmer who elected the greater acreage might very well get a higher price for his cotton in 1958, with the price unsupported, than he does in 1957 with the entire crop supported.

Gov. Coleman Spurns Racial Session Plea

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 1 (AP)—A legislator's request for an immediate special session to prepare Mississippi's defenses against school integration was reported today to have been turned down by Gov. J. P. Coleman.

Coleman, who already has announced he will call lawmakers into special session Nov. 4, was said to have told Hinds County Rep. T. Eugene Caldwell that Mississippi must first rewrite her 1890 constitution.

Those defenses include a constitutional amendment permitting abolition of public schools to forestall their integration.

The Nov. 4 special session's principal assignment is to get constitutional convention machinery underway. Coleman has said one thing wrong with the 1890 constitution is its specific ban on integrated schools. Such constitutional provisions have resulted in overthrow of some states' school segregation laws.

Caldwell disclosed that he wrote Coleman recently asking that "you immediately convene the Legislature in extraordinary session for the purpose of placing into effect Section 213-B of the constitution . . . and for the purpose of enacting suitable legislation relative to disposal of physical (school) properties and to provide for the education of educable children . . ."

PATTERSON PLEDGES RACE PROBLEM UNITY

Mississippi Sheriffs Assured Of State Help

Commercial Appeal p.17

NEW APPROACH IS SEEN

By KENNETH TOLER

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 30.—Mississippi's attorney general told the County Sheriffs Association here Monday that unity on the segregation issue will permit the state "to meet the threat of integration in a way it hasn't been met anywhere else." He did not disclose the plan.

"I think we will have plenty of time to meet it differently than it has been handled in some other places," Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson said.

He told the county law enforcement officers, in annual convention here, they can "rest assured" if they have integration incidents "we at the state level will be with you and work with you in a common end."

Mr. Patterson said he does not anticipate integration attempts in the near future. He said no Negro student will attempt to enter a white school "unless he has a court order in his hand."

No Suits Yet

Thus far, no suits or petitions for integration has been filed in Mississippi.

Mr. Patterson urged the creation of a State Bureau of Investigation to assist sheriffs in the 82 counties and police in the cities.

"I think we have a great need for a State Bureau of Investigation—not a state police—composed of a few men well versed in the art of investigating crime. It would never be sent into a county and take over your duties as sheriff, but to come at your request to help you."

Sheriff Andy Crawford of Sharkey County, president of the state association ,said, "We should know what to do at the first instant of a situation like the Little Rock one."

"If people give the sheriffs cooperation and support mos tof them will settle a situation of this kind and very few folks will know of it," Sheriff Crawford said. "It will be settled in a gentlemanly way on a local level without the fanfare of a national political show for publicity purposes only to secure the votes of a minority."

Representative Frank Smith (D., Miss.) told the convention, "The racial tensions that have developed since the Supreme Court decision on school integration can flare up into ugly violence unless our law enforcement officers carry out their duties with the greatest care and vigilance."

'Urgent Responsibility'

"Mississippi sheriffs have never had a more urgent responsibility than they have today in maintaining law and order and at the same time preventing the type of incidents that only serve as ammunition for those who seek to eliminate local control of our affairs," the Third Congressional District representative said.

"One reason for the relative calm existing in Mississippi today is the fact that our local officers are meeting this responsibility."

"Our local peace officers can make their greatest contribution toward preserving the integrity of local government in the South by maintaining a system of firm and equal justice whch pours codl water on every incident that might flare up into racial violence.

"The only hope that the South has of maintaining control of its local affairs lies in convincing the rest of the country of the justice of our position."

"Never forget that you as a sheriff have an important responsibility in this field," Mr. Smith said.

Mississippi Negroes Approve Coleman Plan

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 1 (AP)—A group of Negro ministers and laymen today voted approval of Gov. J. P. Coleman's handling of racial problems in the state.

The resolution adopted by the Ministerial Improvement Assn. of Mississippi was offered by members from Hattiesburg. The resolution also called for a month of prayer for a peaceful solution of the state's Negro-white problems.

The resolution asked church leaders to plan prayer periods each Sunday for a month.

Ladner Tells Fair Of South's Victory

Daily News Jackson, Miss. Thurs 8-8-57

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (Special) — The South is winning the battle of segregation, Secretary of State Heber Ladner told a cheering crowd at the historic Neshoba County Fair Wednesday.

"Let's get in the battle on the side of segregation for we are all winning this battle together," Ladner said.

"There is a new pattern of government gradually taking root in this country which, if allowed to run its full course, would make vassal of the state." Ladner said. "It would ultimately destroy the freedom which Americans know."

He said the supreme court of the United States, "is usurping the legislative powers of the government and should be curbed."

"One of the most far reaching votes ever recorded in the United States Senate since the adoption of the constitution nearly 170 years ago, Ladner said, "came when the 51 senators last week refused to swallow the civil rights bill. That bill was the blueprint of the leadership of some 300,000 members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Ladner said the United States Supreme court since 1922 has had only four "great chief justices," identifying them as Republican justices Hughes and Taft, and Democrats Stone and Vinson.

"No doubt if those four could read the opinions coming out of the court today, they would turn over in their graves."

Ladner called it "ridiculous" to think that the great branch of our government would try by their actions to force racial integration in this country.

"If the decree of the high court on segregation were fully carried out, the one result would be the destruction in the identities of both white and Negro races."

Ladner was the first of four speakers to appear on the Meridian Day program under the familiar tin-top pavilion at the sawdust covered fairgrounds.

INTERVIEWED ON TV

Eastland Is Confident South Won't Integrate

"If the North wants integration, that is their business. We don't want it and that's our business," U. S. Sen. James O. Eastland said in an interview telecast by Station WJTV here last night.

The senator told Mike Wallace, political analyst for the American Broadcasting Co., that he does not believe the South will be integrated in his lifetime.

The statement came as a direct reply to a specific question asked by Wallace and concluded what Wallace had apparently intended as a castigation of Southern segregation methods, only to be completely beaten by the factual evidence presented in Eastland's answer.

Eastland told Wallace that 99 percent of the people of Mississippi, both whites and Negroes, want segregation of the races and he felt all states should be allowed to handle their local affairs as their own best interests dictated.

He scored heavily when he informed his interviewer that Mississippi segregation laws were originally enacted by legislatures under Negro control in Reconstruction days, that the master-servant system is largely a Northern product, that in framing the U. S. Constitution the Northern element insisted on slavery while the South opposed it and that the War between the States was not fought principally over slavery but over other interests.

Eastland said he opposes the Ku Klux Klan but knows little about it because there is no such organization in Mississippi.

Under questioning about the rights of Negroes to vote in Mississippi, Eastland said any person who is qualified can vote. He declared that while only 20 percent of the Negroes in the state vote in the Democratic primaries, this is not the full number registered. He revealed that most Negroes lean to the Republican party and since that organization seldom puts up candidates in Mississippi, Negro Republicans have little chance to vote, by their own choice.

To Wallace's question as to whether there would be a filibuster on the civil rights bill, Eastland replied:

"Mike. I've been in the Senate for many years and I've never engaged in a filibuster. Southern senators have never filibustered but we have shown already the great force in this bill through a campaign of education and their will be a long campaign of public education. We will present the facts to the people."

He called the civil rights measure "Reconstruction Bill No. 2."

The program was first seen on the air Sunday night a week ago and so stirred up the country that many Southern newspapers have printed the full text of the interviews.

'Mississippiitis' blamed for U.S. lag in science

(See Editorial on Page 4)

JACKSON, Miss. — Apparently referring to Russia's "first" in beating the U.S. to the "punch" in launching Sputnik I and II, Mississippi and other southern states were attacked as the blame for America's "present-day scientific dilemma."

"There isn't a single state supported school in Mississippi where a colored person is permitted to take engineering or study in the advance sciences," said Medgar Evers, Mississippi NAACP field secretary.

He declared that due to such a plight, "many potential colored scientists are never allowed to develop their capabilities," thus accusing Mississippi and Dixie in general as flagrant contributors to the nation's "scientific lag."

Mississippi Roundup—

Eastland Says South To Put Case Before National 'Bar Of Justice'

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (U.P.)—Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) told a nation-wide television audience today the South will make every effort to present its case for segregation before the national "bar of justice."

In a film appearance on the Dave Garroway Show, Eastland said segregation was the product of "300 years of history" and he singled out inter-racial marriage as the biggest objection of white Southerners.

Ernest Angell of the American Civil Liberties Union, who also appeared on the program, said the only way to block integration of the nation's public schools will be to have the U. S. Supreme Court reverse its ruling outlawing separate but equal schools or to adopt a constitutional amendment favoring segregation.

Prof. Eli Ginsberg, a Columbia University economist, said racial excitement is hurting Southern efforts to attract industry. He said industrialists would not continue to invest money in the South if "buildings continue to be dynamited and federal laws violated."

Board today approved bond issue elections which will provide for financing $600,000 worth of construction for two Greenwood industries.

A $350,000 issue will be used for construction of a plant for Medart Locker Co., manufacturers of steel lockers for schools and industry.

A second issue of $250,000 will be used for expansion of the present facilities of Supreme Electronic Corp.

38a 1957

MISSISSIPPI

Coleman Sets Secret Huddle

By PHIL STROUPE
Daily News Staff Writer

Gov. J. P. Coleman will meet with Northeast Mississippi legislators at 9 a.m. Wednesday in Pontotoc for a "man-to-man" talk over his plans for a constitutional convention.

The Governor confirmed the planned conferences from his office in Ackerman Tuesday. He said the Pontotoc meeting will be in the Mayor's office and will be of an informal nature, mostly for the people in that immediate area.

He said these meetings will deal strictly with the constitutional convention, but he has already earlier made the fight against the civil rights bill a part of his move for a constitutional convention.

The Governor said probably within a month he will have covered the whole state in these informal meetings.

The meetings are to be closed to the press and the public, the Governor said. "I just want to have a man-to-man talk with legislators to go over the questions involved in the constitutional convention."

The Governor has announced he intends to call a special session of the legislature in November to set up a constitutional convention that would meet a year from now to re-write the state's 67-year-old constitution.

The Governor said some misinformation has been "going around" and he wants to clear it up in personal talks with the lawmakers.

The Governor called similar conferences last winter with members of the legislature and it was after those meetings that he decided to begin his move to hold a constitutional convention.

The Governor claims he has enough votes in the legislature to call a convention, but his opponents say they have it beaten.

Times 9-3-57

New Albany Minister Says He Will Remain In South

By THADDEUS T. STOKES

NEW ALBANY, Miss.—As rain beat againsr his office window a tall, greying bespectacled minister-funeral director sat behind a "busy man's desk". . . . piled with papers . . . . and announced resolutely "I have pledged myself to remain in the south with my people and together we will find a new life here."

This man was Rev. J. T. Tolbert

Why did he make this pledge:

The reply was: "There are certain people here who have attempted to coerce me into fleeing by firing bullets into my business establishment twice. The last time not later than Halloween night. They are withdrawing business privileges once enjoyed at the bank. Attempts to deny me the right to vote were made, anonymous telephone calls have been received and attempts to hold me up to ridicule before my friends and the public."

Rev. Tolbert, who has served eight years as the general secretary for the Board of Evangelism of the CME Church, USA, and who is currently an aspirant for the bishopric, explained that it all started after he was falsely accused of having Communistic affiliations in 1954.

He said he "was first falsely accused in an article published in Mercury magazine."

"This same article associated Bishop Oxum and about 100 other church leaders across the country. Heading this witch-hunt was J. B. Matthews," said Rev. Tolbert.

SAYS HE HAS GOOD WILL

"I have been plagued by competitive prejudice." (in New Albany, a town of estimated 5,000 population.)

He hastened to point out, "I think I have the good will of some of the town's better thinking citizens."

Rev. Tolbert, born in Tunica, Miss., June 9, 1909, entered the ministry at the age of 20. His first pastorate was held in Raines, Tennessee. Later he graduated from Mississippi Industrial College at Holly Springs, Miss., where he was also given an honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

After graduation he entered the funeral business in 1934. He was the first Negro in Oxford, Miss., to establish a burial association. The year before he had established a general store which was operated by the Sanders Chapel C. M. E. Church in Columbus, Miss. It was called a church store.

The minister, on recalling when he came to New Albany in 1939, said: "I was influenced to come here by Prof. L. A. Lawson." He established his first funeral home.

Since that time, he has established the burial association which boasts of more than 10,000 policyholders; Tolbert - Bobo Funeral Home in Tupelo in 1951; Tolbert-Foster-Webb Funeral Home at Ripley in 1953. And now he is in the process of remodeling and reorganizing. The new officers of the company will include Rev. Tolbert, Prof. Lawson, Charles Woodruff, Henry Reaves, Rev. Chester Cobbs and Rev. Allen T. Richards.

HAS LEADING CHURCHES

Aside from operating funeral establishments, Rev. Tolbert has also pastored at leading Mississippi churches: Holly Spring's Anderson Chapel; Lane Chapel in Tupelo; as well as serving six years as a presiding elder of the Tupelo C. M. E. District; dean of the State Leadership Training School of Leadership Education for eight years; vice-president of the National Youth Conference four years; and member of the Joint Department of Evangelism of the National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

He has been a trustee board member of Mississippi Industrial College eight years.

He maintains his church membership at Collins Chapel in Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. Tolbert is reported to have been the first Negro notary public in his state. "However, my license has been revoked by the state governor. It is another attempt to coerce me into leaving Mississipi. I wrote Governor Coleman about what a small thing for a governor to do."

He said he once received a telephone call from a mob at the court house which requested him to come to the court house and vindicate himself. "I refused to go. I told them if they wanted to see me they would have to come to my home."

During World War II he served as advisor to the local draft board. He also received a citation for his achievements in the National War Fund Drive.

Rev. Tolbert's wife, Ossie Adleight, whom he married 25 years ago, worked as his business manager and secretary until ill health forced her to retire several years ago. Prior she had taught in the public school system about three years. They have no children.

Rev. Tolbert said, "Don't misunderstand me. This is a cold war. However, I believe that even though justice is not meted out fairly by all people in the South, there are many of the better thinking people of both races who can gradually work out solutions for problems by education, religion and business relations. We must seek to understand each other."

PROF. CLENNON KING, HISTORY INSTR.
ALCORN COLLEGE

Voice of the People . . . What Courier Readers Think

Courier Sat. 5-4-57 P. 10

In Defense of Prof. Clennon King

To the Editor: Pittsburgh, Pa.

I think that the manner in which several of the newspapers handled the Clennon King incident at Alcorn College was a perfect example of incompetent reporting. Although, I must say that I was glad to see that Mr. Schuyler of The Courier did not condone the students' boycott of the college.

I was shocked to read your accounts which stated that Mr. King wrote eight articles that were critical of the NAACP. I read all of those articles and only one, the first, criticized the NAACP. The other seven did not even deal with that organization. But I was even more surprised to discover that none of those newspapers mentioned how constructive and informative his other seven articles were. To me, they seem to be "gems of wisdom" for any person who is sincerely interested in race relations and wants to hear constructive criticism which might benefit himself and his community. I excluded the first article because I felt that Mr. King should have presented some facts to support his accusations in spite of the fact that he was a former NAACP worker.

But I still can not understand why those articles caused such an uproar, especially, since he wrote such things as the following: "I would like to see more of our Negro intellectuals reading about Africa." In another article he said that Negroes should not be fooled by the Communists' line. Because Mr. King wrote on such subjects, he is now considered to be an outcast of his race in the eyes of many people.

This banishment is due to both the unwise behavior of the college students and the incompetent reporting of those newspapers. This injustice and slander should be immediately corrected.

Anyone can receive those articles by sending 10 cents to the Jackson (Miss.) State Times. By the way, I, too, am a Negro college (CCNY) student.

—ROBERT B. HILL, Brooklyn, N. Y.

More About Clennon King

To the Editor:

We see in the April 13 issue of The Courier in your column (Horizon) you wrote about the brother of the cloth and schoolman Clennon King. You wrote: "The articles are lousy no matter how you look at them, but Dr. King is not lousy. He's a smart man. He knows how to write and how to think." However, it appears to me that his actions were not commensurate with the qualifications accredited to him at such a time as this. If anyone is smart and possesses such knowledge and experience his behavior should corroborate it. He should have been psychological with "the trend of thinking of youth today." Many have put away the old order and accepted the new. This is as it should be.

Sincerely yours,

—J. L. CALHOUN, 310 McKee St., Jackson, Miss.

King Jailed in Mississippi!

Courier P. 3

BULLETIN!

HAZELHURST, Miss. — Minister-teacher Clennon King was jailed here Saturday on a breaking and entering charge after he removed the lock from the door of Wesley Chapel AME Church. King had been ousted as pastor of the church because of his criticism of the NAACP.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

HAZELHURST, Miss. — Clennon King, the Alcorn College professor whose series of articles criticizing the NAACP started a wave of violent protest among Negroes in Mississippi last March, is in hot water again.

King, who had been serving as pastor of the Wesley Chapel AME Church here, was dismissed from his pastorate by his presiding elder. King, who is scheduled to resume his teaching duties at Alcorn in September, said he was dismissed on "baseless grounds."

■

In a telegram to Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., president of the Bishop's Council of the AME Church, King said:

"My presiding elder expelled me from the pastorate of the church in Hazelhurst on baseless grounds. I was given no previous notice of the trial. All my claims to the connection have been paid and the people are not dissatisfied as they have been portrayed, and I appeal to you to set aside this expulsion that I may peacefully continue in the pastorate here."

King insists there is a move on among certain individuals to "run me out of Mississippi before September." He also admits the motivating force behind the movement is the series of articles he wrote in the Jackson State Times criticizing the NAACP.

Fire King as pastor in Miss.

Afro-American Sat. 7-13-57

Baltimore, Md.

HAZELHURST, Miss.—Prof. Clennon King, whose series of anti-NAACP newspaper articles got him booted out of Alcorn College, has now been fired as pastor of Wesley Chapel AME Church here.

The controversial preacher-professor immediately applied the ouster to Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., who presides over this jurisdiction.

Bishop Wright was en route to Jacksonville, Fla., where as president of the AME Bishop's Council, he is to hold a hearing on charges preferred against Bishop D. Ward Nichols.

The Rev. Mr. King, after a trial that lasted until 10 p.m. on July 1, was ousted as pastor of Wesley Chapel "for the sake of peace" and "because the members were dissatisfied with your services."

Afro-American

Four charges had been preferred against the professor-clergymen, three of which were dismissed by the presiding elder who conducted the hearing. P. 2

HE HAD been accused of transferring funds raised by the trustees to the account of the stewards; had suspended a steward improperly; and affixed a false signature to a check.

Prof. King says he intends to fill the pulpit as usual, despite his ouster.

The presiding elder, however, has ruled otherwise and has announced that he will preach during the next two Sundays. Indications are there will be two ministers and two sermons at the church.

* * *

THE REV. Mr. King, whose contract to teach at Alcorn has just been renewed by the all-white board, has not yet been permitted on campus by President J. D. Boyd.

The showdown at Alcorn is expected to occur in September when Alcorn resumes classes for the fall term.

LOCKED-OUT PASTOR IS JAILED IN SOUTH

Courier P. 23

New York Sun. 7-7-57

HAZLEHURST, Miss., July 6 (AP)—An expelled pastor whose newspaper writings nearly closed a college said he removed the lock from his church door yesterday despite threats of arrest if her did so. He was jailed a shotr time later on a breaking and entering charge.

Prof. Clennon King, whose pro-segregation articles nearly closed Alcorn A. & M. (Negro) College earlier this year, said the presiding elder of the Wesley Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Church had expelled him as pastor on false charges of misusing money.

Profesor King said the elder, J. D. Watkins of Brookhaven, wanted to install his brother, the Rev. Alston Watkins of Bude, as pastor.

The history professor told reporters he had found the lock on the church door yesterday. He said members of the congregation had threatened him with arrest if he removed the lock.

His newspaper articles set off a student boycott that threatened to close the college.

In Brookhaven, Elder Watkins said he had transferred Mr. King to the Bude church and Alston Watkins to the Hazlehurst Church after a "majority of he Hazlehurst Church members had signed a petition" seeking a new pastor.

After Release From Jail

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

King Receives Warning!

Sat. 7-20-57

HAZELHURST, Miss. — Clennon King, controversial Alcorn A. and M. professor who doubles as an AME minister, is a free man this week, but only so long as he avoids trouble.

Arrested here after being charged with breaking and entering the Wesley Chapel AME Church, King was released after spending a night in jail. Through Steward E. W. Ball, the church withdrew the charge but made it clear that King was to vacate the Hazelhurst church and cause no further trouble.

King said he didn't intend to cause a disturbance when he removed the lock from the church. He said he was merely entering the church to attend a monthly meeting of the board to discuss his ouster as pastor.

■

EARLIER, KING had been notified by Presiding Elder J. D. Watkins of Brookhaven, Miss., that he had been transferred to the AME church in Bude, Miss. Part of the transaction found Rev. Watkins' brother, Rev.

JACKSON, Miss.—During the heat of the church controversy, Clennon King sent a telegram to Mrs. Queen Ester Harris of Tuskegee, Ala., commending her for refusing to share in a Negro boycott of white businesses.

Alston Watkins, being transferred from Bude to Hazelhurst.

King charged Rev. Watkins with conspiring to force his transfer. He said he was ousted on false charges so that Watkins' brother could be installed in his place.

Elder Watkins, however, insists that a majority of the members of the Hazelhurst church voted to remove King as pastor of the church.

King has appealed his ousting to Bishop R. R. Wright Jr. of New Orleans. But, according to Elder Watkins, church law permits no appeal until King assumes his new duties.

King first broke into the news earlier this year through a series of articles he published criticizing the NAACP. The articles caused a student boycott at Alcorn and threatened to close the school, which is upported by the state.

CLENNON KING

Clennon King Jailed After Lock Removal; Elder 'Knows Nothing'

Daily News Jackson, Miss. Sat. 7-20-57

HAZLEHURST, Miss. (AP) — An expelled pastor, whose newspaper writings nearly closed a college, said he removed the lock from his church door yesterday despite threats of arrest if he did so. He was jailed a short time later on a breaking and entering charge.

Prof. Clennon King, whose pro-segregation articles nearly closed Alcorn A&M (Negro) College earlier this year, said the presiding elder of the Wesley Chapel AME Church expelled him as pastor on false charges of misuse of money.

King charged the elder, J. D. Watkins of Brookhaven with wanting to install his brother, the Rev. Alston Watkins of Bude, as pastor.

Reached in his Brookhaven home, Elder Watkins said he knew nothing of King's arrest or imprisonment.

He said he transferred King to the Bude church and Alston Watkins to the Hazlehurst church after a "majority of the Hazlehurst church members signed a petition" seeking a new pastor.

In addition, Watkins said, a special committee he appointed to look into the matter reported "dissatisfaction" between King and the church officers.

Elder Watkins said his brother has moved to Hazlehurst but King has not begun his duties at the Bude church, a pre-requisite for an appeal of Watkins' action to the annual church conference.

The history professor told reporters he found a lock on the church door as he attempted to enter to attend the monthy board meeting yesterday.

He said members of the congregation threatened him with arrest if he removed the lock.

"I have just removed the lock," he told reporters. "I'm waiting now to see what is done."

King said he also plans to preach in the church Sunday regardless of any steps to replace him.

Earlier King said, he wrote Bishop R. R. Wright Jr. of New Orleans that Watkins "summarily dismissed me from my pastorate at the Hazlehurst church without legal grounds."

He said he was given no notice of the trial and appealed to the bishop to "set aside this expulsion that I may peacefully continue in the pastorate here.

His newspaper articles set off a student boycott that threatened to close the small Claiborne County college.

Minister Will Vacate His Pulpit At Hazlehurst

Clarion-Ledger Daily News Jackson, Miss. Sun. 7-7-57

HAZLEHURST, Miss., July 6 (AP) — Clennon King, arrested because he removed a lock from the door of the church that ousted him, was released from jail today after he promised no further trouble.

The Copiah county sheriff's office said Steward E. W. Ball of Wesley Chapel AME (Negro) Church withdrew a charge of breaking and entering and King was released shortly after noon.

One condition Ball stipulated was that King vacate the Hazlehurst church and cause no further trouble.

King, who spent the night in jail, said he removed the lock after members of the congregation threatened him with arrest if he did so.

WANTED TO ATTEND

The Negro preacher said he was entering the church merely to attend a monthly meeting of the board to discuss his ouster.

In Brookhaven, Elder J. D. Watkins said a majority of the members of the Hazlehurst church voted to remove King and Watkins transferred the preacher to the church in Bude.

Included in the transfer was Watkins' brother, the Rev. Alston Watkins, who was transferred from Bude to Hazlehurst.

King charged he was ousted on false charges because Watkins wanted to install his brother.

SOUGHT TO APPEAL

Objecting to the action, King sought to appeal to Bishop R. R. Wright Jr. of New Orleans but Elder Watkins said church law permits no appeal on transfers until the preacher assumes his new duties.

King's arrest yesterday followed closely his sending a telegram to Queen Ester Harris of Tuskegee, Ala., commending her for refusing to share in a Negro boycott of white businesses.

During the winter, King is a history professor at Alcorn A&M (Negro) college in Claiborne county. Earlier this year, his pro-segregation newspaper articles caused a student boycott that threatened to close the state-supported school.

MISSISSIPPI

DIGGS' SPEECH DRAWS NEGRO EDITOR'S FIRE

Commercial Appeal P.26

Percy Greene Denies Answer Lies In Violence

Mon. 2-27-57

JACKSON, Miss., May 26. — (AP) — Mississippi's leading Negro newspaper said this week it was "somewhat startled" by a Negro United States Representative's suggestion that Negroes put "faith in our fist, if necessary," in seeking first-class citizenship.

Memphis Press

The remark was made by Representative Charles C. Diggs (D., Mich.) in a speech that otherwise urged Negroes to pursue legal means to gain full civil rights.

The Representative was keynote speaker in Jackson last Sunday at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People third anniversary celebration of the United States Supreme Court decision outlawing public school segregation.

In a lengthy editorial, Editor Percy Greene of the weekly Jackson Advocate said he was "somewhat startled by Diggs' admonition . . . with clenched fist raised."

"Even at the risk of being branded by the few remaining adherants of the NAACP as an 'Uncle Tom'," the editorial said, "the best thing that they (Negro leaders) can do and should do now is let the responsible white leaders of their community know that they totally and unequivocally reject the philsophy and implications in the call to have 'faith in our fist, if necessary', in the struggle for civil rights and first-class citizenship."

Greene also blasted the NAACP itself and what he called its "all-or-nothing philosophy, its court action cure-all, and the intemperate and ill-considered statements and remarks of its spokesmen."

It was this, he said, that halted the progress of a campaign by the Jackson Advocate to expand the Negro vote in Mississippi.

Greene disagreed with Representative Digg's suggestion that Southern white leaders "are deliberately discouraging co-operation of the races."

If this is a fact today, Greene wrote, "it did not exist before the NAACP stepped in with its all-or-nothing philosophy."

Greene said no intelligent Negro in Mississippi "can fail to see the total lack of logic and good sense, in turning around asking for the co-operation of white leaders after they have been lambasted, ridiculed, insulted and maligned by Negro leaders who ask for their co-operation and good will in the same voice."

Law Dean Denies Integration Talk

Post-Herald Birmingham Ala.

OXFORD, Miss., June 11 (U.P.) —Dean Robert J. Farley of the University of Mississippi Law School today denied accusations that he was teaching "integration doctrines" to students and blasted "irresponsible charges" against the U. S. Supreme Court.

Farley issued his statement in reply to charges made Monday night in a television broadcast by State Rep. Zealous Polk of Jeffersone Davis County.

Times 6-12-57

Polk accused Farley of signing a statement which urged compliance with the Supreme Court segregation ruling. The statement was published in the Congressional Yearbook.

Polk called on Gov. J. P. Coleman and the State College Board to "do something" to stop "this man Farley that is teaching the young men of our great state, and this dangerous doctrine being taught to our young men . . ."

Farley retorted that Polk "apparently cannot read" because if he had read the statement he "could not possibly find fault with it."

SCHOOL HEAD GRATEFUL

Commercial Appeal

Students Defend Dean Farley In Integration Charge

Wed. 6-26-57

OXFORD, Miss., June 25. — (UP) — Dean Robert J. Farley of the University of Mississippi Law School, said Tuesday he "greatly appreciated" action by the law students who passed a resolution Monday defending the dean against charges he teaches "integration doctrines."

Memphis Press-Scimitar

The students termed "malicious falsehoods" charges by State Representative Zealous Polk of Jefferson Davis County that Dean Farley supported integration in the classrooms and signed a statement urging compliance with the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling.

RACIAL ISSUE FIGHT AVOIDED BY LEGION

Commercial Appeal P.26

Anti-NAACP Resolution Is jected By Committee

Memphis Press-Scimitar

METCALFE VICTORY SEEN

From The Commercial Appeal Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., July 9.—The Mississippi department of the American Legion Tuesday sidestepped a floor fight on the racial at its state convention here.

A resolution proposed by the Philadelphia post that would authorize officials to cancel the charter of any post sponsoring programs of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was rejected by the resolutions committee.

Metcalfe Wins Support

Several months ago state Comdr. Jack Pace of Magee warned that posts which sponsored NAACP speakers would have their charters withdrawn. His action followed the appearance of out-of-state NAACP speakers before the Jackson Negro post.

The convention will end Wednesday with the certain election of Fred R. Metcalfe Sr. of Itta Bena as commander. The Delta's bid was strengthened Tuesday with the backing of the heavy voting Jackson posts. Also seeking the office is Ralph Vandolah of Gulfport.

Mrs. J. O. Porter of McCalls Creek is scheduled to be elevated from vice president to presidency of the Women's Auxiliary, also in session at Hotel Heidelberg. She will succeed Mrs. A. J. Mattox of Fulton.

Short Calls For Strength

Assistant Secretary of the Army Dewey Short told Legionnaires that many "misguided individuals" are trying to "sack our armed forces" at a time when America should be powerful.

Mr. Short said at least three times in the past 45 years public clamor for budget cutting has resulted in letting down America's guard.

We have paid dearly each time for our folly," he said.

More and more money will be needed for national defense, Mr. Short said, unless the communist threat diminishes.

"For the long pull," he said, "there can be only one of two answers: Either the military threat must diminish or the Army will need more money in the years to come."

Earlier, Mr. Short told a press conference Army Engineers are conducting surveys of the port at Gulfport, iMss., and he said he favors enlarging the port and deepening the channel.

He said prospects are "good" for making the Tombigbee River in Mississippi and Alabama navigable as a waterways outlet to the Gulf.

INTEGRATION PROGRAM IS OFFERED BY EDITOR

Commercial Appeal

Thinks It Would Prevent 'Battleground' In South

Fri. 7-12-57

JACKSON, Miss., July 11. — (UP)— Negro newspaper editor Percy Greene Thursday offered an eight-point program which he said would allow Southern states "to escape the unhappy position" of being the battle ground for the segregation controversy.

Memphis Press-Scimitar

The program, Green published in his Jackson Advocate includes abolishment of segregation on all city bus lines and in waiting rooms of all public transportation facilities, admitting Negro students to state supported universities for graduate and professional training, raising standards of state supported Negro colleges, supporting and maintaining equal public schools, appointing Negroes to all public school policy making boards and committees, permitting Negro-white participation and attendance at cultural, artistic, athletic and other ofrms of public programs and encourage qualified Negroes to vote.

Greene said the abolition of segregation on city buses and in waiting rooms would not necessarily mean integration because a white person would not be compelled to set beside a Negro. But he said the segregation in the areas "are the little pinpricks that constantly agitate the Southern Negro."

"Moreover," Green noted, "In every large Southern community whites and Negroes stand and mingle side by side in elevators, banks, post ofices and other places with no thought of integration or social equality.

Negroes Told To Stand Firm On Integration

Daily News Thurs. 7-25-57

Jackson Miss.

A Chicago Negro minister Wednesday night warned Mississippi Negro Baptists the south is being "victimized" by segregation and integration.

"Negroes are so jittery — If were not careful we'll destroy our own leaders," Dr. Joseph Harrisor Jackson said.

The Coahoma county born president of the National Baptist Convention addressed more than 4,000 Negroes at the Mississippi Missionary Baptist Convention here Wednesday night.

He called on Negroes to stand firm in their views on integration and to keeping fighting for voting vghts.

"We can make certain concessions to people who don't believe as we do but there's a point in Democracy from which we can't retreat if were going to have a Democracy, he said.

The pastor of the worlds largest Negro church said "the ballot can't be in the hands of one group. We must either deny the Democracy of freedom or give everybody the right to vote."

RATHER BE FREE

"I would rather be hated and free than loved and kept in chains," he continued.

Jackson drew applause for a warning that Federal troops will march into Mississippi despite the "watering down" of civil rights legislation in the United States Senate.

"If rebellion against the laws of the nation continues, Washington will send troops to Mississippi," he shouted.

"We can't remain a Democracy with one-half of the people living in contempt of court and the other half living for the court," he said.

Dr. Jackson warned Mississippi Negroes, "Don't get bitter. Don't try to solve every problem with your own hands.

"Negroes of the United States shouldn't give up, but they've got to suffer some," he added.

Rev. H. H. Hume of Greenville Thursday appeared secure in his post as head of the Negro religion organization. He invited members of the convention to his hometown for their 1958 convention.

"Come where Negro policemen walk the streets and where Negro leadership works with the people of hte town," he told persons attending the convention.

A move to oust Hume apparently did not materialize at the convention. Earlier he had reported a drive to remove him from office because he received money from the State Sovereignty Commission.

NO ELECTION

No election of officers is scheduled at the meeting this year. Present officers will continue until the 1958 session.

Hume won roaring applause from members of the convention in his annual address Wednesday.

"I know there are those among you who say, 'God is too slow'! and who preach hatred," he said.

"But the white man and the colored man have come a long way in Mississippi and we depend on each other. I have held a spear to m[illegible]rt, and have stretched [illegible]ide on the spits of public opinion. Not because I have hurt anyone, but because I have tried to help," the tall Delta preacher added.

NEGRO SPEAKER HINTS OF VIOLENCE IN SOUTH

Commercial Appeal P.25

Threat Of Federal Troops Cited By Baptist Head

Thurs. 7-25-57

JACKSON, Miss., July 24. — (UP)—A national Negro leader said here Wednesday the Federal Government eventually will be forced to send troops into the South if Southerners continue to resist the Supreme Court decision on school integration.

Memphis Press-Scimitar

Dr. J. H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the five million member National Baptist Convention, said the Senate's decision to eliminate from the civil rights bill authority for the Federal Government to send troops to the South is "hollow mockery."

He said it was "one of the saddest decisions we have seen" but added that "you cannot keep from sending troops to the South if the rebellion continues."

Dr. Jackson, born in Coahoma County and graduated from Jackson College here, said he was "greatly heartened and encouraged" by the conviction of segregationist John Kasper and six Clinton, Tenn., residents in Knoxville yesterday.

"I would have preferred that it had happened in Mississippi," he said, "but the beautiful thing is that it was in the South."

Dr. Jackson is here to address the state convention of the Negro Baptist association headed by Rev. H. H. Hume of Greenville.

Segregation Agency Keeps Most Of Funds

Post-Herald Mon. 7-8-57 Birm. Ala.

JACKSON, July 7 (AP) — The powerful state agency which Mississippi set up to preserve segregation may wind up its first two years with most of its $250,000 unspent. P. 13

Relative racial calm is credited for the fact that the State Sovereignty Commission has spent only about $50,000. But there's the expected air of mystery — including "blind" checks made out to Gov. J. P. Coleman and payments to some well-known Negroes—about the agency's work.

The commission functions from offices tucked away in a top-floor corner of Mississippi's 54-year-old Capitol. Its director State Rep. Ney Gore of Quitman County, is paid $600 a month and does little talking for publication.

Of the $1771 spent on investigations — a surprisingly small amount considering the agency's vast investigative authority — $885 was in warrants made out to Gov. J. P. Coleman. This includes warrants for $435 and $250 in May of this year.

"That was to allow us to pay for information without disclosing the identity of the informants," Coleman explained. "Receipts from these informants have been submitted to the full commission."

Suspect 2 Ministers, Editor Of 'Sell Out' In Mississippi

Weekly New Orleans La. Sat. 7-20-57

Jackson, Miss. - (ANP) - Negroes in Mississippi are wondering if certain leaders are not selling them out to forces opposing integration within the state.

This uneasy speculation resulted from a recent disclosure that three Negroes - two ministers and the editor of the local weekly newspaper - had received a total of $1,746.91 for assistance given the powerful state sovereignty commission, which was set up two years ago to preserve segregation.

After two years' operation, the commission has spent about $50,000 of the 250,000 appropriated by the legislature to carry out its Jim Crow program, despite the group's vast investigative authority.

As important as that is to Negroes, a much more important point is the mystery surrounding payments to some well-known Negroes by the commission, mostly through "Blind" checks made out to Gov. J.P. Coleman.

REPORT 3 'GOT MONEY'

Though the warrants for the expenditures do not identify recipients by race, at least three of them are known. They are Rev. H.H. Hume of Greenville, Rev. Ozelle Mason of Jackson; and Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate.

Weekly

Receipts held by the committee show that Rev. Hume, identified also as a newspaperman, was paid $290.76 last August, and $175 last March for investigations. He also drew $150 last February for travel purposes. According to Gov. Coleman, Rev. Hume is "a Negro preacher .. who has taken public stand for segregation."

FOR "ADVERTISING AND INVESTIGATIONS" -- Rev. Mason received $496.15 in February for "advertising," and also drew $50 warrants last July and August, for "investigations."

Green has drawn money in several categories. Under travel last September, he received $35; under advertising he received $300 last February. In addition, a $200 warrant, given him last October, was made out to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

Race Judases revealed in Miss. report

Argus Calif. Wed. 7-31-57

JACKSON, Miss. — The powerful State Sovereignty Commission, set up to preserve segregation in this state, has spent money with Negroes who have taken a "public stand for segregation", and has also spent heavily to "influence television and radio treatment of the racial problem," Governor J. P. Coleman was quoted here as saying by Associated Press.

At the close of its first two years, the commission has spent but $50,000 of its original appropriation of $250,000. But Governor Coleman isn't complaining.

A large part of the appropriation was "intended for use in case we got into litigation over (segregated) schools — so that we could employ the best counsel.

"That hasn't been necessary, of course," said Governor Coleman.

He said there "have been those who feel the commission should have been more active, but I personally fail to see how you can improve on success."

Negroes paid for their "public stand for segregation" were identified as H. H. Hume, of Greenville, a minister and newspaperman, also Percy Greene, editor of the Jackson Advocate, and the Rev. Ozelle Mason, also of Jackson.

Hume assertedly was paid $29.76 last August and $175 in March for "investigations". He also drew $150 in February for travel.

Green was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February for advertising.

Two hundred dollars was paid in October to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

The Rev. Mason was paid $496.15 in February for advertising. He also drew $50 in July and August for "investigations."

INFLUENCES MEDIA

Coleman disclosed that Hal Decell, weekly newspaper editor who is director of public relations for the commission, travels widely in the interest of segregation, visiting both coasts, in an effort to influence communications media for segregation.

The governor described Decell's work as "effective."

"One of the outstanding nationwide television hookups has agreed it will not handle racial questions in any manner unless it gives the South's side at the same time," Coleman said. He did not identify the network.

Recalling the Naacp "boasting about the money it had contributed from the CIO, Fund for the Republic," Coleman said "Our purpose was to let them know Mississippi was willing to spend also if it came to a contest of money."

The commission uses a "warrant system" "to allow us to pay for information without disclosing the identity of the informants," Coleman said.

The Associated Press said Coleman is joined in the commission by "some men strongly" opposed to him politically, "although united . . . in upholding segregation."

Among the commission's expenditures was $2000 to take a group of New England editors on a "see-it-yourself" tour of Mississippi to see how well treated Negroes were.

More of the editors had uncomplimentary things to say about Mississippi than complimentary but Coleman, nevertheless, said he felt the visit had been the "outstanding single accomplishment o the commission so far as the res of the country is concerned."

Mississippi Negro Editor Hit As Segregationist Fights Back

Advertiser Sat. 7-20-57 Pt-a Montgomery Ala.

JACKSON, Miss., July 19 (AP)—Jackson Negro Editor Percy Green said today the Mississippi Negro ministers who cited him as a pro-segregation worker have abused their calling by entering politics.

The (Negro) Ministerial Improvement Assn. of Mississippi yesterday adopted a resolution denouncing Green, the Rev. H. H. Hume of Greenville and the Rev. Ozelle Mason of Jackson for having worked for the pro-segregation State Sovereignty Commission.

Because of this, the association said, the three Negroes do not and can not speak for Mississippi Negroes.

Green, editor of the weekly Jackson Advocate which boasts the largest circulation of Negro newspapers in Mississippi, said in a statement the ministerial group "deserted the ancient and holy commission as preachers . . . and in doing so spread dissension, division, hatred, suspicion and ill will . . ."

Green said the Soverignty Commission made the "first and most progressive step toward first-class citizenship for all in Mississippi" since the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools when the commission approved a state land grant for an integrated Veterans Administration hospital earlier this year.

Green charged "certain Negro preachers" with wanting to collect money to abolish segregation in every phase of life but the churches "which means they do not want to abolish the Negro church because they want to keep on being Negro preachers."

Green charged the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People "has lost its usefulness in Mississippi and in the rest of the South as far as its being able to evoke Negro and white co-operation [illegible] level."

Segregationist Negroes Face Two Miss. Foes

Defender P.16
Thurs. 8-8-57
Louisville, Ky.

Jackson, Miss. — A United Press story published in the July 28 edition of the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to either group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Greene of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Mr. Greene, the story says, has lost both distributors and advertising, while Mr. Hume, a Baptist minister, is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state ministers' group, the report says.

"Humes accepted a contribution from the (State) Sovereignty Commission for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation," the UP report continues.

"Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social, conditions.

"I couldn't have made the trip otherwise,' green said.

"He also sold the (State Sovereignty) commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP . . . and said he was paid by the commission for printing a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes."

Rev. H. H. Hume Getting Ready For $325,000 Damage Suit

State NAACP Sec. Medgar Evers Is Among Defendants

Advocate
Sat. 8-10-57
Jackson, Miss.

Greenville, Miss., Aug. 5 — (Special)—Editor H. H. Hume of Greenville, Mississippi has been in conference with his attorney last week making preparations to enter suit for $325,000.00 damage that he has suffered locally and nationally from those who have branded him as an "Uncle Tom," a traitor and a hinderance and set-back to the Negro people in Mississippi.

He named as his accusers, R. L. Drew, president, United Order of Friendship, president, Royal Funeral System of Clarksdale; John Melchor, president, Delta Burial Corp., Clarksdale and planter at Falcon, Mississippi; T. T. Adams, a resident of Clarksdale and worker of the Clarksdale Oil Mill and Manufacturing Co.; the Associated Press; the Ministerial Improvement Association, Hattiesburg, Mississippi and Medgar Evers, Secretary, NAACP, Jackson, Mississippi.

Editor Hume says that these people accused of spying together with the white in Mississippi and the Sovereignty Commission to cheat and defraud people out of their civil rights. Editor Hume says he is ready to prove that these accusations are most false and untrue and his accusers have organized themselves into a clique to destroy his name and reputation for grudges that they had against him prior to Negro voting in Mississippi or the rulings of the Supreme Court. Editor Hume says that he has sufficient documentary evidences to substantiate these facts.

Segregationist Mississippi

Defender P.2
Sat. 8-10-57

Jackson, Miss—A United Press story published in the July 28 edition of the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to either group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Greene of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Mr. Greene, the story says, has lost both distributors and advertising, while Mr. Hume, a Baptist minister, is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state minister's group, the report says.

"Humes accepted a contribution from the (State) Sovereignty Commission for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation," the UP report continues.

"Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social, conditions.

"I couldn't have made the trip otherwise,' Greene said.

"He also sold the (State Sovereignty) commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP . . . and he was paid by the commission for printing a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes."

HARRISON HENRY HUMES SAYS HE IS NO LONGER COMPLACENT

Advocate
Sat. 8-10-57
Jackson, Miss.

H. H. Humes says he has subscribed for the last several years to that passage of the scripture which says: "If they slap you on the right cheek, turn the left one"; but he now understands that this is the time when people won't stop at this for we are in a an age that if one who is merciful and forgiving wants to survive he will have to apply to the original law, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Therefore, he can't be complacement any longer for he has definitely found out that you will be placed in the category of a coward. Regardless of how innocent you are you become guilty in the eyes of the public if you fail to stand up and fight.

Our leading opponents in our home town, Greenville, Mississippi, are as follows:

Rev. J. F. Redmond, whom we have helped on many occasions and we have been most kind to him. He now bitterly hates us because when the New Hope First Baptist Church was vacant he was nominated for pastor and his name was stricken out by the membership who did not want him and elected us as their servant. Over his predictions the church has succeeded. He has not given up going from member to member in the church trying to create ill will toward the pastor in that membership. It is not because the people didn't want him. Brother Redmond bought up and begged up all the papers that he could in the recent Humes episode and sent them all over the Country.

Many of the people in Greenville and out of Greenville are asking us what have we done to him, for such traits of Bro. Redmond are not those of a man who is interested in his race but traits of an individual enemy.

We don't have time to go among Bro. Redmond's church folk nor attempt to poison the minds of his deacons for we believe in being ethical, a gentleman and a brother. We find enough to do in our own church and if he was a busy pastor he could find enough to do in his own congregation.

Mr. James Carter, who names himself the Mayor of Nelson St., has a good cleaning establishment and would have a good business, pay the Elks their money and regain many of his customers and friends if he didn't let people hoodwink him and put rings in his nose. As an individual James 'Baby Face' Carter is a likable person.

Mr. James Edwards, President of Edwards and Evans Funeral Home. James Edwards' greatest companion is a foot long pipe and he is not a friend to anybody in the world but James Edwards. Ask him who has he helped. He's tried to elect himself Worshipful Master of the Masonic Lodge, he was kicked out as Exalted Ruler of the Local Elks Lodge, he flunked in a race as president of the State Elks Association, he is now president of the Negro Business League of the city, but a dead weight to it, and he runs a little business that will always remain his size.

Mr. Levi Chapple made applications to the State Sovereignty Commission for money in the name of the State Colored Elks Association. The Elks of Mississippi should ask him did he get the money and how much did he get. We have known Levi Chapple for the last thirty (30) years. He is a man whom we've been all across the fields in the delta and helped him as we would a relative. We love him and he knows it but still we pity him. He is a man who started out with a good brain but developed a twisted mind and who survived in Greenville as a parasite on good people who had pity in their hearts for him.

Six preachers, we have six preachers in Greenville who get up early in the morning, like day hands used to do when we were a little water boy on a plantation. They have a little greasy book begging. They don't visit the sick nor prepare a sermon for Sunday morning but they are running the country over putting on a long face telling the white people what they are for and against, but when they get behind their backs and around people who don't understand they curse out their donors and brand Humes and Percy Greene as 'Uncle Toms.' We wonder if they think this is fair to their donors?

We are no longer complacent. We are going to post their names in every Chamber of Commerce office in Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi. If it is anyone who is hurting the race and is a hinderance to Mississipp as a whole it is these divine scoundrels.

The Editor of this paper will not be complacent for he can truthfully say in public and in private we have worked for the good of the race and he thinks the race has been helped because he works on the grounds and basis of goodwill. No man can succeed when he peddles hate. We are not a peddler of hate and the white and colored of Mississippi know that this is the divine truth, so help us God.

Roy Wilkins

Mr. Roy Wilkins, who flies down in Mississippi and makes a great speech and fly out of Miss., will never solve the problems in Mississippi. The truth of it is Roy Wilkins is not interested in the integration of schools, segregation or any type of civil rights. He would be one of the happiest men in America if such legislature fails in Washington. Roy Wilkins is interested in Roy Wilkins. He wants money, bg money and he doesn't care how he gets it. If it is at the expense of Negroes losing their jobs, blood shed or their children being naked, barefooted and ignorant as long as he can live in millionaire style he doesn't give a—.

Ask Roy Wilkins what became of the FEPC campaign, Anti poll Tax and Anti Lynch Bill and many other programs that the NAACP has sponsored and failed.

The organization is like one of those Protective Associations of the wild west. Whenever somebody exposes them they use every method of killing off the leader of the vigilantes. We are not a supporter of the NAACP and never have been for when Dr. L. K. Williams died in a plane crash William Pickens, National Director of the NAACP, had everything unkind to say against him. Ever since that time we have known that the NAACP was an organization designed to kill off leaders who don't think as they think. It may have started out to be a good organization but today it has fallen in bad hands both nationally and locally.

Whatever Mississippi and the nation do to us remember we've told you that the people in Mississippi must be good enough, big enough, religious and intelligent enough to solve their problems and if they are not willing ,people out of Mississippi won't do it flying down here in the morning stirring up strife and flying out at night. We who live here know this is the truth and nothing but the truth so help us God. Editor's Note: The foregoing is reprinted from the Delta Leader, dated Aug. 4, Rev. H. H. Hume, Editor.

Report From Mississippi

Negro Church Leader Bans NAACP!

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 7-20-57 p3

JACKSON, Miss.—The all-Negro Mississippi General Baptist State Convention, headed by segregationist H. H. Humes, minister and editor of Greenville, Miss., wants no part of the NAACP.

Humes refused to print a paid advertisement outlining the purposes of the State Conference of NAACP Branches in a souvenir program being printed for the State Baptist Convention that meets here July 23. A check for the advertisement was returned to the NAACP.

Rev. Mr. Humes also holds an office in the National Baptist Convention, U. S. A., Inc., which meets in Louisville, Ky., in September.

As moderator of the State Baptist Convention, Humes is said to control all of the convention policies.

Mississippi Baptists Reject NAACP Ad For Program

Defender Chicago Ill. Sat. 7-27-57

JACKSON, Miss. — The Mississippi State Conference of NAACP Branches said this week that the Mississippi General Baptist State convention refused to print an advertisement in their souvenir program book and returned the NAACP's check.

According to NAACP spokesman, the ad would have outlined the purposes of the association. The Baptists were scheduled to meet in Jackson, July 23.

The moderator of the Baptist convention is the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, Miss., editor of the Delta Leader. Rev. Humes made the news earlier this month when an internationally known news gathering agency disclosed that he was on the payroll of the Mississippi Sovereignty commission, an agency set up by the state two years ago to preserve segregation in the state.

The Mississippi NAACP spokesman said the ad which was refused would have listed the purposes of the NAACP as:

1. To educate America to accord full rights and opportunities for Negroes.

2. To fight injustice in the courts when based on race prejudice.

3. To pass protective legislation in state and nation and defeat discriminatory bills.

4. To secure the vote for Negroes and teach its proper use.

5. To stimulate the cultural life of Negroes.

6. To stop lynching.

It was reported earlier this month that Rev. Hume, Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate, and the Rev. Ozelle Mason of Jackson had been hired to spy and report on individual Negroes and colored organizations interested in gaining desegregation in Mississippi.

A check of the Mississippi Sovereignty commission's books showed that Rev. Hume, had received $29.76 in August, 1956; $175 in March of 1957 for investigations and $150 in February, 1957, for travel.

Negro Editor Says He'll Sue

Post Herald Mon. 7-22-57

GREENVILLE, July 21 (U.P.)—A Negro newspaper editor says he will file a $325,000 libel suit against several parties who allegedly have accused him of conspiring with pro-segregationists to hold back the Negro in Mississippi.

The Rev. H. H. Hume, publisher of the Delta Leader, claims he will charge the defendants with "conspiring to willfully incriminate" him.

The Negro newspaperman said he was accused of "conspiring with the State Sovereignty Commission and the White Citizens Councils to hold the Negro back in Mississippi and to cheat and defraud them of their civil rights."

He said he was also charged with being "a traitor and an 'Uncle Tom' to his race."

Hume said he will seek damages for the criticism and humiliation he has suffered from Negroes unable to understand the "propaganda."

Hume said the suit will name as defendants Executive Secretary Medgar Evars of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Jackson; the Ministerial Improvement Association of Hattiesburg; the Associated Press; and R. L. Drew and John Melchor, operator of Negro funeral homes in Clarksdale and Marks.

ACCEPTED STATE FUNDS

Daily News P. 2

Harrassed Negro Leaders See Wide Gap Of Race War

Sun. 7-28-57 Jackson, Miss.

By JOHN HERBERS
Unitd Press Staff Correspondent

Two harrassed Mississippi Negro leaders are witnesses today to the wide gap between non- compromising whites and Negroes in the South's racial war.

Like their white counterparts in the struggle, they got caught on the other side and brought the wrath of members of their own race on their heads.

Men like the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville and Editor Percy Greene of Jackson, both controversial figures among Negroes, have been the only liaison between the state's all-white, segregationist government and Mississippi's 900,000 Negroes. They claim to speak for a wide segment of the Negro population.

ENEMIES OF NAACP

Both are enemies of the NAACP which brands them as "Uncle Toms", they are not embraced by white extremists. Greene, who has been pushing for integration in college graduate schools and public transportation and for Negro representation in government, was considered a radical by many whites before the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decision.

Paul Johnson Jr. charged he lost the 1951 gubernatorial race because Greene endorsed him the night before the second primary.

Humes, who edits the Delta Leader in Greenville and is president of the Mississippi Negro Baptist Convention, claims a share of the credit for progress in Greenville, which has Negro police officers, good schools and an unusually large number of Negro voters for a Mississpipi city.

STATE PAYROLL

When it became known they had accepted money from the State Sovereignty Commission — the agency created to maintain segregation—they found themselves in trouble.

Greene, who publishes the Jackson Advocate, said about five of his distributors quit him and he lost advertising. Hume said he was hurt chiefly in his standing with national Negro Baptist leaders. Both were condemned by a state minister's group close to the NAACP.

Humes accepted a contribution from the Sovereignty Commission for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation.

NEGRO PROGRESS

The editor doesn't say anything about segregation or integration," Humes said. "It points up the progress Negroes have made and a lot of white groups have contributed to it."

Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negros from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social, conditions.

"I couldn't have made the trip otherwise," Greene said.

He also sold the commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP for national distribution, and he was paid by the commission for printing a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes.

Humes and Greene both said commission spokesmen told them the commission wanted to be more than a "negative factor" and was interested in promoting better race relations and Negro progress, under segregation.

Negro Pastors Assail Trio For Anti-Mix Aid

Daily News Jackson, Miss. Thurs. 7-18-57

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — An organization of Mississippi Negro ministers meeting here this week adopted a resolution denouncing three Negroes who have received funds from the State Sovereignty Commission, established to preserve segregation and Mississippi's states rights and "way of life".

Named in the resolution adopted by the Ministerial Improvement Association of Mississippi were the Rev. H. H. Hume, Greenville; the Rev. Ozelle Mason, Jackson, and Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate.

The resolution was signed by the Rev. W. H. Hall, Hattiesburg; the Rev. E. G. Dickey, Meridian; the Rev. C. O Inge, Laurel; the Rev. T. B. Brown, Gulfport, and Medgar Evers of Jackson, identified as secretary of the resolutions committee headed by Hall

Evers is also field secretary for the NAACP in Mississippi He said in Jackson today the ministerial association has been in existence about a year and has lay members as well as ministers.

Records of the Sovereignty Commission show Hume, a minister and newspaperman at Greenville, was paid $29.76 in August 1956 and $175 in March 1957 under the heading of "investigations" and $150 last February for travel.

Mason was paid $496.15 in February under the heading of advertising and $50 in July and again in August of 1956 under the heading of investigations.

CALLED 'UNWORTHY'

Green, whose newspaper has the largest circulation of any Negro newspaper in the state, was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February under the heading of advertising. A $200 warrant last October was made out to "National Assn. of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

The ministerial association resolution, disclosed only today, said Hume and Mason are "unworthy of the fellowship of the ministers of the Protestant denominations in Mississippi" and cannot speak for Mississippi Negroes.

Green was 10 years ago "an outspoken leader on the question of civil rights," the resolution said, but has "lost his influence among Negroes in the state of Mississippi and does not speak for the Negroes in Mississippi."

TWO NEGROES CAUGHT IN WIDE RACIAL GAP

Mississippi Minister, Editor 'In The Middle'

AIDED RACE'S PROGRESS

By JOHN HERBERS
United Press Staff Writer

JACKSON, Miss., July 27.—Two harrassed Mississippi Negro leaders are witnesses to the wide gap between non-compromising whites and Negroes in the South's racial war.

Like their white counterparts in the struggle, they got caught on the other side and brought the wrath of members of their own race on their heads.

Men like Rev. H. H. Hume of Greenville and editor Percy Greene of Jackson, both controversial figures among Negroes, have been the only liaison between the state's all-white, segregationist Government and Mississippi's 900,000 Negroes. They claim to speak for a wide segment of the Negro population.

Enemies of NAACP

Both are enemies of the NAACP which brands them as "Uncle Toms" but neither are they embraced by white extremists. Greene, who has been pushing for integration in college graduate schools and public transportation and for Negro representation in government, was considered a radical by many whites before the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decision.

Paul Johnson Jr. charged he lost the 1951 gubernatorial race because Greene endorsed him the night before the second primary.

Rev. Hume, who edits the Delta Leader in Greenville and is president of the Mississippi Negro Baptist Convention, claims a share of the credit for Negro progress in Greenville which has Negro police officers, good schools and an unusually large number of Negro voters.

When it became known they had accepted money from the state Sovereignty Commission—the agency created to maintain segregation—they found themselves in trouble.

Lost Advertising

Greene, who publishes the weekly Jackson Advocate, said about five of his distributors quit him and he lost advertising. Rev. Hume said he was hurt chiefly in his standing with national Negro Baptist leaders. Both were condemned by a state minister's group close to the NAACP.

Rev. Hume accepted a contribution from the Sovereignty Commission for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation.

"The edition does not say anything about segregation or integration," he said. "It points up the progress Negroes have made and a lot of white groups have contributed to it."

Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social, conditions.

Sold Papers

"I couldn't have made the trip otherwise," Greene said.

He also sold the commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP for national distribution and he was paid by the commission for printing through the Mutual Association of Colored People South a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes.

Rev. Hume and Editor Greene both said commission spokesmen told them the commission wanted to be more than a "negative factor" and was interested in promoting better race relations and Negro progress, under segregation.

Coleman Tells Why Mississippi Needs New Constution

By PHIL STROUPE
Daily News Staff Writer

Gov. J. P. Coleman recuperated from a gall bladder operation in a Jackson hospital Monday night while people of North Mississippi watched and listened to his filmed television appeal for a constitutional convention.

The film of the governor's address, made last week before he entered University Hospital, urged support for a constitutional convention because the present Constitution of 1890 is "definitely anti-industry and there isn't any way to get around that fact."

'DOING NICELY'

A medical bulletin from the University Hospital at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday said Gov. Coleman "is progressing nicely."

"His condition is very satisfactory," doctors said.

The governor, who will be in the hospital about a week, told his TV audience:

"If we expect to get industry in Mississippi, we must take out everything that is in this document and proceed to write a new one based on the advice of the best lawyers, the best bankers, the best industrialists, and the best economists."

Coleman has announced he will call the legislature into special session Nov. 4 to set up a constitutional convention, and last night he told his television audience specific reasons why Mississippi needs a new Constitution.

"Mississippi had better write a new Contitution now while it can to meet these conditions of the present, and as far as possible to anticipate the conditions which lie immediately ahead of us," he said.

GIVES SPECIFIC

The governor outlined specific provisions he thinks ought to be in a new Constitution:

1. Reapportionment of the legislature "to guarantee every section of the state its fair shake in the Mississippi Legislature."

2. Insertion of the homestead exemption principle into the Constitution, "to encourage ownership of homes."

3. Inclusion of the Balance Agriculture with Industry law in the Constitution.

4. Consolidation of circuit and chancery court "so that a judge may sit in both law and equity."

5. Separation of the office of sheriff and tax collector.

6. Annual session of the Legislature for revenue purposes to eliminate having to guess 2½ years in advance on state budgets.

7. Strike out of the present Constitution those provisions prohibiting slavery, dueling, pensioning of state officers, since the state now has a law authorizing a retirement plan.

8. Strike the section which provide for a four-month school term, since the school re-organization law authorizes eight months.

9. Strike the sections requiring the Legislature to elect U. S. senators and to take a census every ten years.

10. Revision of the section saying all property shall be assessed at full value when the average assessment in the state now is generally 22 per cent of full value.

11. Elimination of a provision saying the Legislature can repeal the charter of any corporation "in the public interest" and another saying industry chartered more than five years is not entitled to tax exemptions.

Segregationist Negroes In 'Cross-Fire'

JACKSON, Miss — A United Press story published in the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to eitther group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev H H Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Greene of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate.

Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Segregation Unit Meets In Secret

JACKSON, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—The State Sovereignty Commission, the agency charged with maintaining segregation in Mississippi, met for almost three hours today but refused to say what happened.

Gov. J. P. Coleman in announcing the meeting earlier said the commission would hold a general discussion of the segregation fight.

It was believed use of federal troops in Little Rock and effects of the new civil rights law were scheduled for discussion.

Also meeting with the group was State Auditor Boyd Golding. His presence was not explained. Reporters were barred from the meeting.

Coleman left the meeting immediately after it broke up without making a statement.

LACK OF BIAS IS CITED

Jackson Held Up as Example of Racial Progress

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Mayor of Jackson, Miss., says his city is free of the racial problems that plague many other cities in the South.

"Negroes and whites live side by side in peace, quiet and contentment in Jackson," Mayor Allen C. Thompson declared in a talk to a dinner meeting of the Utah Municipal League.

Mr. Thompson added: "Slum districts occupied mostly by Negroes have been replaced by landlords with very little pressure from the city's Rehabilitation Department and with no Federal aid money."

He pointed out that Jackson's 130,000 population included a greater percentage of Negro citizens than any other city except Washington. He said Negroes occupied and operated one of the most beautiful municipal auditoriums in the nation at Jackson.

Three Paid Out of State Segregation Fund

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mississippi Hires Negro Undercover Men!

Sat. 7-20-57

JACKSON, Miss. — Several prominent Negro leaders were among those paid for undercover work by the powerful Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission, which spent only $50,000 of an alloted $250,000 budget set up to preserve segregation.

The commission, which claims only $50,000 of the budget was spent the past two years because of the "relative racial calm" within the state, operates in Mississippi's capitol building.

State Representative Ney Gore, who heads the commission, declined to talk about the Negroes who aided in upholding segregation, but Gov. J. P. Coleman identified H. H. Hume of Greenville, Negro minister and newspaperman, as "a Negro preacher at Greenville who has taken a public stand for segregation."

JACKSON, Miss.—Negro newspaper editor Percy Green said abolishing segregation on bus lines and in graduate programs at institutions of higher learning would allow Southern states to escape being a battle ground for the segregation controversy.

Hume was paid $29.75 in August, 1956, and $175 in March, 1957, for investigations. He also drew $150 last February for travel.

Percy Green, Negro editor of the Jacksonville (Miss.) Advocate, drew money in several categories. He was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February for advertising. A $200 warrant last October was made out to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

Rev. Ozelle Mason, Jackson, Negro pastor, was paid $496.15 in February under the heading of advertising. He also drew $50 warrants in July and August of 1956 under the heading of investigations.

3 paid $1,746 by body fighting Miss. integration

Afro-American Sat. 7-27-57 Baltimore, Md.

JACKSON, Miss. — Three "leaders" were reported by the Clarion-Ledger, Jackson Daily News of July 7, to have been paid petty sums of money for their "services" to the Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission, which has been operating for two years to thwart integration in the state.

Though the warrants for the expenditures do not identify recipients by race, the three colored persons are reported to be the Rev. H. H. Hume of Greenville, the Rev. Ozelle Mason of Jackson, and Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate.

* * *

THE STATE Sovereignty Commission, which was given an appropiation of $250,000 by the State Legislature for its fight against mandates of the U.S. Supreme Court, has spent $50,000 of the appropriation during its two years of activity, the newspaper stated.

Its figures also showed that the three served the commission had received a total of around $1,746 for their "contributions."

* * *

RECEIPTS HELD by the committee show that the Rev. Mr. Hume, identified also as a newspaperman, was paid $290.76 last August, and $175 last March for investigations.

He also drew $150 last February for travel purposes. According to Governor Coleman, the Rev. Mr. Hume is "a colored preacher . . . who has taken a public stand for segregation."

* * *

THRE REV. MR. MASON received $496.15 in February for "advertising," and also drew $50 warrants last July and August for "investigations."

* * *

GREEN HAS drawn money in several categories. Under travel last September, he received $35; under advertising, he received $300 last February. In addition, a $200 warrant, given him last October, was made out to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

NEGROES DENOUNCED BY MINISTER'S GROUP

Three Scored For Accepting Commission Funds

HATTIESBURG, Miss., July 18. — (AP) — An organization of Mississippi Negro ministers meeting here this week adopted a resolution denouncing three Negroes who have received funds from the State Sovereignty Commission.

The Sovereignty Commission was established by the 1956 Legislature to preserve segregation and Mississippi's state rights and "way of life."

Named in the resolution adopted by the Ministerial Improvement Association of Mississippi were Rev. H. H. Hume, Greenville; Rev. Ozelle Mason, Jackson, and Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate.

The resolution was signed by Rev. W. H. Hall of Hattiesburg, Rev. E. G. Dickey of Meridian, Rev. C. O. Inge of Laurel, Rev. T. V. Brown of Gulfport, and Medgar Evers of Jackson, identified as secretary of the resolutions committee headed by Hall.

Evers is also field secretary for the NAACP in Mississippi. He said in Jackson Thursday the Ministerial Improvement Association is about a year old and has lay members as well as ministers.

Records of the Sovereignty Commission show that Hume, a minister and newspaperman at Greenville, was paid $29.76 in August, 1956 and $175 in March, 1957 under the heading of "investigations" and $150 last February for travel.

Mason was paid $496.15 in February under the heading of advertising and $50 in July and again in August of 1956 under the heading of investigations. Green, whose newspaper has the largest circulation of any Negro newspaper in the state, was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February under the heading of advertising. A $200 warrant last October was made out to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

Race Judases revealed in Miss. report

Tribune p. 6 Wed. 7-31-57 Los Angeles Calif.

JACKSON, Miss. — The powerful State Sovereignty Commission, set up to preserve segregation in this state, has spent money with Negroes who have taken a "public stand for segregation", and has also spent heavily to "influence television and radio treatment of the racial problem," Governor J. P. Coleman was quoted here as saying by Associated Press.

At the close of its first two years, the commission has spent but $50,000 of its original appropriation of $250,000. But Governor Coleman isn't complaining.

A large part of the appropriation was "intended for use in case we got into litigation over (segregated) schools — so that we could employ the best counsel.

"That hasn't been necessary, of course," said Governor Coleman.

He said there "have been those who feel the commission should have been more active, but I personally fail to see how you can improve on success."

Negroes paid for their "public stand for segregation" were identified as H. H. Hume, of Greenville, a minister and newspaperman, also Percy Greene, editor of the Jackson Advocate, and the Rev. Ozelle Mason, also of Jackson.

Hume assertedly was paid $29.76 last August and $175 in March for "investigations". He also drew $150 in Februarv for travel.

Green was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February for advertising.

Two hundred dollars was paid in October to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

The Rev. Mason was paid $496.15 in February for advertising. He also drew $50 in July and August for "investigations."

INFLUENCES MEDIA

Coleman disclosed that Hal Decell, weekly newspaper editor who is director of public relations for the commission, travels widely in the interest of segregation, visiting both coasts, in an effort to influence communications media for segregation.

The governor described Decell's work as "effective."

"One of the outstanding nationwide television hookups has agreed it will not handle racial questions in any manner unless it gives the South's side at the same time," Coleman said. He did not identify the network.

Recalling the Naacp "boasting about the money it had contributed from the CIO, Fund for the Republic," Coleman said "Our purpose was to let them know Mississippi was willing to spend also if it came to a contest of money."

The commission uses a "warrant system" "to allow us to pay for information without disclosing the identity of the informants," Coleman said.

The Associated Press said Coleman is joined in the commission by "some men strongly" opposed to him politically, "although united . . . in upholding segregation."

Among the commission's expenditures was $2000 to take a group of New England editors on a "see-it-yourself" tour of Mississippi to see how well treated Negroes were.

More of the editors had uncomplimentary things to say about Mississippi than complimentary, but Coleman, nevertheless, said he felt the visit had been the "outstanding single accomplishment of the commission so far as the rest of the country is concerned."

SAFE IN CHICAGO after terror-filled flight from Mississippi are these two penniless families. Shown are Percy Jones, 44, his wife, Annie Mae, 34, and their five children and Mrs. Tommie James and her two children. They fled Mississippi after Jones, a sharecropper, was threatened by a deputy sheriff.

Two Mississippi Families Flee State After Threats

Defender Sat. 8-10-57 Chicago, Ill. P.3

By LLOYD GENERAL

Seven children, including a month-old baby, arrived in Chicago Friday at noon, ragged and shoeless, accompanied by three adults on a harrowing 48-hour flight from Mississippi.

Percy Jones, 44, and his wife, Annie Mae, 34, of Itta Bena, Miss., and their five children were accompanied by Mrs. Tommie James and her two children.

The two families fled Mississippi after Jones, a sharecropper, was threatened by a deputy sheriff who had been informed that Jones and his family had left owing money.

Their trip from Greenwood, Miss., to Chicago was sponsored by a Southside missionary, Mrs. Leonora Brown, of 2740 Wentworth, who staged a one-woman fund raising project to supply aid to the beleagured families.

Missionary Brown solicited funds from neighbors and business people in her block and sent a car to Memphis to pick up the fugitives.

Jones said his wife and children hid out in fields for three nights while he stayed in the woods to escape what they termed reprisals by the deputy and Jones' landlord.

Jones said he went out with his family Saturday night, and while they were gone a fellow tenant informed the landlord that they had fled the state.

IS THREATENED

He said his car was confiscated and he was threatened with violence by the law officer.

The children range in age from one month to 10 years. They have no clothes or other possessions.

The group will stay with Missionary Brown until they are able to secure other aid.

EASTLAND ASSERTS

South Faces Greatest Domestic Conflict

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss) says the south "faces its greatest domestic conflict since 1860" because of the "Communist-inspired and Communist — directed" integration issue

Eastland and Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia were featured speakers last night at a mass rally of the pro-segregation Citizens Council.

Daily News

Integrationists, he said, wage their fights one state at a time and are presently most active in Louisiana and Virginia.

"But the flag is still flying in Louisiana," he said, "and 20 years from now the white culture will still be supreme."

Griffin, whom Eastland said would make "a great president," said President Eisenhower would never force school integration with federal troops in Georgia.

"The President," Griffin said "or no one else will ever march citizens of Georgia down the street. If federal troops are ever brought in, they'll walk up and down in front of an empty school house."

"It makes you feel uneasy inside," he continued, "when you hear the marching boots and see the sheen of the unsheathed bayonet in an American city.

Date 11-14-57

Speaking before a crowd estimated at 3,500, Eastland attacked the President's newly-created Commission of Human Rights and said he believed its chairman, former U. S. Supreme Court justice Stanley Reed, was a one-time character witness for Alger Hiss, convicted of perjury.

"What kind of justice," he asked, "can you expect for an outfit like that."

Other speakers included state Sen. William Rainach, district attorney Leander Perez of St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes, and Dr. Emmett Lee Irwin.

Group To Keep Segregation Now Chiefly Standby Force

Advertiser P.5-C

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 23 (UP) — The Mississippi Sovereignty Commission, created almost a year ago to maintain segregation, has turned out to be chiefly a standby force with most of its powers and resources unused.

Its work largely has been in the field of public relations, originally intended as a sideline.

Given $250,000 for the biennium, most of it is scheduled to be returned unspent. Its power to subpena witnesses and documents has never been used. Several proposed investigations did not come off. Part of its authorized personnel has never been hired. The last full meeting was in October.

The commission is serving primarily as a study and Propaganda center. Its militant missions have not materialized—partly because its arch-enemy, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declined to declare war.

When the agency was created by the 1956 Legislature, it appeared the NAACP was about to file suits in an effort to force racial integration. In preparing a full-scale defense, the commissioners voted to hire a prominent lawyer as legal advisor and secret investigators to work with Director Ney Gore, Public Relations Director Hal Decell and Chief Investigator L. C. Hicks.

AGITATION DIES

The agitation for immediate integration, however, died down in Mississippi and Gov. J. P. Coleman found it unnecessary to follow through. So far the only threat has come from a lone Negro, Arrington High of Jackson, who says he is preparing an all-inclusive suit attacking all forms of segregation. He is being ignored on all levels.

Coleman still controls the commission but he has some opposition from some "old guard" legislators who are members. Shortly after the agency began functioning they brought up a proposal to investigate racial integration in Veteran Administration hospitals and other federal institutions in the state.

The commission authorized the "study" and appointed a committee to conduct it, but nothing has ever come of it and no report is expected.

Efforts to tie the agency to the controversial Citizens Councils were beaten down.

White Woman Editor Speaks Her Mind

Black Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla. 3-9-57

NEW ORLEANS — (ANP) — Residents of the Delta area rejoiced last week over an unusually frank editorial written by Mrs. Annette C. Carmichael, white woman of Bay St. Louis, Miss., who edits the newspaper The Light published in that community, about 75 miles from this city on the Gulf Coast.

Negro readers of her paper consider the editorial the one bright light in real liberalism in all of Mississippi, which reeks with race hatred and bitterness.

Though small, the paper wields great influence in the community.

Mrs. Carmichael's editorial titled "As We See It." follows:

"There are a lot of people, from the White House on down, so interested and worried over the plight of the bombed out freedom fighters of Hungary. We regret their troubles but feel sure they would not be greatly worried over us if the case reversed.

"They are far away, foreign, and like the Russians are largely Eurasian and with a background of unnumbered invasions and counter invasions.

"But the thing that has shocked and sickened us is the beastly, uncivilized bombings of churches of the peaceful people in Montgomery, Ala., and other acts of violence in our Southland — because they ask for the common, everyday rights all other Americans have without question. These same rights the highest court of our country, has ruled unanimously and repeatedly, are theirs also.

"If our government fails to protect the Negroes in the South, it is lacking in force.

"We cannot talk about injustice abroad and not protect Americans at home.

"If we do, we will be the laughing stock of all the world."

Whites Now Leave Mississippi Faster Than Negro Population

Times-Picayune New Orleans, La. 3-7-57

Thurs 3-7-57

Report Says Exodus of Both Races Continues

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., March 6 (AP)—For the first time in half a century, the proportion of Negroes to whites in Mississippi was reported Wednesday increasing.

Censuses since 1900 have shown a consistent drop in the proportion of Negroes, who used to outnumber whites in Mississippi by more than two to one. Exodus of Negroes from the state was the main factor.

The exodus continues but whites now are leaving the state faster than Negroes, said Dr. Harald A. Pedersen of Mississippi State College.

He said his studies showed the state lost 51,355 in white population between the 1950 census and last July 1, compared with only 28,842 Negroes. The proportion of Negroes, he said, rose from 45.4 per cent in the 1950 census to 46 per cent last July 1.

Halt and Half

Mississippi was about half white and half Negro when the 1940 census was taken. The proportion dropped in 1952 to 42 per cent.

Mississippi leaders have deplored the state's already population loss but some segregation advocates have looked favorably on the exodus of Negroes.

"I think it is probably a good thing," Gov. J. P. Coleman said in an interview last September. "As he goes, the Negro takes with him to the rest of the nation the problem which other people have been considering only on a theoretical basis."

Counts Enrollment

Dr. Pedersen, long a student of population, said his survey was based on school enrollment. He said he made adjustments to take into account that a higher proportion of Negroes attend school now.

He said his study also showed:

1. That the proportion of Negroes is increasing in those parts of Mississippi "where they can expect a reasonably stable economy for their family" and where Negroes own their own homes and farms. He cited Jefferson Davis County, where the number of whites fell from 6,889 in 1950 to 6,400 last July 1 while Negroes rose from 8,608 to 9,800.

Exodus Continues

2. The long-recognized exodus of Negroes from the Delta, where they still outnumber whites overwhelmingly, continues. This is a region of large plantations where hand labor is being replaced by farm machines. In Bolivar County, the number of Negroes dropped from 43,127 to 41,500 but the drop in white population from 19,860 to 17,600 was proportionately greater.

3. There are signs of a shift of Negro population to northeast Mississippi, where many counties gained Negroes over the period while losing whites.

Dr. Pedersen said his survey showed 1,124,200 whites and 960,400 Negroes in Mississippi last July, compared with 1,175,555 and 989,242 respectively in the 1950 census. This would indicate a white population loss of 51,355 compared with a loss of 28,842 Negroes.

NO LEADS ARE FOUND ON FIRING INTO HOME

Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn. 3-7-57

Ties Are Denied By Mrs. D. S. Wheatley

(Special to The Commercial Appeal)

GREENWOOD, Miss., March [illegible] Greenwood Police Chief Ru[illegible] Sherden said Thursday [illegible] he has no leads on the identity of person or persons who fired into the D. S. Wheatley home here Tuesday night. The investigation is being continued.

Mrs. Wheatley's name was included in a list of directors of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations in the Louisiana legislative committee hearing in Baton Rouge last Friday.

A witness at the hearing called the council a "transmission belt of communist infiltration in the South." The shooting was linked by police officers to the recent press releases about the hearing in which her name was used.

Mrs. Wheatley released a statement which said in part:

"I am a member of the Mississippi Council of Human Relations and have been a member for 20 years or more. My husband has also been a member for the same length of time. The organization was originally known as the Mississippi Interracial Commission. Bishop Theodore D. Bratton of the Episcopal Church was president when we joined.

"The organization was for some time affiliated with the Southern Regional Council whose parent body was the Commission of Interracial Co-operation founded in 1919 by a group of the South's leading church men and church women.

"The Mississippi Council of Human Relations is entirely a Mississippi group and has no communist connections whatever. Its purpose through the years has been to work for better human relations. The organization never engages in any political activity whatever."

NEGRO TEAM WITHDRAWS

Times P.33-C Wed. 3-6-57

Mississippi College Ordered Out of Basketball Play

JACKSON, Miss., March 5 (AP) —Jackson State College withdrew from the small-college basketball tournament today.

Competition probably would have brought the Negro team against white teams.

Jackson got into the tournament of the National Collegiate Athletic Association by winning the championship of its Negro conference, the Midwest Athletic Conference, with a record of twenty-four won and two lost.

Dr. Jacob L. Reddix, president of the school, said the state college board "has advised that it is the policy of the board that state institutions of higher learning shall not participate in national athletic tournaments under the present conditions."

Bus Segregation Plan Is Explained

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala. 4-8-57

BILOXI, Miss., April 7 (U.P.) — C. C. (Jack) Owen, chairman of the Alabama Public Service Commission, said today Southern cities can maintain racial segregation on buses by dealing only with companies that agree to segregate their passengers.

Mar. 4-8-57

Owen told utilities and railroad commissioners from 11 Southeastern states "bus companies operating solely in intrastate commerce have the right to make and enforce rules and regulations separating their passengers according to race" if the rules "represent the sentiment of the community to which they apply."

P.13

A resolution submitted by Owen and approved unanimously by the commissioner urged bus companies in the South to "voluntarily" maintain segregation.

It called on the regulatory bodies to "suggest" to the companies the "propriety, and in fact, the necessity for the voluntary adoption" of segregated seating.

Mississippi Governor:

'I'll Jail All Imported Agitators!'

Courier Sat. 4-13-57

Pittsburgh, Pa. P. 3

JACKSON, Miss.—Freedom of speech in the state of Mississippi will not be the privilege of "outsiders" who visit here, if the latest reports coming from the capitol are true.

Although freedom of speech is guaranteed by the U. S. Constitution, individuals residing in the other 47 states of the union may not be accorded that privilege here.

Persons visiting the state of Mississippi will have to keep their mouths shut on the race question or face the danger of being labelled an "agitator" and thus face the risk of being tossed in jail.

Sources close to Gov. J. P. Coleman said here that Mississippi's chief executive is determined to throw all "imported agitators" into jail and it makes no difference on which side of the segregation issue such persons might stand.

■

MORE SPECIFICALLY, the informants state that Governor Coleman's decision to move in on "imported integrationists" stems from a 1956 segregation law which was passed by the State Legislature and calls for the arrest of race agitators.

The law specifically bans "fomenting and agitation of litigation." It would, for example, be used against out-of-state NAACP representatives who would dare enter the precincts of Mississippi and speak in favor of anti-integration court suits.

Under the law, anyone making this type of a speech could be thrown into jail and his fate left to the mercy of the courts.

■

ACCORDING TO one of the Governor's spokesmen, Mississippi's chief executive would also ban speeches of such white supremacists as Asa Carter or John Kasper.

The Governor's office claims further that Mississippi has had "racial peace" since Coleman took office 14 months ago, and if outsiders enter the state to "arouse the situation, the proper officials will take action."

"We haven't been interfering with conditions in other states and don't intend to have outsiders cause trouble here."

Eastland Denies Pact To Stall Rights Bill

Evening Star Tues. 4-9-57

Washington D.C.

By the Associated Press

Senator Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, said today there is no agreement between Republicans and Southern Democrats to delay action by Congress on a civil rights program until next year.

P. 7-A

Senator Eastland, chairman of the Judiciary Committee which is considering an administration bill, was asked if he had any such agreement with Republican members.

"No, sir," he replied. Then he added with a grin: "I wish I had."

Chairman Bridges, New Hampshire, of the Senate Republican Policy Committee said he knew of no agreement, informal or otherwise, to stall action on civil rights. Senator Bridges favors the administration bill. Senator Eastland opposes it.

There have been some published reports that Republicans would be willing to go along with a delay which would keep the issue alive to provide an election year split among Democrats in 1958.

Will Seize Any Chance

Southern Democratic opponents have shown they are willing to seize any opportunity to delay a showdown on a program most of them fear will win Congress' approval if it ever reaches a vote.

Their hopes of avoiding such a vote were raised somewhat yesterday when committees of both houses delayed action on similar bills.

The Senate Judiciary Committee failed to muster enough of its members to transact business and consideration of the Administration's bill went over for at least another week.

The House Rules Committee adjourned without acting on a motion which would have called for a vote next week on sending civil rights legislation to the House for action.

A short time later, however, Chairman Smith, Democrat of Virginia, said hearings on the measure will be held after the Easter recess ends April 29. He conceded the Rules Committee will approve the bill.

Hearings "Won't Be Long"

Mr. Smith, an opponent of the bill, said the hearings "won't be too long." He said he recognized "the facts of life" and knew the measure would win committee approval and be sent to the House for expected passage there.

Although the Senate committee did not get a quorum, it managed later to approve four presidential nominations by polling absent Senators, a device not employed in handling the civil rights bill.

Senators who can get away will be leaving Washington this week end for an unofficial Easter recess. The committee may not have a quorum on hand again until April 29. Further delays may prevent its approval of any civil rights measure until early in May.

Southerners have made it clear they will filibuster any attempt to bring the bill up in the Senate. With money bills and other legislation piled up after the Easter break, leaders might find it difficult to give up several weeks to the civil rights fight if they expect to wind up Congress' work by August 1.

Negro Big Loser Under Integration

Commercial Appeal P. 3

Modern 'Reconstruction' Will Destroy Friendships

Memphis, Tenn.

To The Commercial Appeal:

Negroes in the United States are the most fortunate of all the members of the black race. The advance was made possible by friendliness and helpfulness directed toward a backward race by the dominant white race.

Sun. 2-24-57

Perhaps I should say they were the most fortunate part of their race up to 1954 for there is little doubt that they will come out losers in this 20th Century "Reconstruction" forced upon the South. The decision of the Supreme Court is a tragedy for the Negro in that it has in a very short time greatly lessened good will between the races and tends to undo all the good accomplished over the years in improving race relations and opportunities.

We Southerners who do not want strife and will not have integration have now reached the point where we hesitate to extend our normal friendliness and helpfulness to the Negroes who are being adversely used by the "demanding" Negro leadership which is in turn being backed up by those with decidedly communistic leanings. Their newly-found so-called freedom has made too many of them boorish and disrespectful, even arrogant. This we see on TV day after day when Negro contestants on various shows make a point of never "putting a handle" onto the name of the MC, though white contestants do. And, of course, it is evident on the streets, public conveyances, etc. Therefore friendly conversations between whites and blacks, once the normal part of each Southern day, have been almost dispensed with.

The result of one exception to these strained relations was passed on to me this week by a kindly intelligent Southern lady of our town who still tries to point out to the Negroes that integration is not best for them or for us. She asked a Negro woman why Negroes felt they would be "elevated" by riding up front on buses, why they had so little racial pride that they feel they must associate on a social plane with the whites and send their children to white schools. The Negro said, "Well, you know colored folks don't care much for each other, they never did . . . but as for me, I think if they keep on with this integration stuff and get it here, I'll just take my chillun out of school entirely."

It's encouraging to find one who has not been thoroughly indoctrinated as yet. Let us hope there are more.

MRS. CLARA B. ANDREWS
Sardis, Miss.

Law Dean Denies Integration Talk

Post-Herald Wed. 6-12-57

OXFORD, Miss., June 11 (U.P.)—Dean Robert J. Farley of the University of Mississippi Law School today denied accusations that he was teaching "integration doctrines" to students and blasted "irresponsible charges" against the U. S. Supreme Court.

Farley issued his statement in reply to charges made Monday night in a television broadcast by State Rep. Zealous Porlk of Jefferson Davis County.

Polk accused Farley of signing a statement which urged compliance with the Supreme Court segregation ruling. The statement was published in the Congressional Yearbook.

Polk called on Gov. J. P. Coleman and the State College Board to "do something" to stop "this man Farley that is teaching the young men of our great state, and this dangerous doctrine being taught to our young men . . ."

Farley retorted that Polk "apparently cannot read" because if he had read the statement he "could not possibly find fault with it."

Friendship, not hate—

Negro editor suggests more 'Uncle Toms'

News Thurs. 1-24-57 P. 2

Birm. Ala.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 24—(AP)—A Negro editor has suggested "more Uncle Toms are the greatest need of the Southern Negro."

Percy Greene, editor of The weekly Jackson Advocate, said the term "Uncle Tom" has been derisively applied to those Negroes whose attitude toward "responsible white people" has been friendly and respectful.

IN AN EDITORIAL in this week's Advocate, Greene said this friendly and respectful attitude toward whites has won "their help and co-operation in laying the foundation for the great progress of the Negro since his emancipation from slavery.

"What this new and brash Negro leadership has succeeded in doing more than anything else is losing whatever welcome they might have had in the councils of authority.

"THOUGH SOMEWHAT SLOWLY, the masses of Negroes of the South are beginning to see that they are being led over a precipice by the siren calls of the new Negro leadership to be repeatedly submerged in an ever-maddening whirlpool of hatred, fear, frustration and bewilderment."

The editorial said in the minds of this new Negro leadership "any Negro is an 'Uncle Tom' who . . . seeks to maintain a friendly and respectful attitude toward the responsible white people of the community."

GREENE SAID that by these standards, Negro leader Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute, would be classed as an "Uncle Tom" along with most of the education and business leaders among southern Negroes.

He said "their prime target for such a designation is Prof. Laurence C. Jones, founder and head of the now world famous Piney Woods County Life School at Piney Woods, Miss."

PATTERSON LASHES INTEGRATION MOVE

Commercial Appeal

Mississippi Won't Submit, Says Official

Issue of 1-22-57

Special to The Commercial Appeal

LAUREL, Miss., Jan. 21.—Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson said here Monday the people of Mississippi "will never submit to the infamous desegregation decisions of the United States Supreme Court without a fight to the finish."

Memphis, Tenn.

Addressing the Lions Club, the state official said Mississippians will "resist to the end rather than see those things that are near and dear to them suffer wrong."

P. 14

Mr. Patterson charged that many of the nation's leaders "who attacked the court in 1936 now rise in righteous indignation at criticism in 1956 and 1957."

"The attack on the court in 1936 came from the same identical sources that today want to deny duly elected congressmen and senators from the South their seats in Congress because they dare criticize the court and dare to speak out and fight against the destruction of their rights by court edict and decrees," the attorney general said.

"They now oppose orderly process of government as designed and intended by the Constitution."

Mr. Patterson said he "resents hearing anyone say, even though he is a member of the clergy, that the Southern way of life is the unchristian way of life."

"I resent the insinuation that the great men and women of the South who have gone before us lived an unchristian life," he said.

"How can the Supreme Court say that a known communist has the right to stay in the United States, paralyze shipping and commerce and then say to American citizens they do not have a right to assemble and protest the integration and destruction of their public institutions as they have maintained them for more than 100 years."

Attorney General Patterson said he is fearful that the present Congress will enact some form of civil rights legislation, but added that Mississippi will resist it through lawful and peaceful means.

COLEMAN SCORED BY MISS. NAACP

Times Picayune Sat. 2-9-57

Says Governor Misinformed on Intimidation

New Orleans, La.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 8 (AP)—The Mississippi chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People said Friday Gov. J. P. Coleman "must have been misinformed . . . when he said there is no intimidation of Negroes in Mississippi."

Times Picayune

Coleman made the statement Wednesday before a House judiciary subcommittee studying proposed civil rights legislation. Coleman was invited to attend the meeting in Washington, D. C.

The NAACP said in a mimeographed statement:

P. 3

"We deplore the statement (by the governor) that Negroes are not intimidated when teachers had to sign an oath that they were not members of the NAACP. Negroes who seek their civil and human rights are subject to economic reprisals.

"We are sure that he (Coleman) was not referring to Mississippi when he said the civil rights proposal was aimed at a patriotic section of the country. He has constantly stated that there will be no integration in Mississippi under his administration."

The NAACP said the civil rights legislation "may be late" for some Negroes, but it will not be too late for 985,000 Negroes who still live in a state where police brutality is on the increase. It will not be too late for Negroes in the state who cannot get justice in the courts, and where white people take the law in their own hands."

The NAACP took issue with Coleman's statement that four Negroes were killed by whites in 1955, saying no white man was convicted of these killings "but the Negroes were convicted for the killing of white people."

The statement also slapped at voter registration, saying the statewide Negro vote has dropped from 22,000 to about 8000 in recent years.

Race relations unit member's home fired upon

Pro-Segregation

Baltimore Md.

GREENWOOD, Miss. — The home of Mrs. Elizabeth Wheatley, listed as a member of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations at

Faulkner Teaches 'Snobs' of Virginia

Herald Tues. 2-17-57

Miami, Fla. P. 10-A

AUTHOR WILLIAM FAULKNER, a right big boulder in the stream of literary consciousness, has undertaken a new task—teaching American literature at the University of Virginia.

William Faulkner

. . . new assignment

Asked why he had accepted the assignment, the Pulitzer and Nobel prize winner said:

"Because I like your country, Virginia and Virginians. Virginians are all snobs. I like snobs. A snob spends so much time being a snob he has none left to bother other people. "He said one reason he was there was to help young writers and if he could be of some aid to one in hundred he would feel he had done a good job.

PEOPLE

last week's Louisiana legislative hearings into racial unrest, was the target for rifle fire last week.

Sat. 2-23-57

Greenwood Police Chief R. R. Shurden said that the bullet was fired into the rear wall of Mrs. Wheatley's home because of newspaper stories that Manning Johnson, former Communist, had said that she was a member of the council.

P. 3

Neither Mrs. Wheatley nor her husband, D. S. Wheatley Sr., a cotton buyer, was injured by the bullet which pierced two walls of the house.

Group To Keep Segregation Now Chiefly Standby Force

Advertiser

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 23 (UP) The Mississippi Sovereignty Commission, created almost a year ago to maintain segregation, has turned out to be chiefly a standby force with most of its powers and resources unused.

Its work largely has been in the field of public relations, originally intended as a sideline. P.5

Given $250,000 for the biennium, most of it is scheduled to be returned unspent. Its power to subpena witnesses and documents has never been used. Several proposed investigations did not come off. Part of its authorized personnel has never been hired. The last full meeting was in October.

Montgomery, Ala.

The commission is serving primarily as a study and propaganda center. Its militant missions have not materialized—partly because its arch-enemy, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declined to declare war.

When the agency was created by the 1956 Legislature, it appeared the NAACP was about to file suits in an effort to force racial integration. In preparing a full-scale defense, the commissioners voted to hire a prominent lawyer as legal advisor and secret investigators to work with Director Ney Gore, Public Relations Director Hal Dezell and Chief Investigator L. C. Nichols.

AGITATION DIES

The agitation for immediate integration, however, died down in Mississippi and Gov. J. P. Coleman found it unnecessary to follow through. So far the only threat has come from a lone Negro, Arrington High of Jackson, who says he is preparing an all-inclusive suit attacking all forms of segregation. He is being ignored on all levels.

Sun. 2-24-57

Coleman still controls the commission but he has some opposition from some "old guard" legislators who are members. Shortly after the agency began functioning they brought up a proposal to investigate racial integration in Veteran Administration hospitals and other federal institutions in the state.

The commission authorized the "study" and appointed a committee to conduct it, but nothing has ever come of it and no report is expected.

Efforts to tie the agency to the

from school teaching

Mississippi Moves To Bar Racial Agitators of Both Sides

Constitution

JACKSON, Miss., March 27 (AP). Mississippi was reported today taking steps to keep "racial agitators" — either those speaking out for or against segregation—out of the state.

Thurs. 3-28-57

Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson told reporters, "there is no place in Mississippi for John Kasper or Ace Carter, or for revival of the Ku Klux Klan."

Atlanta, Ga.

Kasper and Asa (Ace) Carter are among the most outspoken advocates of extreme measures to maintain segregation of the races. Patterson said Mississippi has a legal program which will keep the races apart.

Another high state authority said "imported" speakers urging integration also may be in for trouble under a 1956 law which makes it illegal to "foment litigation."

P.11

This authority, who asked not to be named, cited as an example Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who heads a non-violent movement among Negroes at Montgomery, Ala.

The 1956 law prohibits "fomenting and agitation of litigation" and makes it illegal to seek or accept money "for the purpose of filing or prosecuting lawsuits." Lawyers are exempt.

When the measure was debated in the legislature, backers said it would enable the state to curb organized segregation movements.

Patterson, who spoke up at a news conference held by Gov. J. P. Coleman, said "I think the people of Mississippi are fully capable of looking after these matters (maintaining segregation) without resorting to these three"—Kasper, Carter or the Ku Klux Klan.

[illegible] leaders [illegible] Montgom- [illegible] and Tallah[illegible] addressed recent NAACP [illegible]ings here. The Rev. C. K. [illegible]e of Tallahassee described [illegible] a meeting last Sunday the Negro boycott against segregated buses in that city.

At the same NAACP meeting, plans for a "mass meeting" sponsored by the Jackson Progressive Voters League, a Negro organization, were announced.

Police estimated only about 150 Negroes showed up at the voters league meeting, held last night.

Race Baiters Under Attack In Mississippi

Advertiser

Fri. 3-29-57

Montgomery, Ala.

JACKSON, Miss., March 28 (AP)—Mississippi was reported yesterday taking steps to keep "racial agitators" — either those speaking out for or against segregation — out of the state.

P.3-C

Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson told reporters, "there is no place in Mississippi for John Kasper or Ace Carter, or for revival of the Ku Klux Klan."

Kasper and Asa (Ace) Carter are among the most outspoken advocates of extreme measures to maintain segregation of the races. Patterson said Mississippi has a legal program which will keep the races apart.

Another high state authority said "imported" speakers urging integration also may be in for trouble under a 1956 law which makes it illegal to "foment litigation."

This authority, who asked not to be named, cited as an example the Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who heads a non-violent movement among Negroes at Montgomery, Ala.

NO OUTSIDE HELP

The 1956 law prohibits "fomenting and agitation of litigation" and makes it illegal to seek or accept money "for the purpose of filing or prosecuting lawsuits." Lawyers are exempt.

When the measure was debated in the legislature, backers said it would enable the state to curb organized segregation movements.

Patterson, who spoke up at a news conference held by Gov. J. P. Coleman, said "I think the people of Mississippi are fully capable of looking after these matters (maintaining segregation) without resorting to these three" Kasper, Carter or the Ku Klux Klan.

The unidentified authority said: "I've been annoyed by these outside agitators from Montgomery, Ala., and Tallahassee, Fla. The next time they cross the Mississippi line we're going to invoke a 1956 law and have them arrested."

Negro leaders from Montgomery and Tallahassee addressed recent NAACP meeting here. The Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee described to a meeting last Sunday the Negro boycott against segregated buses in that city.

JACKSON NEGRO GROUP ASKS BI-RACIAL STUDY

Commercial Appeal

Urges City To Change Its Employment Policy

Thurs. 3-28-57

JACKSON, Miss., March 27.—(UP) A Negro organization proposed a bi-racial study committee Wednesday to achieve its demand for Negro policemen, firemen, bus and truck drivers and more playgrounds and parks for Jackson Negroes.

Memphis, Tenn.

P.38

James A. White, president of the Progressive (Negro) Voters League, said his group "hopes to achieve around the conference table what others have gotten by more drastic means."

Resolutions requesting the City Council to hire Negroes for city work in Negro neighborhoods were drafted in an orderly meeting of about 125 members of the league Tuesday night.

White said they will be presented to the city Council later this week.

He deplored "strikes and boycotts" and proposed a committee of six whites and six Negroes to make a survey of the best methods in which to obtain the league's objectives.

Mayor Allen Thompson and Councilmen D. L. Luckey and Chalmers Alexander issued a statement Monday saying the council did not intend to change its policy of hiring white personnel.

Mayor Thompson and Councilman Luckey said later they favored Negro policemen in Negro areas but "general unrest" prohibits it at this time.

Albert Powell, commander of a Negro American Legion Post, told the meeting an "outbreak of police brutalities" prompted the resolutions. He accused Jackson police of taking bribes from Negroes who sell whisky and said Negro policemen "would not do this."

Mississippi Church Burned

Call P.1

Thurs. 5-16-57

CLEVELAND, Miss. — The New Hope Baptist church here was burned down in a fire of undetermined origin early Friday, May 10. The fire occurred following a meeting of the local branch of the NAACP in the church on the previous night.

Kansas City, Mo.

P.28

Amzie Moore, president of the Cleveland branch, reported that repeated telephone calls had been received threatening to set fire to the church if it allowed the NAACP to hold meetings there. Rev. E. C. Smith is pastor of the church.

Integration On Slow Road In Southland

Advertiser P.S.C. Wed. 1-2-1957 Montgomery, Ala.

By HODDING CARTER
Publisher, Greenville, Miss., Delta Democrat-Times

The third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school integration decision is less than six months away, but any meaningful implementation of the decision in the Deep South appears at least as distant today as it did in May 1954.

38a

Most advocates of compulsory desegregation, and some opponents, generally believed 2 1-2 years ago that the decision meant virtually the end of a long ideological war.

What most extremists on both sides, as well as more moderate observers, agree upon now is that the decision represented a major victory but no ultimate triumph. Ahead lies many a year of anti-integration legal campaigns and extra-legal resistance on state and community levels.

There is little likelihood that 1957 will witness any real integration in the states which would be most affected in terms of numerical ratios. Those states are Mississippi, Alabama, Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Louisiana and Florida.

Here and there a few Negro children may gain entry through court action. They will have had to make their way through a maze of legal obstructions, created by legislative action, and such other and no less effective barriers as economic pressures or intimidation by organized or spontaneous white groups.

Confronted with the resistance, the Negroes of the Deep South will probably again concern themselves primarily with getting Negro voters on the rolls as their best weapon in the quest for equal civil rights.

And the white South can be expected to push ahead with school equalization programs which in the long run may be more effective than legal or illegal delaying tactics as a means of keeping white and Negro school children separated.

Self-Improvement By Negroes Urged

Times-Herald Washington 4-4-57

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 3 (U.P.)—Pulitzer Prize-Winning Editor Hodding Carter of Mississippi today called on American Negroes to begin a program of self-improvement to help solve the nation's racial problem.

Carter, writing in the Virginia Quarterly Review published this week at the University of Virginia, said the Negro is winning his battle for civil rights but "the fight to bring him to a realization of his civic responsibilities and civic shortcomings has not yet been undertaken."

He called upon the NAACP, "the pugnacious and vocal Negro press, and the rest of the articulate and vocal Negro vanguard to match their programs for equality with programs of self-investigation and self-improvement."

Where Negro Leaders Fall Down

Hodding Carter In The Virginia Quarterly Review

Advertiser Montgomery Ala.

58a

OVER the past 10 years I have had occasion to visit all but two of our 48 states. In each of them I have made a habit of asking all manner of white persons whether they would welcome a Negro influx even if it added less than the national 1 in 10 Negro ratio to their overall population. Not one person in a hundred has told me he would. . . Despite the great contributions that thousands of Negroes have made to the national welfare, and despite the good citizenship of many more thousands, the relative record of the Negro as a citizen in the areas of his greatest concentrations, North or South, is not such as to make him welcome elsewhere . . .

Jan 6-2-57

The Negro's own leaders have been so singlemindedly, and passionately and understandably determined to secure long-denied rights that they have not driven home to their people the elementary fact that responsibilities accompany rights; nor have they tended to acknowledge or try to correct faults in the Negro while attacking the faults of others. They have either not developed or they have sublimated the American trait of self-examination and public self-criticism. This lack of self-examination and the failure to set goals of citizenship have contributed mightily to the sorry civic record which, in turn, has helped breed the ill will that is accompanying integration, North and South.

White Tells 1,300 Negroes To Be Patient

Defender Thurs. 8-15-57

Stoneville, Miss. (ANP)—A whit plantation owner, Leroy B. Percy said here last week that patience new farming methods and continu ance of 50 years of good will be tween the races will solve futur Negro problems of the Delta, "no the people who peddle hate fo money."

P. 16

The statement was made at th 17th annual Negro Delta Field Da to 1,300 Negro farmers. The affai sponsored annually at the Delt Branch experiment station b Washington County Negro agent serves to acquaint farmers wit modern farming methods and late developments in crop and soil man agement.

Mississippi Roundup—

Keeping Down Racial Tension Service To Dixie, Sheriff Told

NATCHEZ, Sept. 30 (U.P.)—Mississippi sheriffs were told today they could do the South a real service by keeping down racial violence.

Rep. Frank Smith (D., Miss.) told the Mississippi Sheriffs Assn. the county officers had an "urgent responsibility" to keep peace between the races and Association President Andy Crawford said sheriffs should "know what to do at the first instant of a situation like the Little Rock one."

"If people give the sheriffs co-operation and support, most of them will settle a situation like this and very few folks will know of it," Crawford said. "It will be settled in a gentlemanly way on a local level without the fanfare of a national political show for publicity purposes."

Smith said racial tensions that have developed since the Supreme Court decision on school integration "can flare up into ugly violence unless our law enforcement officers carry out their duties with the greatest care and vigilance."

He said the South's only hope of maintaining control of its local affairs "lies in convincing the rest of the country of the justice of our position. Our enemies actually gain from every inflammatory incident that develops."

Smith Credits Sheriffs With State Racial Calm

Congressman Frank Smith of Greenwood Monday credited sheriffs and local peace officers with the racial calm existing in Mississippi.

The veteran Delta congressman addressed the Mississippi Sheriff's Association at the Edwards Hotel in Jackson where many of the state's 82 counties are represented.

Sheriff Andy Crawford of Rolling Fork presided over the convention which opened at 9 a.m. Sheriff D. W. Snyder of Webster county is not attending. He was stricken with pneumonia, and several other sheriffs have been hit by flu and other illnesses.

Congressman Smith said, "Mississippi sheriffs have never had a more urgent responsibility than they have today in maintaining law and order, and at the same time, preventing the type of incidents that only serve as ammunition for those who seek to eliminate local control of our affairs."

Congressman Smith was one of half a dozen speakers addressing Secretary of State Heber Ladner, Secretary of Stte Heber Ladner, Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson, Civil Defense Director Hendrix Dawson, Dr. W. M. Caskey, dean at Mississippi College and a strong segregationist; and Chancellor William Neville of Meridian.

Congressman Smith told the law enforcement officials, "The racial tensions that have developed since the Supreme Court decision on school integration can flare up into violence unless our law enforcement officers carry out their duties with the greatest care and vigilance."

He said, "One reason for the relative calm existing in Mississippi today is the fact that our local officers are meeting this responsibility."

Congressman Smith said the one hope the South has of maintaining control of its local affairs lies in convincing the rest of the country of "the justice of our position."

"We have made great progress in presenting the case for the South to the country."

Mississippi Sovereignty Group Works Under Cover

Call Fri. 9-9-57 Kansas City, Mo.

P. 1

JACKSON, Miss. — An article appearing in the Clarion-Ledger here Sunday, July 7, reveals the inner workings of the State Sovereignty Commission which was created by the state legislature to preserve segregation in the state.

The article, written by Tim Parker of the Associated Press, tells the story of the state agency set up two years ago with an appropriation of $280,000 of that amount, only $50,000 has been spent so far because of the "relative racial calm" in Mississippi.

The newspaper article in full reads:

The powerful state agency which Mississippi set up to preserve segregation may wind up its first two years with most of its $250,000 unspent.

Relative racial calm is credited for the fact that the State Sovereignty Commission has spent only some $50,000. But there's the expected air of mystery — including "blind" checks made out to Gov. J. P. Coleman and payments to some well known Negroes — about the agency's work.

The commission functions from offices tucked away in a top-floor corner of Mississippi's 54-year-old Capitol. Its director, State Representative Ney Gore of Quitman county, is paid $600 a month and does little talking for publication.

A look this week at the commission's books gives this reporter's eye breakdown of how the Sovereignty Commission spent about $47,132 up to June 1:

"Salaries $25,935; travel, $7,695; printing, $2,312; commissioners' per diem and travel pay, $1,591; telephone and telegraph bills, $1,797; investigations, $1,771; equipment, $1,432; advertising, $1,333; office supplies $1,073; postage, $1,035; newspaper subscriptions, $707; a hotel bill, $246 and miscelany, $200.

"Of the $1,771 spent on investigations, a surprisingly small amount — considering the agency's vast investigative authority — $885 was in warrants made out to Gov. Coleman This includes warrants for $45 and $250 in May of this year.

IDENTITY SECRET

"That was to allow us to pay for information without disclosing the identity of the informants," the governor explained. "Receipts from these informants have been submitted to the full commission."

The commission includes some men strongly split with Coleman politically although united with him in upholding segregation. Chief among such men is State Sen. Earl Evans Jr., of Canton, the 1936 States Righter.

H. H. Hume, Greenville, Negro minister and newspaper man, was paid $29.76 in August, 1956, and $175 in March, 1957, for investigations. He also drew $150 last February for travel.

Gore declines to talk about these things but the governor identified Hume as "a Negro preacher at Greenville who has taken a public stand for segregation."

Call

Percy Green, editor of the Jackson Advocate, the state's leading Negro newspaper, drew money in several categories. He was paid $35 last September for travel and $300 last February under the heading of advertising. A $200 warrant last October was made out to "National Association of Colored People of the South, care of Percy Green."

The Rev. Ozelle Mason, Jackson Negro minister, was paid $496.15 in February under the heading of advertising. He also drew $50 warrants in July and August of 1956 under the heading of investigations.

The warrants of course, do not identify recipients by race. Other investigation money went to W. M. Holmes and William Liston. Coleman says Liston is a junior law student at the University of Mississippi whose work was effective.

The $7,695 for travel includes more than $2,000 spent last October to take a group of New England editors on a "see for yourself" tour of Mississippi. The widely publicized tour drew some quiet criticism in the statehouse corridors because many of the editors had uncomplimentary things to say. Many, too, said they gained a better understanding of Mississippi's racial problem.

EDITORS' VISIT

"I personally feel the visit of New England editors has been the outstanding single accomplishment of the commission so far as the rest of the country is concerned," Coleman says. He also has said no further such tours are planned.

Hal Decell, the weekly newspaper editor who is the commission's public relations director, travels widely. He attends every convention of the National Editorial Assn. and has visited both coasts. The governor says Decell's work "to influence television and radio treatment of the racial problem" has been effective.

"One of the outstanding nationwide television hookups has agreed it will not handle racial questions in any manner unless it also gives the South's side at the same time," Coleman said. He did not identify the network.

Coleman's trips to Washington to testify before House and Senate committees against Civil rights legislation were paid for out of Sovereignty Commission Funds.

The governor says he will recommend that the 1956 legislature provide an "adequate appropriation" for continuation of the commission's work. With the state government expecting to be pressed financially next year, Coleman says he is "delighted" at prospects the commission will return a good deal of money to the state treasury.

"When the bill was passed, the NAACP was boasting about the money it had, contributions from the CIO, the Fund for the Republic and so forth, Coleman said. "Our purpose was to let them know Mississippi was willing to spend also if it came to a contest of money.

"We also felt we ought to have money available to join in any cooperative effort with other states on an official level. A large part of the appropriation was also intended for use in case we got in litigation over schools — so that we could employ the best counsel. That hasn't been necessary, of course.

"There have been those who feel the commission should have been more active, but I personally fail to see how you can improve on success."

When legislation creating the commission was created several lawmakers, including State Sen. Hayden Campbell of Jackson wanted the agency to donate money to the Citizens Councils. A Tennessean recently asked for Sovereignty Commission money to help fight federal contempt of court charges filed against Clinton, Tenn., white persons who resisted a school integration order there. Coleman told reporters he didn't think it advisable for the commission to donate funds in the Clinton fight. The full commission has not yet acted.

CITES COMPETITIVE PREJUDICE — Rev. J. L. Tolbert looks glum as he tells about "competitive prejudice in New Albany." In the bottom photo he points to the "bullet-shattered" glass panel in the front door of his Funeral home. He explained someone is trying to chase me out of here." (Staff Photo)

KOREAN GETS THE WORD

Kyung Sung Lee, Korean studying racial discrimination in Jackson, interviews D. L. (Dock) Luckey at City Hall Friday.—Daily News Staff Photo by James Featherston.

Korean Here To Study Race Discrimination

By JAMES FEATHERSTON
Daily News Staff Writer

A Korean reporter is in Jackson to study racial discrimination.

As an initial step, Kyung Sung Lee visited the City Council meeting Friday.

He didn't learn much about discrimination but he was indiscriminately exposed to the toothy charms of Mayor Allen Thompson.

Thompson insisted that Lee inspect Jackson's facilities for Negroes which the mayor describes as the finest anywhere.

Lee didn't say he would, but he didn't say he wouldn't. He appeared somewhat bewildered by Thompson.

He did, however, make a short speech during which he told how he came to the U. S. under auspices of the State Department.

Lee said he intended to stay in Jackson a month. He is living at the Y. M. C. A.

Prior to coming to Jackson, he completed a six-weeks journalism course at Northwestern University and then spent some time in California.

Lee is a political reporter for the Pyong Hwa Daily News at Seoul. He said his newspaper is one of fourteen in Korea and competition is fierce.

"You have to keep scooping all the time," he said.

Lee, who is 29, said he makes 60,000 hwan a month in Korea which is equivalent to $120 in American money.

But he said he gets along well on his salary in Korea because prices are cheaper.

"I support my wife, mother, and three children on my salary," he said.

Mississippi Negro Group Asks Prayer In Racial Crisis

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 2 (AP)—An organization of Mississippi Negro ministers and laymen denied today a resolution adopted yesterday carried an endorsement of the state's handling of racial relations.

A statement released by the Ministerial Improvement Assn. of Mississippi said the resolution called for a statewide prayer movement "as a means of meeting in a Christian and non-violent way the forces of evil and oppression within the state."

Reporters at the meeting were told by one association spokesman that the resolution included endorsement of the state's official stand for segregation.

The resolution did call for prayers in behalf of "those in authority in the affairs of the state." It also stated "we recognize that earnest and sincere prayers are one of the most powerful weapons for right and righteousness."

Gov. Coleman To Speak Today To Joint Legislative Session

By GEORGE WHITTINGTON

Both houses of the Alabama Legislature come back to work at 11 a.m. today, then go into joint session a half hour later to hear Gov. James P. Coleman of Mississippi deliver an address.

Coleman, an outspoken proponent of white supremacy, is expected to base at least a part of his talk on civil rights.

After the talk, senators will return to their chamber to re-engage in a "sitting filibuster," with the biggest calendar of the session facing them. Senate Secretary Earl Speight said yesterday the new calendar will have 124 pages—largest by far in this session.

Only proofed copies had been printed yesterday, with printers working into the night to get it out.

In addition, 54 measures are on Speight's desk from the House, with a possibility that filibusterers out to kill any number of bills may require that they be read "at length," continuing the "sit-down filibuster."

However, there was some speculation yesterday that senators may again invoke baseball rules on their operations, giving each senator a chance to have at least one bill passed.

Under such a system Friday, the Senate turned out more measures than during any day within weeks. Under the system, offered by Sen. Ralph Jones of Monroeville, each senator is given a time at bat."

He can call up one measure out of order, but if an objection is raised, withdraw that bill. He then can call up a second and a third, until one passes, or until he "strikes out" with three.

However, there was some other speculation that Gov. James E. Folsom may have the Rules Committee bring out a special order calendar on which a $20 million road bond issue would be given a top spot.

This is one of several measures being filibustered. Others are a judicial reforms measure to streamline civil court operations in the state, along with reapportionment and a corporate income tax bill.

The latter would end federal income tax deductions from state income payments. It is estimated the change would bring education some 8 to 9 million annually.

Mississippi Roundup—

State 'Segregation' Commission Has $185,000 Left For Spending

JACKSON, Dec. 2 (U.P.) — The commission, headed by Gov. J. P. Coleman, reported that most of its activities has been in public relations.

The report said Public Relations Director Hal DeCell mailed more than 200,000 pieces of literature defending Mississippi's position on segregation, most of it ot the North. He also worked with national press, radio and television groups.

The report said the Fund For The Republic, with $15 million to spend, had 28 projects attempting to speed integration in the South.

The financial statement was from May, 1956, through Oct. 31 of this year, leaving eight months to go on the total appropriation, most of which will be returned to the state treasury.

Coleman was envious as he discussed industrial development, noting that Alabama's record in that program "outstrips Mississippi five to one."

"I don't know whether you folks in Alabama have some magic sesame to attract industry, but if you do have one I don't blame you for keeping it secret," Coleman declared.

In line with this, Coleman predicted the Mississippi Legislature would give quick approval to legislation calling for a compact of the two states to promote development of the long-sought Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway. Alabama has already enacted such a law.

Earlier in the day, Coleman told a press conference he is confident the Mississippi Legislature will approve a constitutional convention, which he is seeking.

He said that former Gov. Hugh White's endorsement of the plan to rewrite Mississippi's 67-year-old constitution should make it easier to pass.

Mississippi Governor Cites Opportunities Of 'New South'

By BOB INGRAM

Mississippi Gov. James P. Coleman, recognized as the gubernatorial spokesman of the South on matters of race, all but overlooked the subject for which he is most famous in an address to a joint session of the Alabama Legislature yesterday.

In a brief (22-minute) address, the jovial chief executive did as much entertaining as he did informing, interspersing his speech with several well-told if well-worn jokes.

'NEW SOUTH'

While not once making mention of race, segregation or civil rights, Gov. Coleman at one point did make an unmistakable reference to the critical issue.

"There are no two sides of the fence on many of the problems facing the South today," he declared. And he added the "new South" has unlimited opportunities to develop but that it must "be firm in what we believe in."

He also declared it was time for the South to "quit running from imaginary fears" and to "recognize our own power."

"We must banish this thing called fear and quit running from spooks behind every stump," he continued.

"We must write the pages of our history on the affirmative side of the ledger, we have been on the negative far too long. And we must not yield to the temptation to match wrong with wrong."

EASTLAND NAMED DESPITE PROTESTS

Times P.22-C

Senate Democrats Re-elect Judiciary Head—Atomic Post Goes to Durham

Thurs. 1-10-57

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—The Senate completed organization today of its Democratic-controlled committees. Several Democratic liberals made a brief protest against giving Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee.

New York

In a separate action, the Joint Atomic Energy Committee elected Representative Carl T. Durham, Democrat of North Carolina, to succeed Senator Clinton P. Anderson, Democrat of New Mexico, as chairman.

The Senate committe lists maintained the same eight-to-seevn Democratic majority as in the Eighty-fourth Congress. They were drawn up by steering committees of the two parties, then submitted to the full Senate for formal approval.

The only audible "No" came from Senator Paul H. Douglas, Democrat of Illinois, after he had protested Senator Eastland's continuation as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Senator Douglas told the Senate that while he enjoyed pleasant personal relations with Senator Eastland, he felt the Senator's attacks on the Supreme Court decision against school segregation made it necessary to vote against him. The committee handles civil rights legislation.

Seniority Claim Questioned

Senator Douglas said Senator Eastland's re-election would seem to make him the spokesman on civil rights for the Democratic party, which had taken a contrary position.

He said another reason for his vote was that seniority no longer seemed to be a controlling factor in Democratic committee assignments. This was an apparent indirect reference to the party's action in by-passing Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, who had four years' seniority, in order to give Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts a seat on the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Douglas said that Senator Joseph S. Clark Jr., Democrat of Pennsylvania, would have voted with him had he been present.

Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat of Oregon, who protested Senator Eastland's election as chairman of Judiciary two years ago, indicated his position had not changed. He said he would introduce a resolution dealing with the whole question of seniority. Senator Richard L. Neuberger, Democrat of Oregon, and Senator John A. Carroll, Democrat of Colorado, said they shared Senator Morse's views.

G. O. P. Follows Seniority

Republican committee selections, like those first disclosed yesterday by the Democrats, carried few surprises.

Senator William E. Jenner of Indiana got the most sought-after post, on the Finance committee, which writes tax laws.

Senators Prescott Bush of Connecticut and Frank Barrett of Wyoming received seats on the Armed Services Committee, giving up other less important committee seats.

Of the Republican newcomers, Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, a veteran of two previous short Senate terms, received the best assignment, to the Labor and Public Welfare Committee. His colleague, Senator Thruston B. Morton of Kentucky, was assigned to the District of Columbia and Public Works Committees.

Javits on Rules Unit

Another veteran now returning, Senator Chapman M. Revercomb of West Virginia, was assigned to the Government Operations and Public Works Committees.

Senator Jacob K. Javits of New York was assigned to the Rules and District of Columbia Committees.

The Joint Atomic Energy Committee followed its customary practice in electing Representative Durham, the ranking House Democratic member, to succeed Senator Anderson, the ranking Senate Democratic member. The chairmanship rotates every two years between the two houses.

Representative Durham was vice chairman during the Eighty-fourth Congress. Senator Anderson was elected to that post today.

Liberals Back Douglas

Officials of the Liberal party sent a message of congratulations yesterday to Senator Douglas for voting against the election of Senator Eastland.

Marx Lewis, chairman, and Jules Cohen, co-chairman of the party's national legislative committee, said that seniority should have been ignored.

"Seniority is Eastland's sole claim to the judiciary post," the message declared. "He is otherwise not merely unfit for it, but militantly in conflict with the whole spirit and purpose of the Judiciary Committee's work. This was demonstrated by his open flouting of the Supreme Court's decision on desegregation."

EASTLAND UNFIT, NAACP CHARGES

Times-Picayune

Senator's Chairmanship of Panel Protested

Thurs. 1-3-57

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP)—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Wednesday it has written 79 non-Southern senators urging they deny Sen. Eastland (D., Miss.) a place on the judiciary committee.

New Orleans, La.

A member of the committee in the last Congress, Eastland is slated to become chairman through seniority this year.

The letter was accompanied by an appeal which, the NAACP said, documented its charges that Eastland has "persistently engaged in activities that (1) foster disrespect for law and promote domestic disorder; and (2) undermine established public policy and reflect upon the dignity and honor of the Senate of the United States."

Newspaper Reports

Included are newspaper reports and citations from the Congressional Record quoting Eastland as describing the 14th Amendment to the constitution as "fraudulently procured and . . . illegal," calling the US supreme court "irresponsible," "incompetent," "grasping" for power and "brainwashed by left-wing pressure groups."

Other citations quoted the senator as accusing the court of "a monstrous crime," of saying its decisions were "dishonest" and "the judges who rendered them violated their oaths of office," and accusing the court of responding "to radical pro-Communist political movement in this country."

'Leader of Defiance'

The NAACP document also accused Eastland of being "a leader in the establishment of organizations whose purpose is to consolidate defiance of the constitution as interpreted by the supreme court."

"Senator Eastland's speeches," the NAACP said, "are invariably similar in content. They condemn the supreme court antisegregation decisions, associating them with Communist conspiracy; they urge defiance of the court's decree and advocate resistance through intensified organization. They recommend the use of public tax funds (including those from Negro taxpayers) to propagate the doctrine of white supremacy."

Eastland renamed despite protest

News P.1

Thurs. 1-10-57

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10—(AP)—Sen. Eastland (D., Miss.) yesterday was reappointed chairman of the Senate judiciary committee over the opposition of Sen. Douglas (D., Ill.).

Birmingham, Ala.

When the Senate confirmed the appointment, along with other committee assignments worked out by the Republican and the Democratic steering committee, Douglas voted "no."

Douglas explained he believed Eastland should not hold the key post because of Eastland's strong criticism of Supreme Court decisions against racial segregation.

The committee handles such things as civil rights legislation.

He said Sen. Clark (D., Pa.) took the same position.

INTEGRATED TV TARGET

Commercial Appeal

Herrin To Introduce Bill Halting Such Shows

Thurs. 1-10-57

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 9 (AP)—State Republican Ralph Herrin of Covington County said Wednesday he plans legislation to halt the telecasting of what he called racially integrated programs.

P.22

Republican Herrin, attending a meeting in Jackson, made the statement in a prepared news release.

He said he plans to introduce in the 1958 Legislature a bill to "forbid TV stations in Mississippi from televising programs showing Negroes integrated with white women and Negro men.

"Our people are getting fed up on these programs that sicken the stomach of our white people. We are almost bankrupting our state to preserve segregation, and give our good Negroes equal educational opportunities, and then permit our TV stations to present these integrated programs day and night."

Senator Eastland's Offer

Birmingham P.3-B

One untold story of the Presidential campaign is how Mississippi's shrewd Sen. Jim Eastland, champion of white supremacy, offered to praise the Republicans in order to win votes for the Democrats.

Montgomery, Ala.

Realizing his views were not popular up north, Eastland figured the best contribution he could make to the Democratic campaign would be a speech praising the Republicans.

Nov. 3-57

He put through a long-distance phone call from Mississippi to a Democratic aide and asked him to relay a message to Adlai Stevenson. Eastland offered to make a public speech to a White Citizens Council, thanking the Republicans for helping kill civil-rights legislation in the Senate. He planned to say that he could never have blocked civil-rights legislation without the help of Republican members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Stevenson's campaign manager, Jim Finnegan, was anxious to accept Eastland's offer. He figured it would counteract the Republican claim in Negro communities that a vote for the Democratic ticket was a vote for Eastland.

But Stevenson flatly refused to have anything to do with Eastland or his offer.

Senator Eastland's Ouster Requested

Afro-American P. 5

NEW YORK — "Senator (James O.) Eastland (Dem. Miss.) has engaged in activities that foster disrespect for law and promote domestic disorder, subvert domestic policy and reflect upon the honor and dignity of the Senate."

That charge is made in "an appeal to senators of the 85th Congress from the NAACP urging that Senator Eastland be not seated on the Senate Judiciary Committee" under date of Dec. 28.

A covering letter accompanying the appeal, which is based upon Senator Eastland's record in Congress, was signed by Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary.

DOCUMENTARY excerpts from the senator's record, as compiled by the NAACP and upon which its plea for his demotion is based, follow:

"Senator Eastland has engaged in activities that foster disrespect for law and promote domestic disorder.

"The Senate whose members swear to uphold the Constitution and the laws of the United States, cannot permit responsibility for committee screening of the Federal judiciary to be shared by one who openly repudiated part of the U.S. Constitution.

"Senator Eastland has repudiated the validity of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. In a statement to the press Dec. 12, 1955, he joined in declaring:

* * *

" 'THE 14th Amendment, under which the tyrannous decisions (Supreme Court decisions against segregation) were rendered, was fradulently procured and is illegal.'

"Senator Eastland has stigmatized the intergrity of the U.S. Supreme Court; he has charged, by implication, that the court was influenced in its judgement by, and in effect acted as an instrument of, the Communist conspiracy.

"Senator Eastland has urged southern citizens and southern states to defy the U S. Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

"SENATOR EASTLAND has been a leader in the establishment of organizations whose purpose is to consolidate defiance of the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

"In late June 1954, he called for a movement, on a nationwide basis, to combat what he termed 'biased and incompetent decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court.'

"Senator Eastland addressed a statewide membership drive of the Mississippi White Citizens again on Dec. 1, 1955.

"On Dec. 12, 1955, he participated in issuing a joint statement urging southern states to adopt acts of nullification declaring themselves in defiance of the Supreme Court decisions.

* * *

"ON JAN. 26, 1956, Senator Eastland appeared before the South Carolina Association of Citizens Councils, urging nullification of the Supreme Court decisions. Early in February he addressed the Patriots of North Carolina on the same subject.

"Subsequently (Feb. 10, 1956) he spoke before a similar group at Montgomery, Ala., and on April 29, 1956, after his elevation to the chairmanship of the Senate Judiciary Committee, he advised a white citizens council rally at Forest, Miss., that the South 'must maintain its offensive.'

"...Senator Eastland has engaged in activities that subvert established domestic policy and reflect upon the dignity and honor of the Senate.

"Our Constitution and our national institutions are dedicated to the fulfilment of the concept that all men are created equal. The established domestic policy of the United States is opposed to discrimination based on race creed or color.

* * *

"IN RECOGNITION of these principles, specific amendments were added to the Constitution to prevent legal barriers and distinctions on the basis of race or color.

"A long series of decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court has clarified and emphasized the intent and scope of these provisions.

"Senator Eastland has exhibited, during his tenure in Congress, a consistent disregard and a flagrant contempt for the basic rights and fundamental freedoms of those Americans who are distinguished from their fellow citizens by reason of race, creed or color.

"He has used the forum of the U.S. Senate as a medium for inflammatory and biased attacks upon minority groups. He said on June 29, 1945; 'The Negro race is an inferior race (CR, P 6992).'

* * *

"IN CARRYING out his avowed intention to undermine principles and policies basic to American democratic tradition, Senator Eastland has resorted to discreditable tactics unworthy of a senator.

"He has even boasted publicly of his agility in flouting his acknowledged responsibilities. Speaking at Forest, Miss., June 26, 1954, Senator Eastland declared:

" 'After 1950, they (civil rights measures) were blocked in the Civil Rights Committee. Do you know how? Because of seniority, I was maneuvered into chairmanship of the civil rights subcommittee.

" 'Yes, Eastland of Mississippi became boss of the committee that had all of the civil rights bills, and they swore I broke the law and so I did.

* * *

" 'YOU KNOW the law says the committee has got to meet once a week...Why for the three years I was chairman that committee didn't hold a meeting. I didn't permit them to meet.

" 'I had to protect the interests of the people of Mississippi. . . . I had special pockets put in my pants and for three years I carried these bills around in my pockets everywhere I went and everyone of them were defeated.'

"It has been reported from Starkville, Miss., that on or about Sept. 18, 1956, Senator Eastland, addressing the Okitibbeha County Farm Bureau, again bosted of deliberately suppressing efforts to secure committee action on civil rights legislation."

Our Opinions

Eastland Must Be Removed

Editorial P. 10

The suspicion long held in many quarters that a back stage deal, last Spring, with the Republicans on the Judiciary Committee, not to join with the liberal Democrats to force the civil rights bill out of committee is now confirmed by unfolding events.

Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) let the cat out of the bag when he spoke before the Leland, Miss., Rotary Club explaining how he used the Sobeloff's confirmation to block action on civil rights.

The appointment of Simon Sobeloff to the Circuit Court of Appeals, last year was pending. As solicitor general Sobeloff had argued the school integration cases for the government. In order to block action on his confirmation, Sen. Eastland had his committee staff prepare a lengthy brief on Sobeloff. In the committee meeting, he recognized Sen. Johnston (of South Carolina) who spent five weeks of the committee sessions reading the brief. Then, Eastland told the Justice Department and the Republicans in the Senate that they could have Sobeloff as long as no further civil rights measures were offered. On July 1, complete agreement was reached.

The committee could not meet on July 9, the next scheduled date, because Eastland wanted to learn about a new irrigation system on his farm at Doddsville, Miss. The Senate adjourned as soon as it became apparent that the civil rights bills will not come out of the committee. An account of the Eastland speech was carried in the Greenville, Miss., Delta Democrat-Times and reprinted last week by the Congressional Quarterly, an independent news service.

Not until Eastland's speech became available was there proof that the GOP Senators, at the Administration's request, had "laid off" civil rights in order to get Sobeloff confirmed. Now Eastland is using the nomination of Supreme Court Justice Brennan as a club over the Administration on the civil rights issue. He is said to have sent word indirectly to Attorney General Brownell that he will not allow Brennan to be confirmed by his committee unless the Eisenhower Administration uses its influence to delay action on the civil rights bill.

Brennan was given a recess appointment to the U. S. Supreme Court last October while the Senate was in adjournment. A hearing on his confirmation was scheduled Tuesday, February 26, but was cancelled at the last minute. These hearings are regarded as a "little filibuster" designed to delay a vote as long as possible.

The Administration is faced with the choice of putting over Brennan's appointment but losing the civil rights bill. Eastland has made it clear that the Administration will not get both. Under Judiciary committee rules, it is virtually impossible, short of deposing Eastland, to force the chairman to call a Committee meeting on Brennan unless he wishes to do so.

Eastland has another trading weapon coming up. The President must soon nominate a successor to Justice Reed whose retirement became affective on Feb. 25. That explains the strange behavior of Mr. Brownell when he appeared before the Congressional committee that held hearings on the Administration civil rights bill a few weeks ago. The Attorney General cautioned moderation while he pleaded for the passage of a toothless civil rights measure. And, he was vehemently opposed to an anti-lynching provision being attached to the bill.

We pointed out in this column that Mr. Brownell had one eye set on the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench and the other on Sen. Eastland whose favor he must curry if he hopes to join that august body of black robed Justices. Again, a back door deal is in the making which will pigeonhole the civil rights bills so that the Administration nominee might get the approving nod from Sen. Eastland.

By now it should be crystal clear that no civil rights bill will ever be enacted into law so long as Eastland is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Eastland is the major obstacle. Let us resolve to remove him.

38a 1957

MISSISSIPPI

SENATOR EASTLAND

Cong. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., N. Y. Negro Democrat, Sees Racial Philosophy Of Sen. Eastland Of Miss. Penetrating North'n Liberal Thinking

Advocate 4/19/57

Jackson, Miss

Say Developments In Washington Show Negro Making Progress In Fight For Freedom

Atlanta, Ga., Apr. 15. — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Negro Democrtaic Congressman from New York, says he believes segregation will end in the United States in six to eight years if there is effective resistance to what he called "creeping Eastlandism."

He told a mass meeting of Atlanta Negro ministers Sunday people must stand firm against the philosophy of Sen. Eastland (D.-Miss.) which he said 'has penetrated Northern liberal thinking."

Powell said the Mississippi senator has re-defined a number of good, sound Anglo-Saxon words. "Under creeping Eastlandism 'moderation,' 'go slow' and 'gradualism' mean stop, stand still, do nothing.

"I am not against gradualism, moderation, and going slow," he continued. "But I insist that go slow at least means go, that gradualism at least means move, that moderation does not mean stand still."

Must Vary

Powell said integration must vary according to communities and that in some places it cannot be accomplished overnight.

"But a beginning must take place," he said. "No one can stand in Georgia and tell the North 'look, we are making progress' and point to what is happening in Kentucky or Maryland as proof."

The congressman said three "significant" developments have taken place in Washington in the past two years which indicate the Negro is making progress in his fight for freedom. They include:

1. The end of what he called "the unholy alliance" in Congress of "Northern reactionary Dixiecrats." As a result, he said, liberals have been appointed to the Rules Committee so it can no longer 'block all legislation working for the good of the American people.

2. The Southern manifesto signed last year. This, he said, "indicated specifically, definitely and finally that there was no longer a solid South" because such states as Kentucky, Maryland and Oklahoma refused to sign.

3. "The soft pedaling of Sen. Eastland by his own fellow Southerners and the pushing forward as the spokesman for the South of Sen. Ervin of North Carolina." He said "this is positive proof that the day of destiny can no longer be delayed by the voices of the "Demagogues."

Powell said he thought the "day of destiny" when the Negro achieves complete and full equality "should come somewhere between 1963 and 1966."

The congressman spoke to an estimated 1,000 persons in the Wheat Street Baptist Church at a meeting sponsored by the "Love, Law and Liberation" movement.

Mar. 4-20-57

Sounding Like a Broken Record

Eastland Still Passing Buck On Civil Rights

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 4-27-57

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP) — The weekly progress report on the status of the civil rights bills has begun to sound like a broken record. Every Monday the Eastland Judiciary Committee goes behind closed doors and each day at noon Senator Hennings emerges with the same old story.

April 15 marked the fourth try by the Missouri Senator to get some action on the measure, but once again his efforts were stalled. This time he moved to set May 6 as the specific date to vote on the measure, which has already been approved by the Hennings Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights.

■

THE COMMITTEE adjourned at noon without taking action on either motion. This was the same technique which was used in the first two executive meetings. The chairman refused to recognize Hennings until near time for adjournment. Hennings offered his motion for action on the pending bill. A discussion would ensue which would consume all remaining time before adjournment. At the third meeting last week, Hennings could not offer his motion because of the lack of a quorum.

Congress adjourned last week for the Easter recess and will not resume until April 29. Chairman Eastland announced that in all probability the committee will begin consideration of civil rights on that date.

Senator Matthew Neely (D.-W. Va.), a proponent of the bill, has been unable to take an active part in committee proceedings because of illness. Upon his return to the post of duty he has already observed that civil rights measures will never get out of the Eastland committee unless Senate takes it out by a discharge petition.

Senator Hennings, the chief supporter of the measure, said he had not come to that conclusion yet.

With all the important appropriation bills coming up in the Senate after the Easter recess, observers on Capitol Hill believe that the committee will be able to keep civil rights bottled up until mid-May. If it doesn't reach the floor before that time it will be hard to break a Senate filibuster in time to pass in this session.

PROF. CLENNON KING, HISTORY INSTR.
ALCORN COLLEGE

All 570 at Negro College Go Home Protesting Appeal for 'Uncle Toms'

Atlanta Ga.

From Press Dispatches

All 570 students of a Negro college in Mississippi left school Friday protesting a professor's call for "Uncle Tom" humility. In Florida, the State Supreme Court exercised the powers of a sovereign state to stay a Negro's admission to a white university.

And two former Negro Communist leaders testified in Baton Rouge, La., that Red agents have been trying since 1929 to infiltrate Negro churches, especially in the South.

Sat. 3-9-57

Leonard Patterson told the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation, probing influences behind racial unrest, "The Negro people in the South never accepted the Communist Party program."

Atlanta

And Manning Johnson said Communists worked on Negro pastors in Dixie, pressuring them to participate in various front movements.

Both New Yorkers were former Red leaders before they turned against the party.

Johnson said Communists favored the churches in the South as a target because they provided a cloak of respectability and a place to hide from police investigations.

"When a cry arose against the law investigators," he added, "the agents thus created sympathy for their cause. The Communists were very clever in this."

The withdrawal of the student body closed down little Alcorn A. & M. College in Southwest Mississippi, leaving it a ghost campus.

The students rejected a last-minute appeal by the professor who caused the revolt, history teacher Clennon King, 36. They held a hymn-singing to mark the end of the school's 86-year operation. There apparently was no disposition on the part of the state, which supported it, to get Alcorn back in business.

After the 30-minute service the students started a mass exodus from Alcorn aboard school buses. Most of them had been packed since early morning after a unanimous vote was taken Thursday night to extend a three-day strike indefinitely. But they stayed on to listen to King's hour-long appeal that they re-read his series of eight articles, published in a Jackson newspaper, and evaluate them as a whole. He offered to resign if the students still rejected his beliefs.

In an earlier article King had called for more Negroes of the "Uncle Tom" type, a reference to the character created by Harriet Beecher Stowe that became the personification of the humble, servile Negro.

Even as he appealed to the students, King had an article published endorsing the principle of permitting Negroes to go to homesteads in their ancestral Africa.

"Alcorn College died officially at 11:55 a.m. today," student president Ernest McEwin announced to the assembly as King's appeal was rejected.

Even before the students left, state officials had warned the college would be closed unless the boycott of classes ended at once.

The Florida Supreme Court rejected the U. S. Supreme Court's order that Negro Virgil Hawkins, 47, be admitted to the University of Florida at Gainesville.

"We are cognizant of our duty to compel (Hawkins') admission without delay if it is feasible to do so, but we have an equally compelling duty to perform in respect to the public peace," said the majority opinion in the 5 to 2 decision.

"This court has an opportunity to prevent the incidents of violence whilh are, even now, occurring in various parts of this country as a result of the state's efforts to enforce integration," it said.

One justice said in a concurring opinion that a state survey has shown students, parents and alumni of the university would "violently resist integration."

Seek Job Of Teacher Who Hit NAACP In White Council Paper

Daily Ward Fri. 3-8-57

Atlanta, Ga.

ALCORN, Miss. — (INS) — The Mississippi State College Board was asked Thursday to dismiss a Negro Professor, whose newspaper articles criticizing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People caused a student strike at the Alcorn A. & M. College.

P. 1

Dr. J. R. Otis, president of the all-Negro Southern Mississippi school said he was recommending that the board, which was meeting Thursday afternoon at Alcorn, that Prof. Clennon King be discharged for "insubordination." Earlier Thursday Otis said he would not press for King's removal.

King's criticisms of the NAACP which appeared in the Jackson Daily news recently, caused all 584 students at the College to boycott classes since Tuesday. The students insist that they would not return to classes until King is dismissed.

In the articles, King a history teacher, accused the NAACP of destroying race relations in the South. In one of them, he summed up his opinion of the organization by saying:

P. 3

"Perhaps the NAACP is the National Association for the agitation (CQ) of Colored People after all."

Otis, prior to the meeting, issued a statement which said:

Fri. 3-8-57

"The students insisted that their greviences against Prof. King did not result from the point of view which he expressed in the newspaper articles, but from their resentment of his drawing the school into this highly controversial (segregation) issue. The student protest was intensified when it was learned that Prof. King had written letters which were published in the official paper of the (Jackson) white citizens Council.."

King denied that he had written any letters for the citizens council and blamed "other teachers" at the college for instigating the student strike he said:

"They (the teachers) are destroying what they say they want to build up. They want other people to be tolerant while they themselves are not."

The strange statement of Rev. Clennon King

Afro. American Sat. 3-16-57

Baltimore, Md. P. 1

A person who identified himself as the Rev. Clennon King of Mississippi, telephoned the AFRO in Baltimore Sunday morning at 9 o'clock to say he was going to read the following statement to his congregation at the Wesley Chapel AME Church in Hazelhurst, Miss., 35 miles northwest of Jackson at the Sunday morning service.

"Colored people everywhere say I hate my race. Everyone knows me now as Mississippi's biggest fool because I turned against my own people.

"When they refused to hear me any longer, the state turned me out. Even whites will have nothing more to do with me.

* * *

"AFTER I LEAVE this service I am going to the State Capitol at Jackson. I will stay in front of the State Capitol until they put me in jail. If they let me out, I will go right back. I shall refuse to eat anything.

"If I did this to myself, I will take the punishment by myself but they are responsigle for my actions. I will not kill myself like Judas. I want a white person to do that for me because it was white people who caused me to do what I did.

"The governor of Mississippi said on the television I was right.

"The state board of education said they backed me. The biggest newspapers in the state said so too.

"The only thing I ask is that this church, my wife and children, mother, father nor brother ever see me again even after I am dead.

'I hope they will spend none of their money to see me buried."

Afro-American P. 2

AT 1:45 P.M., Sunday, the Rev. Mr. King again called the AFRO and said, "I'm a different man. I want to retract that statement I gave you." He continued:

"I have just come from the church where they had a beautiful crowd. The congregation expressed confidence in me, and I see the picture as altogether different than what I heard it was this morning.

"At that time I had just felt awful. I had heard reports that the people were not going to put money in the church. That they were saying I was a man who hated his own people. I had received threats. My wife and children were in tears.

* * *

"THE DOORS to my classroom had been closed. Out of 600 students only six showed up.

"The new president had told me I had massed up, and I was the last person he would have back.

"For these reasons I was awfully disturbed. I now want to retract what I said. I said those things this morning in haste. I want to stay in church work since the congregation has expressed confidence in me. I am a different man."

PROFESSOR CLENNON KING
Self-styled "Judas to the race" and "rat"

Who is Clennon King?

Afro-American

ALCORN, Miss.—Who is Professor Clennon King, the controversial history teacher whose series of pro-segregation articles set off the recent explosion at Alcorn A. and M. College?

Baltimore Md.

He calls the NAACP the National Association for the Agitation of Colored People.

It is dominated, he says by labor unions, Socialists, certain Quakers, B'nai B'rith's Anti-defamation League, the Civil Liberties Union, disguised Communists, etc.

3-23-57

Booker T. Washington was the greatest leader of the colored race, he declares, because Washington didn't have a white wife like Frederick Douglass and Walter White.

* * *

THE JACKSON (Miss.) State Times, the newspaper which published the articles, describes him as a "colored southern intellectual."

But Professor King described himself to the AFRO as "a Judas to the race" and a "rat" who cried because the trap slammed shut too soon.

A native of Albany, Ga., he is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute and received a master's degree from Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio.

* * *

AFTER HEADING two students tours abroad, he was forced to leave Virginia Union, Richmond.

He says prior to coming to Alcorn, he had job offers from Southern University in Texas and Louisiana Normal, Grambling, La.

He had been at Alcorn six months. While he is still a faculty member there, he has been told by the state college board to remain off the campus until they send for him.

He said the new president, Dr. John Dewey Boyd, told him "If I were you, I would get as far from Alcorn as possible."

King fails to cash in on smear stories

Afro-American Sat. 4-6-57

Baltimore Md.

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

WASHINGTON

Prof. Clennon King, the controversial teacher whose race relations articles blew a school asunder and, to all practical purposes, ousted him from his job, was much underpaid for his efforts.

This week he told Cliff Mackay, AFRO'S editor in chief, he received only $32 from the Jackson paper which published the series of eight articles.

This pittance is proof positive what the editors of the State Times really think of the tripe some pro-segregation southerners today are hailing as masterpieces.

* * *

BROTHER KING, who has called the AFRO'S home office on at least three separate occasions, also posted a complaint about the articles I wrote regarding the Alcorn situation.

"I was double-crossed," he asserts. How? Why I told him a lot of things off-the-record, which I didn't intend to be published."

Now that's a bright young man for you.

Can anyone imagine a newspaperman traveling 800 miles and staying up all night just to listen to something "off-the-record?"

The Rev.-Prof. King was double-crossed, all right. But it was not by the press.

THE GOOD OF TRAGEDY

Hazlehurst, Miss. The "Jackson State Times" announced March 24 the publication of "The Clennon King Story," a 28-page booklet comprising all eight highly controversial articles I recently wrote for it.

Included is photo work and a description of the "Time's" position on the series which touched off the student revolt at Alcorn (A. and M. College), temporarily closing the college.

I received my copy March 25. I had nothing to do with its publication, but after reading it, I think it is the best thing, so far, to come out of the tragedy.

* * *

THE "TIMES" is making the booklet available to the public for free. The purpose of this letter is to request the AFRO make a public announcement of this fact since the AFRO carried so much copy on the incident.

The incident has caused me to lose my job, to be falsely regarded as an "uncle tom" and a traitor to my race. I think whatever the AFRO can do to erase this should be done.

* * *

HAD I ANY idea in the beginning the amount of airing these articles would receive, I may have said some things differently. I have nothing to be ashamed of if the majority of my critics will read what I wrote and not simply "about" what I wrote.

Interested persons should write the "Times" for a copy of the booklet with the enclosure of 10 cents in stamps to defray the cost of handling and mailing.

CLENNON KING

King's Version Of Alcorn College Student Flareup

Courier Sat. 3-23-57
Pittsburgh, Pa.
P. 2

EDITOR'S NOTE—Prof. Clennon King, who taught history at Alcorn A. and M. State College in Alcorn, Miss., contacted The Courier from Hazlehurst, Miss., by telephone Sunday morning, March 10, and said he was going to Jackson and stand on the steps of the State Capitol "until I fall from exhaustion."

Professor King said he had been betrayed by whites and condemned by Negroes. He said he would rather be dead than face people who had been his friends.

King made this statement to The Courier after a majority of the student body at Alcorn had demanded his resignation. Students accused King of writing a series of articles in a Mississippi daily which, they said, criticized the NAACP and attacked integration methods.

Professor King changed his mind about standing on the capitol steps and called The Courier again Sunday afternoon (March 10) to request that his statement be taken out of the paper. The Courier had gone to press at this time, but editors agreed to print Professor King's version of the incident in the March 23 issue of this paper.

His version follows:

■

My True Story

By CLENNON KING

"A good name is rather to be chosen . . ."

Things have reached the point where 'tis best to say nothing for the time being. The series of eight highly controversial articles appeared in only one newspaper, but thousands of papers have picked out a few sentences on which to base slanted reports.

People have been reacting to what the newspapers have said about the articles, rather than to the articles themselves. The fair thing, for newspapers making inferences against the articles, is to republish the series for their own readers. Permission to do this would be simple to arrange.

Dear reader, it is a serious matter for you to discredit someone's name on the basis of someone else's opinions. To be fair, people should judge individuals on the basis of all the facts and not pieces of fact.

■

LET'S MOVE, NOW, to the most important point of all: Clennon King is a writer and a non-entity — he is ultimately being judged by what Alcorn students have said and done—not what HE has written.

When the Student Council hastily asked for my resignation, I offered it in good faith. My only condition was to ask for time to have reprints run for each Alcorn student of all eight articles —minus headlines and errors not of my creation; after personally reading the series, students would vote by secret ballot whether they wanted me to be ousted or not.

Few papers have been objective enough to report that Negro students' refusal to be democratic wrecked the college.

On the other hand, there is another side to this matter, pregnant with significance, but my lips are sealed with the realization that divulgence would only make bad matters worse.

■

WHAT MANY DO NOT know and can be told is that I have no desire to stay in a place unwanted—even though I have a wife and five children who are completely dependent.

Furthermore, I will not stay in any place I am not wanted. I am just that independent and have always been.

I know it will be harder than ever to find new work opportunities. What school wants a teacher of highly controversial stature? What publisher wants an alleged "Uncle Tom" for a writer? What church wants an alleged race hater for a minister? Not being able to teach, minister, or write for a living, what shall I do?

The only normal course I see for my future is a swift sinking in the social scale. Had I sufficient money to go into a business of some sort, or complete the work on my doctorate, I would not worry for my children as much.

After the controversy settles, I would like to publish the eight catastrophic articles in book form, but . . .

If NAACP feels wronged, I am sorry. I only meant to offer some constructive criticism. I can think of no one in a position more qualified — and this I mean humbly. May God somehow bless you to be able to read my soul, for my stand is strictly on the side of justice, freedom and equality. Yet, during these tense times, I am not against any group or section—not even the South!

PROF. CLENNON KING . . . tells his story

Alcorn Students Strike Over Prof. King

Journal + Guide P. 1

Anti-Commie World Flight Flop Recalled At Union

Sat. 3-16-57 Norfolk, Va.

Special to Journal and Guide

ALCORN, Miss. — When Professor Clennon King pulls a boo-boo, it's really the most!

His newspaper articles attacking the NAACP caused an explosion last week which rocked Mississippi to its Dixie foundations. And, in 1950, a history professor named Clennon King, suddenly left his faculty position at Virginia Union University after his "Crusade Against Communism" world flight flopped.

Professor King, history instructor at Alcorn A. and M. College, became the central figure of a student strike which all but wrecked the Mississippi state-supported school last week.

* * *

AS THE DUST begins to settle from the turmoil caused by student reaction over Prof. King's newspaper articles criticizing the NAACP, these developments emerge: (1) President J. R. Otis, who allegedly sided with the students, was fired by the all-white Mississippi State Board of Education. (2) Prof. King, himself, did not show up for work Monday morning, although officials said he had not been fired. (3) Only a handful of students were on hand for classes as the college opened Monday with Dr. J. D. Boyd as new president.

In 1950, a Professor Clennon King, history instructor at Virginia Union University, was in charge of a proposed world tour project which turned out to be a boo-boo that made front-page news.

* * *

AT THE Virginia college, Prof. King headed a highly-publicized project called "Crusade Against Communism" in which a group of about 50 students and educators, for a fee, were set to fly around the world on a "World Study Project"

King admits he was paid $32.50 for eight articles

Afro-American Sat. 4-6-57 Baltimore, Md.

JACKSON, Miss. — Prof. Clennon King was paid only $32.50 for the eight anti-NAACP articles which caused the student explosion at Alcorn A. and M. College, he told the AFRO this week.

He said the money was sent directly to the International Society on African Culture at Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. King has a $5 membership in the NAACP, which he describes as a "paper membership." He revealed that he was the organizer of an NAACP Youth Council in his hometown of Albany, Ga.

Alcorn College Professor Tells Courier:

Courier Sat. 3-16-57

'I'm Biggest Fool in Miss.!'

Pittsburgh, Pa. p. 3

B-U-L-L-E-T-I-N-!

HAZLEHURST, Miss.—Prof. Clennon King announced late Sunday that friends have persuaded him not to go through with his announced intentions of being a martyr. He told The Courier: "I thought that I had lost all of my friends until today." He promised to tell his entire story in The Courier next week.

HAZLEHURST, Miss.—Mississippi's self-described "biggest fool," Prof. Clennon King, wants to be slain by Mississippi whites in atonement for what the 585 students of Alcorn A. and M. College have called "Uncle Tomism."

A scant half-hour before the 11 A. M. Sunday services at this town's Wesley Chapel AME Church, where he is pastor, Professor King contacted The Courier and read to this paper a statement in which he pledged himself to stand until he falls in front of the Mississippi State Capitol in Jackson.

Professor King had written a controversial series of articles in a Jackson daily which attacked integration methods and also criticized the NAACP. This led to a wholesale walkout of the student body at Alcorn A. and M. College which resulted in the firing of both King and President J. R. Otis, in addition to the expelling of over four-fifths of the school's student body by Gov. J. P. Coleman.

Mr. King told The Courier that he had planned to read the statement before the church services and then go on to Jackson to carry out his threat.

Asserted Dr. King, "Negroes everywhere say I hate my race. Everyone now knows me as Mississippi's biggest fool because they say I turned against my own people . . . and when my people refused to hear me any longer, the state turned me out.

"Even whites now will have nothing to do with me . . . not even to accept this statement. I am going to Jackson to stand until I fall, without food, in front of the State Capitol, or until they arrest me, and after I'm released, I will return again and stand until they arrest me or until I fall.

"I will not kill myself like Judas. I want a white person to do it for me because it was white people who caused me to do what I did. The Governor of Mississippi said on TV I was right. The State Board of Education said they backed me and the biggest newspapers in the state said so, too.

"The only thing I ask is that neither this church, my wife and children, mother, father nor brothers ever see me again . . . even after I am dead. I hope they will spend none of their money to see me buried."

ORDERED BACK TO CAMPUS

LIFE OF ALCORN PROFESSOR THREATENED IF HE RETURNS

ALCORN,MISS.,APRIL 8(AP)- Professor Clennon King declined to returned to teach Alcorn A&M classes today, because his life had been threatened and the school president had demanded "humiliating" conditions.

The Alabama-born history professor, whose criticism of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People set off a student boycott earlier this year, had been told to return to duty today. He has been on temporary leave.

In a letter to Executive Secretary E.R. Jobe of the State College board, King asserted that A&M President J.D. Boyd had told him he "should not depend upon work at Alcorn after May 31."

Dr. Jobe denied that Boyd "or anyone else in authority" had told King his services would not be needed after May 31.

Jobe said the anonymous letter was turned over to the highway patrol and that King "will have whatever protection that state can provide."

Asked of the professor's status as a faculty member, Jobe said the threats are an "extenuating factor."

Advertiser p 3A
Tuesday, 4-9-57
Montgomery, Ala.

The Alcorn Incident

Pre-Conversion

Records at Virginia Union University reveal that during the years 1949 and 1950, one Clennon King was a member of the faculty, assigned to the History Department.

Baltimore Md.

In 1950, he conceived the idea of sponsoring a student tour around the world as one way to combat communism.

Sat. 3-23-57

Some difficulties arose, and although it was not a party to Mr. King's project, Virginia Union was sued to make up some deficits.

p. 4

Union promptly fired Mr. King.

Down in Mississippi last week, Mr. King was not after Reds, but had selected the NAACP as his target.

Angry students walked out on his classes, the president of the college fired him, he called himself a Judas, and said he's anxious for his white friends to put him in jail because he holds them, not himself, responsible for his utterances against the NAACP.

All of this happened at Alcorn A. and M. College, Mississippi's land grant school, purchased from the Presbyterian church 86 years ago, and which is still using some of the rickety buildings erected more than 100 years ago.

Actually, Alcorn's administration has only itself to blame for the student rebellion against Mr. King.

If it had carefully examined Mr. King's record when he applied for a job, it would have found out about the Virginia Union incident and could have guided itself accordingly.

38a 1957

MISSISSIPPI

PROFESSOR J.H. HARVEY
TAYLORVILLE, MISSISSIPPI (SUPERINTENDENT OF THE SMITH COUNTY TRAINING SCHOOL)

Mississippi Educator

Doesn't Want Integration

Courier Pittsburgh Pa

TAYLORSVILLE, Miss. (ANP)—A Negro professor in an all-Negro school in Smith County here, recently answered the question of integration by retorting "my students are content and don't want to go to an integrated school, nor do my teachers want to teach in an integrated school." Sat. 4-6-57

Such was the statement of Prof. J. H. Harvey, superintendent of the Smith County Training School here.

According to published reports, Harvey's philosophy is "let us not mix and mingle our blood as so many people would have us do, not in the backward roads and hills of the country, not in the slums of our great cities, but let our blood mix in faith with the common denominator of all men, our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ."

The reports say Harvey is afraid of integration because a majority of Negro children would quit school, his teachers would have no jobs, his race would be set back 50 to 100 years and there would be bloodshed.

Harvey, an ordained minister, who reportedly likes to discuss segregation, says the Negroes want to live to themselves, go to their own schools, ride their own school buses, eat in their own lunchrooms and worship God to themselves.

Boycott Leader Warns

Beware of 'Uncle Toms'!

Courier Pittsburgh Pa

JACKSON, Miss.—Rev. C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla's., dynamic pastor, warned the citizens of Jackson to beware of "Uncle Toms."

Addressing an NAACP rally here, the Rev. Steele warned that "in the 20th century we have more Uncle Toms. Some are styled as ministers, teachers, professors, news reporters, and big, fat, greasy Uncle Toms." 4-6-57

He told the audience of Tallahassee's fight against bus segregation which was sparked by "two young Negro women with 20th century blood in their veins" and asked that Jackson's Negroes push their fight of non-violence for integration. He said: "We must learn that sugar from the Negro store is as sweet as sugar from a white store.

"White men have great respect for paper money, lead bullets, and paper ballots, but violence for us is impractical."

MISSOURI BILLS SEEK END OF SEGREGATION

Commercial Appeal

Budget Request Ignored By House Lawmakers

Thurs. 1-31-57

WILSON IS CRITICIZED

By The Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 30.—Gov. James T. Blair Jr. submitted a one-year budget of $495,976,225, but the Missouri House concerned itself with new bills and no action Wednesday.

The budget bills were ready for introduction but they were not offered. Plenty of others were, including ones to end all racial segregation in this border state and another to build a state office building in Kansas City.

Wilson Criticized

Resolutions were offered to save the 86-year-old executive mansion from destruction and to criticize Secretary of Defense Charles Wilson for calling some National Guardsmen "draft dodgers."

The resolution to save the mansion, in which Democratic Governor Blair has refused to live was offered by a Republican, Representative Clara Aiken Speer of Jackson County. The resolution called for a six-member commission of three representatives and three senators to ascertain the cost of restoring the old building.

Other measures are pending to make it a museum and to build a new and modern executive mansion. The Senate sent to the House Wednesday a plan for a 15-member joint committee to study the problem.

New Building Bill

The resolution criticizing Secretary Wilson was offered by Representative Lee Aaron Bachler of Jackson County, and other members from Jackson County offered the bill for a state office building in Kansas City. They had no idea how much should be spent for the building, and knew of no land that would be available for the structure.

But they thought it should be somewhere near the Jackson County Courthouse which is the [illegible] of Kansas City.

[illegible] Wednesday, four Negro representatives offered bills which would wipe out any semblance of race segregation in Missouri.

Bills Are Outlined

One bill would forbid discrimination against any man in any public place—hotel, restaurant, hospital, dance hall or anywhere else—because of his race, creed or color.

Others would bar racial discrimination in private or governmental employment.

And a fourth would sweep out the last vestige of racial discrimination now carried in public school statutes.

Opening of Courthouse Cafe in St. Joseph, Mo., Is NAACP Victory

Call Kansas City, Mo. 4 pm. 3-1-57

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — When the three judges who hold court in the Buchanan county courthouse ruled last week that the cafeteria in the building must serve members of all races, it was a victory for the St. Joseph branch of the NAACP.

Persistence of an NAACP committee accounted in large measure for the ruling by the judges.

Last spring when Mrs. R. P. Beshears, president of the St. Joseph branch, was refused service in the courthouse lunch room, a committee from the NAACP met with Judges John Madgett, presiding judge, and Judge Don Gilpin.

Oppose Discrimination

Both declared their opposition to the policy of H. A. "Buck" Smart, operator of the lunch room, in denying service to Negroes. The judges said that it had not come to their attention before that a discriminatory policy was practiced there.

They requested, however, that the committee return when the third county judge, Judge Walt Smith, would be present.

During the intervening months, numerous attempts were made by the NAACP group to meet with the three judges in a body but such a meeting could not be arranged.

In the meantime, ouster proceedings were pending against Judge Madgett and Judge Smith. Then, a general election was held in which Lloyd Cole was elected in the place of Judge Smith whose term expired Dec. 31, 1956. Governor Blair recently appointed Fred J. Culver to serve the unexpired term of Judge Madgett which was to run until December, 1958. An ouster order was served on Judge Madgett late in January of this year.

Call p. 17

Representatives of the NAACP conferred with the new court regarding the discriminatory policy in the lunch room.

3-1-57

An immediate declaration that no racial discrimination would be permitted in the Buchanan courthouse lunch room was made. This declaration was the unanimous opinion of the three judges.

Mr. Smart, whose lease expires on March 1, closed the lunch room with "no comment" regarding the racial order.

The judges report that already several applications have been received from persons wanting to operate the lunch room.

Judge Gilpin, a Republican, was elected to succeed himself in November, 1956. Judge Cole, a Democrat, defeated Judge Smith in the August primary and was elected in the 1956 general election. Judge Culver is now the presiding judge.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST NEGROES BANNED AT MISSOURI CONFERENCE

Advertiser Thurs. 2-28-57

Montgomery, Ala. p. 1

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 27 (AP)—The food and tobacco concessionaire in the lobby of the Jackson County Courthouse today was ordered by the county court to end reported discrimination against Negro patrons.

Hunter Phillips, a member of the court, said he had received complaints that Negro patrons were being served coffee in paper cups instead of porcelain cups.

Phillips and William J. Randall, another court member, signed the order directing the concessionaire, Frank Sasleman, to end the reported practice. They said Castleman had promised that any such practices by his employes would be stopped.

MISSOURI HOUSE OK'S DISCRIMINATION BAN

Commercial Appeal p. 39

GOP Fights Bill Introduced By Negro Legislators

Memphis Press

JEFFERSON CITY, March 13.—(AP)—The Missouri House approved a bill Wednesday that would bar discrimination in state employment because of an applicant's race, color, creed or national origin.

Press 3-14-57

Republicans battled the bill because it would permit discrimination on grounds of political faith but not national origin.

The minority floor leader, Representative A. Clifford Jones (R., of St. Louis County) said that meant Missouri officials could hire a Communist but not a Republican, since all top state officers are Democrats.

Democrats denied that. They insisted that, so long as there is the two-party system, elective officers should have the right to employ members of their own party.

The bill originally was introduced by the four Negro members of the House, to assure members of their race an equal chance with whites in competition for state jobs.

The House also passed a bill reorganizing the state Board of Probation and Parole, providing that it must have its offices outside the big prison here and setting the chairman's salary at $10,000 a year. The other two board members would get $8,500.

Also approved, but in a sharply different form, was a bill to protest small dairies from invasions by big milk distributors who cut prices below the cost of the little distributor.

By amendment, the bill now says that any milk seller can distribute his products at below his cost so long as he maintains the same price throughout his operating area. In order to adjust the entire bill to that change, other amendments were made.

Good Argument For House Bill 162

Call Mo. 3-22-57 p. 18

No more forceful argument for passage of the public accommodations bill (House bill No. 162) could be made than to cite the facts in a case which happened in Missouri last week.

Kansas City

A Negro driving one of those big transport trucks across the country got hungry. He saw a sign which read, "Skyline Service Station—Missouri's Largest Truck Stop." He stopped. Like other drivers, he went inside the restaurant and ordered food. The others were served promptly. He was told promptly that "we don't serve colored here."

The man was driving a huge truck from Brooklyn, N.Y., to Kansas City. Big trucks almost without exception stop at places marked "truck stop."

James Manning, the truck driver with 12 years of experience, was flabbergasted when told that he could not be served. He was surprised at such treatment in Missouri—in the Midwest—for he thought that out here he was in "free country." For 10 years, he has driven a truck through the South, but not once below the Mason and Dixon line had he been denied food. The Show-Me state becomes the first to deny a truck driver service at a "truck stop."

If Manning could go to Jefferson City and personally tell his story as he told it to a member of THE CALL staff, not a legislator would vote against House bill 162 after hearing him. For any public place to deny food to a hungry man with money in his pocket is cruel, unjust and downright inhuman.

The Skyline Service Station and Garage near Foristell, Mo., which advertises itself as "Missouri's Largest Truck Stop" is giving Missouri a "bad name" among truck drivers in the East. Manning said that two white drivers who walked into the place as he did decide to go elsewhere when they witnessed the bigoted attitude toward Manning.

Passage of the public accommodations bill is a "must" for this session of the legislature. It must not be put off for two more years. Legislators have an example right before them of how well a non-segregated policy can work. The Missouri hotel in Jefferson City serves all persons regardless of race or color. It is time for such a policy to become the law of the state. House bill No. 162 must pass. The House labor committee already has approved it. The full House should endorse the committee action by passing the measure at once.

LONG-DISTANCE TRUCK DRIVER DENIED FOOD. — James Manning, long-distance truck driver, is shown beside the huge transport truck which he drives for a Brooklyn, N. Y. firm. Manning was denied food and service when he stopped last week at the Skyline Service Station and Garage located near Foristell, Mo., because he is a Negro.

Negro Driver Refused Service At Truck Stop

A long-distance truck driver, whose skin happens to be brown, was refused a meal in a place which advertises itself as "Missouri's Largest Truck Stop." The place, called "Skyline Service Station and Garage" is located near Foristell, Mo.

James Manning of Brooklyn, N.Y., has been driving long-distance trucks for the L. and F. Trucking Co., Inc., of Brooklyn for 12 years. For 10 years, he has been running South.

"All through the South, I never had any trouble," Manning told THE CALL Wednesday night. "I could always find a place to eat and a place to get fuel. But out here in the Mid-west I find myself running into difficulty."

Manning said that down South he frequently had to eat "in the back" but that he always was able to find food. He said that the Skyline Service Station restaurant refused to serve him at all. The waitress told him, "We don't serve colored" and walked away.

Later, he said, the gas station attendant told him, "They never do serve n.... in there."

Manning was bringing a load of air conditioners and fans from Long Island, N.Y., to a Kansas City distributing firm. He said that he got good service in St. Louis but that when he drove into Missouri's largest truck stop" he was shocked to learn that his money was "no good" there because he was colored.

In addition to denying him food, Manning said that the service station man also refused to sell him deisel fuel. He had enough to get to Kansas City, he said, but he likes to keep a full supply. After Manning had delivered his load of air conditioners to its destination, he told his story to Carl R. Johnson of the NAACP and to THE CALL.

Commenting on the situation, Johnson said that Manning's experience is a good reason why the state legislature should pass the public accommodations bill now before it.

"It is not reasonable that a man driving a long-distance truck from New York to Kansas City should be denied service at a regular truck stop anywhere in the United States or anywhere in Missouri."

Manning said that the L. and F. Trucking company employs two Negro drivers. He said that he had never before been denied food and he said that until his experience in Missouri Tuesday night, he had never before been dened food and fuel service although he had spent 10 years travelling South. Manning drives a 20-ton diesel truck.

Manning is a member of local No. 135 of the Teamsters union.

The bill now before the Missouri state legislature which will cure the situation of which Manning complained this week is House bill No. 162. A hearing was held on this bill on February 27 before the House Labor Committee. A large number of witnesses spoke in favor of it. Persons interested in its passage should write or wire their state representatives to vote for it.

Rather than mix, cafe owner quits

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Rather than serve all creeds, H. A. Smart closed his restaurant in Buchanan County Courthouse after the court ruled he must. Smart has operated the restaurant since 1937.

Several colored persons, the court indicated, had complained that they were refused service in the cafe. Smart said he would not seek to renew his lease which expires on March 1.

K.C. Restaurant Serves Africans But Not Negroes

Tells Couple: Our Policy Is Not to Serve You Folks

Kansas City, Mo.—A Kansas City restaurant broke its "no Negroes served" policy Saturday, Nov. 16 when it served a party of three Nigerians dressed in native garb and three Aemrican Negroes but last Friday refused service to two American Negroes who went there alone without friends from Africa.

Slight Curiosity

A brief conference between the manager and a waitress folowed the seating of the party of six, but when the waitress emerged she began to take orders and served the group without further delay. Other customers were reported to take no particular attention of the dark-skinned group. The native costumes of the Nigerians attracted only the slightest curiosity from a few.

Negro Couple

However, when the Negro couple went alone to the restaurant five days later they were told that "our policy is not to serve you folks."

According to a local newspaper, the restaurant is one of the Howard Johnson chain, the same chain, whose Dover, Del., restaurant refused to serve the finance minister from Ghana a glass of orange juice, thereby creating an international incident.

No Answer

Subsequently, Howard Johnson, owner of the eastern chain, made a public statement this his restaurant did not discriminate against anyone because of race or creed. Frank Graves, assistant manager of the local store, said that Howard Johnson does not own the Kansas City store and does not control its policy.

Carl Johnson, president of the local NAACP branch, has written a letter to Howard Johnson asking for a clarification of policy but to date has received no answer. The Nigerians were in the city five days as a part of a nation-wide tour under the sponsorship of the U. S. Department of State.

He OK's Back to Africa Movement

Here's That Man King Again!

HAZELHURST, Miss.—Clennon King, Alcorn A. and M. professor and AME minister, has come out in favor of Senate Bill 759 which advocates the migration of interested Americans to Africa.

King, who first drew the resentment of Negroes in Mississippi for an article he published criticizing the NAACP, said he favors pasage of the bill that was introduced by Senator Langer, Republican from North Dakota.

In a letter to Senator John C. Stennis of DeKalb, Miss., King requested that the Mississippi representative "use your influence to help get this bill speeded on its way."

King also stated in his letter, "If passed, this bill would mean more to our people's civil rights than anything which has happened since the proclamation of 1863."

■

IN ANOTHER passage of the letter, King informed Senator Stennis that the NAACP is opposed to the bill.

"Undoubtedly the bill is already having difficulty because the original hearing has already been postponed," King wrote. "I know it has the vehement opposition of the powerful NAACP."

King was invited to Washington, D. C., by Benjamin Gibbons, president of the Universal African Natonalist Movement, located in New York. This group favors passage of the Langer bill.

Professor King agrees with the Langer bill because: "If the door to African migration permanently and conveniently stood ajar, it would serve as an incomparable opportunity and reminder, which would cure a host of our racial ills, although not a single Negro ever went to Africa. The trouble with so much of our Negro thinking is that we don't know who we are."

Percy Greene and Company

There are four gentlemen down in Mississippi who are getting gobbles of newspaper space, more or less because they have formed fixed opinions about when and how desegregation and integration should come about.

They are Clennon King, college teacher and minister and obviously a publicity seeker; Percy Greene, newspaperman, politician and orator; the Rev. H. H. Hume, newspaper publisher and minister, and the Rev. Ozelle Mason, who also appears to be in the newspaper business.

Mr. Greene

Greene, Hume and Mason have picked up spending money from the state for various reasons and King publicly denounced the NAACP for tactics it is using in trying to bring about desegregation in schools. King also feels that all of us would be happier if the Federal Government sent some of us back to Africa.

One cannot uphold these four men but at the same time it is hard to suggest that they take leave and thumb a ride to the moon. Especially when so many other Negroes in the South, and in the North, feel the same way as they do. Greene, King, Hume and Mason are not the only Negro gentlemen conferring with the Big Man behind closed doors and receiving special favors for doing so.

Should these four gentlemen be condemned for being bold enough to speak their minds while other would-be leaders of the race escape censure because they sneak around in the night and peddle the same philosophy?

One thing can be said for Percy, he came out after he had been "exposed," and advocated abolition of bus and waiting room segregation and urged desegregation in colleges and universities on the graduate level . . . in Mississippi.

'Little Negro' View AskedByEducator

ALCORN, Miss., Oct. 1 (AP)—Prof. Clennon King sent a telegram yesterday to President Eisenhower expressing fear the president's coming conference with Negro leaders on integration will give him a "one-sided picture."

King is the controversial Negro history professor whose pro-segregation newspaper articles set off a student boycott which early this year almost closed Alcorn A&M, state-supported Negro College.

"I understand . . . that the Negro conference is being called because it is feared that you have been getting only one side of the picture," King's telegram said. "The purpose of this telegram is to express the fear that a conference with Negroes dominated by personalities like New York Rep. Adam Clayton Powell will also give a one-sided picture."

King said a conference with a "broader base" would inspire the "little Negro" and signed himself, "Clennon King, a little Negro."

"Segregationists" In Mississippi Said Unpopular

JACKSON, Miss. — A United Press story published in the July 28 edition of the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to either group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Green of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Mr. Greene, the story says, has lost both distributors and advertising, while Mr. Hume, a Baptist minister, is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state minister's group, the report says.

CONTRIBUTIONS CITED

"Humes accepted a contribution from the (State) Sovereignty Commission, for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation," the UP report continues.

"Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social conditions.

"'I couldn't have made the trip otherwise,' Greene said.

"He also sold the (State Sovereignty) commission copies of his papers condemning the NAACP ..... and he was paid by the commission for printing a pamphlet calling for parallel but separate progress for Negroes."

"Segregationists" In Mississippi Said Unpopular

JACKSON, Miss. — A United Press story published in the July 28 edition of the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi have been caught between two fires: anti-segregation Negroes and white "extremists." The segregationist Negroes are not acceptable to either group, the story says.

Two such Mississippi Negroes are cited. They are the Rev. H. H. Humes of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Green of Jackson, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of an Associated Press story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News last July 7 listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission set up by the Mississippi Legislature to preserve segregation.

Mr. Greene, the story says, has lost both distributors and advertising, while Mr. Hume, a Baptist minister, is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state minister's group, the report says.

CONTRIBUTIONS CITED

"Humes accepted a contribution from the (State) Sovereignty Commission, for a special edition he is publishing showing progress Negroes have made in Mississippi within its pattern of segregation," the UP report continues.

"Greene accepted travel expense to appear on a Memphis radio panel in which he said migration of Negroes from Mississippi is caused by economic, not social conditions.

"'I couldn't have made the trip otherwise,' Greene said.

Segregationist Negroes in Miss. in 'hot water'

JACKSON, Miss. — A United Press story in the July 26 edition of the Jackson Clarion-Ledger and Daily News reports that Negro spokesmen for segregation in Mississippi are meeting reprisals for their actions.

In trouble are the Rev. H. H. Humes, of Greenville, editor of the Delta Leader, and Percy Greene, publisher of the Jackson Advocate. Their troubles began following publication of a story in the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, listing payments made to them, among others, by the State Sovereignty Commission to preserve segregation.

Greene has lost both distributors and advertising, while the Rev. Hume is said to have been injured in his standing with national Baptist leaders. Both men were condemned by a state ministers' group, the report says.

Jackson Tells Mississippi Negroes to Stand Firm on Integration and Equal Ballot Rights

Black Dispatch Sat. 8-16-57 Oklahoma City, Okla.

JACKSON, Miss.—"If rebellion against the laws of the nation continues, Washington will send troops to Mississippi," said Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, president of the National Baptist Convention, recently in an address to the Mississippi Baptist Convention.

He continued, "The ballot cannot be in the hands of one group. We must either deny the democracy of freedom or give everybody the right to vote."

More than 5,000 crowded the Lynch Street Masonic Temple to hear one of the world's foremost religious leaders of the day call upon his constituency and others to stand firm on integration and keep fighting for voting rights.

He said, "We can make certain concessions to people who don't believe as we do, but there is a point in democracy from which we cannot retreat if we are going to have a democracy."

Dr. Jackson spoke on familiar ground—a type of home-coming—since only a few years ago he came to Jackson to pursue a college education.

He was born in Coahoma county and has gone far from his humble beginning. His educational achievement includes an A. B. degree from Jackson college, a B. D. degree from Colgate Divinity school, Rochester, N. Y., and M. A. degree from Creighton university, Omaha, Nebr., and a D. D. degree from Jackson college. The Rev. Jackson is an author, world traveler and one of the world's most effective and distinguished preachers and lecturers.

His book, "The Eternal Flame," a widely distributed volume, gives his impressions of Russia as seen during a preaching mission thruout the Soviet Union in 1955.

Simultaneously being president of the largest Negro organization in America, the National Baptist Convention, U. S. A., Inc., Dr. Jackson pastors one of America's largest congregations, the Olivet Baptist church of Chicago.

Under the dynamic leadership of Dr. Jackson the church has come to new heights in membership, giving and building. Within the last 4 years more than 5,000 members have been added for a total of more than 12,000. In January 1957 the church undertook a $100,000 expansion program and by June 30, 1957, $57,000 had been deposited with enthusiastic assurance of reaching the entire goal before the year's end.

New recognition has been given NBC under Dr. Jackson's forward leadership. He sits as a member of the executive committee of the Baptist World Alliance and as a member of the central committee of the World Council of Churches which recently met in New Haven, Conn.

As a dedicated leader Dr. Jackson has spoken throughout America on civil rights, nuclear weapons testing and stockpiling, juvenile delinquency and other moral and social issues.

He closed his address to Mississippi Baptists by saying, "We cannot remain a democracy with one-half of the people living in contempt of court and the other half living for the court."

"Don't get bitter," he warned. "Don't try to solve every problem with your own hands, but use both persistence and patience."

Mississippi Attorney Wins Three Cases for Negroes

CLARKSDALE, Miss. — Although not much has appeared in the national press, Negroes in this section of Mississippi are hailing Atty. Abe D. Sherman, liberal white local atttorney, for accepting and winning several cases in court involving the rights of Negroes.

Recently, Attorney Sherman obtained an acquittal for a 16-year-old boy who had been arrested and charged with the rape of a 12-year-old white girl. At the time of the indictment of the youth, tension was running so high here in Coahoma County among the whites that Attorney Sherman pleaded for, and was able to obtain, a change of venue to Washington County.

When the case came up for trial in the Washington County court, the prosecuting attorney found the evidence so flimsy that the judge granted his motion for dismissal of the case.

THE YOUTH was immediately taken back to Clarksdale to face trumped-up charges of house-breaking. Because evidence was also lacking here, the youth was dismissed and has been freed of all charges.

Attorney Sherman previously handled a case for a colored woman who was suing a former Coahoma County sheriff for attempted rape. The suit was recently settled out of court with the woman receiving $5,000 damages from the former sheriff.

Funds for handling both of the cases were raised by the Coahoma County Negro Citizens Association, of which J. W. Wright is president.

Segregation Board To Hear J.P. Today

Daily News, Jackson, Miss. P.1 Mon. 11-4-57

Outline For Anti-Rights Law Governor Expected To Reveal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. J. P. Coleman was scheduled to meet with the state's segregation "watchdog" agency Monday in advance of Tuesday's opening of a special session of the Legislature.

The governor may outline to the State Sovereignty Commission some of the school segregation and anti-civil rights safeguards he wants written into a new Mississippi constitution.

The sole subject assigned the special session is to call a constitutional convention. There is some question whether Coleman has the support he claims in the Legislature for rewriting the 1890 document.

In his message at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow to a joint meeting of both houses, Coleman is expected to dwell almost entirely on constitutional changes which he says are needed to speed the state's industrialization.

Encouragement to industry was the overriding avowed purpose of a new constitution when Coleman first made his plans for a special session known. Since then, however, the Little Rock integration crisis and passage of the Civil Rights Act have changed things.

In "off-the-record" addresses to public and private gatherings around the state, Coleman has said the constitutional requirement for separate schools must be removed. Such constitutional provisions have been the basis of overthrow of some segregation laws by federal courts.

Coleman also is believed to want taken out of the Constitution all authority to abolish schools to prevent integration, on the same grounds. He is believed to want the obligation to educate children left in the hands of school districts, so the state's entire public education system won't hinge on the outcome of one school incident.

The governor scheduled a private dinner in a downtown hotel tonight for the legislators. Jimmy Arrington, humorist and mayor of Collins, Miss., will speak at the dinner, which the governor said will be the occasion for "some fun and good fellowship before the fireworks begin."

Both houses are expected to adjourn immediately after the governor's message, postponing the fireworks until at least Wednesday.

The governor's most vocal opposition, a "committee of 25" legislators, fired what they said would be their final shot yesterday. They issued a statement tied to a Mississippi Economic Council study on the constitutional question.

The MEC, which functions as the state Chamber of Commerce, reviewed in its study what it said was included in "current thinking" on changes that a new constitution might include. In doing so the MEC listed several proposals which go beyond what Coleman has proposed, including abolition of the offices of secretary of state and lieutenant governor, making several other high state offices appointive, reduction of the number of legislators, and that it be made possible for the governor to succeed himself.

Louisiana-Owned Firm in St. Paul Told to Refuse Negro Women in the North

Bystander Thurs. 3-7-57

Des Moines, Iowa P.1

Minneapolis, Minn.—Three St. Paul women who were refused a course at a slenderizing and health service plan to seek criminal action under the Minnesota equal rights law against a Louisiana-owned St. Paul firm. They were refused because of their race.

The firm is the Alvin Roy Slenderizing Studio, 32 E. Seventh St., St. Paul.

Two of the women, Mrs. Ruth Payne, 612 West Central and Mrs. Lola Finney, 437 Rondo, in answer to advertising in the St. Paul daily papers went to the studio Feb. 6 for an appointment made by telephone.

At the studio they were told that because of the rush of new business they could not be enrolled until Feb. 25.

Shown Accomodations

During the interview they were shown the accomodations and machines which the salon offered and told to return on Feb. 25.

In the meantime, a sister of one of the women, Mrs. Beatrice Coleman, 813 West Central, wife of St. Paul fire captain, Leroy Coleman applied for the courses and asked to be enrolled at the same time Mrs. Finney, her sister and Mrs. Payne were to begin the course.

When the three women went to the studio on Feb. 25, they were hurriedly ushered into a room off the waiting room. There they were told that they could not be taken until the middle of March.

Bystander P.3

New Applicant

In the meantime one of the women heard the receptionist scheduling a new applicant, a white woman, for the next class. Thereupon the three women asked to see the manager.

Al Brumgardt, the manager, invited them into the conference room and admitted, the women claim, that he could not accomodate Negro women, because the firm, which owned the buisness, from its headquarters in Louisiana had ordered studios operated in the north not to enroll colored women in their courses.

The three women conferred with Assistant County Attorney Wm. F. Desmond, who they claim, told them that the refusal of service was not a violation of the equal rights law, but also advised them there was cause for civil damages, and suggested that they hire attorneys.

The three women reported the affair to the St. Paul Urban League. Through the Governor's Human Right's Commission an opinion was secured from the Attorney-General's office which said the alleged incident was a violation of the state civil rights law.

Further effort will be made to interest the Ramsey county attorney's office in the law violation by the three women.

Montgomery Improvement Ass'n Observes Second Year

Courier 12-12-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—The Montgomery Improvement Association will celebrate its second anniversary, Dec. 5-8, by conducting a second annual institute on non-violence and social change.

The institute is designed to train leaders in the Christian and non-violent approach to social change, and will carry the theme, "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility."

Among those who will take part will be Dr. Archibald J. Carey Jr., pastor, Quinn Chapel AME Church, Chicago, and Paul Simon of the Illinois state legislature.

■

THE INSTITUTE on non-violence is part of the projected Ten Point program which has been adopted by the MIA. The program, when put into action, will serve to raise the social, economic, and political level of Negroes of Montgomery. The MIA is depending upon this institute to provide the community leadership needed for the success of the program.

The institute will go through four days of seminars and mass meetings. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., MIA president, will be principal speaker on Dec. 5.

Montgomery Negro group sets institute

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 30—(AP)—The Montgomery Improvement Assn.'s second annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change will be held here Dec. 5-8, the Rev. M. L. King Jr., MIA president, said yesterday.

Speakers include the Rev. Glenn Smiley, field secretary, Fellowship of Reconciliation, Nyack, N. Y.; Harris Wofford, Washington, D. C., attorney; the Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor of Mount Olive Tabernacle Baptist Church and member of the Philadelphia City Council, and Dr. Archibald Carey, attorney and pastor of Quinn Chapel AME Church at Chicago.

King said C. G. Gomillion president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. and a member of the Tuskegee Institute faculty will address the opening mass meeting. Gomillion has been prominently identified with the Negro Boycott of white Tuskegee merchants.

Theme for this year's institute is "freedom through civic responibility."

Boycott movement to note 2nd year

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The Montgomery Improvement Association will celebrate its second anniversary Dec. 5-8, by conducting a second annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change, designed to train leaders in the Christian and non-violent approach to social change.

Afro-American

The institute this year will carry the theme, "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility." Among those who will take part in the Institute will be Dr. Archibald J. Carey, pastor of Quinn Chapel AME Church, Chicago, and Paul Simon of the Illinois Legislature.

The annual institute is part of the project "10 Point Program" which has been adopted by the MIA to raise the social, economic and political levels of the citizens of Montgomery.

Baltimore

CENTRAL TO the program is the building of a community center which will serve as focal point for the MIA program. The MIA is depending on this annual institute to provide the community leadership which will be needed for its success.

The institute will go through four days of seminars and mass meetings. Dr. Martin L. King Jr., president, will be the principal speaker at the Dec. 5 opening night mass meeting.

Two of the four seminars scheduled for the institute will be conducted Friday morning and afternoon, Dec. 6, the others on Saturday. The institute will close after a Sunday mass meeting with Dr. Carey as principal speaker.

MIA Plans Meeting In December

Dr. King, Dr. Carey To Take Part In Four-Day Event

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The Montgomery Improvement Association will celebrate its second anniversary, Dec. 5-8, by conducting a second annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change.

The Institute is designed to train leaders in the Christian and non-violence approach to social change. The institute this year will carry the theme, "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility."

* * *

AMONG THOSE who will take part in the institute will be Dr. Archibald Carey, pastor of the Quinn Chapel AME Church of Chicago, and the Honorable Paul Simon of the Illinois Legislature.

The annual Institute on Non-Violence is part of the projected "Ten Point Program" which has been adopted by the MIA. The program, when put into action, will serve to raise the social, economic, and political level of the Negroes of Montgomery.

Register

* * *

CENTRAL TO the program is the building of a community center which will serve as focal point for the MIA program. The MIA is depending on this annual institute to provide the community leadership which will be needed for the success of the program.

The institute will go through four days of seminars and mass meetings which will address themselves to the theme, "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility." Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., MIA president, will be the principal speaker at the opening night mass meeting Thursday Dec. 5. Two of the four seminars scheduled for the institute will be conducted Friday morning and afternoon, Dec. 6. Friday evening will be given over to the youth of the city and surrounding areas. Contestants will vie in the annual oratorical contest for the three scholarships that are awarded annually.

After the contest, Friday night, the institute preacher will deliver the institute sermon at a mass meeting.

* * *

THE LAST two seminar sessions will be conducted Saturday, Dec. 7. Nothing has been scheduled for Saturday night so that visitors might have free time to acquaint themselves with the citizens of Montgomery.

In addition to the seminars and mass meetings will be the fireside chats. These will be held in the various homes after mass meeting each night.

The Institute will close after the huge mass meeting which is to be held on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 8. The speaker for this occasion will be Dr. Archibald Carey, pastor of Quinn Chapel AME Church of Chicago.

Non-Violence Group Observes 2nd Anniversary

Informer Houston, Tex. Sat. 12-7-57

MONTGOMERY — The Montgomery Improvement Association will celebrate its second anniversary, December 5-8, by conducting a second annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change. The Institute is designed to train leaders in the Christian and Non-Violent approach to social change. The institute this year will carry the theme, "Freedom through Civic Responsibility."

Among those who will take part in the Institute will be Dr Archibald Carey, pastor of the Quinn Chapel AME church of Chicago, and the Honorable Paul Simon of the Illinois Legislature.

The Annual Institute on Non-Violence is part of the projected "Ten Point Program" which has been adopted by the MIA. The program, when put into action, will serve to raise the social, economic, and political level of the Negroes of Montgomery. Central to the program is the building of a community center which will serve as focal point for the MIA program. The MIA is depending on this annual institute to provide the community leadership which will be needed for the success of the program.

Noted Speakers Chosen For Montgomery Meeting

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. p. 20
Sat. 12-7-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala —In a recent announcement Rev. M. L. King, Jr., president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, named the persons who will be contributors to the Second Annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change sponsored by the association, December 5-8. Theme for the institute this year will be: "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility."

Among those contributing to the institute are: Dr. C. G. Gomililo Tuskegee Civic Association; Dr. Archibald Carey, attorney and pastor of Quinn Chapel AME Church, Chicago; Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor Mount Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church and member of the City Council of Philadelphia, Pa., Attorney Harris Wofford of Washington, D. C., Honorable Paul Simon, Illinois Legislature: and Reverend Glenn Smiley, field secretary for the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Nyack, N. Y., who will serve as consultant to the institute.

• • •

REVEREND KING and Dr. Gomillion will be principal speakers at the opening mass meeting on Thursday night, December 5. Seminars, scheduled for morning and evening Friday and Saturday, Dec. 6 and 7, will be conducted by the Honorable Paul Simon of the Illinois Legislature and Attorney Wofford. Mr. Simon will conduct a seminar which will approach the theme from the vantage point of politics, and Dr. Wofford's seminar will deal with the problem from the vanatge point of non-violence.

The Annual Youth Night, Friday, Dec. 6, will feature an oratorical contest in which local high school seniors will vie for scholarship awards. Rev. Marshall Shepard pastor of the Mount Olivet Tabernacle Baptist Church, will deliver the institute sermon at a mass meeting on Friday night, December 6. Seminar sessions will end Saturday afternoon with a panel discussion. Rev. King will be moderator of the panel which will include Attorney Wofford, representative Simon, Rev. S. S. Seay of Montgomery.

* * *

THE ANNUAL Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change will come to a close on Sunday afternoon, December 8. Dr. Carey will be the speaker at his huge meeting which will climax the activities of the institute.

Institute On Non-Violence, Social Change, Dec. 5-8

Dispatch p. 1
Oklahoma City, Okla.
Sat. 12-7-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—In a recent announcement Rev. M. L. King jr., president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, named the persons who will be contributors to the Second Annual Institute on Non-Violence and Social Change sponsored by the Association, Dec. 5-8. Theme for the Institute this year will be, "Freedom Through Civic Responsibility."

Among those contributing to the institute are: Dr. C. G. Gomillio, Tuskegee Civic Association; Dr. Archibald Carey, attorney and pastor of Quinn Chapel A. M. E. church, Chicago; Rev. Marshall Shepard, pastor, Mt. Olivet Tabernacle Baptist church and member of the City Council of Philadelphia, Pa.; Attorney Harris Worford of Washington, D. C.; Hon. Paul Simon, Illinois legislature; and Rev. Glenn Smiley, field secretary for the Fellowship of Reconcilliation, Nyack, N. Y., who will serve as consultant to the institute.

Rev. M. L. King jr. and Dr. C. G. Gomillion will be principal speakers at the opening mass meeting on Thursday night, Dec. 5. Seminars, scheduled for morning and evening Friday and Saturday, Dec. 6 and 7.

Psychiatrists Blame Social Ills On Segregation System

Daily world Sun. 5-26-57 P. 1

Atlanta, Ga.

BY SAMUEL P. PERRY, JR.

NEW YORK — (ANP) — A group of 250 New York psychiatrists and social scientists this week contended emphatically that school segregation had caused psychological damage, not only to the individuals affected, but to the entire community as well.

The group made the statement in a special report, "Psychiatric Aspects of School Desegregation."

Dana F. Farnsworth, president of the organization, asserted that the report was drafted by psychiatrists and social scientists working in an interracial committee and representing every region of the country.

SOCIAL PROBLEM

The group expressed the opinion that desegregation was not merely a legal problem "but a social, and above all, a spychological problem."

The report stated that "where over segregation occurs, there are damaging effects to the personality growth and development of the person discriminated against." But it is noted by the psychiatric group, "segregation practices also damage psychologically those who condone or foster them."

It was maintained that the insistence on separate schools for Negroes was both an expression of their low cultural status and a factor in their depressing their economic and educational level as compared with whites.

The group claimed that segregated conditions contributed to high disease and death rates, some type of crime and delinquency, poor housing, substandard living, and disorganized family life.

AFFECTS COMMUNITY

"These social ills," it was averred, do not remain confined to segregated populations, but inevitably lower the level of well-being for the entire community. The maintenance of duplicate sets of 'equal but separate' health, welfare, and educational services means that the budget for each group must be lowered at the expense of the other.

Where desegregation has taken place, fewer conflicts have developed. Where school boards, teachers and parent-teacher organizations have joined with political leaders to anicipate the problems of integration."

In conclusion the report noted that problems arising out of desegregation required for their solution not only an understanding of the social situations in which those problems occurred, but an insight into the complex emotional feelings, both hidden and obvious, that influenced attitudes oward those problems.

They Helped Struggle F

Chicago-Defender

CHICAGO— The national Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry declared Friday that racial segregation injures the practitioner, the individual segregated, the community and the nation as a whole. The declaration represents the pooled observations and findings of 235 psychiatrists and social scientists in all sections of the nation after a 2-year study which followed the U.S. Supreme Court ruling on public school segregation.

Sun. 5-26-57 P. 1

38a 1957

NATIONAL GOVERNORS CONFERENCE

FBI Safeguards Urged In Governors' Concern For National Security

Federal-State Study Is Also Called For In Windup Of Conference

MORRIS CUNNINGHAM

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June [illegible] — The nation's governors [illegible] on all branches of the Gov[illegible] Wednesday to protect [illegible] of the Federal [illegible] of Investigation.

[illegible] adopted at the [illegible] of the National [illegible] Conference expressed [illegible] concern that the ef[illegible] of the FBI will be [illegible] and preserved."

Toned Down

[illegible] to "the attention of [illegible] branches of Govern[illegible] the resolution uttered "a [illegible] possible avenues [illegible] protect the [illegible] while af[illegible] all possible [illegible] consistent [illegible] security."

The governors toned down a [illegible] resolution offered by [illegible] Frank G. Clement of Ten[illegible] an ex-FBI agent, which [illegible] was aimed specifically [illegible] recent Supreme Court de[illegible] barring FBI files to de[illegible] in Federal criminal [illegible] The approved version [illegible] mention of the court.

The Plan Accepted

[illegible] other actions, the gov[illegible]

[illegible] Accepted President Eisen[illegible]'s proposal for a joint com[illegible] to study Federal-state re[illegible]

[illegible] Elected Republican Gov. [illegible] G. Stratton of Illinois to [illegible] Democratic Gov. [illegible] B. Stanley of Virginia [illegible] chairman. The [illegible] is alternated be[illegible] Democrats and Republi[illegible]

[illegible] a new nine-man ex[illegible] committee that includes [illegible] Faubus of Arkansas, Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina and Gov. George Bell Timmerman of South Carolina.

4. Urged Federal action to curb rising interest rates which are causing state and local bonds to be sold "at higher and higher rates, thus increasing amortization costs."

Guard Funds Asked

5. Called on Congress to appropriate funds to meet the minimum National Guard training and armory requirements, to boost military pay schedules, and to bolster civil defense.

6. Authorized a special study of air pollution problems.

7. Proposed state legislation requiring that safety design features be included as standard equipment on automobiles.

8. Were griefed, in a closed session, by Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission on the AEC's development of a 95 per cent "clean" hydrogen bomb.

At a later session with newsmen, Mr. Strauss said the new bomb produces only a "negligible" amount" of deadly radioactive fallout, emits a bigger blast, and "is a much better weapon in all respects."

Sees Further Advances

He said it already has been tested and indicated it now is in production. He also held out hope that further research will result in H-bombs with no fallout.

Evaluating the new bomb, he said it is important "from the humanitarian standpoint" because it will diminish the wartime danger to civilians and greatly restrict the area of damage.

He also noted it can be "used in defense of our own cities" with less danger of radioactive fallout and finally, as a tactical weapon, he said it can be used to attack fortified positions and to establish beachheads "without rendering the objective useless" by radioactive contamination.

Cannot Be Shared

He said the new technique cannot be shared with other nations without giving away valuable military secrets.

On the controversial issue of halting H-bomb tests, he indicated a personal belief that tests must continue for the further development of the new weapon as well as other nuclear devices. However, he said, stopping tests would be a "small price" to pay for an international ban on nuclear weapons, which the United States has been seeking since 1946.

The governors voted to hold their 1958 meeting in Florida, probably in Miami.

Accepting President Eisenhower's proposal for a "states' rights" study committee, the governors directed Governor Statton, the new chairman, to appoint a special committee "to work with appropriate Federal officials appointed by the President."

Suggested By President

The objective would be "to develop ways and means of attaining a sound relationship of functions and finances between the Federal Government and the states and to formulate definite proposals to these ends."

President Eisenhower suggested the study group in a speech to the governors Monday night. He reaffirmed his belief in states' rights but said inadequate action by states sometimes creates vacuums into which the Federal Government must move.

The President suggested the study committee pick out functions the states are ready to assume and finance, recommend Federal-state revenue adjustments, and designate future functions of the two levels of government.

Lower Oil Import Urged

Authorizing the committee, the Governors Conference pointed out it has been concerned with the problem of Federal encroachment on states' rights many years.

In a non-conference action, 32 governors wired President Eisenhower urging him to reduce oil imports from the present ratio of 22 per cent of America's national production to 16.6 per cent.

The telegram said "excessive imports" are "seriously damaging" the domestic oil industry as well as state conservation and taxation programs. Among those signing it were Governors Clement, Faubus and J. P. Coleman of Mississippi.

Governors Map Reply to Ike

By Robert C. Albright
Staff Reporter

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June 25—The Governors' Conference today began work on a resolution accepting President Eisenhower's challenge to collaborate in a study of how to roll back "Frankenstein-like" Federal powers.

Adoption of such a resolution on Wednesday is taken for granted here, but many of the Governors expressed doubt that the proposed rollback of Federal functions would get very far beyond the study and recommendation stage.

At least two proposals to implement the President's plan were laid before the Resolutions Committee this afternoon. Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, sponsor of one of them, said quite frankly, however, that state Legislatures would be reluctant to assume some of the tax obligations implied in the power shift.

'Coup" Is Suggested

Some of the Governors suggested that Mr. Eisenhower, in the novel proposal he laid before the Governors last night, may have scored a strategic coup. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky put it this way: "What he did was give a practical answer to the fellows who are always hollering about state rights."

The never-bashful Chandler, meanwhile, became the first Governor to toss his hat into the Presidential ring for 1960.

"If I feel as good then as I do now, I'll go into two or three presidential primaries in 1960, and see what happens," Chandler told a press conference.

Question Misunderstood

For a brief moment it appeared that Pennsylvania's young Governor, George M. Leader, also was announcing "a go for the roses" in 1960, but it turned out Leader had misunderstood a reporter's tion.

Leader was asked "What qualifications" a Democratic candidate ought to have in 1960.

"Any honest Governor would say a twin of himself," he replied with a smile.

But Leader retracted, with red faced embarrassment, when newsmen construed this as a 1960 announcement. He said he thought he had been asked about the qualifications for a Democratic Gubernatorial candidate in Pennsylvania in 1958.

Leader said he thought "someone like Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D-Pa.) would make an excellent candidate for Governor in 1958. Leader cannot run to succeed himself as Governor. In order to remain in politics, he said, he would have to run for the Senate. The seat of Sen. Edward Martin (R-Pa.) will be up next year. Martin has said he wil lretire then.

Parries Questions

The only other Democrat to hold a press conference today, 65-year-old Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, successfully parried every 1960 question.

"I'm going to run for Governor in 1958," said Harriman. "That's my only poiltical ambition."

The Governors will wind up their business sessions Wednesday by adopting a series of resolutions. Not the least of these is expected to provide for the formal acceptance of President Eisenhower's challenge on rolling back Federal powers.

The resolution proposed by McKeldin called for appointment of a committee of Governors "to study tax sources which the Federal Government could abandon and which could be adopted by the states."

"Said committee would coordinate its study of tax sources to be surrendered by the Federal Government and adopted by the states," the Maryland Governor's proposal said.

The Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference would be empowered to receive and act upon the report of the Study Committee and "to make the necessary contacts and negotiations with the Administration and the Congress" to put the plan in effect

A second resolution, by Gov. Harold W. Handley (R) of Indiana was presented to the Governors in advance of the President's speech. Handley indicated he would revise it to tie into the President's proposal.

Hits at 'Giveaways'

Handley's resolution hit at "Federal grants and giveaways, and said Federal "dominion" is being expanded to such fields as education and public health. It said Federal tax reductions could be effected immediately "by withdrawal of the Federal Government from practices and functions which can be administered more efficiently by the several sovereign states and local communities."

Robert D. Holmes, Oregon's newly elected Democratic Governor, accused the President of "fanning unrest" and shoving the clock backward" with his states' rights proposal.

Some other Democrats, like Arizona's Ernest W. McFarland, said the proposal was all right, but that nothing much but a "study" would come of it, tax problems being what they are.

Gov. G. Mennen (Soapy) Williams (D), of Michigan, said Mr. Eisenhower would have been "more convincing had he not collaborated in rejecting all efforts to let the states handle their own highway construction problems."

Services Seen Expanding

Governor Harriman said the plan would add one more to the "plethora of study groups." He said he did not believe Mr. Eisenhower wished to "turn back the clock," however. He said the President has been "expanding, not retracting" Federal services.

Governor Leader called on the Governors to go on record in favor of state "right-to-know" legislation of the type recently enacted in Connecticut and Pennsylvania. With but few exceptions, the legislation would provide for "open records" and "open meetings" in the case of both state and local agencies.

The Governors on Wednesday will vote on resolutions, elect a new chairman, then adjourn.

GOVERNORS GET DOWN TO BUSINESS
Left to Right: Seated, Govs. George M. Leader of Pennsylvania, Luther Hodges of North Carolina; standing, Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas and Orville L. Freeman of Minnesota. (AP Wirephoto.)

Resolution Planned

News & Courier

Governors Move To Support Ike

Wed. 6-26-57 P. 7

Charleston S. C. 38

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June 25 (AP)—The 59th annual governors' conference moved quickly today to meet President Eisenhower's request for a survey of the possibility of transferring some federal government functions back to the states.

North Carolina's Democratic Gov. Luther H. Hodges announced after a closed meeting the conference resolutions committee was drafting a resolution he said would deal with Eisenhower's proposal to establish a federal-state task force to study the question.

Although Hodges would not predict the final form of the resolution, it was expected to call for creation of a governors committee to meet with a group designated by Eisenhower.

Despite widespread skepticism that any concrete results can be obtained, the conference is expected to adopt the resolution tomorrow.

TO DRAFT OWN

Hodges said the resolutions group had decided not to accept any of seven of eight proposals laid before it by individual governors but would draft its own resolution.

One of these proposals was submitted by GOP Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland, who a few hours earlier had said he was "convinced nothing can be done about it."

McKeldin was joined by Democratic Gov. Averell Harriman of New York in predicting the conference will approve such a resolution.

But Harriman made it clear at a news conference he doubts any material results will flow from a study of the complicated field of federal and state powers and taxation.

COULD CUT TAXES

Eisenhower said in an address at the governors' annual state dinner last night federal taxes could be reduced more than state taxes are raised by transferring some functions back to the states.

Harriman asked sarcastically if Eisenhower proposed to have the states take over farm price supports, social security and national defense.

"Does he want a system of state decentralizing government functions, the Eisenhower administration was moving in the direction of expanding Washington's operations. He cited as examples Eisenhower's proposals for federal aid to education, an interstate highway program, urban renewal and disaster relief.

WELCOME SUGGESTIONS

"We have had a plethora of study programs," Harriman said. "The governors will welcome suggestions for any areas where programs logically can be taken back to the states. But there must be action, not just words."

McKeldin's resolution would call on the chairman of the conference, Democratic Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia, to name a committee of governors representing all sections of the country to "study tax sources which the federal government could abandon and which could be adopted by the states."

The President And States' Rights

Speaking before the national Governors' Conference held in Virginia this week, President Eisenhower called upon the various state governors to consider a plan to strengthen the position of the states.

The President is willing for the states to have a greater share of the tax dollars than they are now getting. He also pointed out the need for the states to assume more governmental responsibility and services to be rendered to the citizens.

He is seeking to check the drift toward more centralization of government in Washington. This drift has been in effect a long time, and it has accelerated during the past 25 years.

The President's position is sound, and we are in agreement with this advice and challenge to the governors. We believe the people who are best governed are those who are least governed. Also the closer government is to the people, the better and more economical it is to all concerned.

Moreover, we realize the President thoroughly believes that all Americans should have equal civil rights under the law in all the various states. His record confirms this position, and at the time he made his speech, his party leaders in the Senate were making an effort to start toward enactment of the Civil Rights Bill to further equalize and protect the American citizens of color.

Where the civil rights of citizens are concerned, the rights of the various states must be in conformity with the rights of citizens as prescribed by the federal law or those now provided in the federal constitution.

After this civil rights question is settled right, we believe more and more citizens can join in the move toward decentralization. It is sound, and the states should accept this principle of equal rights for all citizens in line with the federal law. It is obvious that civil rights cannot be left to the various states. If they were, you would have the situation where citizens in one state would have certain civil rights denied citizens in other states.

So, we agree that states' rights should be strengthened in every field, but certain minimum civil rights must be left solely in the hands of federal jurisdiction.

We would like to see the southern states get out of the position of being opposed to certain basic civil rights such as are embodied in the President's pending bill. Then we all could have more time to give such basic questions as defense, increased industry, more economy and efficiency in government. These are some of the important things crying for attention.

NATIONAL GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE

The President And States' Rights

Speaking before the national Governors' Conference held in Virginia this week, President Eisenhower called upon the various state governors to consider a plan to strengthen the position of the states.

The President is willing for the states to have a greater share of the tax dollars than they are now getting. He also pointed out the need for the states to assume more governmental responsibility and services to be rendered to the citizens.

He is seeking to check the drift toward more centralization of government in Washington. This drift has been in effect a long time, and it has accelerated during the past 25 years.

The President's position is sound, and we are in agreement with this advice and challenge to the governors. We believe the people who are best governed are those who are least governed. Also the closer government is to the people, the better and more economical it is to all concerned.

Moreover, we realize the President thoroughly believes that all Americans should have equal civil rights under the law in all the various states. His record confirms this position, and at the time he made his speech, his party leaders in the Senate were making an effort to start toward enactment of the Civil Rights Bill to further equalize and protect the American citizens of color.

Where the civil rights of citizens are concerned, the rights of the various states must be in conformity with the rights of citizens as prescribed by the federal law or those now provided in the federal constitution.

After this civil rights question is settled right, we believe more and more citizens can join in the move toward decentralization. It is sound, and the states should accept this principle of equal rights for all citizens in line with the federal law. It is obvious that civil rights cannot be left to the various states. If they were, you would have the situation where citizens in one state would have certain civil rights denied citizens in other states.

So, we agree that states' rights should be strengthened in every field, but certain minimum civil rights must be left solely in the hands of federal jurisdiction.

We would like to see the southern states get out of the position of being opposed to certain basic civil rights such as are embodied in the President's pending bill. Then we all could have more time to give such basic questions as defense, increased industry, more economy and efficiency in government. These are some of the important things crying for attention.

Stanley Prods Governors on States' Rights

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June 24 (AP)—Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia asked the Nation's governors today to take a new stand in defense of states' rights against further "encroachments" by the Federal Government.

Stanley told the governors he hopes they will insist anew "upon the protection of the rights reserved to states or to the people under the Constitution."

In an address at the opening of the 49th annual Governors' Conference, Stanley expressed hope the governors would adopt a resolution reaffirming the position they took at last year's conference—a recommendation to Congress that Federal laws should be "so framed that they will not be construed to preempt any field against state action unless this intent is stated . . ."

The Old Dominion's Democratic chief executive touched briefly on several topics slated for discussion during the conference and said that "if the states and their localities are slow to act" in solving the problem of school classroom space, "their lethargy can give impetus to the forces pressing for Federal aid in school construction."

Virginia, he said, "regards these proposals as totally unwarranted and another means of undermining the state and local governments. The Federal Government has authority, and no responsibility, in the field of public education. And I earnestly hope that neither the Congress nor the states will succumb to the old lure of so-called 'free money,' which is nothing but a snare and a delusion."

Stanley said he is "keenly interested in learning more about the possibilities of expanding the use of our existing elementary and secondary school plants. With enrollment spiraling upward, the localities in Virginia, and other states where they should be responsible for these capital outlays are confronted with a heavy demand for additional classrooms, and these expenditures will be imperative unless some means is devised to accomodate a larger number of pupils in existing buildings."

Stronger Governors

THE NEXT PRESIDENT will, by the laws of probability, be either a governor or a former governor. Of the 33 presidents, 13 had served previously as governors. The percentage has increased. Since 1900 there have been 10 presidents, of whom one half were former governors. In addition to these governors, three Democrats and three Republicans, ran unsuccessfully for president.

A governor seems a natural choice for the higher office. Both the governorship and the presidency involve supervision over a number of departments. In both offices there are the problems of dealing with a legislative body. The theory works out in practice. While some of our greatest presidents never were governors, none of the less successful chief executives had such experince.

STATE SEN. THOMAS C. DESMOND of New York, with many legislative years behind him, discussed the governorship in the New York Times Magazine. He thinks that the governors have too little power. Too many state offices, which should be under them, are filled by popular vote. If anything goes wrong with them, people complain to the governor. But what can he do?

Southern Governors Listen To Eisenhower's Address, But Can't Get Enthusiastic

Commercial Appeal Sun. 6-30-57 Memphis, Tenn. P.3

How Can His Views On States' Rights Be Reconciled With Civil Rights Bill? Aid To Education Discussed

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Some of the Governors at the National Governors Conference at Williamsburg, Va., this week were a little surprised at President Eisenhower's "states' rights speech" in the face of his legislative program in Congress.

Dixie Governors who long have equated states' rights with segregation were particularly surprised that the President could come before them and reaffirm his belief in states' rights at a time when he is vigorously pushing his civil rights bill.

Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas wanted to know how the President reconciled his states' rights views with his civil rights program. And Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi observed that unfortunately the President's stated views do not always conform with his actions.

Mr. Cunningham

However, after saying, "I believe deeply in states' rights," President Eisenhower went on to add some explanations.

He expressed the view that the Federal Government sometimes is "impelled by popular pressures and transient political expediencies" to move into the area of government normally reserved to the states.

Civil Rights Not Mentioned

The President stopped short of giving any examples of these "popular pressures" or "transient political expediencies." He did not even mention his civil rights bill.

As an example of what he was talking about, he cited his bill to provide Federal aid for school construction.

"Opposed though I am to needless Federal expansion," he said, "since 1953 I have found it necessary to urge Federal action in some areas traditionally reserved to the states."

"Classroom shortages," he continued, "have become potentially so dangerous to the entire nation and have yielded so slowly to local effort as to compel emergency action.

"Thus was forced a Federal plan of temporary assistance adjusted to the specific needs of states and communities and designed not to supplant but to supplement their own efforts."

This statement got no cheers from the Governors, since most of them only a few hours earlier had indicated at a panel discussion on educational problems—either by statements or by their silence—that they are not in accord with the President's school construction program.

School Aid Attacked

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia, chairman of the Governors Conference, had blasted it roundly in his opening statement and several others also went out of their way to speak against it.

Gov. William G. Stratton of Illinois, a Republican and Governor Stanley's successor as chairman, pointedly noted that his state would get back about one dollar for every three dollars it put in.

The President indicated, during the course of his remarks on states' rights, a realization that his speech was not going over too well. The Governors and their guests sat quietly listening, observing the decorum normally reserved for church or funerals.

They applauded only at the beginning and at the ending, except for scattered response to a semi-humorous remark in which the President stated his willingness to "lobby" for his ideas.

After discussing his reasons for his school construction bill, the President went on to warn:

"By inadequate action, or by failure to act, the states can create new vacuums into which the Federal Government will plunge . . ."

Follow Suit, Or Else . . . ?

This prompted Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia to comment later that the President seems to view himself as an arbiter of the adquacy of state actions.

If the states conduct their affairs in accordance with the President's views, the Georgian suggested, they can avoid any threat of encroachment by the Federal Government.

If they do not, then they are apt to see the Federal Government start trying to move in on their governmental territory.

The President suggested that a joint committee be established to study Federal-state relationships, a standard method of disposing of touchy questions at all levels of government.

Gov. Frank G. Clement of Tennessee promptly predicted this suggestion would be approved. "We'll be wililng to study most anything," he said.

The idea subsequently was approved. The Governors agreed to appoint their half of a joint committee, with the President appointing the other half.

It was significant, however, that in their resolution authorizing the study the Governors noted that they have discussed the problem "over many years" and have "indicated on many occasions the need for clarification."

While this sounded a somewhat pessimistic note, there is no doubt that the Governors sincerely hope that it produces some results and that states will not ultimately be reduced to meaningless satellites of the Federal Government.

President Eisenhower has the power to make a substantial contribution to a reversal of the present trend.

SUPREME COURT RAPPED

Times-Union P.1

Governors Support States' Rights Study

Thurs. 6-27-57 380

Jacksonville Fla.

(Copyright, New York Times News Service)

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., June 26—The conference of governors today endorsed President Eisenhower's plan for a joint federal-state task force to reappraise the functions and revenue sources of the two levels of government.

At the same time, the governors delivered an implied rebuke to the U.S. Supreme Court for a recent decision opening Federal Bureau of Investigation files to defendants in certain cases. A resolution asked that all possible action be taken to maintain the FBI's effectiveness.

Another resolution adopted at the closing business session of the 49th annual governors conference here criticized the Eisenhower administration's tight-money policy. The governors complained that it was causing higher interest rates on borrowings by state and local governments.

Forty-five states and four territories were represented at the conference, which has been in session since Sunday. Twenty-nine of the 48 states have Democratic and 19 have Republican governors.

Governors of 31 states and the Territory of Alaska, meeting apart from the conference, endorsed a telegram, which was then sent to President Eisenhower, asking for a federal limitation on foreign oil imports. It urged that imports be restricted to the ratio they bore to domestic production in 1954. At a panel discussion on natural resources this morning, governors from oil-producing states complained that heavy foreign imports since the Suez Canal was reopened are discouraging exploration for new domestic sources and threatening possible future national defense needs.

None of the governors of New England or Middle Atlantic states was listed as a signer of the telegram. Six Southern governors and several from Western states where public power is a political issue were among the signers.

Gov. William G. Stratton, Republican of Illinois, was elected chairman of the conference today, replacing Gov. Thomas B. Stanley, Democrat of Virginia.

SOCIAL PLANNERS URGED TO 'FIGHT'

New York Times 3-19-57

Sarah Lawrence President Tells Coast Meeting to Back Equality for All

By LAWRENCE E. DAVIES

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—The social planner was challenged today to "come on out and fight" instead of leaving American community decisions to the political primitives and the hatchet men of the intellect."

Dr. Harold Taylor, president of Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y., called on an audience of planners to use activity and boldness in facing cities. He was the keynote speaker at a National Planning Conference that runs through Friday. It is sponsored by the American Society of Planning Officials.

"If a suggestion is made to do something—anything," Dr. Taylor asserted, "a thousand little men run out from everywhere with reasons why it shouldn't or can't be done. * * * Such an amount of time is spent peeking and peering before and behind and around nad inside for possible errors and things for which you might be blamed that very little fresh and new gets started."

Challenge in Communities

The educator said that nearly every community in the country offered a challenge based on the question, do we really mean to support the idea of democratic equality for the Negro and for all our minorities?

He told the conference, attended by nearly 1,500 city planners and other officials, that American culture was not based on a tradition of conservatism, or "middle of the roadism or moderation." Rather, he said, it was "individualism, liberalism, libertarian democracy, and it was progressive."

"If we are true to our tradition," he said, "we will say simply that the Negro will be given fullest privileges of housing, employment, community life, education and social equality in every community that exists and in the new ones which are coming into being.

"When the conflicts come, and the real estate values are pitted against human values, we will find before long that intelligent and wise planning can win for human values, and that when human values are sustained, in the long run, even real estate values follow dutifully along behind."

Builders Face Problems

Builders of churches in the future were envisioned at a round table discussion as facing an increasingly difficut time in finding satisfactory sites.

William K. Newman of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational and Christian Churches, New York, said one reason was an increasing tendency of real estate developers to include many pages of restrictions in their deeds.

Moreover, he said, in urban redevelopment plans, church properties sometimes were condemned to make way for large-scale projects without any provisions being made for churches to get new sites.

"Within the bounds of Stuyvesant Town and Peter Cooper Village, New York City," he related, "live 40,000 people. Yet there was no allocation in the area for a single church or synagogue."

The Rev. Joseph H. Fichter, Visiting Professor of Sociology at the University of Notre Dame, indicated planners could expect an imminent invasion of the public school by large numbers of Roman Catholic children. He estimated that two of every three Catholics of elementary school age would be enrolled in the public schools a decade hence. It was largely a matter of economics, he indicated.

Rabbi Solomon F. Kleinman of Los Angeles, Associate Director of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations for the West Coast, said there was mounting evidence that the fight for racial integration would eventually be won in the churches.

38a 1957

Negro Editor Would Help Little Rock People

Miss. Jackson, Miss.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 7 (AP) — A Negro editor from Meridian, Miss., said today he is attempting to organize "moderate Negroes in Arkansas" to combat what he called radical groups which destroy harmony between the races.

E. F. Williams, editor of the weekly Meridian Enterprise, said a meeting last night was attended by about "60 very substantial members of the Negro community of Little Rock . . . despite some opposition."

Commercial Appeal 12-8-57

Williams said he wanted to organize the moderate group "not because we are opposed to rights for Negroes—far from it— but because we are opposed to militant groups of both races whose actions break down harmony between our races."

He said "Our people need an organization to combat radical groups, eliminate trouble and guide us in the problems we face instead of just agitating us."

He said he plans to schedule another meeting next week with the hope of electing officers and choosing committees.

"We are not fighting anybody," he said. "We want to promote good will and harmony among all people and we want to get accurate information to our people. We want to do a constructive job."

The editor said he had been in Little Rock for two or three weeks "just talking to people of my race, and I find that a lot of them feel that some are trying to rush things too much."

Williams said he was on a leave of absence from his newspaper to attempt the organization. He said the Meridian newspaper was owned by Negro publisher W. J. Miller of Jackson who also owns Negro publications at Vicksburg, Jackson and Greenwood in Mississippi with a combined circulation of about 60,000.

Memphis Press-Scimitar 12-13-57

istence for two months.

Rev. Gibson said the Greater Little Rock Improvement League was organized to satisfy a need for Negroes here "devoid of outside influences." He did not elaborate on the aims of the group.

Rev. Gibson made his statement in connection with a visit here by E. F. Williams, a Negro editor from Meridian, Miss.

Williams said he was attempting to organize "moderate Negroes" in Arkansas to contest what he called radical groups which forment misunderstanding between races.

Memphis Press-Scimitar 12-13-57

EDITOR TO ORGANIZE 'MODERATE' NEGROES

Combatting Radical Groups Is Mississippian's Aim

LITTLE ROCK, Dec. 6. (AP)—A negro editor from Meridian Miss., said Friday he is attempting to organize "moderate Negroes in Arkansas" to combat what he called radical groups which demoralize harmony between the races.

E. F. Williams, editor of the weekly Meridian Enterprise, said a meeting Thursday night was attended by about "60 very substantial members of the Negro community of Little Rock . . . despite some opposition."

Williams said he wanted to organize the moderate group "not because we are opposed to rights for Negroes—far from it—but because we are opposed to militant groups of both races whose actions break down harmony between our races."

He said, "Our people need an organization to combat radical groups, eliminate trouble and guide us in the problems we face instead of just agitating us."

He said he plans to schedule another meeting next week with the hope of electing officers and choosing committees.

"We are not fighting anybody," he said. "We want to promote good will and harmony among all people and we want to get accurate information to our people. We want to do a constructive job."

The editor said he had been in Little Rock for two or three weeks "just talking to people of my race, and I find that a lot of them feel that some are trying to rush things too much."

Williams said he was on a leave of absence from his newspaper to attempt the organization. He said the Meridian newspaper was owned by Negro publisher W. J. Miller of Jackson who also owns Negro publications at Vicksburg, Jackson and Greenwood in Mississippi with a combined circulation of about 60,000.

NEGRO ASSOCIATION* MODERATE NEGROES

REV.O.W.GIBSON,PRESIDENT
LITTLE ROCK, ARK.
Mr. E.F. WILLIAMS,EDITOR
MERIDAN ENTERPRISE (WKLY)
Newspaper owned by Negro Publisher, Mr. W.J.Miller,Jackson,Miss., who owns publications at Vicksburg,Jackson and Greenwood,Miss.

MINISTER HEADS GROUP

Negro Association Attempts To Attract 'Moderates'

LITTLE ROCK, Dec. 7.—(AP) — Rev. O. W. Gibson said Saturday he is president of a "moderate" Little Rock Negro organization which has been in ex-

NEGRO GROUP CIRCULATING PETITION FOR SEGREGATION

West Memphis Roundup—

Negro Group Circulating Petition For Segregation

Commercial Appeal 7.8 Jun 6 - 1957 Memphis Tenn

By CLOVIS T. CRAFT

Petitions asking that segregation of the races be maintained in the South are being circulated in West Memphis by a Negro organization.

M. D. Hemphill, president of the Mid-South Public Relations Bureau, said more than 7,100 Negro volunteers are spreading the petitions in West Memphis and over the Mid-South in an effort to keep segregation in schools and churches.

Separate But Equal

"I was born in Arkansas and reared in the South. And I have interviewed thousands of Negroes in all walks of life. I have found very few who favor mixed schools," Hemphill said. "They want their own schools but equal facilities.

"The Southern Negro is in a better position educationally, politically and economically than the Negroes anywhere in the world. Race relations are improving steadily.

"Despite all the talk about the liberal North and East, no Negro has been made head of a state college or university. In the South, Negro college and university presidents are plentiful.

"Negroes need to refresh their memories on the fact that just a few years ago we were complaining because Negroes in the South were being taught by white teachers.

"This move to integrate the schools in the South is loaded with more racial dynamite than appears on the surface and the Negro is the one who will be blown away.

Direct Competition Feared

"Nowhere in the integrated states do Negroes get proportionate representation. Every device is used to keep qualified Negroes from being assigned. This is not true in the South. The state of Arkansas employs more than 6,000 Negro school teachers and pays them more than 13 million dollars in salaries. The state of Georgia employs more than 7,000 Negro teachers and paid them more than 15 million dollars in salaries last year. North Carolina paid Negro teachers 22 million dollars last year.

"This movement to end segregation in the schools is merely the beginning of a well-laid plan to end segregation completely. If this happens the Negro will be thrown into direct competition with the white race and our business institutions will crumble."

Applications are being taken for entries in the free swimming course for West Memphis youths beginning June 17 at the Lamar Rodgers Memorial Swimming Pool.

The course is sponsored by the West Memphis Junior Chamber of Commerce and is open to any youth at least six years old.

Instructor training will begin June 7. Anyone interested in helping with the program is asked to call Max Ferrell, chairman of the project. Instructors need not be members of the Jaycees or Jaycettes.

Plans for the annual Miss West Memphis contest scheduled Tuesday night in the Avon Theater are "coming along fine," says Lions Club president A. O. Shaw. The three-division show is a preliminary to the Miss Arkansas contest to be held later this year.

Entries in the senior, junior and little Miss West Memphis divisions will participate in the show.

Representatives of districts four and 14 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will attend the district meeting to be held at 3 this afternoon at West Memphis.

Representatives from Jonesboro, Monette, Harrisburg, Helena, Marion and West Memphis will attend the event in the VFW hut. Ralph Craig of Proctor, district four commander, will direct the meet.

Officers will be elected for 1957-58. They will be installed at the department encampment in Little Rock June 21-23.

38a 1957

Why M[illegible] Missed Out

Yankee hypocrisy comes to full flower and perfection in denying or soft-pedaling the flagrant practice of racial discrimination by themselves. The following recently reported episode from Englewood, N.J., embodies an explana-[illegible] is classic.

Two students, one a Sudanese named Mahgoub, and an American companion by the name of Gregory, entered a barber shop. Gregory had no trouble getting service, but Mahgoub (a colored [illegible]—the Sudan is in Africa) was not only refused but was ordered out of the shop.

Refused of discrimination, the barber denied that there had been racial discrimination. He said he had thought Mahgoub was merely waiting for Gregory and that since the shop was crowded, he had asked him to wait outside." If Mahgoub ever got service, it was not recorded.

Here we have another case of yankee segregation plus hypocrisy, in contrast to the Southern brand which is at least forthright and clearly defined.

Incidentally, such quotes as the above add fuel to the suspicion that the vaunted yankee sense of humor is vastly overrated, if not utterly non-existent.

Bar Debate Rebuffs Segregationist

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 1[illegible]—Four resolutions by segregationist George Washington Williams were debated by the Maryland State Bar Association yesterday in the opening session of its annual convention here.

The resolutions, aimed at preserving State's Rights and prohibiting Supreme Court justices from running for President or serving as ambassadors, were turned down by the association's resolutions committee.

Mr. Williams accused convention delegates of allowing "personalities" to influence their action on his proposals. He has been active in court fights to prevent racial integration in Maryland public schools.

The fight over his resoluti[illegible] came to an abrupt halt when adjournment was announced immediately after a motion to accept the committee's unfavorable report on them.

'Just a Drunken Brawl,' Says Chief Of N.J. Racial Clash Involving 80

By Herald Wire Services

IT TOOK four policemen in Gloucester, N.J. nearly an hour to break up a brawl involving 80 to 100 persons inside and outside of a taproom. They used nightsticks, fired pistols and threatened to use tear gas.

Six persons were stabbed, cut or bruised in the free-for-all which started when some white patrons objected to the presence of several Negro customers.

The Negroes, who work in a manufacturing plant opposite the taproom, habitually eat their lunch in the saloon. They went to the place for their evening meal and white patrons resented it.

The fight started, but the Negroes got the best of it.

The whites left, rounded up a gang and returned, touching off a battle royal. However, Police Chief Thomas Windelspecht of Gloucester said it was only a "drunken brawl."

Tavern Racial Brawl Injures 6 in Jersey

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

GLOUCESTER, N.J., July 20.—Friction between white and Negro tavern patrons early today touched off a vicious fight in which six of about 100 battlers were stabbed, cut or bruised.

Nine were arrested by club-swinging cops who had to fire their revolvers into the air and threaten tear gas to break up the battle raging inside and outside a local taproom. Police reinforcements were rushed in from nearby towns.

Police said the brawl started when some white patrons of the place objected to several Negro customers.

BIAS COMPLAINTS IN STATE RISE 50%

Commission Received 502 in First 6 Months—Minorities' Awareness of Law Cited

Fri. 7-26-57

The State Commision Against Discrimination reported yesterday that it had received 50 per cent more complaints of bias in the first six months of this year than in the same period of 1956.

Charles Abrams, the commission chairman, said that the agency had received 502 complaints through June, compared with 332 in the first six months of 1956. The complainants charged that they had been discriminated against in employment, housing or places of public accommodation because of their race, religion or national origin.

Mr. Abrams was quick to note that this rise was not the result of an increase in bigotry in the state, but of other factors, such as a greater awareness among minority groups of their rights under the law. He observed that thirty-eight complaints charged bias in housing, an area in which the commission has limited jurisdiction.

Mr. Abrams said that 502 complaints filed so far this year exceeded the number filed in the entire twelve months of any previous year in the commission's twelve-year history, with the exception of 1956. Last year, 562 complaints were filed.

The chairman said that, upon investigation by the commission, the specific discrimination complained of this year was found to exist in 14 per cent of the cases. This is considerably lower than the 27 per cent average over the last ten years.

Mr. Abrams noted, however, that discriminatory practices, other than the specific practice complained of, had been found in 23 per cent of the cases investigated this year. This brought to 37 per cent the cases where some form of bias was found. This percentage was also below the ten-year average.

Mr. Abrams cited the following principal factors in the increase in complaints:

¶A greater awareness by Negroes and other minorities of the existence of the commission and of their rights under the anti-discrimination law.

¶Greater efforts by the commission to protect minority groups, particularly in up-state areas.

The Needed Action

Mon. 10-7-57

Up in Camden, New Jersey, a municipal ...e has imposed sentences of one year in ...on five young hoodlums who were arrest... in connection with racial disorder.

Amen to that. Home P. 2

The five sentenced happened to be ...roes, but our judgment would be the same ...ey were whites.

Talladega, Ala.

The person who goes hunting for racial ...ble nowadays is a traitor to both races, himself and to his community. He de... the maximum punishment that the law ...give him.

...groes Called Underprivileged ...Jobs and Housing in Newark

New York Times

By MILTON HONIG

Special to The New York Times.

...WARK, Sept. 29—Negroes ... were depicted today ... "underprivileged" in ... of employment and ...ome the city's "ex... fine" record in es... and protecting the ...ts of all groups.

...conclusion was reached ...s three-month survey of ...nities in Newark. The ... was ordered by the ...y Commission on Group ...

...report was devoted main... to analysis of relations ...n the white and non... groups in Newark. It said ...white population in the ...had been growing "rapidly ...tentially" since 1920, ...ing 110,000 and 130,... now living in ...

...The report ...white population in ...has been declining for ...decades. The ...population was esti... in 1956 at 343,650. ...rapidly increasing Negro ...was found to create ...problems for Newark. ...Negroes have lower ...income than whites, ...said, an increase in ...proportion would diminish ...city's tax revenue while at ...time it would increase ...for those city services ...to sustain a low... population.

...the market for goods produced or merchandized in Newark does not stop at city limits, a decrease in the average income of the city's population "will inevitably reduce the prosperity of its industry and commerce," the report said.

Job opportunities for Negroes have increased "strikingly" in recent years as a result of greater training of the Negro labor force, protracted demand for workers in virtually all fields of economic life and concerted efforts on the part of various groups to open new lines of employment, according to the report.

"But despite these advances, much is left to be desired," it said. "Although a few industries are still closed to Negroes and others will engage nonwhites only in menial or low-grade positions, an even more serious problem may be the paucity of Negroes equipped with the skills and training for many jobs which are available on an open basis and for which they are sometimes actively sought."

The report declared that although public housing had "actively promoted integration," progress had been slower in private accommodations where resistance among the white population to Negro expansion had been "reinforced by the higher prices Negroes are generally compelled to pay for property and the greater difficulty they encounter in getting mortgage money."

The researchers found that there "still remains a striking concentration of Negroes" in certain areas of the city. This concentration of residences, it was asserted, affects the racial composition of schools, community centers and other activities organized on a neighboring basis

The research team was headed by Dr. Chester Rapkin of the University of Pennsylvania's Institute of Urban Studies.

Organize To Help Victims Of Prejudice

Defender p.3
Chicago Ill.
Sat. 3-30-57

NEW YORK — Thirty young women of this city have organized the United Relief Fund, to provide funds for Negroes who suffer economic reprisals because of civil rights conflicts.

Persons who have been asked to serve on the organization's board of directors include:

Mrs. Elizabeth Waring, wife of Judge Watis Waring; Mrs. Alroy Rivers, wife of Judge Francis Rivers; Dr. Mamie Clark, Mrs. Granger, columnist and radio commentator; Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, New York State assemblywoman; Mrs. Ruth Whitehead Whaley, secretary, Board of Estimate, New York City, and Mrs. C. B. Powell.

The parent organization has plans for soliciting aid on a nationwide scale and forming other groups in different sections of the country.

ABRAMS STRESSES SEGREGATION PERIL

New York Times 3-3-57

The state's housing program will head inevitably toward "ghettoization" if the problems of segregation and quotas are not solved, Charles Abrams, chairman of the State Commission Against Discrimination, said yesterday.

Mr. Abrams indicated that a public housing agency could not prevent racial segregation if it rented apartments solely on the basis of need and, if at the same time, "the need happens to be all Negro." He suggested that the housing agency through such procedures became "the real culprit in the creation of school segregation in the district."

The commission chairman was the chief speaker at the annual spring conference luncheon of the New York Teachers Guild, held in the Biltmore Hotel. Charles Cogen, president of the guild, was chairman.

Mr. Abrams said that school segregation would follow and that "a number of cities may even end their public housing programs for fear of political consequence."

Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, received the guild's annual John Dewey Award in absentia. Mr. Marshall was in Washington on business for the association.

BIAS BILL ACCORD ENDED IN ALBANY

New York Times 3-29

Democrats Fear G.O.P. Plan on Rights Would Weaken Abrams Commission

By DOUGLAS DALES

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 28—The bipartisan deal to give the State Commission Against Discrimination power to issue industry-wide orders exploded today.

Behind the scuttling of the agreement was the refusal of the Democrats to intercede with Governor Harriman and obtain a commitment that he would veto the Republican bill creating a Civil Rights Bureau in the Attorney General's office.

It is confirming that the agreement was off, Joseph Zaretzki, Senate minority leader, declared "the price demanded by the Republicans was too high."

More than this, however, is the fear among the Democrats and the members of the State Commission Against Discrimination that the proposed Civil Rights Bureau would eventually supersede the functions of the commission.

Mr. Zaretzki had played a leading role in attempting to salvage something from the Administration bill that would have given the commission power to initiate proceedings. It now can act only when it receives a complaint from an aggrieved person.

Agrees to Amendment

The minority leader agreed to amend the bill to delete the provision empowering the commission to initiate proceedings as a means of prying the bill out of committee. The Republicans agreed in exchange to retain the provision for industry-wide orders.

Such orders would make it possible for the commission to direct an entire industry to abandon a discriminatory practice found to exist in any part of the industry.

Mr. Zaretzki said this provision had the support of industry because it was thought that if a practice was banned in one company, this company would be at a disadvantage if competitors were not made to conform.

Charles Abrams, chairman of the commission, said his agency could now only seek voluntary agreements in an industry and that violations of an agreement were unenforceable.

The conclusion from today's developments was that the chances were remote that the bill creating the Civil Rights Bureau could weather a veto.

Bill Passed Both Houses

The measure, which has passed both houses, carries an appropriation of $100,000. By the terms of the bill, the bureau would perform the functions of the Attorney General in the enforcement of laws against discrimination by reason of race, creed, color or national origin.

Its effects would be to divide enforcement between the commission, headed by Mr. Abrams, a Liberal, and the Attorney General, Louis J. Lefkowitz, a Republican.

The commission was created in 1946 to end discriminatory practices in employment. Its powers since have been broadened to include discrimination in publicly aided housing and in places of public accommodation, such as theatres, restaurants and hotels.

The Citizens Union urged enactment of the amended Zaretzki bill today, asserting it would be "a most important extension of the usefulness of the commission."

Mr. Lefkowitz has called a meeting for tomorrow morning at his New York City office to enlist support for the bill setting up the Civil Rights Bureau. Representatives of twenty-four civic groups have been invited. Mr. Abrams said he had rejected an invitation to attend.

DEMOCRATS YIELD ON ANTI-BIAS BILL

Times P.25-C

Accord Reached on Expanding Powers of State Board —Other Measures Gain

Thurs. 3-28-57

By DOUGLAS DALES

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 27—The Harriman Administration has reached an agreement with the Republican majority of the Legislature on a compromise bill expanding the powers of the State Commission against discrimination.

The Democrats have given ground on their demand that the commission be empowered to initiate proceedings against employes on questions of discrimination.

The agreement came to light today as a bill by Senator Joseph Zaretzki, the minority leader, appeared on the Senate calendar in an amended form.

The amended version deleted the provision that would have allowed the commission to start proceedings on its own initiative. It included, however, a provision that permits the commission to issue industry-wide orders.

This was explained to mean that when a complaint was filed with the commission and found to be valid, the commission could issue an order banning the discriminatory practice among all employers in the same industry. The bill was further amended late today to make it clear that an industry-wide order must involve a practice similar to the one found to be illegal.

Scope of Present Code

At present, the commission can only undertake an investigation after it has received a complaint from an aggrieved person. Its authority extends over discrimination because of race, color or creed in employment, publicly aided housing and places of public accommodation.

Governor Harriman has insisted that the commission could be more effective if it had authority to undertake actions without waiting for a complaint.

Republicans have maintained the position that such power would turn the commission into a prosecuting agency and that it could lead to abuses and harassments.

The Democratic acceptance of the compromise was agreed to on the theory that it was better to get something than nothing.

Among other legislative action today was approval by the Senate of an Assembly bill that will make noncommercially used station wagons subject to the same registration fees as passenger cars. This will save nearly 400,000 owners a family station wagons about $8.75 each.

Bills to reduce fees for these vehicles have been approved by the Senate for several years but have been killed in the Assembly. This is the first time such a bill has reached the Governor's desk.

Passenger car registration fees are 50 cents a hundred pounds for the first 3,500 pounds and 75 cents a hundred pounds above that. Up to now station womans owners have had to pay a straight 75 cents a hundred pounds.

Bill on Benefits Voted

Higher benefits for persons insured while on the job were approved in the Assembly and sent to the Senate for concurrence. But a provision of the bill authorizing a court review of certain workmen's compensation cases caused all Democrats to oppose the bill. The vote was 87 to 56.

Five Republicans joined the Democrats in opposition. They were Assemblymen Edward J. Amann Jr. and Lucio F. Russo of Richmond, Thomas H. Brown of Rensselaer, Ernest Curto of Niagara Falls and Hyman E. Mintz of Sullivan.

Maximum weekly benefits are increased by the bill from $36 to $45. The contentious provision was one permitting the Appellate Division to review facts in cases where the decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board is not unanimous or when the boadr reverses or modified the decision of a referee. The court can now pass only on questions of law.

MARRIAGE LICENSE APPLICANT

Advertiser p.1

New York Legislator Fights To Delete State 'Color' Law

Thurs. 3-21-57 Montgomery, Ala.

ALBANY, N.Y., March 20 (AP)—Last July, state Sen. James L. Watson applied for a marriage license in New York City. The Manhattan Democrat, a Negro, objected to the requirement that he state his "color."

"The clerk told me," Watson said, "'we're very sorry, Senator, but the only thing that can be done is to change the state law."

The senator is trying to do just that. In January, he introduced a bill that would change the 48-year-old provision in the state domestic relation law that requires marriage license applicants to state their color.

Today, Watson served notice in the Senate that he would move to force the bill out of the Judiciary Committee and onto the floor for action, if the committee did not do so voluntarily. Such motions are common, but rarely succeed.

Watson said his attempt to change the law was prompted not only by his own experience but by objections from many persons who found the color requirement offensive.

Health officials maintain that the information is valuable for statistical purpose.

But, Watson said, "I can't see where 'color' is helpful. The only acceptable answers are white, brown, black, yellow or red. If they asked for race instead, that might be different."

He argues that the requirement "tends to stress color differences unnecessarily."

Advertiser

Watson was instrumental in having the "color" question deleted from automobile drivers' license forms two years ago. Gov. Harriman ordered the question stricken at his request.

P-2-A

The senator says he is confident that his bill would be passed if brought to a vote in the legislature.

The assembly companion measure, also dormant in the rules committee, is sponsored by Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, also a Negro, from Manhattan.

Easter In New York

Birmingham, Ala. Post 3-4-57

The second largest congregation in New York City on Easter Sunday was in the Abyssinia Baptist Church.

It was necessary to hold two services to accommodate all the people.

The only larger service was held at the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The reason for the huge Harlem congregation might well have been the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, who had announced his sermon as "Easter and Segregation."

Easter, he said, is not only symbolic of immortality and the practical demonstration of life after death.

Of greater significance, it represented a moral upheaval that shook men loose from bigotry at the time of Christ's death.

That's the kind of resurrection that's needed today, Dr. Powell told thousands of listeners.

We agree. It's the kind of message merica needs every Sunday, including aster.

Far North of Mason-Dixon Line

New York City Faces Its Racial Problem

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

AT ANY RATE, New York City is truthfully facing the fact that it has a segregation problem.

Most Northern cities prefer to avoid admitting the truth that segregation also prevails in the North but that the methods are not the same as in the South.

SOKOLSKY

In a city like New York, there are Negro schools just as there are Negro schools in the South, but they came into existence for different reasons and by different processes.

★ ★ ★

TAKE, for instance, Harlem. When I was a high school student, Harlem was an upper middle class Jewish neighborhood. Before that it had been an old New York neighborhood.

Most of the Jewish families lived in private brownstone apartments. The central street of this area was Lenox Avenue which was, at that time, a very fine promenade. Seventh Avenue was even more high-tone.

This area was between 110th and 135th street, about a mile and a half.

West of it was Morningside Park and then Columbia University on the Heights. East of it was a fast-growing Italian area.

★ ★ ★

ALL OF THIS is now principally Negro, with the Puerto Ricans pushing the Negroes into the Bronx and the upper reaches of Manhattan Island.

When the Negroes appeared, the Whites disappeared, most of them moving southward into the West End Avenue, Riverside Drive and Central Park West sections which they took over from the very rich who were pushed toward Park Avenue and its environs.

The school system followed the population movement and soon Harlem schools were Negro schools and were staffed, to a degree, by Negro teachers.

Harlem became the Negro capital of the world, the center for Negro culture and Negro vice, for Negro churches and Negro dance halls.

Harlem became a Negro ghetto and similar areas were definitely segregative, by the pressure of population, by the refusal of White folks to live in the same buildings as Negroes.

★ ★ ★

FOR YEARS, both New York City officials and Negro politicians and protagonists refused publicly to recognize that the Harlem ghetto, the Bedford-Stuyvesant ghetto and similar areas were definitely segregative and that the Negro had very little choice in the matter.

Now the school system is facing up to the truth and the Board of Education devised a scheme to desegregate the public schools. The scheme is not working effectively.

What it involves is bringing White children into Negro schools, bringing Negro children into White schools, exchanging teachers and using a bus system to convey children from better neighborhoods to worse ones in the hope of breaking down segregation in the schools if nowhere else.

Some new housing is being advertised as "non-racial," a recognition of the fact that other houses are definitely racial, either White or Negro, despite laws to the contrary.

★ ★ ★

MAYOR Robert Wagner and the president of the Board of Education, Charles Silver, are anxious for the desegregation efforts to succeed.

The professionals in the school system seem to be sitting on their hands because they recognize that it is a very tough operation with which most parents are unfamiliar and they wonder what the parents will have to say about it when it is actually put into practice.

Few White teachers offer to volunteer to teach in Negro schools, undoubtedly impressed by the various stories they hear and read of tough boys, using switch knives, in the schools that are predominantly Negro and Puerto Rican.

It is not established that these children are tougher than any others, but a problem does exist.

★ ★ ★

ONE of the immediate results of this complex of problems is that since World War II there has been a surprisingly large exodus of White inhabitants from New York City to its suburbs, all of which are outside the city's administration.

In these suburbs, the schools are locally managed and apparently no Negro problem exists in most of them, the cook's children going to the same school as the master's.

However, there has been an increase in the attendance at private schools — nowadays called "independent schools," to avoid the charge of snobbishness.

Some of these schools have one Negro child per class to establish de facto racial equality.

This analysis of the New York segregation problem is given to indicate that it exists north of the Mason-Dixon Line as well as south of it.

Cleric Points At North's Racial Bias

BOSTON, Nov. 17 (AP)—A prominent Christian clergyman said tonight rational citizens should "consider the deficiencies of integration" in New York, Washington, Detroit and Chicago as well as concentrating on the South.

The Rev. Dr. Harold John Ockenga, chairman of the International Commission of the National Assn. of Evangelicals representing 65,000 Protestant churches, spoke at the 9th annual Christian Education Conference.

Dr. Ockenga said that practical consideration of the integration problem "would include such matters as the depreciation of property values. . . . the intermarriage which inevitably has resulted in Germany, in England, in Russia and other places, and the emotional effects upon the lives of children and also of many adults."

The clergyman, who is pastor of the Park Street (Congregational) church in Boston, said that "within the body of Christ there is no discrimination between black and white."

He added:

"There are also ethical implications to the problem of desegregation and integration which must be heeded by Christians in all sections and denominations.

"Great wrongs have been perpetrated on the Negro people in aspects of segregation pertaining to education, medicine, religion, economics and politics.

"However, great wrongs also have been perpetrated against the white people in the South in the first reconstruction period and we are in danger of reviving and perpetrating such wrongs in the new reconstruction which is now under way."

Dr. Ockenga said that "the pressing need is for patience, understanding, sympathy and Christian love in order to gradually solve this problem without the use of force."

361,083 Come Since 1950

New York 'Promised Land' For Southern Negro?

NEW YORK—New York City has become the "promised land" for the Southern Negro.

Since 1950, the city's non-white population has jumped 42½ per cent, while the white population has risen 5.2 per cent, according to a study made by the State Commission Against Discrimination.

Commission Chairman Charles Abrams said that many of the "new" New Yorkers are young Southern Negroes who are seeking both freedom from discrimination and better jobs in the city.

The total increase of non-whites in New York represented 361,083 persons with Negroes comprising 97 per cent of the total. During the same seven years, New York's white population has risen by 451,009, but the non-white population in New York's suburbs also is on the increase.

Push Bias Fight, Wagner Pleads

Mayor Robert F. Wagner said today "racial and religious prejudice represents the most explosive evil of our time, and we cannot afford to live with them indefinitely."

An "outburst today in New York, or Philadelphia or Chicago, here or abroad, Communist propaganda modded tomorrow," he warned.

Mr. Wagner made his remarks before 100 officials of the American Jewish Committee at the Hotel Lombardy, 111 E. 56th St. His talk was in connection with a demolition ceremony at Third Ave. and 56th St., site of the planned $2 million Institute of Human Relations.

Describing passage of the civil rights bill, "even with its shortcomings," as a "dramatic breakthrough," Mayor Wagner asked that states and cities fight even harder to ease tensions. Efforts so far, he said, are but a drop in the bucket when viewed against the needs of the situation.

Dr. Davis on APSA council

Ind. 9-21-57

NEW YORK CITY — Dr. John A. Davis, of City College, here, and recently appointed to the State Commission Against Discrimination, was elected to the executive council of the American Political Science Association, here, last week.

The meeting was the 53rd annual session of the organization and was held at the Henry Hudson Hotel.

Also attending the sessions Dr. Robert L. Gill and Dr. G. James Fleming of Morgan State College, Dr. Vincent Browne of Howard University, and Dr. Ismael Newton of North Carolina College.

TOP IN AIR FORCE

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — John H. Voorhees, 21, was chosen the first of his race to serve as top cadet in line in the Air Force ROTC at Rutgers University.

News P.1 Jackson Mon Ind. 9-20-57 38a NY

NORTH HAS TROUBLE, TOO

Children sat on sidelines today while some 100 Negro and Puerto Rican parents picketed near New York's city hall protesting "substandard" conditions in schools their offsprings attend and demanding "integration now". One placard also read: "End Segregated Housing." New York has no segregation laws but racial residential patterns in effect cause segregated classes in some school zones.—Daily News-AP Wirephoto.

Solon Believes South Will Vote On Side Of Decency

Daily World Tues. 4-16-57
Atlanta Ga. P.7

BY THADDEUS T. STOKES

Cong. Clayton Powell (D.-N.Y.) predicted that Congressmen would pass a Civil Rights Bill immediately after they return from an Easter vacation. The prediction was made while he was speaking to an estimated 1,500 persons who were attending a mass meeting of the Love, Law and Liberation movement at Wheat Street Baptist Church on Auburn, Sunday afternoon.

The congressman, considered a pro-integrationist, based his prediction upon the belief that "more than half of the southern senators will vote on the side of decency, and the 'solid-south' isn't solid anymore. This was shown when southern states refused to endorse the Southern Manifesto." He said the congressman's vote and many southern senators would not hesitate to be decent on civil rights legislation."

He predicted further that Negroes will have equality all over America by 1965. "No force, individual or combination can stop me in his fight for full freedom as long as the Negro is not free in America, cannot be the free, home of the free, Christian nation.

"We cannot be free as long as there will be tolerated in Mississippi, Georgia and other states racial differences," he stressed. "The enemy of the White Citizens and such groups."

The New York congressman expressed that America should be proud of the Negro as a citizen and he is the greatest selling point in international relations with countries like India, Egypt.

He referred to the kidnap-murder of Americans in Iran, referring it a propaganda trick.

He stated further that countries like Egypt, India Iran, Ghana are more concerned about how the Negro is treated than any single facet of this country's government.

Speaking out at Atlanta Negroes, he said "non voters are betraying themselves. They are worse than uncle Toms. And if they vote for T. M. Alexander, for Congressman; and Dr. Rufus Clement as a Board of Education they should be run out."

He explained that Georgia has not attempted to integrate schools after three years. He also pointed out that he advocates moderation "But Georgia has made no start. If they would have attempted integration with moderation they would have integrated at least three grades."

RACIAL TRAGEDY

Senator Eastling of Mississippi said he would advocate gradualism "go slow," which means at least go."

On concluding Cong. Powell advised the audience to "stand, work live and fight together.

Powerful agencies are working to end this racial tragedy. Work on. Those who fall by the wayside will be replaced by others."

He was presented by Rev. William Holmes Borders, pastor of Wheat Street church and president of the LLL Movement.

Candidate Alexander and Dr. Clement were presented for brief remarks, as well as the six ministers who were arrested last December in an attempt to ride local buses unsegregated.

Nearly $1,500 was collected. Rev. Borders said that the money was needed for the pending court case of the six ministers.

Other speakers included Rev. P. L. Jones of Philadelphia church; Rev. George W. Dudley who explained the purpose o fthe LLL movement; E. M. Martin, vice president of the Atlanta Life Insurance Co.; and Rev. B. J. Johnson, pastor of Mt. Calvary church, who presided.

Powell Blast Dems For Rights Silence

Daily World

38a

Hits Inaction On Dixie Terror

Defender Sat. 5-11-57
Chicago Ill.

NNEW YORK 2 (INPS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D) N. Y., complained Sunday that the Democratic National Committee has ignored a demand by him that it "issue a strong uncompromising statement" on anti-Negro violence in the South.

Powell, who supported the Republican presidential ticket in 1956, made public a telegram he sent to Democratic chairman Paul Butler Friday also insisting that, the "Democratic controlled House Un-American Activities Committee . . investigate the Ku Klux Klan."

The Negro congressman said he was making the telegram public because "no action" was taken on his demands by Democratic party leaders during their weekend meeting in Washington. He also said that Butler has not even replied to his wire.

In it, Powell declared: "I absolutely do not condone the refusal of President Eisenhower to speak out against the present violence suffered by Negro citizens in the South."

But, he added: "I point out to you that leaders of my own party have been absolutely silent . . . I demand that the (Democratic) committee publicly issue a strong uncompromising statement concerning the barbarities and atrocities being committed against American citizens, especially the clergy and churches behind the dark curtain."

Powell also insisted that the Democrats "endorse the administration's right-to-vote civil rights legislation in its original form."

ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

Ike Called On to Hear Negro Side

James Union

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 17 (UP) —A Negro congressman who bolted the Democrats in the 1956 election to support President Eisenhower, said today that the President had conferred only with white persons on the South's school integration problems and demanded that he meet immediately with Negroes. P. 5

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) sent a telegram to the President insisting on an "immediate appointment" for a Negro at the vacation White House on Coasters Harbor Island in the society playground of Newport.

Eisenhower, after a series of hurried telephone checks with Washington, was expected to take some action soon on Powell's telegram.

Jacksonville

The Negro congressman, who also is a minister, said that Eisenhower had talked with white Southern leaders, but had not conferred with Negroes on integration problems at Little Rock, Ark., Nashville, Tenn., and other places in the South. W ed.

Negro Votes to Ike

Powell, who was credited with attracting Negro votes to Eisenhower and away from the Democrats in the 1956 presidential election, did not demand to figure personally in the talks he requested. He asked that the President "meet with any Negroes you desire . . . ."

It was unlikely that the White House would ignore his request for a Negro conference with the President, but for the time being, the vacation presidential headquarters stuck to a policy of "no comment."

Removing Racial Bias

Times

Amendment to Widen Powers of Anti-Discrimination Law Urged

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People heartily endorses your editorial recommendation of Jan. 15 that the New York State law against discrimination "should be amended to give S. C. A. D. power to act wherever it discovers evidence of discrimination—by unions or by management."

Fortunately, Senator Zaretski and Assemblyman Baker have introduced a bill which would provide the State Commission Against Discrimination with the right to investigate discriminatory practices on its own initiative and to undertake regulatory action on the basis of its findings.

New York N. Y.

In our view this bill, which should be a bipartisan measure, is one of the more vital pieces of legislation to be considered during this legislative session. Together with the proposed increase in S. C. A. D.'s budget, we regard this amendment as essential to the continued program against discrimination in New York State.

Pg. 28

Limitations on Action

Because of misunderstanding and distortion some citizens believe that S. C. A. D. already has such powers and others hold that they are unnecessary. This confusion stems in part from the fact that S. C. A. D. can and does investigate areas of discrimination where it has not received a complaint but, under the present law, it is powerless to act upon whatever discoveries it makes in the course of such investigations. It is like a policeman who witnessed a crime would have to wait for a complaint before taking action.

Without the power to initiate regulatory action on its own, the action which S. C. A. D. takes is based solely by the complaints it receives. It must pursue the paths charted by the complainants even though it knows that there are many areas in which members of minority groups never apply—and thus can never file complaints—because they deem their chances as hopeless.

In the present situation somewhat operates to the disadvantage of S. C. A. D. may, for example, receive a complaint against one company within an industry, although discriminatory practices within the industry may be general.

Industry-Wide Adjustment

The company may feel that it has been singled out for action while its equally guilty competitors go unrebuked because no complaint has been filed. S. C. A. D. seeks industry-wide adjustment in employment practices.

In housing the state agency is even more handicapped because of lack of initiative power. The law prohibits discrimination in F. H. A. and V. A. aided housing. The administration of this law has been delegated to S. C. A. D. Here, again, corrective action is impossible until a complaint has been filed and processed. Meanwhile, the housing may be fully rented or sold in a discriminatory manner. S. C. A. D. is then confronted with a fait accompli. And the victim is without housing. This handicap tends to discourage persons from filing complaints.

We confidently look forward to passage of this urgently needed amendment on a bipartisan basis by the Legislature during its current session.

ROY WILKINS,
Executive Secretary, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

New York, Jan. 18, 1957.

Survey Will Help City End Jimcrow

Journal & Guide

Sat. 3-2-57

The New York City Commission on Intergroup Relations has announced that negotiations have been completed with the U. S. Bureau of Census to collect information hitherto unavailable on economic status, employment, occupations, education, housing and family living conditions among Negroes and Puerto Ricans in New York City.

Alfred J. Marrow, Chairman of the Commission said the survey will provide information needed in formulating policies related to health and welfare services, recreational needs, relocation, delinquency control and city-state relations. In addition, Dr. Marrow said, the information is a prime requisite for mapping successful plans to carry out the city's announced program to eliminate discrimination and segregation.

L.I. Boys Apologize For Anti-Negro Slurs

World-Telegram & Sun

Thurs. 2-7-57

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

MINEOLA, L. I., Feb. 7. — After reading them the Declaration of Independence and directing them to apologize, Children's Court Judge James H. Gehrig today released three Long Beach boys who had been distributing anti-Negro propaganda in that community.

The boys, 13 and 14, on Jan. 4 placed about 40 bear coaster on steps of homes of Long Beach Negroes. On one side of the coasters were the letters KKK and on the other the admonition "Get out of town!"

At a rarely permitted open and informal hearing — no specific charges were involved —Judge Gehrig read the Declaration to the boys and emphasized the passage about "all men are created equal."

He told the boys he thought they were misguided and asked them to apologize to William Burke, president of the Long Beach chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, who was present.

Mr. Burke previously had told the court he was not anxious to press charges because "I don't want these boys, who I'm sure are really good boys, to be biased toward Negroes all their lives."

The boys shook hands with Mr. Burke, and did their parents, and that ended the case.

A fourth boy, 14, had sent a letter of apology. He was unable to be present because today he was enrolling in a military school.

Negro Magistrate Fines The Waldorf $50 Fire Fine

New York—(CNS)—The Waldorf-Astoria—one of the world's most expensive and finest hotels—was fined $50. on a fire technicality by Negro Magistrate, Vernon C. Riddick.

The Hotel's attorney, John H. Sherry—one of a battery of lawyers for the Waldorf—was highly indignant at the fine as well as the charges that the hotel on one occasion had an exit locked ad two others obstructed by chairs, tables, etc. Sherry called it all "petty" but Magistrate Riddick persisted on the ine.

Would-be KKK Youths Apologize to Negroes

Courier p. 5

Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW YORK—A wise judge and an understanding NAACP executive converted four boys from hate-mongers to teen-agers with respect for all their fellow-citizens.

Sat. 2-23-57

The lesson in tolerance took place in the Children's Court at Mineola, Long Island, last week, in usually secret court proceedings which, this time, were open to the press.

Three shamefaced teen-agers, whose Ku Klux Klan-like club spread anti-Negro hate messages in nearby Long Beach, appeared before Judge James N. Gehrig. Instead of condemning them, he read them the second sentence of the Declaration of Independence: "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by the Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

AFTER READING the excerpts, the judge demanded that the boys apologize to "all the Negroes in Long Beach" for their "misguided" action.

The boys had scribbled racial slurs on more than 200 lids of paper coffee cups and scattered them in predominantly Negro neighborhoods last Jan. 4.

The lads shook hands with William Burke, president of the Long Beach Community NAACP, whose plea that the boys be released so that they would not grow up bearing a grudge was heeded by the judge.

Must Admit Negroes

Defender

Chicago Ill.

ALBANY, N. Y. — (ANP) — Under a New York Court of Appeals directive last week Negroes were admitted to a Bronx beach club in New York City after the court ruled that the club was a public facility and must admit persons "without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin."

Sat. 5-4-57

Mayor Sees Need to Revise Anti-Bias Bill

Still Backs Shelved Housing Legislation 'In Principle'

He still favors the "principle" of proposed legislation barring racial discrimination in most of the city's private housing, Mayor Robert F. Wagner said today but added: "We are not wedded to any language (in the bill)."

He conceded at a press conference that his earlier all-out indorsement of the measure "may have been a littl too broad."

The bill was shelved indefinitely by the City Council yesterday after it generated strong protests from real-estate groups and others. It would have barred discrimination in most rentals and sales of homes.

Mayor Wagner said today that the bill would probably have to be revised drastically but he did not spell out what changes might be made.

He had voiced unequivocal support of the bill at a public hearing June 14, but today he limited his support to its "principle" and said: "If improvements need to be made, then we must consider changes."

Meantime, Charles H. Silver, president of the Board of Education, told the Urban League of Greater New York that he joined the league in feeling "disappointment" over yesterday's action. Speaking at the league's 48th annual meeting, he said housing discrimination had hampered school integration an dhad "contrived to contain these minority group members in large ghettos in our city."

Negroes Sue New York Club

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., July 5 (AP) —A Negro family's $500,000 damage suit against a Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., country club came to light here today. The suit claims a girl's Sweet 16 party was canceled because of her race.

Mr. and Mrs. Alger Adams, publishers of a Westchester County Negro weekly newspaper, brought the suit in state Supreme Court here against Beacon Hill Country Club.

The Adams said they made reservations for a party for their daughter last June 28. They said they informed the club of their race. But five days before the scheduled party, they claimed, the club canceled it because some of the directors didn't like the idea.

Club Manager Francis Holzheimer denied any discrimination.

Solidarity Against Prejudice And Discrimination

An example of the kind of solidarity needed between minorities over the entire nation was demonstrated recently when Negro spokesmen vetoed an attempt to perpetuate anti-Jewish discrimination in New York city.

Although an amendment was proposed to the private housing bill currently being considered in the New York City Council whose adoptpion would have readily opened an estimated 1,450,000 dwelling unlts to Negroes, NAACP and Urban League leaders rejected the amendment because it would have allowed discrimination in co-operative apartments where Jews are systematically discriminated against.

According to Edward S. Lewis, executive director of the Urban League of Greater New York, although Negroes are not directly involved because of the high rental of the co-ops, any measure that is anti-Semitic is automatically also anti-Negro.

Algernon Black of the New York State Committee Against Discrimination and Frank S. Horne, executive director of the Mayor's Commission on Intregroup Relations, indicated that the luxury co-operatives are the hard-core of residental anti-Semetism in New York. For Negroes to fight for their inclusion under the act at the expense of a quick victory for themselves is a good sign of intergroup co-operation.

If this attitude would spread to other communities and other sections, including the South, each minority group would realize that there is strength in unity as discrimination and prejudice could not withstand combined opposition.

Despite the strong forces of apartment managers, the final bill is almost certain to apply to both co-ops and non co-ops in New York because of the refusal of Negroes to advance themselves at the expense of their brothers in oppression.

Prejudice and discrimination exist because people are narrow-minded enough to consider all who are outside their particular group of less importance. As each minority group turns more and more into itself, concerned only with its own problems, each group helps to add to its problems as well as to the problems of all minority groups.

America is a nation of minorities. It is also a nation of discrimination and prejudice and will remain so unless the action taken in New York catches fire and spreads over the country-side.

Negroes in New York has shown the way. It is now time for minorities in other sections to take up the banner and wave it aloft.

'Frameup' shuts down restaurant

NEW YORK — Seymour David of Yonkers, and Sol Dubato of Woodside last week asked Nassau County Supreme Court to reinstate their restaurant and liquor licenses.

They pleaded to the court that they were run out of business in Bayville because they let some colored friends use the beach near their property.

The young men said they purchased Greenwich Club in mid June and operated it until July 23 when the place was shut down — resulting from trumped up charges, they claimed.

* * *

DAVID SAID that he was first "warned" when he allowed a colored man working for them "to go on the beach which is there for the use of all residents."

"I was warned then that one thing the Bayville people would not tolerate was a colored person on the beach. They told me that a year ago a colored person went to the beach and they ran him out of town."

"Shortly after that," David added, "a few colored friends of mine came out to see me . . . and I was warned again."

* * *

HE FURTHER stated that when his wife drove a colored friend to Yonkers that the people made up all kinds of stories and soon after that the residents started "ganging up on me."

As a result of similar actions on the part of town's people, he said the $40,000 restaurant was raided on July 19 and police charged a teenager was drinking beer there.

Both owners denied the charges, but Mayor Brickell revoked their licenses, an action upheld by the village board.

Harriman Hits President on Violence Issue

Herald Tribune P. 18-L 2-14-57 Washington, D.C.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 (AP). — Gov. Averell Harriman says President Eisenhower has ignored a request from Southern Negro ministers that he publicly condemn violence against Negro homes and churches.

The Democratic Governor says this "is more than a discourtesy—it is a tragic failure to assert his responsibility and to speak the conscience of the American people."

Gov. Harriman, who spoke at a "Brotherhood in Action" rally at Madison Square Garden last night, noted that two-thirds of the world's people are non-white.

He added that "violence in the Deep South or the housing riots in the Middle West impair our effectiveness among the peoples that have newly come out of colonialism."

Gov. Harriman, former United States Ambassador to Russia, focused his attack on the Eisenhower administration's policy in the Middle East.

"In the United Nations," he said, "We must not support a double standard of morality. In the Israeli-Egyptian dispute it is immoral to invoke moral principle on one side and ignore it on the other.

"Dictator Nasser (of Egypt), supported by the Kremlin, has for many years flouted the United Nations resolutions and Israel is entitled to have our support in her demand that Egypt as well as Israel accede to the United Nations directives."

Court Orders Club To Lift Race Barrier

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. 4-12-57

ALBANY, N. Y., April 11 (AP)—The New York Court of Appeals today ordered a beach club in the Bronx, New York City, to admit Negores.

The state's highest court held unanimously that the Castle Hill Beach Club is a public facility and as such must admit persons "without regard to race, creed, color or national origin."

Chief Judge Albert Conway wrote in an opinion that he was compelled to conclude that the club's closed membership corporation was formed as "a mere sham designed to conceal the truly public nature of the enterprise."

PROFIT POTENTIAL

He said the record supported the conclusion "that the creation of the membership corporation was motivated by apprehension of the possible effect which the presence of Negroes might have on the profit-making potential of the recreational park."

The corporation operates a bathing and recreation park that accomodates about 13,000 persons on a seasonal membership basis and several thousand more each season on a daily guest admission basis.

Conway said the club listed itself in the telephone directory as a public bathing beach and gave only cursory processing to membership applications. In addition, he said it held a commercial, instead of a club, beer license and did not have the federal tax-exempt status of a membership corporation.

Advertiser

The State Commission Against Discrimination originally ordered the club to admit Mrs. Anita Brown of the Bronx, a Negro, who filed the complaint after she was refused season locker rights. A lower court upheld the order and the club carried the case to the Court of Appeals contending that, as a membership corporation, it could restrict use of its facilities.

Dixie forces Jews to hide feelings on race, attorney says

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. 2-9-57

BUFFALO, N.Y. (ANP) — "Threats of economic boycotts on Jews in the South have forced them to hide their feelings on the desegregation problem," according to an American Jewish attorney.

The man, Harold Reigelman, NYC lawyer and member of the national executive board of the American Jewish Committee, made the statements at the annual meeting of the Buffalo-Niagara Frontier Chapter of the AJC here last week.

"Race hatred fanatics are exploiting tensions of desegregation to stir up hated against Jews as well as colored" he said. He concluded that the emergence of white citizens councils and the resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan have a direct influence on anti-Semitism.

Victory in New Rochelle

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. 5-25-57

The New Rochelle (N. Y.) branch of the NAACP has won a significant victory in the fight against another phase of the North's subtle racial segregation practices, which indicates what can be accomplished elsewhere.

Owing to the usual conspiracy which restricts the areas in which Negroes may live (a conspiracy which is nation-wide), the New Rochelle authorities planned to replace an elementary school in the heart of a Negro district with a new building which would have perpetuated the pattern of segregation.

The aroused Negroes campaigned against replacing the school, insisting that the Negro pupils be distributed to other schools, thus advancing integration in accordance with the Supreme Court's decree.

They campaigned so effectively that in the referendum of the city's 72,036 residents, this proposal along with two others the NAACP opposed, were overwhelmingly defeated, in the first school desegregation test of this kind outside the South.

Desegregation Issue Plagues New York

Times-Union P. 17 Jacksonville Fla. Sun. 8-4-57

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 (AP)—New York City has its desegregation problems too.

With the largest Negro community in the nation, it is weighing a controversial bill to eliminate discrimination in private housing.

The bill, now before the City Council, comes on the heels of a hotly debated action by school authorities in redistricting school neighborhoods to provide greater balance between whites and non-whites in classrooms.

Hearings on the housing bill have brought out equally vocal friends and foes. Proponents, led by Mayor Robert F. Wagner, term it "right and essential." Opponents, led largely by real estate groups, have cried "tyranny" and "communism."

The bill would make it an offense to refuse to rent or sell dwelling space in apartments, tenements or residential hotel suites for reasons of race, color, religion, national origin or ancestry.

It would affect 1,787,103 housing units, but would exempt one and two family houses, of which there are some 725,000.

The city's population of roughly eight million includes about 750,000 Negroes, of whom about a third are of Puerto Rican origin.

Most of them live in Harlem slums in northern Manhattan. Others live in Brooklyn's Stuyvesant section and a few other shabby neighborhoods.

There is no law forbidding them to live elsewhere.

But many landlords, whatever their personal views on anti-discrimination, fear that if they rent an apartment to a Negro family in a white area their white tenants will move out. The landlords argue that they would be hit economically.

Proponents of the bill hold the landlords are unduly fearful and that the real estate interests have exaggerated the possible impact.

The housing bill, as presently constituted, provides a $500 penalty for violation.

However, the Council is studying proposed amendments that would eliminate the penalty and instead refer reported violations to the city's Commission on Intergroup Relations. The commission would have discretion as to whether to bring court action.

Another proposed amendment would exempt cooperative apartment suites — those that are owned rather than rented by the occupant—from provisions of the bill.

No date has been set for council action on the amendments or on the bill itself.

Denton Racial Incident Is Under Investigation

DENTON, Nov. 6 (AP) — Rumors that Negroes might try to enroll in white schools here apparently spurred white teenagers to toss firecrackers, rocks and names at a Negro man.

Denton Police Chief T. R. Gallimore said today he is still investigating the race incident that shocked this normally peaceful little town last Sunday afternoon.

The chief said he believed the trouble was touched off by rumors that Negroes were planning to come into Denton to enter the white schools.

"We haven't got any colored people in our school district. There is a single colored family within the city limits, although one is just outside.

"I don't know how these things get started," Gallimore said.

Trouble flared when Cleve Adams, a 45-year-old Negro from South Carolina, stepped off a bus at Denton. Adams has been working at a nearby sawmill for several months.

He bought a soft drink in a store and started to walk around town. Then, said Gallimore, a group of boys began calling him names and tossing rocks and firecrackers.

Somebody picked Adams up in a car and took him home while other indignant citizens phoned Gallimore and the State Highway Patrol.

Chief Gallimore said that when he arrived, the white boys had broken up and Adams was gone. The chief said his investigation so far indicates three or four boys threw the objects while the rest stood around and watched.

Gallimore said that if any arrests are made, Adams will have to sign complaing warrants. The chief said nothing of the sort had ever happened in Denton before and added:

"That colored fellow had just as much right in Denton as anybody else, as long as he wasn't breaking any laws. My information is that he was behaving himself."

Greensboro Votes To Sell Pools To Keep Negroes Out

GREENSBORO, N. C.—(INS)—The Greensboro city council has voted to sell its two public swimming pools rather than permit their being racially integrated.

City Manager James R. Townsend was directed Monday night to put the pools on the auction block after the council adopted a resolution declaring the city would no longer operate them.

Councilman William Folk Jr., the only dissenter, said his vote against the sale was lodged because he believed it would doom the public recreation program. He emphasized he did not favor integrated pools "and state law prohibits it."

The council declared the sale of the pools "in the best public interest" and added that they are no longer required for the "needs, purposes and use of the city of Greensboro."

Lindley park pool for white was built for $200,000 and Nocho park pool for Negroes cost $50,000. The council's action stemmed from an effort by a Negro woman to gain admission to Lindley pool last summer.

Small Crowd Outhoots Kasper In Carolina Segregation Talk

Journal & Advertiser 9-1-57

Montgomery, Ala.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C., Aug. 31 (AP)—Touring segregationist John Kasper today mounted the soapbox in Winston-Salem, one of three North Carolina cities whose school boards broke the color line, and was outtalked by a hooting crowd, about half Negroes.

Kasper, who arrived here last night from Nashville, Tenn., came to the courthouse square at noon, as he had announced. He was met by several reporters and policemen.

A crowd slowly gathered. At its largest it was about 200 persons. Their hooting and jeering allowed Kasper to make little headway in delivering his out-of-doors talk against allowing a Negro pupil to enter a previously all-white public school here last week.

Kasper attacked the reputations of city school board members here as well as those of Clinton, Tenn. He called the National Assn. for Advancement of Colored People a Communist front organization and also criticized what he claimed were the political views of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

Kasper is free on bond awaiting sentence on a criminal contempt of court conviction for interfering with peaceful integration of public schools at Clinton, Tenn.

7 Carolinans Fined In Trespass Case

DURHAM N. C. — (ANP) — A Negro minister and six persons of his race were fined $25 and court costs last week in the court of Judge Clifton L. Moore here after being found guilty of "trespassing" when they seated themselves on the "white side' 'of an ice cream parlor and sought service. Attorneys for the Negroes immediately gave notice of intended appellate action.

The case came about when Negroes allegedly sat on the "white side" of an ice cream parlor here and were arrested when they refused to move. The owner of the parlor, L. A. Coletta testified that he asked the Negroes to move, but said they refused to do so on June 23 when the incident occurred.

Solicitor W. H. Murdock insisted that the case was simply one of a trespassing nature and had nothing to do with constitutional rights of citizens as the defense counsel had charged in asking that charges be tossed out of court. The defense contended that the operating license of the parlor does not grant the owner the "privilege of discriminating against citizens on account of race and color." He said the trespass charges were in violation of the constitution.

City ordinance here requires eating places that serve both races to erect a partition between the two sections.

Golf Course Segregation:

Ban Is Seen In Greensboro

GREENSBORO, March 20 (AP)—Segregation at Gillespie Park Golf Club probably will be banned by an injunction to be signed here April 1, Judge Johnson J. Hayes indicated that in talking to attorneys today in Middle District here.

The attorneys represented 10 local Negroes who filed the suit at issue, the City of Greensboro and the Greensboro School Board.

The Golf Club, which leases its facilities from the city and the school board, was not represented at the meeting.

A mailing error prevented the expected filing of the federal jurist's opinion and ruling in the case, however.

Judge Hayes set April 4 as the date for the next meeting of the attorneys and commented that he expects then to enter judgment in the case.

But before being informed of the mailing error, Judge Hayes commented openly on what the legal document contained.

He said he could not conceive that the city could escape its legal duty to all of its citizens by leasing the golf facilities to a private corporation which sets its own rules for admission.

Apparently referring to the Supreme Court's rulings on segregation, Judge Hayes said a "District judge has no power to change it" and that a district judge has "a plain path of duty marked out."

He also openly commented on his hope that attorneys for the Negroes, the city, the school board and the golf club would reach agreement whereby Negroes could use the course part-time.

Aware that the city possibly would sell its golf facilities, for both whites and Negroes, the jurist urged a "reasonable effort" by all parties involved.

"The matter is one which could be ironed out," he said, adding that he realized there probably would be some "friction" regardless of the approach taken.

He believes, Judge Hayes said, there would be less friction if it was agreed that Negroes could use the course on certain days for a period of time, and that sometime later all restrictions be removed.

The attorney for the city school board said a conference on the subject would be agreeable, but the city's assistant attorney, Jack Elam, expressed doubt that any agreement could be reached.

BIAS AT BALL PARK HIT

Durham Negroes Seek Entry on Nonsegregated Basis

DURHAM, N. C., April 18 (UP)—Racial segregation, believed to be at least part of the cause for withdrawal of one team from the Carolina League last year, arose again today in that baseball circuit.

About 150 Negroes sought admission to the city-owned Durham Athletic Park for last night's league opener but were offered seats only on a segregated basis. They had sought admission on a nonsegregated basis.

N. B. White, Negro civic leader, spokesman for the group, said:

"In view of the fact that the Durham Athletic Park is municipally owned, under no circumstances will we accept segregated seating on account of our race."

He declined to say whether the group here would take legal action to seek an end to segregated seating at the athletic park.

The city leases the park to Durham Sports Enterprise, Inc., which operates the baseball club and a recreation department spokesman said that the terms of the lease leaving policy up to the ball club.

Golf Bias Must End

GREENSBORO, N. C.—White and Negro taxpayers will have to pay for the folly of stubborn city fathers unless an appeal from a Federal ruling against a municipally-owned but privately operated segregated golf course is withdrawn.

The climax a lengthy legal wrangle, Judge Johnson J. Hayes, Federal district judge of the Middle North Carolina District, gave the city until June 5 to end segregation. No one was surprised.

Movie House Boycott Starts

GREENSBORO, N. C. — Because a race minister was ordered to sit in a segregated balcony when he presented his invitation to a preview of the movie "The Ten Commandments," here, this city's Negroes were set to boycott movie houses beginning Monday, May 6.

There are 37,235 Negroes in Greensboro, Guilford County, out of a total of 190,320. It was the first similar protest in North Carolina.

Nip 'Gang Warfare'

DURHAM, N. C.—Gang warfare between North Carolina College students and Hillside High School students was nipped here last week with the arrests of five teenagers in connection with the attack-robbery of a NCC law school student.

Golf Club Allowed Integration Delay

GREENSBORO, N. C. (INS) — A Federal court judge Tuesday granted a "stay of execution" of 23 days to a Greensboro, N. C. golf course that has been ordered to integrate.

Federal Court Judge Johnson J. Hayes stayed his order to integrate the Gillespie club golf course forthwith and gave the defendants until June 27 to obey the order.

The case is scheduled to be taken before Judge John J. Parker, chief judge of the Court of Appeals, on June 13. If he rules for the golf club, the integration order will be rescinded, if not, Negroes will be allowed on the course two weeks hence.

Judge Hayes, who had previously ruled the course be desegregated, said he had allowed the stay because of "several substantial questions of law." He said he believed they should be heard by the court of appeals.

The main question involved is whether the city of Greensboro and its board of education control the course grounds, or whether it belongs to a private club.

The defendants claim the city had leased the course to a private corporation several years ago, and therefore, as a private club it is free to choose its own members.

The Negro plaintiffs claim that since the city is leasing the golf course, it is a city function — not a private club — and therefore open to all regardless of race. They cite the 14th amendment to substantiate their claims.

Judge Hayes, when ordering the injunction, had allowed the club 40 days to comply.

New York Woman's Suit to Test Airport Restaurant Segregation

GREENSBORO, June 18 (UP)—A New York City women filed a suit in U. S. Middle District District Court here today that will test the legality of segregated eating facilties at airports.

The suit was instituted by Martha S. Brisbane of New York against the Greensboro - High Point Airport here, members of the airport governing body, the manager of the airport restaurant and the airport manager.

The case specifically attacks segregated eating facilities at the Greensboro-High Point Airport, but doubtless will be a test of the legality of segregation at all such facilities.

The woman said she attempted to eat at the airport restaurant on Feb. 3, 1957 afer she had arrived at the airport.

She said that when she was not served, she asked for service.

She said then she was told by "servants of the defendants, whose names are unknown' 'to her, that the resturant served only whites.

The suit claimed "The plaintiff and those similarly situated suffer and are threatened with irreparable injury" by segregated eating facilties.

The woman called on the court to enter "interlocutory and permanent injunctions restraining the defendants from making any distinction based upon color in regard to service at the Greensboro-High Point Airport . . ."

Also named in the suit as defendants were the Airport Authority, whose members are J. T. Martin, Caesar Cone, F. Hall, R. T. Amos and Charles Kearns; Airport Restaurant Manager Steve Vartis; and Airport Manager J. B. Queen;

The suit was filed by Conrad O. Pearson of Durham, legal redress officer of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, North Carolina Chapter, and several New York attorneys, including NAACP Chief Legal Counsel Thurgood Marshall.

Negroes Request Admission To Durham Swimming Pool

DURHAM, June 13 (AP)—A determined drive to crack the color line for city recreation facilities appeared to be building up here today.

Negroes applied for admission to a city swimming pool and for the second day made use of tennis courts designed for white persons only.

Appeal For Policy.

These moves came almost simultaneously with an appeal to the City Council by City Manager R .W. Flack for a definite policy on the use of city facilities. He told the Council that without a policy declaration, recreation department employes do not know if "they have the right to take a particular action."

Following the Council meeting, City Recreation Director C. R. Wood wrote Flack recommending several undisclosed changes in city ordinances if Council members fail to endorse the current practice of designating "All White" and "All Negro" play areas.

Until the council draws up a policy, Wood said, "we will continue to operate under State law and local ordinances.

Cites Laws.

Wood said he had cited these laws in denying admission of a Negro minister, the Rev. Douglas E. Moore, to the Long Meadow Park Swimming Pool today. Moore, secretary of the North Carolina Conference of the Negro Methodist Church, sought admission to the pool for himself and his family.

He was turned away by pool employes and immediately appealed to Wood to countermand the action. The Negro minister previously had petitioned the Council for an end to segregation at the Durham Public Library and the Carolina Theater, which is city-owned and leased to a motion picture company.

The Council has given no indication of its position on Moore's earlier request.

The questin on the tennis courts was referred to the city attorney for a legal clarification.

Appeal Court Gets Negroes' Golf Suit

ASHEVILLE, N.C., June 14 (AP)—An eight-year effort by Greensboro Negroes to use a municipally owned, but privately operated white golf course, came to the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals today.

Attorneys for the city and Gillespie Park Golf Club appealed a federal court desegregation order issued last April 25 by District Judge Johnson J. Hayes.

Three federal judges heard argument on the appeal during the court's regular summer session here.

Hayes ordered segregation to end by June 5, then directed the action held up for three weeks, apparently to let the Curcuit Court hear the case before executing the judgment.

The city owns the property jointly with the Greensboro School Board.

Cross Burned In Negro's Yard

GRHAM, Aug. 15 — A cross made of tobacco sticks was burned last night in the front yard of James Jeffries, Negro of Pleasant Grove, according to a report this morning from the office of Sheriff Joe W. Cole.

The Jeffries home is located just off Highway 119 north of Graham.

A similar incident, deputies said, occurred on Highway 62 north of Graham the night before.

The deputies said they feel the cross burnings will be the work of teen-age pranksters.

GREENSBORO, N. C., COURT BARS NEGROES FROM GILLESPIE COURSE

Greensboro, N. C. (ANP) — The Fourth Federal District Court of Appeals last week upheld a lower court's injunction forbidding the city of Greensboro from barring Negroes from using the Gillespie Park Golf Course here. The city had appealed the lower court's order, contending that it lacks jurisdiction because it leased the course to a private coporation.

The complaints, on the other hand, argued that the city disposed of the course improperly since it was built partly with funds from WPA.

Last week the Appeals Court, contending that the injunction was properly granted, ruled:

Clear

"It is clear that this provision (leasing of the course) was inserted merely to prevent evasion of the court's order forbidding racial discrimination in the operation of the property; for it was followed by a reservation retaining jurisdiction and the power to modify the provision. . . ."

The course held that the city could dispose of the property by bona fide sale if it wants to.

Defendents in the case were the city of Greensboro, which constructed the course partly with funds furnished by the government's old WPA, the Greensboro city board of education, which owned part of the land the course was built on, and the Gillespie Park Golf Club, which operated the course under lease from the city.

Desegregation Issue Closes Golf Club

Greensboro, N. C. — The Gillispie Park Golf Club slammed its door today in the face of a Federal Court order to desegregate its facilities.

Officials of the Club announced only hours before the ruling was to go into effect that operations would be suspended today.

The reason given was the destruction by fire last weekend of the Club's locker room, but there appeared little doubt that the desegregation decision, handed down in April by Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes, also influenced the decision. In announcing the suspension of operations, Club President John Hughes added that the future of the course 'is undecided."

"We have closed Gillespie Golf Course," he said. "There will be no play on the course by anyone after this date."

Ten Negroes who said that they had been denied permission to play on the course sought a permanent injunction barring racial segregation on the course.

The Golf Club and the city of Greensboro, which owns the land on which the course is located, have appealed to the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and a decision is expected in the next few weeks.

Integration Rule Closes Golf Club

GREENSBORO, N. C. — (UP) — The Gillespie Park Golf Club of Greensboro slammed the door Thursday in the face of a Federal Court order to desegregate its facilities.

Officials of the club announced only hours before the ruling was to go into effect that operations were suspended as of Thursday.

The reason given was the destruction by fire last weekend of the club's locker room, but there appeared little doubt that the desegregation decision, handed down in April by Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes, also influenced the decision.

Monroe Asked to Desegregate All Its Recreation Facilities

MONROE, Aug. 21 (UP) — Negroes here have asked an end to all segregation in city-owned recreation facilities. The Board of Aldermen last night took the request under advisement.

A delegation of five Negro leaders presented the request to the board at its regular meeting last night.

It was the latest move in summer-long efforts by Negroes to break down color lines at recreation facilities here. But last night's action was the first time the request actually was put to the Board of Aldermen.

There was also a recent threat of violence against a Negro leader who has been active in the campaign.

The delegation was headed by Robert F. Williams, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Dr. Albert E. Perry Jr.

Monroe City Manager Lott T. Rogers said the group asked for an end to segregation at all city-owned facilities. This includes one city swimming pool for whites, the city park for whites and several ball fields and teenage canteens.

The city has no swimming pool for Negroes. It maintains ball parks and a teenage canteen for both races.

Perry reported he received an anonymous telephoned threat at his home Aug. 8, the night of a Ku Klux Klan rally in Union County. He told police the caller talked to his wife and said "The Ku Klux Klan met in Union County tonight and we're coming to get Perry tomorrow night."

A request that Negroes be allowed to use the white swimming pool was sent to the City Parks and Recreation Commission earlier in the summer by mail. Later, a committee of Negroes followed up the request before the Commission. The Negroes suggested part-time use of the swimming pool as an alternate to integration, but the Commission took no action.

Later, a group of Negro teenagers appeared at the pool and asked admission. They left quietly when they were refused.

Perry said today, referring to the refusal to let Negroes use the pool, "This action on the part of the City of Monroe denied these Negroes rights given them by the Constitution of the United States."

He said "My interest sprang from the fact that a young Negro lost his life, needlessly, in an unsupervised swimming hole earlier in the summer because there was no other place for him to swim."

Leaders Of Both Races Avert N. C. Racial Tiff

Special to Journal and Guide

STATESVILLE, N. C. — Indication that interracial cooperation and unified leadership by both races could solve an otherwise "touchy" problem was given here last weekend when broadcast appeals halted what could have turned out to be a race riot.

Prof. A. D. Rutherford, principal of Morningside high school, and T. V. Mangum, businessman, took to the airlanes Friday along with the superintendent of schools and a leading white minister asking that cool heads prevail after racial disorders threatened to explode when two young colored men were found in a car with two white women.

* * *

THE TWO women, along with their mother, were escorted out of town after they were found in the colored youths' car. It was learned that the women, who are sisters, telephoned the colored youths to arrange "dates."

When reports were made that the interracial party had been apprehended by local police officers, a mob of 500 to 600 white persons gathered at the home of the women. Police officers succeeded in dispersing the mob, but racial discord flared.

* * *

IN THE downtown area, 13 colored youths were arrested on disorderly conduct charges as they left a movie. Five were released, but the others were charged and released on bond pending trial. In court Monday, the trials were continued until Dec. 4.

As tension gripped the city, hurried calls were made to Prof. Rutherford and Mr. Mangum. They broadcast appeals for tolerance and — according to Police Chief W. T. Ivey—"the situation is now well in hand."

38a 1957

NORTH CAROLINA

Six Negroes Are Convicted In Golf Trespass Charges

GREENSBORO, Dec. 16 (AP) — Six Negroes, convicted of trespassing by playing at Gillespie Park golf course on Dec. 7 two years ago, appealed to Guilford Superior Court today.

Judge Hampton Howerton Jr. of Municipal-County Court gave each a suspended 30-day road term and fined them $1 and costs each. He permitted the six to be recognized for appearance in the higher court.

Four attorneys battled the solicitor in numerous issues of law. They first sought to quash the case on the claim that the "only reason" the six men were barred from the golf course was "race and color."

Counsel for the six also asked that the cases be quashed on the basis of the Federal Court case upholding Negroes' rights for equal protection of the law, the pending status of a similar case in Guilford Superior Court, and the rights provided by the 14th amendment to the Constitution.

Solicitor Joseph Franks argued that the case was a "simple trespass action," that the Gillespie Park Corporation was the "true possessor" of the city-owned course and that the court had jurisdiction over the case.

Greensboro Opens Libraries, Not Pools

Afro-American Sat. 7-27-57 Baltimore, Md.

GREENSBORO, N.C. — This city seems to be the next one to go down in American history as a battlefield for civil rights, as its citizens won their battle against library segregation this week but were repulsed in their efforts to gain admission to the public swimming pools.

On July 15, members of the City Council voted unanimously to adopt a statement of policy issued by the Greensboro Public Library's board of managers that, in effect, declares the library desegregated.

On the same day, however, Dr. Annie L. Gist, of the 400 block Gorrell St., and a companion were denied admission to the all-white Lindley Park Swimming Pool.

* * *

DR. GIST stated that she and her companion were only interested in going in swimming and since they were denied admission, she would report the incident to the local chapter of the NAACP for appropriate action.

She added that since she first sought admission to the municipal swimming pool, numerous persons, always anonymous, have telephoned her home and threatened violence to her, even to the extent of bombing the home.

Among the 26 persons to petition the City Council to end segregation in the libraries and the swimming pools on June 27 were Edwin R. Edmonds, chairman of the local chapter of the NAACP, and Mrs. Annie L. Gist, mother of Dr. Gist.

* * *

THE POLICY laid down by the library board and accepted by the council read:

"The facilities of the Greensboro Public Library are available to any citizen of Guilford County who can present satisfactory identification."

The following resolution setting forth the policy of the City Council as to the public swimming pools was adopted without a dissenting vote:

"Be it resolved that it be the declared policy of the City Council to maintain and operate the public swimming pools of the city for the remainder of the 1957 season in the same manner as they are presently being used; provided, however, that the city will, before the 1958 season, give earnest consideration to the problems raised by the petition."

Oust Negro Couple From Dixie Pool

GREENSBORO, N. C. — (ANP) — More acts of discrimination came out of this city last week as a noted educator and her companion were ousted from the all-white Lindsay Park swimming pool here after seeking admission to the pool.

Dr. Ann Gist and Miss J. Everett reported that they were "only interested in swimming and not making a test case," when they were denied admission to the pool by J. E. Bryson, pool director.

Dr. Gist, a doctor of philosophy, said she would report the incident to the local chapter of the NAACP. She said no trouble occurred and orderliness prevailed among the thousand or more whites in the pool at the time, as they sought admission to the pool.

Bryson said he told the women that the Greensboro Parks and Recreation commission had adopted a policy barring Negroes from white pools and referring them to the public Negro pool at Windsor Center.

A suit is now pending in federal court pertaining to recreation in this state.

U. S. court studies golf course case

Charlotte, N.C. Sat. 7-27-57

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — A golf course integration suit that has been a thorn in the city's side for eight years is now under study by judges of the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Argument on the case involving the publicly opened but privately operated Gillespie Park Golf Club was heard Friday by the three-judge court headed by Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte during its regular summer session here.

* * *

THE CITY is facing an injunction and an order issued by District Court Judge Johnson J. Hayes, last April 25, to integrate the golf course not later than June 27.

It will take effect on that date unless overruled by the appeals court before that date.

Assistant City Attorney H. J. Elam 3rd contended in his argument before the court that the City of Asheville has no control over the operation of the course — which it owns but leased to a private corporation in 1949.

The city attorney also asked to be released from injunctions placed against the city by Judge Hayes last April when he ordered the racial barrier at the course knocked down.

* * *

IN ADDITION to enjoining the city from pursuing its previous practice of exclusion and or segregation at the course, Judge Hayes prohibited the municipality from selling the property except by "bona-fide sale."

The sale prohibition unnecessarily restrict the city, which may want to dispose of the "valuable industrial property" by lease to an industrial concern, Mr. Elam told the court.

The "private corporation" which has operated the course —and has had control over it since a month after colored citizens sought to use it in 1949 — also appealed the order issued by Judge Hayes.

Spirit of the Press

Newark Observer

State Parks For the Use of Negroes

Wed. 7-24-57 Raleigh, N.C.

The Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

At the present time the North Carolina State Parks System provides separate parks for members of the two races. There are, we believe, three parks and recreational facilities provided for the Negroes and eight for the Whites.

The Parks System is operated under the supervision of the State Board of Conservation and Development, and at its recent meeting it was announced that the separation policy heretofore adhered to was believed to be sound, and the cooperation of the members of both races was urged in order that the parks may be of maximum benefit.

This is admittedly a hard problem to handle and the Board of Conservation is proceeding with the full knowledge that until a final solution of the problem is reached it must make some attempt to work out a program that will serve both races. In the light of the decisions which have been handed down with respect to recreational facilities in Greensboro, it would seem that the Parks superintendent has a very difficult task before him.

One great trouble is that while the facilities offered the Negroes are every bit as good as those offered the members of the White race they are limited both as to number and location. For instance, there is nothing comparable to the Morrow Mountain State Park in the Piedmont for the Negro citizens of that region. There is nothing comparable to the Fort Macon Seashore Park on Atlantic Beach for the Negroes of Eastern North Carolina. Especially on the oceanside are facilities lacking for Negro citizens.

This question has been before the Board of Conservation and Development for many years and a suggestion has been advanced that a beach for Negro citizens be developed in the general vicinity of a private Negro development on the northern end of Topsail Island adjacent to New River Inlet. Nothing has come of this suggestion. Another suggestion that has been made is to work hand in hand with Negro citizens who own an island west of Emerald Isle separated from it by an inlet with the idea of developing a state-owned public facility for the use of the members of the Negro race. So far as we know the last idea has never been pushed.

The Negro citizens are entitled to state-owned facilities where they may enjoy vacations in the same manner as White citizens enjoy them. It has been possible just outside of Raleigh for the State to provide adequate parks and recreational facilities for both Negroes and Whites but this policy has not been expanded to any great extent in other sections of the State. Simple justice and an intelligent approach to the problem seem to require a re-evaluation of the State Parks System to the end that it may be made to serve more adequately the members of both races. Such an approach to the problem might prevent a much more complex situation from arising in the future.

Two Negroes Arrested For Playing Tennis On Court For Whites

Ads Daily Sat. 7-20-57 Jackson, Miss.

Durham, N. C. July 16 — Two Negroes playing tennis on a city court restricted for whites was arrested here last Thursday.

The case may develop into a new test of segregation laws in North Carolina's Recreational facilities.

Those arrested are Joseph Riley, 23-year-old college student and John Henry Williams, a 15-year-old school boy. They are charged with tresspassing, using a tennis court without a permit, and violation of the rules and regulations for Durham's Recreational facilities.

Mr. Riley said the incident had not been sponsored by any organization. He specifically denied any connection with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The complaint was signed by C. R. Wood, director of the City Recreational Department.

TWO NEGROES ARRESTED

Accused in Durham of Playing Tennis on Court for Whites

DURHAM, N. C., July 12 (UP) —Two Negroes playing tennis on a city court restricted to whites were arrested yesterday. The case may develop into a new test of segregation laws in North Carolina's recreational facilities.

Those arrested are Joseph Riley, 23 years old, a College student, and John Henry Williams, 15. They are charged with trespassing, using a tennis court without a permit and violation of the rules and regulations for Durham's recreational facilities.

Mr. Riley said that the incident had not been sponsored by any organization. He specifically denied any connection with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The complaint was signed by C. R. Wood, director of the City Recreation Department.

City of Greensboro Keeping Golf Course Closed

News & Observer

GREENSBORO, Aug. 19 (UP)—The City of Greensboro today decided to keep closed the controversial Gillespie Park Golf Course in face of integration orders.

The City Council adopted a resolution citing "a number of factors" why the city could "not afford" to re-open the 18-hole course which was closed on June 26 after a federal judge held that a private club operating the course could not enforce racial segregation.

However, the resolution made no mention of the segregation issue.

City Councilman Al Stevens said the main reason was the city did not have sufficient funds to operate such a facility "particularly in view of a recent drop in revenue from intangibles taxes" in Guilford County and Greensboro.

Stevens said another reason is that the city owns one-half of the property and the city school board the other half, "and the school board doesn't usually sell its land." Stevens also said it is doubtful that the city would lease the property to a private operation such as it did to the Gillespie Park Golf Club, Inc.

"Such agreements are not too successful," he said.

Gillespie Park Golf Club, Inc., a "private" firm to which public land for the 18-hole course had been leased, closed operations June 26, one day before the desegregation order was to have gone into effect.

Judge Johnson J. Hayes handed down the ruling last April in U. S. Middle District Court here after 10 Greensboro Negroes had filed suit against the golf club, the City of Greensboro and the Greensboro Board of Education.

Hayes ruled, in effect, that the city cannot legally by-pass integration by leasing public lands to private enterprises.

Two weeks ago, the city notified the Gillespie Park Club that it was cancelling the lease, and gave indications at the time that the city would assume operation of the course, even though integration was likely.

Past week, a group of former Gillespie patrons submitted to the City Council a petition calling for the re-opening of the controversial course, regardless of whether Negroes would be allowed to play.

Meanwhile, Hayes' decision has been appealed by the city and the golf club to the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, where a decision is still pending.

Ask Integration In All City Recreation

MONROE, N.C. — A formal petition from colored citizens asking an end to all segregation in city-owned recreation facilities was taken under advisement Wednesday night by the Board of Aldermen.

A delegation of five colored citizens attended the board's meeting and personally presented the petition to the aldermen in session.

That was the latest move in a summer long campaign by colored citizens to break down color lines at recreation facilities here, but the first time the request was laid before the city's governing body.

* * *

IN THE GROUP who ignored a recent threat of violence against a leader who has been active in the campaign were Robert F. Williams, local NAACP president, and Dr. Albert E. Perry Jr.

According to City Manager Lott C. Rogers, the group asked for an end to segregation at all city-owned facilities, including the swimming pool, city parks, baseball diamonds and teenage canteens.

The city maintains no swimming pool for colored citizens, but has one restricted to white persons only, but it maintains ball diamonds and teenage canteens for both races.

* * *

DR. PERRY REPORTED to police recently that an anonymous telephone caller who talked with his wife on the night of Aug. 8 said "The Ku Klux Klan met in Union County tonight and we're coming to get Perry tomorrow night."

A request that the "lilywhite" swimming pool be opened to persons of both races was submitted to the city parks and recreation commission earlier in the summer by mail.

Later a group of colored teenagers appeared at the swimming pool and asked admission. When the operators of the pool refused them permission to enter, they left the scene quietly.

* * *

COMMENTING ON THE denial of the right of the teenagers to use the pool last week, Dr. Perry said: "This action on the part of the City of Monroe denied these persons rights given them by the Constitution of the United States."

"My interest," Dr. Perry said, "sprang from the fact that a young colored lad lost his life, needlessly, in an unsupervised swimming hole earlier in the summer because there was no other place for him to swim."

Police Guard Home Of Girls Found On Date With Negroes

STATESVILLE, N. C., Nov. 16 (UP) —A crowd estimated at up to 600 whites, most of them described as curiosity seekers, gathered last night at the home of two white sisters who had dated Negro boys.

Police who called out reinforcements for a small guard at the house, said there was no violence. The white mother and her two daughters later asked the Iredell County sheriff to escort them out of town. They left in the "direction of" Asheville.

At about 11:30 p.m., 15 Negro youths ranging in age from 15 to 22, were arrested on Statesville's main street for disorderly conduct. Police said the young men were shouting insults at whites and forcing white people off the sidewalks.

The series of incidents were touched off early Thursday morning when police stopped a car for a routine check. They found two young Negro men and two white sisters in the car.

The Negro driver, Alfred James Smith, 22, was arrested and charged with operating the car without a license. His Negro companion was John Franklin Bruner, 20. The white sisters were Judith and Martha Lambeth.

Police said a small crowd gathered in the front yard of the Lambeth home Thursday night and a cross was burned.

At about 9:30 last night, another crowd began to gather around a knot of about six robed men, presumably Ku Klux Klansmen.

Police sent to guard the home ringed the house. They kept the crowds moving and finally blocked off the street to traffic.

Police said as many as 600 persons passed by the house, but they kept the crowd moving.

The mother of the two white sisters is a mill worker. The girls are not employed. Their father does not live in Statesville. Police said the two Negro boys told them the girls called them and arranged the date.

Near Race Riot Halted In Durham

News & Observer

DURHAM, Sept. 15 (P) — The timely arrival of police who fired pistols into the air broke up what could have been a serious race riot at Dillard and Main streets here early today.

Officers Jack Holt and J. H. Pendergrass were patroling near Liberty and Elizabeth streets at about 12:51 a.m. when they were stopped by a man who told them a fight was about to begin at a nearby bus terminal.

Holt said that when he and Pendergrass turned off Liberty into Dillard Street they found "the whole street blocked," and had to park the police car by the corner.

"We jumped from the car and started running where the crowd was gathered in the street," Holt reported. "As we approached the scene there were about six white men and three Negro men fighting in the street.

"The whites gathered at the scene with the colored. .. Both sides were advancing toward each other. There were about 4 Negroes and 2 whites and they were ready to fight.

"Officer Pendergrass and I ran into the middle of the crowd that was fighting and I fired two shots into the air and shouted for them to break up the fight. Both groups already had knives and bottles out when I fired.

"As the shots were fired both sides stopped fighting and the ones that were advancing on each other broke and ran from the scene."

Additional police arrived and quiet soon prevailed. No one seemed to know what the trouble was all about, police said.

In Greensboro, N. C.

News & Courier

Golf Segregation Argument Friday

Sun. 6-9-57 P. 7-a

Charleston S.C.

By CHARLES WEST

ASHEVILLE, N.C., June 8 (AP)—Greensboro, ordered by a federal court to let Negroes play on a city-owned white golf course, will argue that ruling here next Friday, two days after it takes effect.

38a

The case is docketed for a hearing by the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals. It could represent a major test of the theory that Southern cities can maintain segregated recreational facilities by leasing them to private corporations for operation.

U.S. Dist. Judge Johnson J. Hayes ruled last April 25 that segregation at Greensboro's Gillespie Park Golf Course must end by June 5. The Greensboro school board and the city own the course but lease it to a private corporation.

Ten Negroes brought the suit last Oct. 17, claiming the owners leased the course to the corporation "for the express purpose of aiding the City of Greensboro in carrying out its policy of excluding Negro citizens from this municipally owned golf course."

The city denied the allegation and countered that its sole desire was to get out of the golfing business.

Judge Hayes' ruling also barred the city and school board from disposing of the golf course "except by a bona fide sale." He prohibited enforcement of any restrictions denying Negroes the use of the facilities and denied stay of execution of judgment pending the appeals court decision.

The city appealed on the plea that Judge Hayes erred by not recognizing that the lease does not require segregation and that North Carolina lease laws make it impossible for the city to control operations of the golf course.

The city contended also that the court erred in finding that an agreement existed with the federal government to operate the course—built partly with federal funds—for public use during its useful life.

The Gillespie Park corporation based its appeal on two questions:

(1) "Was the defendant. . .(the corporation) entitled to a jury trial?"

(2) "Were the findings, conclusions, judgment, decree and injunction entered by the trial court proper upon the record and evidence in the case?"

Lawyers for the Negro golfers attacked the latter question as a "flagrant and irresponsible innuendo" against the integrity of Judge Hayes.

In a separate, but related, action a Municipal-County Court convicted six of the 10 Negro golfers of trespassing after they played at the Gillespie course. A Superior Court ruling later upheld the conviction and the judge sentenced the defendants to 30 - day jail terms.

N.C. Swimming Pool Test Looms

Daily World

Thurs. 6-27-57

GREENSBORO, N. C. — (ANP) — More acts of discrimination came out of this city last week as a noted educator and her companion were ousted from the all-white Lindsay Park swimming pool here after seeking admission to the pool.

Atlanta Ga.

Dr. Ann Gist and Miss J. Everett reported that they were "only interested in swimming and not making a test case", when they were denied admission to the pool by J. E. Bryson, pool director.

Dr. Gist, a doctor of philosophy, said she would report the incident to the local chapter of the NAACP She said no trouble occurred and orderliness prevailed among the thousand or more whites in the pool at the time, as they sought admission to the pool.

Bryson said he told the women that the Greensboro Park and Recreation Commission had adopted a policy barring Negroes from white pools and referring them to the public Negro pool at Windsor Center.

Suit hits jim crow at airport

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier 7-13

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Mrs. Martha S. Brisbane of NYC filed suit in Middle District Federal Court here last week to end all segregation in eating facilities at airports.

Named defendants in the suit in Mrs. Brisbane's petition are the Greensboro-High Point Airport here, members of the airport's governing body and managers of the airport restaurant and the airport itself.

The suit specifically attacks segregated dining facilities at the Greensboro-High Point Airport, but its aim is seen as a test of the legality of segregation in the use of facilities at any other airport.

* * *

SHE ATTEMPTED to obtain a meal at the airport restaurant last February 3 after she had arrived there by plane, Mrs. Brisbane said, and when she was not served, she asked for service.

She says she was then told by "servants of the defendants, whose names are unknown to" her, that it was the restaurant's policy to serve only white persons.

In her petition, she contends that "the plaintiff and all those similarly situated suffer and are threatened with irreparable injury" by the maintenance of segregated facilities at the airports.

* * *

SHE ASKS the court to enter "interlocutory and permanent injunctions restraining the defendants (the airport management) from making any distinctions based on color in regard to service at Greensboro-High Point Airport. . .

Also named defendants are members of the airport authority, J. T. Martin, Caesar Cone, F. Hall, R. T. Amos and Charles Kearns, along with the restaurant manager, Steve Vartis, and the airport manager, J. B. Queen.

Attorneys of record in the suit are Conrad O. Pearson of Durham, legal redress officer of the NAACP North Carolina Conference of Branches; Thurgood Marshall, NAACP chief counsel, and several other lawyers.

Fire blocks integration at golf club

Afro-American Baltimore Md. 7-6-57

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Gillespie Park Gold Club, under Federal court orders to end segregation Thursday, suspended operations the same day the order was to have gone into effect.

The suspension came after the club's building was condemned as a result of a mysterious Sunday night fire. John Hughes, president, who announced the decision, said the club's "future is undecided."

Mr. Hughes told newsmen "We have had a fire which has destroyed our facilities and the building has been condemned. The future is undecided."

* * *

THE FUTURE of the golf course has been a matter of speculation ever since Judge Johnson J. Hayes in Middle District Federal Court entered an order ending segregation at the municipal facility.

A ruling on an appeal from Judge Hayes' decision to the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals is expected in the near future. Meanwhile, he had refused to stay execution of his order pending a decision on the appeal.

Thus, his order that the golf club end segregation in the use of its facilities, including the clubhouse and the golf links, was to have gone into effect Thursday (June 27). The suspension thwarted that order.

Seven Negroes Are Fined In Durham Trespass Case

Courier Pitts. Pa. 7-13

DURHAM, July 17—(UP)—An all-white jury in Durham Superior Court upheld a Recorders Court judge today and found seven Negroes guilty of trespassing on the "white" side of a Durham ice cream parlor.

The judge fined each of the defendants, including a minister, $25 and court costs. Their attorneys indicated immediately after the decision that they intend to appeal the case to the North Carolina Supreme Court.

Solicitor W. H. Murdock contended that the case was simply one of trespass on private property and had nothing to do with the constitutional rights of individual citizens.

Marked For White.

The Negroes had been arrested for demanding service while seated on the side of the ice cream parlor marked for whites.

The trial centered around trespassing charges rather than an attack on the city ordinance which requires eating establishments serving both races to erect a partition between the two sections.

The chief defense argument was that the seven had not been forbidden to go on the property. They contended that a sign over the door which indicated it was for whites did not constitute such action.

The defense had asked earlier that the trespass charges be quashed on the grounds that they were based on race in violation of the constitution and that the operating license of the parlor does not grant the owner the "privilege of discriminating against citizens . . . on account of race and color."

Judge Clifton L. Moore overruled the dismissal motion and Murdock called his first witness, L. A. Coletta, part owner of the ice cream parlor.

Coletta told how the Negroes had sat on the "white" side of the parlor and refused to leave on his request June 23.

Murdock also called the police officer who had investigated the case as a prosecution witness.

The solicitor said he understood that the Negroes had met at a church and planned the incident. They intended to go to the "white" side and stay there until served or arrested, he said.

The group, headed by the Rev. Douglas E. Moore, was arrested and fined $10 and court costs each in Recorder's Court. They appealed the decision to superior court and agreed to have the seven cases tried as one. Four lawyers, William A. Marsh Jr., M. Hugh Thompson, C. O. Pearson and C. J. Gates, defended them.

Durham Negroes Go To Jail To Beat Jim Crow

Call 1-2 Fri. 8-2-57

Kansas City, Mo.

DURHAM, N. C. — (ANP) — Racial segregation is meeting stiffer opposition by North Carolina Negroes who are getting themselves arrested in a plan to beat old Jim Crow in various fields.

Two Negroes were arrested in Durham last week for playing tennis on a city court reserved for white people. The arrest was described as a test case. Seven Negroes were sentenced for trespassing on the white side of an ice cream dairy bar by Superior Court Judge Clifton L. Moore.

The judge told W. A. Marsh, one of the three Negro lawyers representing the defendants, that it was a test case. "That's exactly what it is and it's just as plain as the nose on your face," Judge Moore said.

Judge Moore sentenced the seven to fines of $25 each. The defendants immediately filed notice of an appeal to the state Supreme court.

The case dates back to June 23 when the Rev. Douglas E. Moore led the group into the dairy bar. Charges were filed after the men refused to go to the establishment reserved for Negroes or leave the place.

Rev. Mr. Moore said they went to the bar only "to get some ice cream" and he refused to leave because "I am a Christian and an American citizen."

Judge Moore made his remarks about the trial being a test case after Mr. Marsh moved for a nonsuit.

Arrested in the tennis case were Joseph Riley, 23, a North Carolina college student, and a 15-year-old youth who was turned over to the juvenile officers and released. leased.

Mr. Riley was charged with trespassing, using the courts without a permit, and violating the city's regulations requiring segregation in recreation. He was freed under $200 bond for hearing in Recorder's court.

Court Upholds Negro Golfers Rights in NC

Eagle P. 5-a
Thurs. 7-11-57
Tulsa, Okla.

GREENSBORO N.C. (ANP) — The Fourth Federal District Court of Appeals last week upheld a lower court's injunction forbidding the city of Greensboro from barring Negroes from using the Gillespie Park Golf Course here. The city had appealed the lower court's order, contending that it lacks jurisdiction because it leased the course to a private corporation.

The complainants on the other hand argued that the city disposed of the course improperly since it was built partly with funds from WPA.

Last week the Appeals court contending that the injunction was properly granted ruled:

"It is clear that this provision (leasing of the course) was inserted merely to prevent evasion of the court's order forbidding racial discrimination in the operation of the property; for it was followed by a reservation retaining jurisdiction and the power to modify the provision. . . ."

The court held that the city could dispose of the property by bona fide sale if it wants to.

Defendants in the case were the city of Greensboro which constructed the course partly with the funds furnished by the government's old WPA, the Greensboro city board of education which owned part of the land the course was built on and which operated the course under lease from the city.

New developments may throw out airport suit

Afro-American. Sat. 8-10-57.
Baltimore, Md.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (ANP) —Recent developments on the part of defendants in a suit filed by a New York woman charging discrimination at the Greensboro-High Point Airport here, may sidetrack actual litigation.

P. 17

Mrs. Martha S. Brisbane filed the petition charging bias against the Greensboro-High Point Airport Authority and a restaurant operator. She charged in her suit that she was denied service at the airport restaurant.

* * *

BOTH THE airport authority and Steve Bartis, operator of the cafe, contended last week that segregation is not practiced at the airport and said colored people have not been denied service because of their race.

The statements came in answer to Mrs. Brisbane's suit in Middle District court. Bartis said that if Mrs. Brisbane was denied service, it was done without his knowledge or consent and in violation of existing policies.

* * *

THE AIRPORT authority and its members, stated that Bartis operated the restaurant under a "bona fide" lease for his own benefit and "for this reason they are not indispensable, necessary, or proper parties" to the suit.

Bartis declared that his restaurant has practiced a policy of "serving the general public who are in the course of intrastate or interstate commerce without distinction based on color."

Charge of 'trespassing' on tennis court dropped

Afro-American P. 3
Sat. 8-3-57
Baltimore, Md.

DURHAM, N.C.—Following a motion by the defense for nonsuit in the trial of a 73-year-old man arrested for "trespassing on a municipal tennis court reserved for whites," Recorder Judge W. R. Wilson dropped the suit because of lack of state testimony last week.

The action came in the case of Joseph G. Riley who allegedly "trespassed" on tennis grounds "for whites only" and played a game of tennis himself.

In dismissing the case Judge Wilson pointed out that the state had presented no testimony to show that Riley had been "warned against" using the tennis court.

* * *

MR. RILEY and John H. Williams, a 15-year-old junior high school tennis champion, were jailed for playing on the court. Mr. Riley was freed on $200 bond and Williams was released after being turned over to Juvenile authorities.

Earlier, City Manager R. W. Flack had met with local leaders upon their request to discuss the matter. Flack said the conference was "pleasant", but added that officials decided to proceed with the trial because "it should be determined by the court."

In Durham County Superior Court earlier, seven persons were fined for "trespassing on the white side" of an ice cream parlor.

Airport Restaurant In Greensboro Faces Suit

Journal Wilmington N. C.
Sat. 2-6-57

GREENSBORO (ANP) — The Greensboro-High Point Airport here was hit by a segregation suit in federal court last week in a move that looms as a test case, challenging the legality of segregated dining facilities for Negro and white persons.

The action was brought into U. S. Middle District court here by a New York resident, Mrs. Margaret S. Brisbane. She named the airport, members of the airport governing body, the manager of the airport restaurant and the airport manager as defendants in the case.

Mrs. Brisbane's position complains that she attempted to eat in the airport restaurant last Feb. 3, but was refused service. She said she was told that the restaurant served whites only. The complaint charges that "the plaintiff and those similarly situated are threatened with irreparable injury by segregated eating facilities."

She asked the court to enter interloctory and permanent injunctions restraining the defendants from making any distinction based upon color in regard to service at the airport."

The suit was filed by NAACP legal redress attorney Conrad O. Pearson of Durham, and several other attorneys including NAACP chief counsel Thurgood Marshall of New York.

The petition is the first of its kind in this state and stands as a test case attacking the legality of segregated eating places at the airport.

City Golf Course Opened To Negroes In Charlotte, N.C.

Advertiser Montgomery Ala. 1-9-57 P. 3-A

CHARLOTTE, N.C., Jan. 8 (AP) — The Park and Recreation Commission formally opened Charlotte's municipal golf course to Negroes today.

The commission acted under a recent ruling by Superior Court Judge Susie Sharp which permanently enjoined the commission from denying Negroes use of the course.

On last Dec. 4 Judge Sharp had given the commission 90 days to open the course to Negroes.

The commission today bought reverted rights to portions of the course. The land, for which the commissioners paid $17,500, originally was deeded the city with a stipulation that it would revert to the donor if used by Negroes. Purchase of the rights removes the possibility of the loss of the land because Negroes use the course.

The commissioners unanimously moved to "proceed to eliminate any existing barriers against the use of Bonnie Brae Municipal Golf Course by Negroes."

Four years a group of 16 Negroes instituted the first legal action, claiming they had been denied the use of the course on the basis of race.

Negroes Given Golf Rights

Times-Herald Wed. 1-9-57

CHARLOTTE, Jan. 8 (AP) — The Park and Recreation Commission formally opened Charlotte's municipal golf course to Negroes today.

The commission acted under a recent ruling by Superior Court Judge Susie Sharp which permanently enjoined the commission from denying Negroes use of the course.

On last Dec. 4 Judge Sharp had given the commission 90 days to open the course to Negroes.

The commission today bought reverter rights to portions of the course. The land, for which the commissioners paid $17,500, originally was deed the city with a stipulation that it would revert to the donor if used by Negroes. Purchase of the rights removes the possibility of the loss of the land because Negroes use the course.

The commissioners unanimously moved to "proceed to eliminate any existing barriers against the use of Bonnie Brae municipal golf course by Negroes."

Four years ago a group of 16 Negroes instituted the first legal action, claiming they had been denied the use of the course on the basis of race.

N. C. Legislature Can't Be Trusted'

Afro-American Sat. 5-2-57

Baltimore, Md.

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — "Tarheelia has proved that an all white Legislature cannot be trusted to deal fairly with colored people as evidenced by its attempts to evade or circumvent the U.S. Supreme Court desegregation decision."

That is what Kelly M. Alexander, president of the N.C. Conferences of NAACP Branches, told some 400 persons attending a meeting of the local branch here Sunday.

The Charlotte leader also urged his listeners "to embark on an intense campaign of registration and voting in order to make themselves felt by your political representatives."

* * *

MR. ALEXANDER, NAACP head since 1948, added that "In spite of all of the reprisals and restrictions against colored people and the NAACP last year, it proved to be the best year in the organization's history."

Explaining the "continual and rising unrest among colored people over the refusal of the white majority to accord full citizenship status to our people," Mr. Alexander declared:

"The Colored American in the South can no longer conform to the pattern of second class citizenship reserved for him by the majority of southern whites."

* * *

THE DYNAMIC SPEAKER, a life member of the NAACP and a member of the national board of directors of the organizationl drew 22 rounds of applause from the enthusiastic audience during his 40 - minute speech.

Pleading with members in the audience to register and vote, get others to do so, pointing to the need for increasing the state's 145,000 colored voters to 300,000 by 1960, he declared:

"Tarheelia has proven that an all-white Legislature cannot be trusted to deal fairly by colored people as evidenced by its attempts to evade or circumvent the U.S. Supreme Court desegregation decision."

* * *

WHILE SPANKING the state's legislators for their shortcomings, he did not fail to lash out at the "complacency among colored persons" who fail to use the ballot to "strike a death blow at jim crow schools."

Pointing to the thousands of colored people in the state who are denied certa in jobs simply because of their race, Mr. Alexander asked "If North Carolina does not want a Federal FEPC law why does it not open up all jobs to our people?"

Pointing to the fact that the NAACP has won 38 of the 41 cases carried to the U.S. Supreme Court, he warned that "The road ahead is hard for the dominant race group and must be hard for the minorities, but true Americans must accept the challenge and conquer."

Chiding the nation for its creeping fear of communism, Mr. Alexander declared that the "greatest defense for democracy is its practice."

* * *

FRED ALEXANDER, brother of the speaker and grand senior warden of North Carolina Masons, pledged the support of the 500 Masonic lodges and their 25,000 members in the state to "do whatever is necessary to keep the NAACP program going in this state."

R. H. Beatty, former Army pilot and president of the local NAACP, presided and introduced the speaker. The Rev. C. R. Coleman gave the invocation and the Rev. C. R. Edwards pronounced the benediction.

Durham Negro Fans Attack Segregation At Baseball Park

Advocate Jackson, Miss. Sat. 4-27-57

Durham, N. C., April 23 — Racial segregation, believed to be at least part of the cause for withdrawal of one team from the Carolina League last year, arose again today in that baseball circuit.

About 150 Negroes sought admission to the city-owned Durham Athletic Park for last night's league opener but were offered seats only on a segregated basis. They had sought admission on a nonsegregated basis.

N. B. White, Negro civil leader, spokesman for the group, said:

"In view of the fact that the Durham Athletic Park is municipally owned, under no circumstances will we accept segregated seating on account of our race."

He declined to say whether the group here would take legal action to seek an end to segregated seating at the athletic park.

The city leases the park to Durham Sports Enterprise, Inc., which operates the baseball club and a recreation department spokesman said that the terms of the lease leaving policy up to the ball club.

Negro Youth Ordered Out Of N.C. Park

News + Observer Wed. 5-1-57 Raleigh, N.C.

A Negro student from Carolina was asked to leave William B. Umstead State Park Sunday.

As a result, the Carolina Cosmopolitan Club of which the student was a member transferred its picnic elsewhere.

Asked to outline park segregation policy, State Parks Supt. Thomas W. Morse gave this hazy reply:

"The policy is to call their (Negroes) attention to other facilities."

Morse said Sunday's incident was the first he had heard about in North Carolina.

He said Reedy Creek State Park, which is for Negroes, adjoins Umstead Park.

Asked what was the policy if a Negro insisted on using "white facilities," Morse answered, "We call their attention to other facilities."

The student asked to leave Umstead Park was LeRoy Frazier, a sophomore from Durham. The group finally had their picnic at Hogan's Lake near Chapel Hill.

Composed of around 40 members, the Cosmopolitan Club is made up mostly of foreign students."

Negroes Request Theater Boycott

Courier-Journal Tues. 4-30-57 Louisville, Ky.

Greensboro, N. C., April 29 (UP) Negroes called for a boycott of Greensboro movie houses today because a minister of their race was ordered to a Jim Crow balcony when he presented his invitation to a preview of "The Ten Commandments."

The metropolitan population of Greensboro, including all of Guilford County, is 190,320, of which 37,235 are Negroes. This was the first such protest in this state.

The leader of the theater boycott was Dr. Edson Edmonds, professor of sociology at Bennett College for Negro Women here and head of the local unit of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People.

Negroes Seek Movie Boycott

News + Observer Tues. 4-30-57 Raleigh, N.C.

GREENSBORO, April 29 (UP) —Negroes called for a boycott of Greensboro movie houses today because a minister of their race was ordered to a Jim Crow balcony when he presented his invitation to a preview of "The Ten Commandments."

Leaders described the move as a "passive, Ghandi-type" resistance patterned after the bus boycott at Montogmery, Ala., where Negroes were finally victorious when the Supreme Court ordered transit integration.

The leader of the theater boycott was Dr. Edson Edmonds, professor of sociology at Bennett College for Negro Women here and head of the local unit of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Negroes Boycott Movie Houses

Advocate p. 3 Sat. 5-11-57

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 7.— Negroes called for a boycott of movie houses last Monday. They acted after a Negro minister had been ordered to a segregated balcony when he presented his invitation to a preview of "The Ten Commandments."

Jackson, Miss.

The population of Greensboro, in Guilford County, is 190,320, of whom 37,235 are Negroes, many of them college students. This was the first such protest in the state.

Integration Sought In Theatre, Library

Afro-Magazine Baltimore, Md. P. 11

Sat. 6-1-57

DURHAM, N.C.—"I feel that discrimination is unfair, is undemocratic and unChristian and I feel sure that this group will sustain this (my) position."

That is what a minister said last week in City Council as he called upon the councilmen to desegregate the city-owned Carolina Theatre and the Durham Public Library.

He was the Rev. Douglas E. Moore, who asked the City Council to declare segregation at the two places "contrary to city policy." He pointed out that he had been denied admittance to both the library and the theatre this month.

City Attorney C. V. Jones declined to offer an opinion in either case without first studying the theatre lease and the library set-up, but suggested that the theatre may fall into the same category as the city-owned Durham Athletic Park.

His opinion in the park case held that the city is not liable for segregation there since it leaves seating arrangements for minor league baseball games there in the hands of the operators of the minor league team.

He declared specifically in his opinion that "any unlawful discrimination against any of the citizens of Durham in the enjoyment of the use of this park are not the acts of the city."

"If you have a lease with the North Carolina Theatres (operators of the Carolina) and there is nothing in there about segregation," then there may be no question of the city's policy involved, he told the councilmen.

The council gave no indication of its position on the matter one way or the other, but Mayor E. J. Evans promised the Rev. M. Moore that the matter would "be considered" after Mr. Jones offers his opinion.

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Shuffling a minister to a jim-crow balcony after inviting him to a preview of the "Ten Commandments," backfired for Greensboro theater owners last week. A boycott of the city's theaters has been started among the city's 37,235 colored residents, led by Dr. Edson Edmonds, Bennett College sociology professor.

Durham Hears De-Segregation Request

News & Observer Wed. 5-22-57 Raleigh, N.C.

DURHAM, May 21 (AP)—A Negro minister called on the City Council here last night to de-segregate the city-owned Carolina Theater and the Durham Public Library.

The Rev. Douglas E. Moore asked the Council to declare segregation at the two places "contrary to city policy." He said he had been denied admittance to the theatre and library this month.

Although City Attorney C. V. Jones declined to offer an opinion in either instance without first studying the theater lease and the library setup, he suggested that the theater may fall into the same category as city-owned Durham athletic park.

According to his opinion the city's lease of the athletic park for minor league baseball here leaves segregation in the hands of the Durham Sports Enterprise, Inc., operator of the team. This opinion specifically declared that "any unlawful discrimination against any of the citizens of Durham in the enjoyment of the use of this park . . . are not the acts of the city."

Jones told the Council that "If you have a lease with the North Carolina Theaters (operators of the Carolina) and there is nothing in there about segregation," then there may be no question of the city's policy involved.

The Council gave no indication of its position on Moore's statement. Mayor E. J. Evans told him it would be considered after Jones offers his opinion.

In asking for a clear anti-segregation policy statement by the Council, Moore said, "I feel discrimination is unfair, is undemocratic and is un-Christian."

He added: "I feel sure this group will sustain this position."

N.C. Hotel policy causes medical convention shift

Afro-American Sat. 5-11-57 Baltimore, Md.

ASHEVILLE, N.C.—Unwillingness of Pinehurst, N.C., hotels to accept colored patrons has resulted in the shifting of the N.C. Medical Society's 103rd annual convention to Asheville.

The society voted two years ago to accept colored doctors on a scientific basis, but the Pinehurst hotels, where the convention has been held for more than a decade, said they would not accept the colored physicians.

Dr. Murray B. Davis, High Point, N.C., president of the Old North State Medical Society, the oldest such colored group in the nation, said that it is unlikely that any colored doctors will attend the convention since the limited membership is not acceptable to them.

Two Negro Women Denied Greensboro Pool Admission

News & Observer Thur. 6-20-57 Raleigh, N.C.

GREENSBORO, June 19 (AP)—Two Negro women, Dr. Ann Gist and her companion, Miss J. Everett, were turned away this afternoon as they sought admission to the all-white Lindley Park swimming pool.

Admitting she and her companion were the Negro women who called at the admission desk at the pool about 1:50 p.m. today, Dr. Gist stated that they were interested only in swimming and "not in making a test case."

Report to NAACP.

However, Dr. Gist, who said she was a doctor of philosophy, said she would report the incident to the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as one illustrating discrimination.

The women were identified following a diligent investigation during the afternoon.

J. E. Bryson, the pool director, met the two and told them that the Greensboro Parks and Recreation Commission had adopted a policy barring Negroes from the white pool and referring them to the public Negro pool at Windsor Center.

1,000 Present.

About a thousand white persons were at the Lindley Park Pool at the time of the incident. Around 200 were at the Windsor Center pool at the same time.

Bryson said the women were orderly and raised no "fuss" over being denied admission and being directed to the Negro pool.

Dr. Gist corroborated Bryson's account of the incident and stated that everyone concerned was polite and orderly.

Durham had a similar incident to occur last week when Negroes sought admission to a white swimming pool there.

A suit now is pending in Federal Court pertaining to recreation. It was brought by 10 Greensboro Negroes who were fined for trespassing after trying to use the Gillespie golf course.

The Durham and Greensboro swimming pool incidents are the first reported in the State this summer involving this type of recreation.

Ohio City citizens must leave town to get a haircut

Afro-American p. 6

TIFFIN, Ohio (ANP) — Colored students at Heidelberg College, as well as other colored residents, cannot get haircuts in this community.

The Seneca County Community Council has joined the Student Christian Association of Heidelberg College in urging barber shops to open their doors to all persons, irrespective of race or color.

Representatives of the groups said that colored students, including Walt Livingston, football star, are unable to obtain barber service in Tiffin.

Toledo bans racial tags on applications

Afro-American

TOLEDO, Ohio (ANP) — The Toledo Civil Service Commission has agreed to eliminate all questions in job applications that require persons to divulge race, nationality or religion.

The action was taken at the request of the Toledo Board of Community Relations, whose representatives said the step would bring the commission into compliance with the city's fair employment practices or-

Some nine years ago there were a rash of complaints about biased cab drivers. They subsided after the Toledo NAACP registered complaints, and later the company began its policy of employing Negro drivers.

Bias Transferred From Home To School, Survey Concludes

World Birm, Ala. p. 4 Sat. 6-15-57

TOLEDO, Ohio — (ANP) — A study by a Toledo elementary school faculty has underscored a long standing belief that racial prejudices can be erased only if they are acknowledged as such.

The study was conducted by the school in cooperation with the Board of Community Relations and had the approval of the Toledo Board of Education.

EYES OPENED

Miss Bell Schuh, principal of the school, said her 30-teacher study group had its "eyes opened to what is happening around us."

As a result, she said, her teachers became aware — many for the first time — that group prejudices exist in school and affect both teachers and pupils.

The report took the position that children tend to bring family attitudes to school with them, and prejudices increase with age.

The survey group suggested neighborhood programs as one way to "create an awareness among parents as to prejudices in the home and to stimulate parental thinking."

Toledo Cab Company Reaffirms Non-Bias Stand

Daily World Thurs. 3-14-57

Atlanta Ga. p. 2

TOLEDO, Ohio — (ANP) — The Red Cab Co. here has reaffirmed its policy of service to all patrons, irrespective of their race, creed or color.

The restatement of policy was made after the Board of Community Relations reported that it had received several complaints that Negro passengers were being passed up by drivers for the company.

The company said that it was posting notices for all drivers that they must adhere to its established policy of no racial discrimination in service.

The firm was joined in its statement by Local 508, International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs.

"Failure to pick up Negroes, or any other person regardless of race, creed or color, is not only a violation of the law," Joseph W. Cook, president of the local declared, "but a violation of union rules."

Negroes Protest NAACP Official

CUSHING, Okla.—(INS) — Two leaders of Cushing's largest Negro organizations were on record last week charging a national Negro group's representative with "rabble-rousing tactics" in fabricating complaints of "local injustices."

Told to keep his campaign out of Cushing was John White, of El Reno, youth director in Oklahoma for the NAACP.

Tom Withers, president of the Negro Chamber of Commerce, and J. L. Douglas, who heads the Negro Masonic Lodge in Cushing, said their groups do not want to be drawn into any "smear campaign" and they did not want White "meddling in our affairs."

White told newsmen that a group of Cushing and Stillwater Negro citizens banded together following a recent countywide organizational meeting to demand that city officials stop discrimination against members of his race.

White claimed that a county chapter of the NAACP was organized to protest the discharge of Negro citizens from municipal jobs and teaching positions in public schools.

W. D. Carr, superintendent of city schools and Gene N. Hancock, chairman of the city council, denied any firings since integration started.

Withers and Douglas said an investigation by local civic clubs had failed to uncover a single resident from Cushing who attended the meeting in Stillwater. In a prepared statement, the two local leaders said the accusations put the Negro "on the spot," and they denied there was any mistreatment or job discrimination.

They added that Negro citizens in Cushing do not "appreciate being named in a move of which they have no knowledge and have not endorsed."

Negro GI on Way To Arkansas With Carbine Is Seized

CHICKASHA, Okla., Sept. 14 (AP).—A Negro soldier who Chickasha police said apparently was en route to Little Rock, Ark., with a carbine to take a hand in the integration crisis, was captured here last night.

The soldier fled from Fort Sill, 50 miles southwest of here, Thursday night after hitting a guard over the head and taking his gun.

He was identified as Henry Cross, 26, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y.

Military police said Cross had been involved in heated arguments over the Little Rock racial situation, and had threatened to kill Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

Cross was walking down a Chickasha street with the carbine slung over his shoulder when he was arrested by Police Capt. Noland Forbis. He offered no resistance. The soldier wore Army fatigues with the words "Mau Mau" stenciled in large letters across the front.

Police Break Up Mixed Party After Neighbors Complain

The joint ws jumping, nd the neighbors were complining!

Then the police force went into action. Officers Paul Ming, George Englebretson, C. W. Roberts and J. W. Ford raided a house at 2725 N. E. 16th and arrested William Saddler jr., 19, for what they called operating a disorderly house and contributing to the delinquency of minor girls.

The raid took place after officers said they had received several reports that mixed race parties were thrown in the home.

Along with Saddler were arrested three other Negro men, identified as: Embrick August ,25, Joe August, 20, and Frank James Eugene, 28, all of whom listed their homes as being in Lake Charles, La.; and four white teenaged girls. Rrom these, only one was old enough to hold in jail. She was identified as Fannie Sue Whitlock, 18, of 1205 N. W. 48th; the other three listed their ages as 16 and 17, and were released to their parents with instructions to report to children's court for hearings.

One of the girls, 16, was said to have run away from home Monday.

All denied that anything immoral took place. The girls told officers that they had been "visitors" in the home several times.

Saddler told officers that he lived in the house with his father.

Upon further questioning, some of the girls admitted having sexual relations with the men and the affairs normally lasted until the early morning hours.

Officers said that two of the 16-year-old girls have admitted staying at the rented house with several of the men for the past five days.

The whole thing evidently got started last spring when one of the girls met a boy at a Classen highschool track meet. One of the girls began dating the boy and told her friends about the parties.

One of the girls was quoted as saying, "We didn't see anything wrong with going over there. We like to dance and there wasn't any place else to go in the city."

The parents of every girl involved have been asked to have their daughters checked by a physician as soon as possible. It is stated that one 17-year-old girl avoided answering any questions concerning pregnancy.

All of the girls involved are being turned over to the county juvenile court for special hearings. State charges are being considered against the men.

Portland Urban League Seeks Action Against Biased Buildings

Daily Journal Atlanta, Ga
Tues. 7-16-57

PORTLAND, Oregon — (ANP)— The Urban League of Portland has called upon organizations and individuals "who believe in equal opportunity" to take action against the policy of the management of Portland's Medical Arts Building which has resulted in the refusal of office space to a Negro dentist.

The League has sent detailed memorandums on its findings in the case to local groups, suggesting letters and other constructive action.

The dentist who was turned down is Dr. Clarence O. Pruitt, who graduated from the University of Oregon dental school in Portland in 1954, and served two years as a dental officer in the Air Force. Upon his discharge, a year ago he was appointed an instructor in the dental school's crown and bridge department.

JOINT PRACTICE

In April of this year, Pruitt and a white fellow instructor in the dental school, proposing to set up a joint practice, located a vacancy in the Medical Arts building suited to their needs. The office was already equipped, having been occupied by a dentist who had passed away suddenly earlier in the year. This equipment was available at modest cost. However, the reception room would be shared with two physicians.

When approached, the two physicians stated they would welcome the arrangement with Pruitt. However, when Pruitt and his partner talked to the building manager, Gerard Macnamara, he flatly rejected the proposed arrangement, declaring tenants would move out of the building if a Negro were to move in. He adamantly refused to divulge the names of the owners of the building.

Pruitt reported the matter to the Urban League in April, but asked that no action be taken at that time because he was seeking the help of the dental association. The League learned in June that the Portland District Dental Society had voted to condemn the owners of any building who refused office space to a member of the Society "solely because of race, religion or national origin." The state dental association was expected to follow a similar course.

Daily Oregonian
7-14-57

Not proud to be white, woman tells NAACP

Afro American p. 15

38a

PHILADELPHIA

The recent eruption of violence in Little Rock, Nashville and Birmingham has brought a flood of letters and phone calls to the NAACP from indignant white citizens asking what can they do to help and offering their support to the local agency.

Representing different sections of Greater Philadelphia, these individuals bitterly condemned desegregation foes and termed their actions more harmful than "atomic reactions."

One such call came from a woman in New Jersey, who identified herself as white, and hastily added that she was "not proud of the fact" at that moment.

She said the newspaper account of the colored children being turned away from school by a jeering southern Little Rock mob was unbearable. The lady then stated that she wanted to become a member of the NAACP and would like blanks to get other members.

One call came from a family of German refugees who stated that they know the feeling of suppression. They, too, volunteered to aid the NAACP.

One of the letters came from a woman who pointed out that she has always been a "friend" of the NAACP, but felt now is the time to "stand up and be counted."

Bal. 9-28-57

IN REPLYING to queries as to what can be done, NAACP officials stated, they have invariably appealed for membership to take up the slack created by outlawing of the NAACP in many of the states where violence is most noticeable.

Police Rookies Added to Fight On Race Unrest

Atlanta, Ga. Constitution p. 11

Sun. 10-6-57

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (AP)—Police have assigned 70 rookies from the police academy to join a concerted effort against teenage violence, which has taken on racial overtones in recent weeks.

The student policemen, in the third week of their 10-week training course, went on foot patrol Friday night in sections where disturbances have been most frequent. Police Commissioner Thomas J. Gibbons said the rookies would be sent out again Saturday.

Police officials said usually the rookies do not get actual police assignments until they have completed at least five weeks of training. The 70 assigned to the job carry revolvers as well as night sticks.

* * *

IN ANOTHER move against racial tension among the city's juveniles, the city's commission on human relations issued an invitation to nearly 500 public officials and community leaders to talk over the situation. The invitation was issued by Nathan L. Edelstein, commission chairman.

Friday a court trial was set Nov. 7 for six south Philadelphia youths involved in one of the racial incidents.

The six, all Negroes, are accused of dragging a 17-year-old white girl into the yard of Audenreid Junior High School and severely beating her. Each pleaded innocent at their arraignment before Judge Byron A. Milner

Strife - Torn Philadelphia Mired In Racial Hatred

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 10-31-57

P-9-A

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30 (AP) — The City of Brotherly Love is a modern day promised land where 600,000 Negroes and 1,400,000 whites are learning to live side by side—the hard way.

There have been racial tensions in Philadelphia on a scattered scale since the influx of Southern Negroes began to burst the boundaries of confining Negro neighborhoods.

But there was no major violence until the teen-ager took over with gang warfare. That still wasn't big enough to shake the city awake.

Not until the U.S. Supreme Court decision was followed by the recent Little Rock, Ark., school integration crisis did Philadelphia realize how deep-rooted and dangerous its racial troubles were.

INCREASINGLY BEARABLE

Pennsylvania has passed a state fair employment practices act. Political and civic leaders took every possible step to make the lot of the Negro an increasingly bearable one.

In two decades, Philadelphia's Negro population doubled—mainly in bulging pockets of South Philadelphia and west of the Schuylkill River. Gradually, the Negro reached into previously all-white sections.

The white middle income group feared this movement in the declared belief a great majority of the crimes in the city involved Negroes, particularly young Negroes.

The police figures on juvenile arrests alone for 1956 seemed to bear out these fears. They showed arrests for Negro youths, through age 16, totaled 6,815. Arrests of whites in the same age bracket totaled 4,630. The figures do not contain any breakdown on economic living conditions. No specific figures on the juvenile population were available but statisticians estimate the percentage of Negroes as compared with whites in the under-16 category would approximate the more than 2-1 whites over Negro ratio in the overall figure.

NEGRO-WHITE BATTLES

There were indications of the race hatred underneath. In 1956, Negro and white teen-agers met in violent combat after basketball games at predominantly Negro Overbrook High School in West Philadelphia. The star of the Overbrook team then was seven-foot Wilt Chamberlain, Negro star at Kansas now.

The Negro-white battles of last year were not considered racial riots in the strictest sense of the word.

Whether this was true or not, the results were brutal and frightening. Last March, Magistrate George Levin urged policemen here to use their night sticks and said, "Law and order does not exist in Philadelphia."

Violence flared up from time to time. Vice Principal Louis Narbonne and two other teachers at Shaw Junior High School in West Philadelphia tried to stop a gang of Negro hoodlums from annoying children outside the school. Narbonne and his companions were sent to the hospital after a vicious beating.

Last July, a North Philadelphia neighborhood was aroused by the shotgun slaying of elderly druggist Jacob Wallfield by three young Negro robbers. Again those most incensed by the crime made little note of the assailants' color. The hue and cry was based on the respect and admiration Wallfield, a white man, had inspired among his neighbors.

OPEN HATRED

Then came Little Rock. As Philadelphians read of the Arkansas city's race troubles, whites and Negroes looked at one another with a new suspicion, even open hatred.

Philadelphia's schools were long since integrated. The Negro could come and go pretty much as he pleased. But there were unwritten restrictions even yet. By and large the Negro was still clustered in certain areas through little choice of his own.

In the schools of South Philadelphia, North Philadelphia, West Philadelphia, Germantown and the great sprawling northeast section of the city, teen-agers lined up on their own side of the color line.

The night of Oct. 18 brought the spark.

That evening, pretty 17-year-old Katherine Heckart was returning from a visit with relatives to her South Philadelphia home. As she walked past a darkened schoolyard, four young Negroes stepped from behind an iron fence, grabbed her and dragged the screaming girl into the blackness.

MOMENTS OF TERROR

In the next few moments of terror and brutality she was assaulted and beaten unmercifully. Three of her teeth literally were kicked from her mouth. One of her ribs was broken.

Police arrested the Heckart girl's attackers. A gang of teen-age Negroes marched on a white area of South Philadelphia—to retaliate for what they considered unfair police action. The rumor fanned out that Negro bands intended to rape six white girls for every Negro youth arrested.

Luckily for all concerned, police headquarters got wind of the march and dispatched a flying squad.

A few fists flew cut but quick police intercession prevented a major riot.

In the days to follow, sporadic flareups continued. Whites were the victims in some instances, Negroes in others.

SPORADIC FLAREUPS

On Sept. 29, 15-year-old William Fluck, a white youngster, was attacked by Negro teen-agers in North Philadelphia. In that melee, young Fluck was stabbed in the back. His spinal cord was severed and today he faces probable permament paralysis.

The same night, a Negro boy, Melvin Reeves, 13, was severely beaten by a group of white teen-agers only a few blocks from the attack on young Fluck.

Philadelphia Police Commissioner Thomas Gibbons said the situation stemmed directly from Little Rock. Others blamed a breakdown of discipline among the juvenile segment of the city's population.

What is the city of brotherly love doing about all this?

Mayor Richardson Dilworth says "that racial tensions here are at their highest peak in 30 years."

"The Southern situation," said the mayor, "has had tremendous repercussions in the North.

"Our problem in the next few months is to see that these tensions, these primitive hatreds, die down. We must calm ourselves down."

COMMUNITY SUFFERS

Lewis M. Hoskins, executive secretary of the American Friends (Quaker) Service Committee said the recent flareups "mean that our community suffers, maybe more than we care to admit, from many of the ills that debase human dignity."

"What can we do to correct these ills in our way of life?" he said. "We can help new neighbors feel welcome in the communities. We can speak up for full equality for students and teachers. We can help the minority worker find employment on his merits."

Mrs. Clara Baldwin, a North Philadelphia Negro housewife took a fundamental approach to the problem. Mrs. Baldwin started a drive to raise funds for the families of William Fluck and Melvin Reeves. The bulk of the funds raised will go to the white youngster because of his more serious injury. The balance will help the family of the Negro boy pay medical bills.

Life In Levittown

A news story taken from the New York Post properly bears the skull & crossbones label, since its business in the life of journalism is not factual reporting but ideological spasms and convulsions, not to mention fits, and those running. But unlike the typical northern paper, the Post does systematically report race strife in the North. And in fairness, it must be said that it is just as emotional in the case of the North as in the South. Now consider the following dispatch from a special correspondent:

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Tues. 10-31-57

LEVITTOWN, Pa., Sept. 30—Hate dies hard.

Hate has survived fall's first frost. It gives unemployed men a full-time occupation. It has elaborate plans for Hallowe'en devilment.

Hate, with its parent, ignorance, have given Dogwood Hollow's mailmen an extra heavy load. It has given the community's church leaders an extra heavy burden.

Hate has been a neighbor of William and Daisy Myers since the young Negro couple moved into their $12,000 home in what had been an exclusively white housing development.

Hate, eating at the town's soul, today stirred new unhappiness here. There were charges of police nonfeasance. Ugly rumors were circulating.

"We just can't take it," Lewis Wechsler told the Post.

Wechsler and Myers live side by side on Deepgreen Lane. Wechsler's wife, Bea, befriended the Negro couple. He and others who joined him have been harassed constantly since.

"'KKK" is painted in huge red letters on one side of Wechsler's ranch style home.

A cross has been burned on the lawn he tended through a never-to-be forgotten summer when mobs gathered for eight days in mid-August to jeer the Myers family and call Wechsler's wife a "nigger-lover."

"The fear in this town is enough to curl your hair," Wechsler said. "Those who were neutral before, are afraid to open their mouths now.

"The trouble-makers are as brazen as can be. The place is cluttered with Confederate flags. Plans are to dress up in white sheets Ku Klux Klan style for Hallowe'en."

Fatigue clouded the handsome 38-year-old machinists' face.

"The way things are going I'm afraid the only way to prevent real trouble is to make some arrests — on serious charges.

"Authorities are passing the buck. Somebody is being lax. I'm no lawyer but it seems to be there is a conspiracy to intimidate and maybe do actual physical harm.

"We're citizens of Pennsylvania. This is happening to us. And nothing is being done about it."

The phone rang. He picked up the receiver, listened, replaced it in the hook.

"Is it true you're a nigger-lover, Mr. Wechsler?" he mimicked his caller. "They phone us like this all hours of the night.

"And the mail. Everyone has received it, including the police chief. I think they have it all ready to mail and they simply address the envelopes when your name appears in the papers."

He tossed a pile of letters and postcards on the table. The envelopes contained leaflets—anti-NAACP, anti-Semitic, anti-U.N., anti-Catholic.

Most dress their invective in the garb of patriotism and anticommunism.

There is a newspaper clipping headlined: "Five Are Held in Girl's Attack." And a letter accompanying it notes:

"This could have been your wife or daughter."

It is interesting to see the Confederate flag flying this far north in Pennsylvania. This is farther than even General Lee ever planted it.

AND RIGHT IN OUR OWN BACK YARD

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Race Trouble In Philadelphia

The Philadelphia Inquirer

PHILADELPHIA does not have to look to Little Rock, or even Levittown, to see interracial problems and tensions at work. There are plenty of them right here and it does no good — and may cause considerable harm — to act as though they did not exist.

For the last two weeks, for instance, this city has been swept by a wave of teenage riotings, gang fights and savage beatings.

Attempts to belittle these outbreaks as routine manifestations of juvenile delinquency, without racial overtones, evade the issue and run away from the facts. Most of the fights and the beatings have had Negroes and whites on opposite sides; in many cases there was evidence of deliberate plotting by one or both parties to "get" the other.

Immediate incitement for the acts of violence was provided by the events in Little Rock: Gov. Faubus' defiance of a federal court order calling for the admission of Negro children in a previously all-white school; his employment of armed force to exclude the children; and President Eisenhower's dramatic upholding of the law by the use of Army troops that assured safe passage of the Negro pupils and the repression of mob violence: these developments have had repercussions in some city neighborhoods and schools where inter-racial hostility has been a factor.

That only a very small proportion of Philadelphia's school-age children are affected by this problem does not lessen its importance.

RECENT days in Philadelphia have witnessed a savage gang attack on a white girl in a school yard at night; a vicious stabbing of a white boy, that severed part of his spinal cord and may bar him from walking again; the beating of a Negro boy by six whites; the clubbing of a white boy on the face with a milk bottle by a Negro gang; the injury of other boys, Negro and white, in a series of corner fights and gang sorties.

This is only a partial list, but it points up the senseless savagery that has marked the teenage fighting. It gives warning, also, of what might happen should the outbreaks in Philade persist and take on aggravated more dangerous form, with perhaps a support and participation. Race co flict, once sparked, can have explosi consequences.

What should be done?

First of all, Philadelphia should recognize that inter-racial problems are not solved by pretending they are not there.

Secondly, the immediate issue of street-corner and back-alley gang violence should be met by forceful police action.

Finally, and most important, the city of Philadelphia should take over-all action to ease inter-racial tension; to get at the sources of teenage troublemaking in the schools and in certain sections of the city and to promote regard for the rights of all citizens, whatever their race, color or religion.

THE responsible authorities and agencies in Philadelphia, headed by the mayor, should make their leadership felt in this crisis. They should act before further, and possibly much more serious, trouble develops.

As a starter, Mayor Dilworth should set up a meeting, or series of meetings, with community leaders, Negro and white, who could help develop a practicable program. Our Negro citizens are as desirous as any one else to have law and order upheld, and violence and conflict averted. Their leaders in many fields, including law, politics and religion, could provide invaluable aid to the city administration in coping with the teenage outbreaks.

There are many others the mayor would doubtless consult: representatives of religious faiths, school officials and teachers, social workers, Community Chest representatives, officials of city and state welfare agencies, individuals connected with neighborhood and social clubs and, of course, the police.

The agitation of extremists has been at work, here as in other parts of the country, setting American against American, race against race. It is time for leadership, forthright and courageous, to act on behalf of all the people, before a dangerous situation gets out of hand.

Big Rally Marks 3d Year Of Integration Decision

Herald Tribune Sat. 5-18-57 P.2

New York

By Earl Mazo

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Thousands of civil-rights advocates from many states gathered at the Abraham Lincoln Memorial today to observe the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation in schools. They set their sights on the next major goal—getting "the right to vote" for all Negroes.

Speakers also warned both political parties to stop stalling on the civil-rights bill now before Congress, or lose the Negro vote.

"Give us the ballot and we will no longer have to worry the Federal government about our basic rights," declared the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, of Montgomery, Ala., in the wind-up address of the three-hour "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom."

Gives Pledge

The twenty-nine-year-old minister, who directed the successful passive-resistance drive against bus segregation in his Deep-South community and now is becoming one of America's best known Negro leaders, promised if Southern negroes are freely permitted to vote "We will quietly, and non-violently, without rancor or bitterness, implement the Supreme Court's (school) decision"

He also forecast that widespread Negro voting in the South would end "hooded violence," cause "men of good will" to be elected to the state legislatures and Congress, create a judiciary composed of men who "do justly and love mercy," and bring about the election of Southern Governors "who have felt not only the tang of the human, but the glow of the Divine."

Prayer and Hymns

Eleven other prominent Negroes spoke, a dozen bishops and ministers prayed or read Scripture, and there was considerable singing of hymns and patriotic music during the revival-like assemblance in which the crowd signified approval of what was said by shouting "amen" or waving hankerchiefs, instead of applauding.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D., N. Y., called for a nation-wide church-led drive in which Negroes would use such devices as work stoppages, picket lines, economic boycotts, slow-downs and sit-down strikes to fight discrimination.

A. Philip Randolph, moderator of the program and a vice-president of the A. F. L.-C. I. O., denounced the drive in many Southern states to outlaw or cripple the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has sparked most recent anti-segregation efforts.

"We tell those who worship the false gods of white supremacy in the South to keep their evil hands off the N. A. A. C. P.," said Mr. Randolph.

Many on the program urged President Eisenhower to put his prestige more forcefully behind moves to gain acceptance for school integration—and against racial violence—in the South.

While Republicans and Democrats were blamed, almost equally, for slowness on the civil rights bill, Rep. Charles C. Diggs jr., a leading Negro Democrat from Detroit, pointed a more accusing finger at his own party—and warned that Democrats at every level will suffer in the 195 8election if there is no action.

Negro Lead Urged

The youthful Rev. Dr. King—described by the veteran Mr. Randolph as "a prophet of our times"—sounded one of the most solemn notes of the observance when he asserted that "strong, courageous and intelligent leadership from the Negro community" is one of the "most urgent" present needs.

"This is no day for the rabble rouser, whether he be Negro or white," he said. "Let us never become bitter," he added.

The crowd—including stage and sports celebrities and more than 500 ministers, many wearing black pulpit robes and colorful adornments of their church offices—came to Washington in motorcades and by bus, special train and air line.

Walks From N. J.

One man, the Rev. Milton Perry, of Jersey City, walked. The twenty-one-year-old minister negotiated the 220 miles on foot since Sunday, and arrived in the middle of today's ceremony—collapsing, dramatically, in a policeman's arms and after uttering a few words of greetings.

While the audience overflowed the area in front of Lincoln Memorial, its size was a disappointment at least to the "pilgrimage" publicity agent who had forecast a crowd of 50,000.

The police official in charge said 15,000 were actually on hand today, but the publicity agent disagreed. He estimated the crowd at 27,000, and insisted that some bus convoys had been delayed en route.

Today's ceremony began at noon—as planned—to mark the exact hour when the Supreme Court's school decision was handed down three years ago by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

NEGROES CALL FOR ACTION TO LIFT RACE CURB

Daily Tribune Sat. 5-18-57 Chicago Ill.

Washington, May 17 (AP)—Negro leaders at a mass demonstration before the Lincoln Memorial today called on President Eisenhower and Congress to put more teeth in the Supreme court's anti-segration decisions. P.3

Several thousand, almost all of them Negroes, took part in this "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" o nthe third anniversary of the court's ban on racial segregation in public schools.

Police Inspector Melvin Leach estimated the crowd at noon was 12,000, against the 50,000 predicted in advance by sponsors. The pilgrimage public relations director, John Young, put the crowd at 25,000.

Rips Executive Branch

The Rev. M. L. King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., told the assemblage that so far only the judicial branch of the government has given "strong, aggressive leadership" in the civil rights field.

Referring to measures he said have been taken against Negroes in the south, the clergyman, a leader in the Montgomery campaign against bus segregation, asserted:

"In the midst of the tragic breakdown of law and order, the executive branch of the government is all too silent and apathetic.

"In the midst of the desperate need for civil rights legislation, the legislative branch of the government is all too stagnant and hypocritical."

King said both the Democrats and Republicans have "betrayed the cause of justice" on civil rights questions.

Tells Eisenhower to Act

Another speaker, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, addressed his remarks directly toward Mr. Eisenhower. The White House is a few blocks from the site of the open air meeting.

Randolph urged Mr. Eisenhower, who he said is "undoubtedly possessed of a high sense of humanity," to "speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that hang like a pall over the hearts of citizens of color in the south."

Anoher speaker, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, assailed special laws "aimed at the N. A. A. C. P." he said, in states ranging from Virginia to Texas.

"These laws deny basic American freedoms," Wilkins said. "They deserve the attention of every American, for they can and will be used against white cit izens as well as colored. They are so oppressive that they may well force the N. A. A. C. P. to consider new methods of operation."

Wilkins did not elaborate on this last remark.

Herald Tribune—United Press telephoto

CIVIL RIGHTS PILGRIMAGE—The Rev. Daniel E. Wahl kneeling before the statue of Abraham Lincoln at the Lincoln Memorial. Mr. Wahl was among thousands of persons who went to Washington yesterday to rally for "racial justice."

Negro Pilgrimage Rejects Red Support

Herald-Tribune Sun. 5-19-57 New York

By WILLIAM GALBRAITH,
United Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Negro leaders rallying before the Abraham Lincoln Memorial today rejected Communist support in their civil rights fight and appealed to President Eisenhower to give them "strong, aggressive leadership."

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., one of three co-chairmen of the national Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, charged that so far the Eisenhower Administration had been "all too silent and apathetic."

About 50,000 delegates had been expected including thousands from New York and Chicago, but police estimated the crowd at 4500 when the speeches began at noon. More were streaming into the Lincoln Memorial area, however.

A. Philip Randolph, another co-chairman of the civil rights rally and president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (AFL-CIO), warned Negroes against accepting Communist help.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. D., N. Y.), one of three Negro Congressmen, called for creation of a new church-centered "third force" through which Negroes could fight discrimination by work stoppages, boycotts and other forms of passive resistance.

Pilgrimage Crowd in Washington Demonstration

(Story in adjoining column)

Daily Tribune
Sat. 5-18-57
Chicago, Ill. P. 3

[Associated Press Wirephoto]

Crowd in front of Lincoln Memorial, with the Washington monument in the background, during a "prayer pilgrimage for freedom" demonstration in the capital yesterday.

Pilgrimage Appraisal

Black Dispatch Okla. 6-21-57

The Washington Prayer Pilgrimage has seen some rough sledding since the 17th of May, and even Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, himself a minister, during the Pilgrimage program made a plea for a "Third Force," political in its nature, which on its face indicates the New York pastor places more dependence in political power than spiritual force.

Oklahoma City Okla. P. 6

When one stops to remember remarks made by ministers who did not attend, there is room for the suspicion that little confidence is placed in this day and time in the efficacy of prayer. Powell attended and spoke at the Pilgrimage, and if on the spot he contemplated upon a power superior to prayer, everyone may raise a doubt that prayer will secure for people the things hoped for. If Rev. Powell believes in the power of prayer, why should he ask his associates to search for political relief in a prayer meeting?

But the thing that causes one to feel that there is some skullduggery around develops out of the fact that the critical ones seem to base their strictures upon the numbers who arrived at Mecca and remained there one full day in meditation with God, and there is some criticism that there is a radical difference between a Montgomery Boycott and a prayer meeting at the base of the Lincoln Memorial. Total sight is lost of the fact that the men who headed the Montgomery, the Tallahassee, and other boycotts were there along with the ministers who were willing and did go to jail, attempting to do what the Montgomeryites had effected constitutionally on legal paper.

Instead of criticizing these men of action, they should be lifted in the spiritual eyes of everyone, when their meeting on May 17 clearly proves they were consumating their heroic action with a three-hour prayer service.

Frankly, we personally would not have been in attendance at the Pilgrimage but for the fact we were returning from a board meeting of the NAACP in New York, and we thought the least we could do would be to look in on that memorable gathering. We wanted to gaze upon Borders of Atlanta, King of Montgomery, and Shuttleworth of Tallahassee. These men had taken their fight out of the ritual, and like Paul and Silas had gone to jail. These men culminated a prolonged action program with a talk with God.

We are reminded of a story of one of Napoleon's marshals just before they went into battle. The marshal approached Napoleon and said, "Napoleon, shall we pray?" and the man who had conquered pretty much all of the known world said, "Yes, pray to God, but keep your powder dry."

We believe the criticism of our current problems from the Washington Pilgrimage clearly outlines the difference of approach of the Northern and the Southern Negroes. It took a long time to alert the Southern Negro to the battle line. He was born and bred in Egypt and he knew some of the problems he had to face. The difference between the Northern and the Southern Negro rests in the fact the Northern Negro ran away from something, while the southern black, more courageous, faced something.

The northern black always tries to convince himself that he is free and embraces all of the liberties the Constitution of the United States spells out for citizens. He does not know that in a certain sense he suffers from the same and identical disabilities of his relatives down in the Deep South. A mob, if they were down in the Bible Belt, would seize them just as quickly, if without credentials, as they would Emmitt Till, or thousands of other blacks who have gone before.

This criticism about the Washington Pilgrimage develops out of the fact that one black man, who thinks he is free, is trying to tell another black man who is in torture now, how to fight. This advising black never fought a battle. The advisor ran from one. He does not believe in prayer or a fight and every day he is accepting indignities in order to keep from fighting.

Segregation Rally Set Up For District

Post + Times Herald P. 1-2
Wash. D.C.
Sun. 4-6-57

Representatives of 75 organizations issued a call yesterday for a demonstration and prayer meeting at the Lincoln Memorial May 17, third anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling outlawing segregation in public schools.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the sponsoring National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called the demonstration "A Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom." He said 50,000 would participate.

Wilkins, after a meeting at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R st. nw., said while permission to use the memorial has not yet been received, no difficulty is expected. A letter was sent to the Department of the Interior earlier in the week, he reported.

An Interior Department spokesman said yesterday:

"There is no question about letting them meet some place in the park, but there is some question about the suitability of closing off the Lincoln Memorial because of all the tourists at this time of year. They may have to meet in the Sylvan Theater, or somewhere else."

While awaiting official word on their letter, the groups are going ahead with plans for a "three or four hour" meeting at the Memorial on May 17, according to Wilkins. He explained the purposes are three:

"We want to demonstrate the unity of the whole Negro community behind the civil rights demands before Congress.

"We wish to show support of the Supreme Court decision.

"And it is our purpose to test the terrible intimidation and terror under which colored people live."

PILGRIMAGE

Massed Negroes Criticize Both Parties

Courier-Journal
Sat. 5-18-57
Louisville Ky.
P. 2

'Pilgrimage For Freedom' Held In Capital

Washington, May 17 (AP) — Massed thousands of Negroes met in prayer and protest today —three years, to the very hour, after the Supreme Court banned segregation in public schools.

Ranged in a great semicircle before the Lincoln Memorial for this unprecedented "prayer pilgrimage for freedom," they applauded speeches charging that President Eisenhower and Congressional leaders of both parties have failed in the wake of the high-court ruling to lead the way toward equal rights for all.

Representative Powell (D., N. Y.) set the tone by calling on Negroes to establish through their churches a "third force—nonpartisan, but political," to bring pressure on political leaders.

"We meet here today in front of the Lincoln Memorial," the Negro congressman said, "because we are getting more from a dead Republican than we are getting from live Democrats and live Republicans."

Police Inspector Melvin Leach estimated the crowd at 15,000, though sponsors of the demonstration, calling it the biggest of its kind ever held, put the figure at 25,000 or more.

Several white organizations issued "warnings" that disturbances might result from the influx from "pilgrims" from many parts of the country. There were no disorders, however, and police officials called it one of the most orderly gatherings in their memory.

The greatest ovation went to the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., leader of the Montgomery, Ala., battle for bus integration, who asserted both political parties "have betrayed the cause of justice."

"The Democrats have betrayed it," he said, "by capitulating to the prejudices and undemocratic practices of the Southern Dixiecrats. The Republicans have betrayed it by capitulating to the blatant hypocrisy of right-wing, reactionary northerners."

Various speakers, including A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, credited Eisenhower with good intentions, but accused him of inactivity.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said his organization is being victimized "from Virginia to Texas" by laws aimed at crimping its activities.

"They are so oppressive," Wilkins said, "that they may well force the N.A.A.C.P. to consider new methods of operation."

Negroes Mass In Pilgrimage At Washington

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.
Sat. 5-18-57

WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP) — Massed thousands of Negroes met in prayer and protest today—three years, to the very hour, after the Supreme Court banned segregation in public schools.

P. 1

Ranged in a great semicircle before the Lincoln Memorial, for this unprecedented "prayer pilgrimage for freedom," they applauded speeches charging that President Eisenhower and congressional leaders of both parties have failed in the wake of the high court ruling to lead the way toward equal rights for all.

Rep. Powell (D-NY) set the tone by calling on Negroes to establish through their churches a lions. Seven have died from the storm, three were missing.

The parched prairies of northwest Oklahoma have become virtual marshlands.

Flooding in the Wichita, Kan., area was compared with that of the worst inundation previously, July 13, 1951.

At Tulsa, officials said, that an unfinished flood diversion project apparently had averted the threat of a major flood in the city of 240,000.

Another rain area, in the Northwest, brought a one-half inch fall to Brookings in southwest Oregon as showers and thunderstorms developed over broad areas of the plateau.

Cold weather also figured in the national picture, as a front from Canada moved into the upper Mississippi Valley. Cloudiness increased in the Northeast after a high pressure area clamped New England with a late spring cold snap early yesterday.

MAJOR PARTIES HIT BY NEGRO 'PILGRIMS'

Commercial Appeal
Sat. 5-18-57
P. 1

'Third Force' Urged At Big Integration Gathering

(Picture on Page 32)

WASHINGTON, May 17.—(AP) —Massed thousands of Negroes met in prayer and protest Friday — three years, to the very hour, after the Supreme Court banned segregation in public schools.

Memphis Tenn.

Ranged in a great semi-circle before the Lincoln Memorial, for this unprecedented "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom," they applauded speeches charging that President Eisenhower and congressional leaders of both parties have failed in the wake of the high court ruling to lead the way toward equal rights for all.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) set the tone by calling on Negroes to establish through their churches a "third force—nonpartisan but political" to bring pressure on political leaders.

Police Inspector Melvin Leach estimated the crowd at 15,000 though sponsors of the demonstration put the figure at 25,000 or more.

Several white organizations issued "warnings" that disturbances might result from the influx from "pilgrims" from many parts of the country. There were no disorders, however.

The greatest ovation went to Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro leader of the Montgomery, Ala., battle for bus integration, who asserted both political parties "have betrayed the cause of justice."

NEGRO 'FREEDOM MARCH' READIED

Times-Picayune
Mon. 5-13-57

More Than 5000 Expected for Pilgrimage

New Orleans La.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 12 (AP) — More than 5000 Negroes from the deep South are expected to make the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom to Washington next week, Southern leaders said Saturday.

P. 3

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, Southern director for the pilgrimage on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision said Saturday a goal of more than 6300 persons attending has been set in the South.

"We are hoping this will be the greatest demonstration in behalf of freedom since the signing of the Declaration of Independence," the Baptist minister said.

Leaders hope for more than 50,000 persons at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington at noon Friday for a 2½-hour program, said Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a co-chairman for the Pilgrimage.

Abernathy announced the following goals for Negroes from deep South cities to make the pilgrimage:

New Orleans 1500; Baton Rouge, 200; Jackson, Miss., 100; Mobile, Ala., 200; Birmingham, 1000; Atlanta, 1000; Savannah, Ga., 200; Miami 200; Jacksonville, Fla., 200; Charleston, S. C., 200; Greenville - Spartanburg-Anderson, S. C., 200; Memphis 150; and Nashville Tenn., 1000.

Between 200 and 300 are expected to attend from Montgomery, he said.

Oust Minister Who Hiked To D. C. Pilgrimage

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 6-1-57
P. 12

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

WASHINGTON — A young Jersey City (N.J.) minister, who demonstrated his belief in racial equality by walking 233 miles, has been discredited by the bishop of his jurisdiction.

Rev. Milton Perry, who made the recent pilgrimage on foot to Washington, plans to appeal the ruling to the highest councils of the Church of God in Christ.

When he was three years old, little Milton Perry was preaching sermons in his baby prattle to the delighted amusement of the neighborhood in the Bronx.

His mother was a staunch member of the Pentecostal faith and listening to the Bible and going to church was literally a part of the daily living of the family.

CHILD PREACHER

When he was 10, Milton tried out sermons on his playmates in Harlem where the Perry's had moved, but he was laughed at so that he was almost shamed out of expressing his natural spiritual inclinations.

At 13, a friend one day said he wanted hi mto speak to some Spanish people in the Bronx. Shyness overcame him and he started to withdraw, but he went on to preach his first sermon to 400 people and he's been continuing since.

Young Perry was ordained in the Church of God In Christ following his graduation from high school.

On Sunday, May 12, he finished his services at the Deliverance Temple in Jersey City, N. J., donned a pair of hiking boots and still in his minister's clothing, set out with a Bible under his arm on a unique journey.

LONG WALK

He was walking to the Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom gathering in Washington, some 223 miles away and he intended to make it solely by foot.

The idea to walk to Washington was inspired by the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala. Young Perry said he wanted to do something to help dramatize the pilgrimage. He thought first of organizing a motorcade. Then the idea of Christ and Moses walking and talking came to him as something to emulate.

His young wife was reluctant to see him undertake the long journey, although she was in sympathy with the pilgrimage. The 21-year-old, five foot clergyman who doesn't have a trace of hair on his face and looks no more than a boyish 12, is struggling with a small congregation of 200 in a church building that seats 2,800. Still, he felt he must make the sacrifice.

BOOTS TOO BIG

The boots he had on were much too big for his size six feet and soon he had blisters the size of quarters on his soles. His first stop was at New Brunswick, N.J. where some of the faculty of Rutgers university met him and put him up for the night, and a chiropodist bandaged his sore feet. Next morning early, he was up and walking.

When he reached Trenton that evening, instead of going to bed as had been arranged for, he walked around the town and gathered up 1,000 people and held a religious service on a vacant lot.

Walking in the day and resting at night, he made stops at Lincoln university in Pennsylvania; in Philadelphia, where he visited the Liberty Bell; and Bel Air, Md., where he received the keys to the

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
P. 12 Sat. 6-1-57

REV. MILTON PERRY (left) crosses the District of Columbia line on his way to the Prayer Pilgrimage. Rev. Perry walked 223 miles—from Jersey City to D. C. He still had 10 miles to go when this photo was made.

city from Mayor John Worthington II and a new Bible on behalf of Governor Theodore McKeldin, who was away in Europe.

NEW RAINCOAT

At Lincoln, students who listened to him lecture presented him with a new raincoat. On his way to Trenton, a heavy rainstorm had come up and soaked his clothes and the Bible he was carrying; but he turned down sympathetic offers of lifts.

When he got to Elkridge, Md., he says the "ugliest incident" of his journey occurred. He stopped at a little refreshment stand, appropriately named "The Dog House" and asked for a malted milk.

The proprietor looked at him and asked "Chocolate?" "No, strawberry," was the reply. When the man finished it, he went to put a cap on the container. Young Perry informed him that he wanted to drink it there, whereupon the owner became incensed, began cursing him and threatened to strike him.

CALLS TROOPERS

Perry left and walked down the road to a telephone booth and called Pilgrimage headquarters in Washington. They alerted state troopers who came speeding by with sirens screaming before he could leave the telephone. He thought they were after him; but instead, they had come to protect him and escort him to his stopping place in town.

The little minister's last overnight stop was at Laurel, Md., where he rested at, the home of the Rev. Joseph Hawkins, who pastors two small Methodist churches, St. Marks and Queen's Chapel. Reverend Hawkins mother told reporters who came to interview him that she never saw anybody more tired in her life than that "poor child", but she said he was so enthusiastic that it was contagious.

The Hawkins family is something in itself. The minister lives next to one of his churches with his mother and his small son. He's had crosses burned on his lawn for speaking out very strongly against separate schools, but his mother says. "Let them burn all the crosses they want. We'll sweep them up the next morning."

"Milton," she called up the stairs where the Reverend Perry was resting. "Is you dead"? A few minutes later, a very much alive, but tired little minister stumbled down the stairs in a borrowed robe and house slippers and talked with enthusiam about his undertaking.

"The Negro isn't interested in Communism, fascism, or any other kind of ism," he declared. "We want our freedom and we want it now".

He had been due to stop in College Park, Md., at the University of Maryland, but the old excuse of no accommodations available canceled that out, adding to his next day's final schedule. Some faculty members sympathetic to the cause, tried very hard to fmake some arrangements but were unsuccessful.

REACHES GOAL

So with 29 miles on the last lap of the journey, young Perry got up at 4 a.m. and started out. At 10:30 he crossed the district line where photographers and reporters were waiting. Finally, he made it to the monument about 1:30 p.m. in the middle of the rally. He got a triumphant ovation and was lifted onto a chair to make a few remarks. "Thank God, I made it", he said as he collapsed from fatigue.

The little minister's fortitude him forthrightness have brought him trouble within his own denomination. For speaking up on civil rights, he and his flock have been "put out of fellowship" by the overseer of his jurisdiction, Bishop Wells, who objects to open advocacy of what he terms controversial issues.

Young Rev. Perry plans to carry his appeal for re-instatement to the church council at Memphis, Tenn. The national body of the Church of God in Christ, he says sanctions the civil rights struggle and the NAACP so the bishop was acting on his own authority. One thing is certain. On May 27, 1957, young Milton Perry made his own history in the "Big Walk For Freedom."

Editorial Of The Week

Globe Fri. 5-31-57

The following editorial appeared in The New York Times, May 19, 1957: Nashville Tenn.

Washington Pilgrimage

P. 1

The third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing racial segregation in the public schools was observed in a "prayer pilgrimage" to Washington by many thousand Negroes. They assembled at the Lincoln Memorial to pray not only for more speedy implementation of the court decision but also for more action by the Congress in the field of civil rights.

There is ground for their impatience in the matter of school segregation but there is also ground for hope. Much progress has been made, albeit slowly, and the principle has been firmly established. In the general civil-rights field there is again good ground for apprehension because of developments in Congress. This demonstration will serve a good purpose if it makes plain the obstruction that has been so evident in Congress is becoming increasingly intolerable.

The character of this demonstration was noteworthy. when a march on Washington was first proposed there was much justifiable anxiety among those who remembered Coxey's Army and the Bonus March. There was also the reasonable fear that Communist agents might take advantage of the occasion to promote disorder. Fortunately, these anxieties proved groundless. The meeting was, in the main, thoughtful and orderly.

Our First Amendment, perhaps the most treasured part of our Bill of Rights, guarantees to this people the right peacefully to assemble to petition for the redress of grievances. The assembly in Washington was completely lawful in every respect and those who organized it and led it are to be congratulated.

Precisely because of this emphasis we are not in entire sympathy with Representative Adam Clayton Powell's urging upon these supplicants the use of boycotts, work stoppages and slowdowns to make their point. Their point has already been well made and their case will be stronger if they, unlike some of their antagonists, remain rigidly within the law.

REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING
'Give us the right to vote'

CONGRESSMAN ADAM C. POWELL
'A third force of all faiths'

Walks For Freedom

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 5-25-57

By MARY STRATFORD
(Pictures on Pages 2, 6)

WASHINGTON — The 21-year-old minister straightened his clerical collar in the shadows beside the statue of Abraham Lincoln.

He sat there in a chair provided by a policeman, half swooning, fighting against a threatening blackout, and not always coherent in his speech.

Exhausted from his 217-mile walk from Jersey City, N.J. to the Prayer Pilgrimage in Washington, D.C., the Rev. Milton Lee Perry spoke to interviewers apart from the crowd which had cheered him moments before as one of the platform speakers.

"Jim Crow is a mistake," he says. "It is an affront to American democracy."

* * *

HE LOOKED weary, but he was triumphant. In his hand, he held the Bible given to him during his journey on behalf of Gov. Theodore McKelden of Maryland.

In a brief but glorious moment, this man of less than five feet tall had dramatized with his appearance, the purpose of thousands who stood at the foot of the Lincoln Monument because they also believed that "Jim Crow is a mistake."

* * *

HE WAS led limping, supported on either side by policemen and officials of the Pilgrimage, up the marble steps to a seat on the rostrum. The scheduled program was suspended as the Rev. Mr. Perry summoned his strength and shouted to the cheering crowd:

"The people of Montgomery walked to maintain their dignity. I walked, too, and I said to my God along the way, 'Father, I stretch my hands to Thee. No other help I know.'

"Let us walk together for freedom and liberty."

* * *

BUT resting after his address, the minister showed the effects of his march which began last Sunday. There were no holes in his shoes, but his trousers were torn. He was evicted in Elkridge, Md., from a cafe for refusing to be served on a segregated basis, and escorted from that town by a police guard.

He had withstood the warm weather. Medical attention had been required twice, even upon his entrance at the Pilgrimage ceremonies where he arrived at 1 p.m. — one hour late.

Afro-American
P. 1

THEN SITTING beside the sculptured likeness of Lincoln, he was tired.

"I feel happy" he said, rousing from a brief blackout. "I feel happy that God allowed me to come."

Sat. 5-25-57

AS THEY had paid homage to the Rev. Mr. Perry for his dramatic presentation of their cause, the crowds also applaud-

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 5-25-57
P. 2

LIKE PEOPLE OF MONTGOMERY — The Rev. Milton Lee Perry, 21-year-old minister of Jersey City, N.J., told 25,000 at Prayer Pilgrimage in Washington, Friday, that if the people of Montgomery, Ala., could walk for over a year to win desegregation of the buses, he could walk the 217 miles to Washington for the meeting at Lincoln Memorial, Friday, and he did. His six-day walk caused him bruised and aching feet, although he told the pilgrims that his heart was "light" for having made the gesture.

ed the appearance of the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott movement.

Approximately 25,000 persons rose as a body as the Rev. Mr. King approached the microphone. They paid him the highest honor they knew and he spoke to their silent cheers.

OFTEN DURING the program, the Rev. Mr. King was praised by other speakers. The Rev. Mr. Perry admitted the Montgomery minister and the bus boycott had been the inspiration for his march.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, evoked a spontaneous waving of flags and programs signifying approval, when he roared:

"We have no hatred in our hearts. King is telling you (segregationists) the truth when he says we have no bitterness.

"Neither do we want anything you consider holy. We are only tring to get you to stop doing the things that are unholy."

* * *

EACH SPEAKER shifted the mood of the audience.

The Rev. William H. Borders, Atlanta, Ga., who was arrested with others in Georgia testing segregation on public vehicles, sprinkled his address with humorous remarks, and once unwittingly elicited laughter.

When the minister asserted, "Moses went down in the land of Egypt . . . ," a man in the crowd yelled, though it was inaudible at the speakers' platform, "Yeah, but Moses didn't go to Georgia."

* * *

CELEBRITIES attended en masse. Mahalia Jackson, whose spirituals brought "amens" from the audience, commented later:

"It was a very wonderful, spiritual gathering with every heart and soul looking to God. We are certain to win our cause."

* * *

RAYMOND PACE Alexander, of Philadelphia, who recently won the Supreme Court decision opening the former all-white Girard College to colored boys, was seen embracing nine-year-old Robert Felder, one of the two plaintiffs in the case.

About 1,000 persons travelled from Philadelphia for the pilgrimage, including 200 white persons led by Mr. Alexander, the Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, pastor, Mt. Zion Baptist Church, and the Rev William Gray.

The International Ladies Garment Workers Union in Philadelphia purchased 100 tickets for the Pilgrimage and employees were given a day off with pay.

* * *

SEATED INCONSPICUOUSLY mingled with other pilgrims along with the first Mrs. Emmett Till case, and Mrs. Rosa Parks, whose refusal to move to the back of a bus in Montgomery bus protest.

Rev. T.R. M. Howard, who helped arouse the nation during the Mississippi fonte.

Others included the Rev. Davis Jr and Ruby Dee. Harry Belafonte and his new bride

Why Was Thurgood Absent From Prayer Pilgrimage?

Defender Chicago Ill.

Sat. 6-1-57 p.2

By ALFRED DUCKETT
(Special Correspondent)

NEW YORK — I'm a reporter. New York is my beat. Friday, May 17, with approximately 26,999 other people, I travelled to Washington, D. C., to the Lincoln Memorial Monument to take part in the "Prayer Pilgrimage" led by Rev. Martin Luther King, A. Philip Randolph and Roy Wilkins. There was a man missing when that significant event took place.

He was a big man who wasn't there.

He was a big man who should have been there.

Here is the story; no names have been changed to protect the innocent.

THE FIRST CLUE

Saturday, May 18, 3 p.m.: I am sitting at a table in a small Greenwich Village coffee shop, chatting with two friends of mine, a young, married couple who had also been to Washington.

There is a gleam in the eyes of the girl and a matching gleam in the eyes of her husband. "Tell him, honey," the girl urged her husband. "Tell him the question that made you sit straight up in bed this morning at three."

The husband points out to me that a man was missing in Washington. His name: Thurgood Marshall.

THURGOOD SULKED

Saturday, May 18, 5 p.m.: I proceed to corral information to unravel the mystery of the missing Mr. Marshall. I make a dozen phone calls to people who were intimately associated with planning of the pilgrimage. One informant tells me that Thurgood Marshall was missing because Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, set up the program and that Wilkins and Marshall are not buddy-buddy.

Sunday, May 19, 11 a.m.: I talked with more people supposedly "in the know." Someone reports that Thurgood Marshall stayed home and sulked because he didn't believe in people going all that distance to pray.

PLOT THICKENS

Wednesday, May 22, 11 a.m.: The first real break in the case. An article appears in a weekly newspaper, obviously based on an official statement from the NAACP publicity department. The article says Thurgood Marshall was missing because he did not wish to attend the pilgrimage; that he felt his presence might embarrass the sponsors because of something he might have to say.

Thursday, May 23, 9 a.m.: A call comes in, speaking of a great vendetta which has been allegedly going on between Marshall and NAACP "big shots." Can this be a good clue? Incidents are related. Tales of intrigue and jealousy are noted. Perhaps, cautiously, we are approaching the body of the story.

Ten a.m.: We phone Dr. Martin Luther King at the Statler hotel in Manhattan. Dr. King says he doesn't know why Thurgood Marshall was missing. He admits that he wondered about it. He assumes us that there's doubtless an excellent reason; possibly that the NAACP thought it necessary to have only one spokesman, on this occasion its executive secretary, Roy Wilkins. This would be logical since Mr. Wilkins was one of the three leaders of the pilgrimage.

RANDOLPH SKIPS

Noon: We put through a call to A. Philip Randolph at his Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters offices in Harlem. Mr. Randolph is in conference. His secretary will try to have him call back.

Two p.m.: We learn from a reputable source that it's not true that Roy Wilkins alone set up the program or deliberately excluded Mr. Marshall. The program was decided on by Mr. Wilkins in cooperation with his two chairmen, Mr. Randolph and Dr. King.

Three p.m.: We call back at the offices of Mr. Randolph. He is still in conference.

When we call back at Mr. Randolph's office at 5:15 p.m., he has left for the day and gone out of town.

Friday, May 24, 10 a.m.: We phone Mr. Marshall's office. He's not in. His secretary doesn't expect him back today. Next we phoned a prominent clergyman who was much interested in the pilgrimage. He refuses to be quoted but he makes some angry, off-the-record sounds about what a shame it was that Thurgood Marshall wasn't on the platform and a speaker in Washington. "Without Marshall," the minister shouts in our ear, "there never would have been a May 17."

REACH MARSHALL

At 5:30 p.m., we phoned Marshall at his home. His booming, hearty voice reassures us. Now the case will crack. We begin to frame the fateful question.

Before we can get it all out, Marshall begins to laugh.

"The reason I wasn't in Washington is very simple," he declares. "The taxicab I took to the airport had a flat tire and I missed my plane."

We laughed merrily. Congratulated Mr. Marshall on his sense of humor and said:

"But now, seriously. . ."

"Mr. Civil Rights" broke in with a few more words. Only then do we realize that he is serious.

"I was invited to be a speaker," Mr. Marshall said. "But I didn't feel there was any use in my speaking. I didn't want to appear as if I were gloating. I was asked and agreed to sit on the platform.

"Being up to my neck in work, I got reservations on the last plane which could get me there in time. On the way to LaGuardia airport, my cab got a flat. By the time I got to the airport, the plane had left.

"I got another cab for Idlewild but couldn't get a flight."

"So now," Marshall roared with throaty laughter, "you've got the answer to the deep, dark secret. I think I still got the ticket. Want to come out and get a picture of it?"

The Prayer Pilgrimage

Defender p.10

While the number of zealous participants in the historic Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom was disappointingly small, nevertheless the demonstration that took place at the shrine of the great emancipator — Abraham Lincoln — last Friday in the nation's capital, was a symbol of racial unity and purposefulness.

Chicago Ill.

The circumstance and the place made the pilgrimage a memorable event. The South's violent outburst against integration, President Eisenhower's unshakeable decision to keep mum on the issue together with the willy-nilly attitude of Congress on civil rights legislation have conspired to make Washington the focal point of this struggle.

Sat. 6-1-57

The stirring words of Congressman A. Clayton Powell and of Rev. Martin Luther King may have made a dint on the hard-shell conscience of the Eisenhower administration. Of that, however, we are not sure. That Powell's and King's words have awakened the Negro people to a new and more effective utilization of their ballots, is not to be doubted.

It is becoming increasingly clear that the Negro voter has no business following party-lines. He must bend his effort toward the individual candidate whose program is spelled out in terms of specific reference to the second class citizenship of the black constituency.

The appointment of a few Negro politicians to high-paying jobs in no way raises the status of the struggling masses who are left behind to fight the battle by themselves. We want and demand a larger sphere of economic opportunity for the collective whole.

The lesson white America finds difficult to learn is that the Negro no longer subscribes to the non-utilitarian idiocy of "give me Jesus and you (white folk) can have the world." The Negro wants not only bread, but the leisure to enjoy it; he wants not only a job, but the right to be on the top of the ant heap.

The pilgrimage is a warning under the guise of religious fervor that black America is ready for the ultimate test — that is the Negro is either a full citizen in the context of democracy or he is not. There is no twilight zone.

Post + Times Herald
Sat. 5-18-57
Washington, D.C.
P.1

By Dick Darcey, Staff Photographer

BISHOP S. L. GREENE OF ATLANTA GIVES INVOCATION AT PRAYER PILGRIMAGE FOR FREEDOM AT LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Crowd Chants For the Ballot At Pilgrimage

Post + Times Herald P.1 Sat 5-18-57

President, Congress Called on to Lead Struggle for Equality

Washington D.C.

Cheered by thousands gathered at Lincoln Memorial, the Nation's Negro leaders called yesterday for leadership from President Eisenhower and Congress in the struggle for racial equality.

"Give us the ballot," said the Rev. Martin Luther King and the Prayer Pilgrimage crowd chanted, "Give us the ballot."

"Give us the ballot," he repeated, "and we will no longer have to worry the Federal Government about our basic rights . . . Give us the ballot and we will quietly and nonviolently, without rancor or bitterness, implement the Supreme Court decision . . ."

Estimates Up to 25,000

King, leader in the Montgomery, Ala., desegregation fight, spoke calmly and slowly before an orderly crowd estimated variously between 14,000 and 25,000. Park Police estimates ranged from 14,000 to 20,000. Pilgrimage leaders estimated 25,000.

What the crowd lacked in size — pre-Pilgrimage forecasts had been up to 50,000—Iit made up in fevor. King's dispassionate address was punctuated frequently by shouts of "Yes. yes" and the waving of pennants and programs.

Other Negro leaders spoke in a vein similar to King's.

Washington Times

A. Philip Randolph, president of the AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, told the pennant-waving crowd the Negroes "reject" the support of Communists, "Because we are opposed to the use of immoral means to attain moral ends."

P. 1-B

And he said, "We have come to call upon President Eisenhower . . . to speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that hang like a pall over the hearts" of Southern Negroes as the result of bombings and intimidation. He urged the Preisdent to "counsel" Americans to obey the law.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said "Spiritual wickedness in high places—in the mansions of certain Governors . . . and under the dome of our Nation's Capitol has caused a deaf ear to be turned to our plea for justice."

Third Force' Urged

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) accused both parties of "basic dishonesty and increasing hyocrisy on civil rights." He urged the establishment of a "third force," non-partisan and non-racial, to lead the fight for racial equality.

Rep. Charles Diggs (D-Mich.) accused the President of a failure of leadership and asked, "What kind of political pressures could have resulted in the loss of courage of a man who is not running for reelection?" He criticized Democratic Congressional leaders and said, "More and more protest votes are being cast by Southern Negroes for Republicans and I don't blame them a bit."

There were yells, applause and a waving of pennants and programs when Dr. Mordecai Johnson, preisdent of Howard University, said Negroes will suffer anything to preserve the NAACP, "including prison."

The Pilgrimage, aimed at dramatizing the Negro struggle for equality and dissatisfaction with Southern resistance, took place on the third anniversary of the historic Supreme Court decision that school segregation is unconstitutional. It fell, by chance, on the same day that a 17-year-old boy, Bobby Cain, was making history in Tennessee as the first Negro to be graduated from an integrated high school, in Clinton.

The crowd, hushed through much of King's 20-minute speech, broke out with yells, cheers and chants of "amen" at numerous points in the three-hour program of speeches, prayer, hymns, scripture reading, gospel singing and fervent preaching. They waved pennants and programs. Many wore buttons proclaiming the event.

There was comparative quiet when King said "The Executive Branch of the Government is all too silent and apathetic . . . The Legislative Branch is all too stagnant and hyprocritical . . . Both (political) parties have betrayed the cause of justice . . ."

They cheered again when he said, "We come to Washington today pleading with the President and the Congress to provide a strong, moral and courageous leadership for a situation that cannot permanetly be evaded. We come humbly to say . . . that the civil rights issue is . . . an eternal moral issue which may well determine the destiny of our nation in the ideological struggle with communism . . ."

He criticized "lukewarm" liberalism among the white

Northern liberals, "a liberalism so bent on seeing all sides that it fails to become committed to either side." H easked leader- from northern liberals and southern moderates and a "strong, courageous intelligent leadership from the Negro community . . . This is no day for the rabble rouser, whether he be Negro or white."

When King, speaking on a platform with the statue of Abraham directly behind him, finished his talk, he was surrounded by an excited crowd of well-ishers, who wrung his hand, patted his shoulders. The crowd stood—many on chairs—and yelled and applauded.

One Walked 180 Miles

Post + Times Herald

Pilgrims Mingle Curiosity, Hope

Sat. 5-18-57 P. 1-B

Washington, D.C.

The Prayer Pilgrimage crowd yesterday was orderly but enthusiastic, and tightly packed in front of the Lincoln Memorial. Twenty-five of them fainted. A hundred more sought inhalants at a Red Cross first aid station.

They were there to listen, to cheer, to talk and even to hope.

"We play a hit and run game up here," a tall slim, handsome man said. It was singer Harry Belafonte, talking to a friend. "We come down here like this and say our piece and then it's all over. But the Rev. Martin Luther King has to go back and face it all over again."

"Long Enough"

There was Robert E. Lee, 70, a West Chester, Pa., landscape gardener, with a silver beard and a worn black suit, saying: "You can run a dog just so far, and he'll turn and bite a little. We been drug around long enough. We're tired of it. This is like a drop in a bucket, drop, drop, drop. It will soon fill up, if it don't leak out. I left Florida as a young man because I got tired of that foolishness."

One face in the crowd was that of Rosa Louise Parks, a Montgomery, Ala., seamstress who refused to change her bus seat and went to jail instead and saw Montgomery torn by the segregation battles that followed.

"I'm just here out of curiosity," said 77-year-old R. Percy Allen of Harrisburg, Pa. "I'm a member of the NAACP, but I'm not radical about it all."

There were all ages in the crowd. "This is on TV, isn't it?" asked Eugene Martin, 14, of Tuckahoe, N. Y. "It might wake up a lot of people."

Turnout Disappointing

There was sadness at the size of the crowd. They had hoped 50,000 would turn out, but no one estimated it at more than 25,000 and Park Police estimates went as low as 14,000. "I want to ask the people of Washington why they didn't come. There are 11,000 here from New York," said Charles R. Coleman, 47-year-old religious entertainment specialist from New York City.

There was humor amid the solemnity of the speeches. Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, interrupted by the noise of a helicopter, looked to the sky and said: "Sen. (James O.) Eastland must be flying that plane."

A weary, foot-sore preacher was the Rev. Milton Perry, 21, of Jersey City, who walked to Washington. Mr. Perry collapsed in his seat after his speech. He said he had "walked along the road for the cause of freedom." He was revived with smelling salts. He said he had walked about 180 miles.

One of the oldest of the Pilgrims was William R. Smith, 88, of 138 R st. nw., only living founder of Peoples Congregational Church. "You know," he said, "a strand of cotton will break, but when you put a lot of strands together it becomes strong. That is what this pilgrimage is."

By Dick Darcey, Staff Photographer

CROWD HEARS LEADERS DISCUSS STRUGGLE FOR RACIAL EQUALITY

Leaders Vow To Keep Reds Out Of 'Prayer Pilgrimage'

Informer Houston, Tex. P. 1

Sat. 5-18-57

WASHINGTON — According to a report revealed Saturday, the American Communist Party has made plans to infiltrate the "Prayer Pilgrimage" to Washington, D C which is set for Friday, May 17. The Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, has uged its readers to join the mass pilgrimage. However, Rev Martin L King Jr A Phillip Randolph, and Roy Wilkins Jr, leaders of the pilgrimage have vowed to keep the Communists out.

The march, which was decided on at a meeting of 97 churchman and leaders from all sections of the nation at New Orleans in February, is timed for the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision and aims to commemorate the judicial ruling, protest violence against Negroes, and press for the enactment and enforcement of civil rights legislations.

The "Prayer Pilgrimage," which is expected to attract thousands, is under three co-chairmen, each with an anti-Communist record. They are Mr Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP; Rev King, leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, and Mr Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

According to Mr Wilkins, the program is under the direction and control of the co-chairmen and "no Communist has been or will be invited to participate either as a speaker, a singer, a prayer leader or a scripture reader." He described the meeting as a "public, open air observance" on government property and the official call invited "all who love justice and dignity and liberty, who love their country, to join in a prayer of pilgrimage to Washington."

He continued the pilgrimage will be a "spiritual assembly inspired primarily by Negro clergymen and the NAACP.

Informer P. 10

CLAY, KY., CHILDREN TO ATTEND PILGRIMAGE

NEW YORK — James and Theresa Gordon, the young children who braved the wrath of the mob in an attempt to break the color bar in the public schools of Clay, Ky, last September will participate in the monument of Abraham Lincoln in Washington on Friday, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and co-chairman of the Pilgrimage, announced here this week.

Sat 5-18-57

James, 10, and Theresa, 8, will lay a wreath at the foot of the mounment of Abraham Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial where 50,000 persons from all sections of the country will gather to pray for human rights. They will be accompanied by their mother, Mrs Louise Gordon.

Plan For Prayer Pilgrimage

It was serious business as three national figures met recently in Washington, D. C., to outline plans for a Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom to be conducted in the nation's capital May 17. From left to right are the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. leader of the Montgomery bus protest movement; A. Phillip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; and Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary.

The Freedom Pilgrimage, which is expected to bring to Washington 50,000 civil rights advocates from all sections of the nation, will take place on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation school decision. The Pilgrimage will commemorate the Supreme Court decision, support federal civil rights legislation, and protest southern violence and resistance to the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decrees.

The planning conference for the Pilgrimage was attended by 77 leaders of church and civic groups, organized labor, fraternal organizations and NAACP units, who came from 15 states to the April 5 meeting.

King Vague About Seeing Vice President

WASHINGTON D.C. (NNPA)—The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott, was rather vague Friday when questioned by reporters about his plans to see Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

In Acera during the Ghana independence celebration the two men met by chance and had a brief conversation, surrounded by American reporters who were accompanying Mr. Nixon on his goodwill tour of Africa. Mr. Nixon invited the Rev. Mr. King to come to see him in Washington.

Replying to questions, the Rev. Mr. King said Friday that he plans to see Mr. Nixon but he does not know when. He said he "definitely" plans to talk with the Vice President "on the whole matter of civil rights."

He said he has not set a time for the talk. "I have not even corresponded with him on that," he said.

The Rev. Mr. King said he was not sure whether he will renew the invitation to Mr. Nixon to visit the South. "I will say we agreed to discuss the main question of civil rights," the Rev. Mr. King said.

The Montgomery leader also declined to divulge the things he and Mr. Nixon talked about in Accra. "I will say we had very fruitful discussion together," the Rev. Mr. King said. "He (Nixon) was quite open-minded in the whole discussion and I think it was mutually beneficial."

Desegregation Anniversary to See Pilgrimage

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 11 (AP). Next week a young Negro minister will lead a pilgrimage to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington to mark the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's order desegregating public schools.

Circle This Date

Get out a heavy red crayon and circle on your calendar the date of Friday, May 17.

That is the day on which the United States Supreme Court entered its now famous decision declaring that all public institutions, beginning with public schools, shall be open to all citizens.

It is also the date a pilgrimage of prayer to Washington is to be held.

In the three years since the decision was handed down, considerable progress has been made in Maryland West Virginia, District of Columbia Kentucky, Missouri and Oklahoma.

There's a sharp division of opinion in Delaware, Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas.

Florida, North Carolina and Virginia, under the prodding of unprincipled politicians and the White Citizens Councils, have shown a stiffening resistance.

And five states—South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana—have embraced a rebellious and defiant attitude.

If we are to impress the country and its political leaders with the need for the "deliberate speed" the Supreme Court requires, let's decide now to send our delegations to Washington on May 17.

Many "marchers" are coming hundreds of miles. We on the Eastern seaboard, who are right next door to the capital should be present in wholesale numbers.

Let's march on Washington by train, by bus, by car, by plane, by horse and wagon, if need be, but march.

The observance is expected to attract 15,000 or more Negroes from all parts of the South. The man who heads it was virtually unknown three years ago. Today he is a symbol of the day the Negro feels is coming.

From Montgomery alone, a thousand persons are expected to go in chartered buses, private cars and the church-owned station wagons put into service during the city's historic bus boycott.

Says the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King:

"We will discourage a motorcade, because we feel it will be too hazardous."

* * *

AS A LEADER of the demonstration, the 28-year-old King is working with Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

King came here from Atlanta in September, 1954, to become pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church.

Despite his youth and relatively short residence in Montgomery, he assumed leadership at the outset of the bus boycott in December, 1955. He helped organize and was elected president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn.

* * *

THE ASSOCIATION guided the bus protest. When on Nov. 13, 1956, but segregation was outlawed by the U.S. Supreme Court, it turned its efforts to other means of uplifting the Negro community.

The son and grandson of clergymen, the Negro leader has degrees from Morehouse College, Crozer Theological Seminary and Boston University. He received a doctorate in theology shortly before coming to Montgomery.

King was assistant pastor for five years at the Ebenezer Church in Atlanta where his father, the Rev. M. L. King Sr., has been pastor since 1932 and his maternal grandfather was pastor for 37 years before then.

Negroes to Pray On Anniversary Of School Ruling

WASHINGTON, Apr. 5 (AP).—Negro groups plan to observe the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school integration decision on May 17 with a big prayer meeting at the Lincoln Memorial here.

Representatives of labor, religious, fraternal and other organizations from fifteen states met here today to map the undertaking. They called it "a prayer pilgrimage for freedom."

The pilgrimage was announced by Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; and the Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who led the bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

Mr. Wilkins said 50,000 Negroes from all over the country are expected at the one-day observance scheduled to begin about noon and last three or four hours. It was at noon, May 17, 1954, that the court's historic ruling was handed down.

CALLS FOR PRAYER PILGRIMAGE. — The Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, is one of the three national leaders who is calling for a Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington, D. C., on May 17, the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision against segregation in public schools. Roy Wilkins and A. Philip Randolph are co-chairmen with Dr. King in the protest demonstration.

Leaders Set Date For D.C. 'March'

King, Wilkins And Randolph Lead Movement

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — About 75 persons from 15 states, some from as far away as California, met here Friday to map plans for a "prayer pilgrimage" to Washington on May 17, the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing racial segregation in the public schools.

The purpose of the pilgrimage, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, told reporters, is to demonstrate the unity of colored people behind civil rights demands pending in Congress, "although it cannot be said to be a descent upon Congress."

He also said the pilgrimage is to demonstrate support of the Supreme Court decision and to protest "the terrible intimidation and terror under which colored people live in the South."

Mr. Wilkins explained that the pilgrimage will be "a prayer for relief and an appeal to the conscience of America to relieve this situation" and make it clear that colored people want to be first-class citizens."

Ask For Lincoln Monument

The Interior Department has been asked to permit the prayer meeting to be held at the Lincoln monument. Approval has not yet been given, but Mr. Wilkins said he cannot imagine the Federal Government refusing permission to colored citizens to hold a prayer meeting at the Lincoln Memorial.

Asked what was hoped to be accomplished by the pilgrimage, Mr. Wilkins called it "a spiritual demonstration. "We do not expect to come to Washington demanding this and that other objective," he said.

The press conference was held by Mr. Wilkins, A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., the leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott.

Challenge to Conscience

Mr. Randolph called the projected pilgrim "a sort of challenge to the conscience of America on the moral issue of civil rights." He also said it will help to mobilize public opinion back of the civil rights bills pending in Congress.

Churches, labor unions, civic organizations, women's groups and fraternal bodies were among the groups represented at the planning meeting.

Wilkins, Randolph and King are co-chairmen of the prayer pilgrimage.

is not a NAACP enterprise, Mr. Wilkins explained. He said the annual NAACP conference, San Francisco last June, ected that a demonstra- held in Washington this in support of civil rights. hern ministers met in At- and New Orleans, he said, and decided to have a pilgrimage to Washington, and Randolph has been interested in marches on Washington for many years.

Ideas Are Pooled

Apparently these ideas were pooled and out of it came the prayer pilgrimage.

The Rev. Mr. King said the purpose of the prayer pilgrimage is broader than getting President Eisenhower to make a statement or come South to speak. "We, of course, want the President to speak, but that is not the purpose of this parver pilgrimage now," he said.

Asked again what immediate results would be expected from the pilgrimage, Mr. Wilkins said the results will be indirect.

"Is this a substitute for the President going South or if the mountain won't go to Mohammed and the other way around?" a reporter asked.

Mr. Wilkins replied that even if the question of the President going South to speak out against racial injustices had not arisen, there was still the mandate from the NAACP annual conference to stage a demonstration in Washington this spring.

The program on May 17, it was stated, will consist of speeches by various persons, including the three co-chairmen, and th be at least one outstanding to sing.

Expect 75,000 in Washington march

NEW YORK — Some 75 religious, labor and civic leaders met here last week and made plans for transporting 75,000 people to Washington for the "Prayer Pilgrimmage" on May 17.

The meeting opened with prayer, followed by an address by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and vice president of the combined AFL CIO.

"THE IMPLEMENTING of civil rights legislation is a legal means of obtaining human rights. These are God given rights. This is the hour of action. The question of civil rights is the most challenging issue to the American conscience," Mr. Randolph declared, adding:

"The pilgrimage to Washington is intended to arouse that conscience."

After Mr. Randolph's address, the Rev. Thomas Kilgore, national director of the pilgrimage, gave an outline of plans made so far.

UNDER CURRENT PLANS, persons traveling from cities like New York and Philadelphia will be able to board special trains after purchasing tickets at half fare. Buses also will have cheaper than normal rates.

Car pools are being organized all over the country, it is reported. During the meeting here an unidentified man arose in the audience and said "I am hitchhiking." He is not alone, several college groups planning similar hikes.

A newspaper editor who declined use of his name said two members of his staff will be walking from NYC. They plan to start out May 1, he said, and average 10 miles a day. He refused to divulge their names also.

After much discussion during the meeting about the fact that the pilgrimage is scheduled for a Friday instead of a Saturday or Sunday, three reasons were cited for selection of Friday.

These were:

* * *

1. CONGRESS WOULD not be in session on either a Saturday or a Sunday and it is important that its members be on hand when the pilgrimage arrives in the capital.

2. A large segment of those traveling in the pilgrimage to Washington will be members of church groups and it is important t ey be able to return to t urches for Sunday serv

3. An more important th the other two reason t that Friday, May 1 the third year to the day since the Supreme Court handed down its decision outlawing racial segregation in the public schools.

Gordon Children From Kentucky To Pilgrimage

New York — James and Theresa Gordon, the young children who braved hte wrath of the mob in an attempt to break the color bar in the public schools of Clay, Ky., last September will participate in the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom in Washington on Friday (May 17), Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and co-chairman of the Pilgrimage, announced here.

James, 10, and Theresa, 8, will lay a wreath at the foot of the monument of Abraham Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial where 50,000 persons from all sections of the country will gather to pray for human rights. They will be accompanied by their mothers, Mrs. Louise Gordon.

Lost Job

Because of their efforts to enter their children in a nearby "white" school, Mr. Gordon was discharged from his job. Unable to find other employment in the community, he has since moved his family to Fort Wayne, Ind.

State militia was called out to protect the children against threats of the mob. Later they were denied admission to the school on a ruling by the state attorney general. Subsequently they filed suit for admission under the United States Supreme Court ruling of May 17, 1954.

Serving as co-chairmen of the Pilgrimage with Mr. Wilkins are A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., president of the Southern Leaders Conference, and leader of the successful Montgomery, Ala., bus protest movement.

La. Weekly Columnist Gives Thrilling Account Of Trip

Weekly New Orleans, La.
Sat. 5-25-57

By Elgin Hychew
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C. -- May 17, 1957 is a day we'll long remember!

There were two things which impressed us about the mammoth Prayer Pilgrimage which attracted throngs to the Nation's Capitol to pray and to protest. It proved that Negroes can be orderly and that they can be gentlemen and can conduct themselves with Christian dignity anywhere, anyplace, anytime. It proved that there are many well meaning white people who are sympathetic to our cause and they are ready and are willing to fight along by our side.

We congratulate civil rights leaders REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., A. PHILIP RANDOLPH and ROY WILKINS for the manner in which they staged this mammoth observance. There were representatives on hand from 30 states. Every network, all of the wire services, hundreds of men and women from the working press were on hand for the occasion and the classic Lincoln Memorial was a perfect setting with the Washington monument standing in the distance and its shadow reflecting itself in the mile-long Reflecting Pool.

The New Orleans delegation led by DR. A. L. DAVIS, JR., president of the New Orleans Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, which comprised of some 300 or 400 converged on the Nation's Capital by plane, by automobile, by train and by bus. We were fortunate to get a seat on the bus of mostly Baptist clergymen and members of the laity. There were hundreds of others from many other sections of Louisiana.

We had an opportunity to do a bit of sight-seeing along the pilgrimage route. We had an opportunity to see and to taste some of the humiliating experiences which we often hear others talk about while traveling through the Deep South. We made only two brief stops in Mississippi to find that the rest rooms and lunch rooms were "unfit for human beings."

In Birmingham we visited several of the bombed sites, including the fabulous home of Attorney Shooles, the attorney who handled the Autherine Lucy case. Birmingham Negroes own some of the finest homes we have seen anywhere and own large sections of them. We saw the A. G. Gaston Motel. Gaston is one of the richest Negroes in the country. He owns a bank, a funeral home and the Booker T. Washington Business College plus other small business enterprises. Despite the Supreme Court ruling, Birmingham, like most of the other southern cities, continues to keep Jim Crow on our people. One lady, who was a member of our delegation, asked to go into a white waiting room, to purchase a picture post card and a policeman who had been stationed at the door, apparently to keep Negroes out, told her there were no cards, despite the fact that she was looking at them.

Knoxville, Tennessee and Roanoke, Virginia had about the best non-segregated waiting room and rest room accomodation for interstate passengers on the trip. Of course practically all the facilities in Washington were open to us.

We congratulate the members of the New Orleans delegation on the manner in which they conducted themselves on the tour. Rev. P. W. Raphael, president of the First District Association was in charge of the bus on which we sat.

Early morning prayer services were conducted, also services of prayer were conducted late in the evening on the bus. Some prayed and others read their Bibles.

We telephoned the home of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Winton while in Knoxville and talked with Mrs. Winton. Her husband was our army sergeant in the 1324 Engineers Regiment while we were stationed at Camp Claiborne in 1944. Winton, who is a teacher in the city schools, was platoon sergeant for a group of mostly Louisiana GI's... While in Chatanooga, we talked to Dr. Leroy Thompson, prominent physician there. A former New Orleanian, he sent best wishes to C. C. Dejoie, Jr., editor of the Louisiana Weekly and Marcus Neustadter of the Keystone Life.

In Washington more than 32 churches served as delegation headquarters for the various churches. The huge, 2000 seating capacity Mt. Air Baptist Church, North Capital and "L" Street, was headquarters for the New Orleans delegation. When we arrived there on Friday morning at 8 o'clock, Rev. Robert D. Sherard, minister of Beecher Memorial Congregational Church of New Orleans and who served as the pilgrimage committee chairman in New Orleans, was on hand with the minister, a Rev. C. M. Long to greet the delegation. We had breakfast in the refectory and a few minutes later, Rev. W. E. Hausey, minister, St. John 4th Baptist, J. V. Acox, secretary of the OPPVL; Miss Dorothy Garrison of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Rev. Lawrence Landrum, pastor of Ebenezer; Rev. J. L. Spears, pastor of First Evangelist; and others soon joined us.

It was then time to take a cab to the District Building which is equivalent to our City Hall where the Commissioner presented a key to the city to

Make Equal Justice And Liberty For All Plea

Weekly
Sat. 5-25-57
38a Pilgrimage

Shown gathered in solemn concourse before the classic and beautiful Lincoln Memorial Shrine last FRIDAY afternoon in Washington, D. C., are more than 27,000 Americans of all races, creed and color with the Washington Monument and the Reflecting Pool shown in the foreground. The vast crowd overflowed off the steps of the shrine onto the surrounding grounds. Dr. A. L. Davis, Jr., New Orleans civil rights leader, shown at the left, urges pilgrimage prayer, and political action to help solve racial issues confronting America today. At the right, Rev. King, Roy Wilkins and A. Philip Randolph. About 80 ministers in black robes of all faiths were on hand for the event. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. internationally known "Moses of the Southland" pleads for a "fourfold leadership and hailed the historic supreme decision as a beacon of light and hope to millions of dishearted Americans who dared only to dream of freedom." (PHOTOS BY HAROLD HAMBRICK)

Sat. 5-25-57

Coming out we stood and waited on the street until Rev. R. H. Tucker of the AME church, who also acted as our official photographer, found some more bulbs and film. Then we took off to join a Rev. Milton Perry, pastor of the Deliverance Temple Church, Jersey City, New Jersey, who was arriving in the city after walking 225 miles to attend the

The New Orleans ministers were among the others who joined him and walked about four miles to the Lincoln Memorial to prove their sincerity.. On the steps of the vast Lincoln Memorial we met New Orleans' Clarence A. Laws, field secretary of the NAACP along with some members of the NAACP hierarchy... We also met John A. Skehand, a native of Bogalusa, who is with the State Department.. We also met Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Peters of Los Angeles, Calif. He is pastor of the great Victory Baptist Church and is formerly from Slidell, La.

It was good to see Rev. Davis turn loose his "guns" before the 27,000 in this classic and beautiful Memorial. His report on the South along with Rev. Wm H. Borders of Atlanta; Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee; Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, let the Eastland crowd know that Negroes are demanding equality on all levels, and will not retreat.

Pilgrims At Prayer Pilgrimage

At left, top photo, Miss Mahalia Jackson, gospel concert star, is pictured after a tearful rendition, as she sat beside Bishop S. L. Greene, Atlanta, Georgia of the AME Church, who opened the ceremonies with the invocation. Second photo shows a group of New Orleans personalities as they surround the Rev. Milton Perry, age 21, pastor of Deliverance Temple Church, Jersey City, New Jersey, who walked from that city to Washington, a distance of 225 miles. He is shown with Jackson V. Acox, executive secretary of the OPPVL; the Rev. Robert D. Sherard, chairman of the New Orleans delegation and pastor of Beecher Congregational Church; Rev. W. . Hausey, pastor, St. John 4th Baptist Church and another New Orleans religious figure. Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York is being interviewed by the Louisiana Weekly's Elgin Hychew. Bottom photos shows Rev. J. J. Harper of Garyville's Greater New St. Peter's Baptist Church, Joseph C. Mason, pastor of Zion Travelers Baptist Church, Reserve and Mrs. G. H. Mason, daughter of Rev. Mason. Also Clarence A. Laws, field secretary of the NAACP and Mrs. R. P. Beshears, president of the Missouri Conference of NAACP, St. Joseph, Missouri. At the New Orleans airport are Rev. R. H. Tucker, AME clergyman of New Orleans; Charles L. Peters, New Orleans; Rev. A. A. Peters, pastor of Victory Baptist Church, Los Angeles and a native of Los Angeles young Peters Jr. and Rev. Sherard. (PHOTOS BY HAMBRICK, R. H. TUCKER AND MARION PORTER)

Snubbed Pilgrimage

Courier p. 20

D. C. Negroes Just Didn't Care

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 6-1-57

By WILLIAM G. NUNN, SR.

WASHINGTON—Back in 1924 . . . Congressman Dyer introduced an anti-lynching bill in Congress.

The month was November, and the annual Howard-Lincoln football game held the center of the Negro sports and social stage.

While thousands of Negroes yelled themselves hoarse, the Dixie contingent was "talking" Mr. Dyer's bill to death.

Out of this disgraceful episode came a memorable article from the pen of the late Dr. Kelly Miller.

The piece was entitled "Fiddling While Rome Burns."

NEARLY 33 years later . . . On May 17, 1957 . . . another historic event took place in the nation's capital.

Negroes came here by the thousands. They came by plane, by bus, by auto, by foot, by train.

Once again, however, Negroes from this "voteless and voiceless" city were conspicuous by their absence.

This is not to say that some Washingtonians didn't show up. They did!

But conservative estimates say the number of out-of-town "pilgrims" outnumbered Washington "pilgrims" by several thousands.

And this . . . in a city with a Negro population of more than 365,000; a city which has felt the full impact of the historic Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954.

■

WHY DIDN'T Washington Negroes respond with the enthusiasm and dedication, which swept the rest of the country?

We asked a lot of questions and were given a lot of reasons.

A university professor admitted that he asked two classes of Howard students how many intended to attend the prayer pilgrimage.

Out of a class of 24 students . . . ONE STUDENT RAISED HIS HAND.

Out of a class of 45 students . . . TWO STUDENTS RAISED THEIR HANDS.

Aside from the church groups, apathy was general and widespread.

We asked close friends of ours . . . and members of their families. Washington just wasn't concerned . . . they just didn't give a damn!

They were more interested in their bridge parties . . . in the harness races . . . in seeing a Washington baseball club which has consistently refused to engage a Negro American ballplayer.

This town is too blase . . . too sophisticated . . . too orientated for its own good.

To them, the renaissance has already arrived.

Five years ago, their hometown was the most jim-crow center in America.

They couldn't go to shows, to restaurants, to hotels! Twelve years ago, they couldn't use public recreational facilities, such as playgrounds, golf courses, swimming pools.

They couldn't vote then . . . and they can't vote now!

Because of pressures which they didn't help to generate, the town "got religion." Schools are integrated. They can go anywhere, do anything. They ride in taxis they didn't dare approach in 1952.

These people, thousands of whom are in Government service, are living off money Negroes from the rest of the country pay into the U. S. Treasury.

■

BUT THEY can't be seen at an affair like the "prayer pilgrimage." They can't afford to mingle with the common herd.

If they don't want the pilgrimage, our suggestion to the sponsors of the movement is to move it to another city.

Washington's Monument and the Lincoln Memoria! are mere symbols of the things we want . . . and for which America is supposed to stand.

We would be just as close to the Executive Mansion and the hallowed (sic) halls of Congress if the affair were held anywhere else.

Why not carry the pilgrimage to New York's Yankee Stadium or Chicago's Soldier's Field in 1958!

Let's make it a real "prayer pilgrimage" . . . under the stars, and with the pomp, splendor and solemnity consonant with this magnificent event.

You'd get 100,000 Negroes . . . and whites . . . in either city, and the noise it would create would be heard just as easily in Washington, D. C.

DR. MORDECAI W. JOHNSON
'My heart is lifted'

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
'Struggle for decency'

REV. THOMAS J. KILGORE
'Defend our liberties'

REV. A. L. DAVIS
'Good news from La.'

MISS MAHALIA JACKSON
'I've been scorned'

REV. C. K. STEELE
'Bless them who curse us'

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 1,1 Sat. 5-25-57

25,000 CRY AT PRAYER PILGRIMAGE

'Give Us The Ballot'

MRS. WILLIAM T. MASON
'Remove the veil'

BISHOP M. T. MEDFORD
'Full citizenship now'

Rev. King sees vote as key aid

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 5-25-57

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — "Give us the right to vote!"

This was the stirring plea to President Eisenhower and Congress voiced by the Rev. Martin Luther King, one of the three co - chairmen of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, as he spoke before an estimated 25,000 persons at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial here Friday afternoon.

With the ballot, he asserted, colored people will protect themselves from violence, send men of goodwill to state legislatures, elect to Congress men who will not sign "southern manifestos, elect just judges, and implement the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools.

"In the midst of the tragic breakdown of law and order, the executive branch of the government is all too silent and apathetic," the Rev. Mr. King said, adding:

* * *

"IN THE MIDST of the desperate need for civil rights legislation, the legislative branch of the Government is all too stagnant and hypocritical."

He charged that both political parties have betrayed the cause of justice.

"The Democrats have betrayed it by capitulating to the prejudices and undemocratic practices of the southern Dixiecrats," he said, adding:

"The Republicans have betrayed it by capitulating to the blatant hypocrisy of right wing reactionary northerners."

The Rev. Mr. King pleaded for the President and members of Congress "to provide a strong, moral and courageous leadership."

He also pleaded for strong leadership from white northern liberals, the moderates of the white South, and the colored community.

* * *

EMOTIONS WERE aroused to a high pitch by speaker after speaker at the Pilgrimage, held on the third anniversary of the announcement of the school desegregation ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court on May 17, 1954.

The program of song, prayer scripture reading and oratory, lasting more than three hours, went off smoothly.

Because of the religious tone of the program, the audience was asked not to applaud. But they were allowed to express their approbation by waving handkerchiefs.

When the spirit moved some members of the audience, however, there were shouts of "Amen!" or other words to urge the speaker on to higher oratorical flights.

"THE SPEAKERS, for the most part, were topflight pulpit orators. They included Dr. Morecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (Dem., N.Y.) as well as the Rev. Mr. King, the leader of the Montgomery (ala.) bus boycott.

Other speakers on the program included Rep. Charles C. Diggs (Dem., Mich.) and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP. A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who presided, made the opening remarks.

Randolph, Wilkins and King were co-chairmen of the pilgrimage. The Rev. Thomas Kilgore of New York City was its national director.

Sat 5-25-57

"THIS GREAT gathering is one of the most inspiring gatherings I have ever looked upon in all of the 50 years of my public life," Dr. Johnson told the crowd.

"I want to tell you how my heart is lifted up to look upon you and to see the noble, self-controlled, deliberate and prayerful manner in which you have answered the call of these pure-hearted leaders who have brought you here."

Dr. Johnson said:

"We must never forget this day. It must be to us a symbol of what greater things yet lie before us when we respond to the call of pure-hearted leaders to work together for the great cause of freedom.

"We have come here in this holy place, in front of the great memorial to Abraham Lincoln to bring to remembrance in gladness and in prayer some of the great things that have been done for the emancipation of colored people, for the blessing of the people of the United States, and for the strength of the moral power and leadership of our country in the world.

* * *

"WE HAVE COME to thank God for the Supreme Court decision abolishing segregation in the public schools and setting forth the principle, for the first time in 60 years, that under the Constitution of the United States it is not possible lawfully to classify a child on the basis of his race or color, and then force that child to go to an inferior accommodation of education.

"But under this law whatever accommodation for education is built for any child whatsoever belongs to every child of a citizen of the United States whatever his race, creed, or color may be.

"This is the greatest single act of government since the Emancipation Proclamation, opening the pathway of freedom for colored people and for the child of every human being that comes under the flag and Constitution of the United States."

* * *

IN HIS OPENING remarks, Mr. Randolph said the pilgrimage was to memorialize the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision and to demonstrate the unity of colored people and their allies behind the civil rights bill pending in Congress to keep it from being "strangled to death by committee maneuverings and the filibuster."

Another purpose of the pilgrimage, he said, was to tell white supremacists in the South to keep their evil hands" off the NAACP.

He called the fight against bus segregation in Montgomery "one of the great sagas of the struggle for human decency and freedom.

* * *

THE PILGRIMAGE, he said was also to express "righteous indignation against and condemnation" of the Ku Klux Klan and White Citizens Councils.

Randolph called upon President Eisenhower to speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that beset colored people in the South.

In an added paragraph to his speech, Randolph said:

"We reject the support and the cooperation of Communists in the fight for civil rights because we are opposed to the use of immoral means to attain moral ends.

"Further, we know that Communists have no geniuine interest in the solution of problems of racial discrimination but seek only to use this issue to strengthen the foreign policy of the Soviet Union."

* * *

BISHOP WILLIAM J. Walls of the AME Zion Church, Chicago, was not present, and Bishop H. D. Medford of the AMEZ Church, Washington, D.C., substituted for him in reading the scripture from the Old Testament.

Reports of "Southern Freedom Fighters" were made by the Rev. William H. Borders, pastor, Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga.; the Rev. C. K. Steele, pastor Bethel Baptist Church, Birmingham, Ala.; and the Rev. A. L. Davis, pastor, New Zion Baptist Church, New Orleans, La.

The Rev. Mr. Borders reported on the arrest of six preachers who boarded a bus in Atlanta and sat in front seats traditionally occupied by whites. The incident occurred last Jan. 7, after the Supreme Court had ruled racial segregation on buses operating within state and city limits unconstitutional.

"We were put in jail and the Governor of Georgia threatened to call out the state militia because the Georgia law on segregation as to common carriers had been violated," the Rev. Mr. Borders said.

* * *

THE REV. MR. STEELE, who was the leader of a bus boycott in Tallahassee, brought greetings from "the only unconquered state capital of the Confederacy.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said bombs were continually being exploded in the South and men were being intimidated, threatened and even murdered for attempting to vote or send their children to unsegregated schools.

The voice of power in the South, he said, is that of White Citizens Councils and the Ku Klux Klan.

He described Birmingham as the city where the 14th Amendment to the Federal Consitution was declared unconstitutional by a city judge.

* * *

THE REV. Mr. Davis told of sitting in the Federal District Court in New Orleans and hearing Judge Skelley Wright on Wednesday render his decisions outlawing segregation on buses and streetcars and city parks in New Orleans.

* * *

THE REV. Milton Perry, 21-year-old pastor of Deliverance Temple (Pentacostal) Church, Jersey City, N.J., who walked to Washington, was introduced and spoke briefly.

He [illegible]d he did not consider the [illegible]le walk "anything spe[illegible] because the people of Mon[illegible]ry had walked to maintain human dignity and their rights.

Congressman Diggs blasted President Eisenhower and both political parties.

"The President must raise the curtain of silence which surrounds the White House and step out on the stage and, as the principal performer in this drama of human relations in this cradle of democracy, Eisenhower must speak out in defense of law and order and against the denial of citizenship," Diggs said.

If Sen. Lyndon Johnson, of Texas, the Democratic leader, "chooses not to try to stop the dilatory tactics" of the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Sen. James O. Eastland (Dixiecrat, Miss.) is chairman, Diggs said, "then it is going to be his responsibility to explain his inaction to those affected and concerned, in the next election.

* * *

CONGRESSMAN POWELL suggested that telegrams be sent to President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon, Senator Johnson, and Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem., Texas) "demanding" an appointment with each of them and saying 25,000 white and colored persons "have served a mandate that must be heard."

Mr. Wilkins called the pilgrimage not a political but a "moral lobby."

The NAACP executive secretary charged that since the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools, mobs have been turned loose 'to shoot and burn and terrorize white and black alike."

Three years of such tactics have not changed colored people, who have remained steadfast in the face of terror and the threats, he said, adding:

"So now they have turned to passing new laws. In South Carolina members of the NAACP are barred from state employment. In one Alabama county the state must be paid $5 for every NAACP member enrolled.

* * *

"MISSISSIPPI HAS announced it will use secret policy. In Louisiana teachers and bus drivers may be fired for believing in integration.

"Special laws aimed at the NAACP have been passed in many states, ranging from Virginia to Texas.

"These laws set up new regulations designed to make it so difficult for the NAACP to operate that the people will be left without legal advice or protection in their struggle against Jim Crow.

"The key sections of the new law would hamper, if not completely prevent, citizens going to court to challenge discrimination. These laws also would prohibit citizens from lobbying for or against so-called 'racial' bills in state legislatures.

* * *

"THE NAACP is under injunction in Alabama and Texas and in most of Louisiana, and, under the new laws, is constantly faced with the possibility of swift action by states to put it out of business for any alleged violation. . . ."

Wilkins charged that certain members of Congress are "using every trick" to prevent the Federal Government from protecting the right to vote.

Pointing out that civil rights legislation has been bottled up in the Senate Judiciary Committee, he said it was charged in the 1956 election campaign that Eastland would block civil rights. 'His committee has done just that," Wilkins said.

If a meaningful civil rights bill is not passed, he said, voters in 1958 and 1960 will know where to place the responsibility.

A civil rights bill amended to provide for jury trials in contempt proceedings growing out of civil rights violations, Wilkins said, will not be a meaningful bill and will not protect the right to vote.

"The mere fact that Eastland is for such an amendment tells the story," he said.

PILGRIMAGE LEADER SAYS:

Ike's Speech Would Add Zest To March

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 5-4-57

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES
AFRO STAFF CORRESPONDENT

NEW YORK — "We have no conference set up with President Eisenhower at this time.

"The pilgrimage was not aimed at the President to make him speak out, although we would welcome his moral support or a strong statement."

This was the reply of Dr. Martin L. King of Montgomery, Ala., when asked if a conference with the President was in the agenda of the "Prayer Pilgrimage" to Washington on May 17.

He held a press conference Wednesday at the Sheraton-Astor Hotel to explain objectives of the pilgrimage.

"We are appealing to the conscience of the nation on major civil rights issues," the internationally known leader of the Montgomery Improvement Association, sponsor of the successful year-long bus boycott, emphasized.

* * *

ASKED ALSO if he planned to see Vice President Nixon while in Washington, Dr. King replied:

"No. I plan to see Mr. Nixon eventually, but I would not do so without consulting Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters."

Dr. King, Mr. Wilkins and Mr. Randolph constitute the board of strategy for the pilgrimage, which the Montgomery leader referred to as the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom."

* * *

A REPORTER asked Dr. King to explain the agreement he had with Vice President Nixon when they talked about racial tensions in the South in Ghana during the celebration of that new African nation's independence.

He said:

"The agreement was that I would contact him on my return to the United States.

"Mr. Nixon invited me to Washington to talk with him concerning conditions in the South.

"It was agreed that I would make the contact."

* * *

DR. KING announced that the Department of the Interior has granted permission for use of the Lincoln Memorial site for the pilgrimage program which, he explaind. would include prayers, speeches ad songs.

He listed these five objectives of the pilgrimage:

1. "To demonstrate the unity of colored Americans in the struggle for freedom and justice.

2. "To provide means for the people in the North to act in common on a great issue with the southern freedom fighters.

* * *

3. "TO PROTEST the crippling of the NAACP in southern states.

4. "To protest violence directed toward those in the South who assert dignity and stand for equality.

5. "To press for civil rights legislation before Congress."

* * *

DR. KING emphasized that the pilgrimage is more important because of the way Dixiecrats have been able to "bottle up and sabotage" civil rights bills before Congress.

Asked if there has been any noticeable reaction of white southerners against the pilgrimage, Dr. King said that, so far, everything is quiet.

"The pilgrimage," he added, "is open to all Americans. We are calling for the active support of people all over the nation.

* * *

ANOTHER question put to Dr. King was: "What steps have been taken to prevent leftwingers and Communists from exploiting the pilgrimage?"

"We will take all the necessary safeguards to prevent such a development," he answered.

Pressed for details as to the nature of support the pilgrimage has won thus far, Dr. King said:

* * *

"WE EXPECT a minimum of 50,000 participants from all parts of the nation.

"We have set up eight offices, two here in NYC and one each in Washington, Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Montgomery, Ala.

"Fine support is coming from key areas of the South such as Birmingham, Atlanta, Tallahassee and New Orleans.

"The southern office in Montgomery is being directed by the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, vice president of the Montgomery Improvement Association."

* * *

DR. KING said reports coming in reveal that 3,000 persons will join the pilgrimage by chartered plane, trains and buses from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland.

Others are coming by chartered buses and private cars from New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland.

Bayard Rustin of New York, one of the organizers of the pilgrimage, announced that "Freedom Trains" will bring thousands from New York and Brooklyn and from Philadelphia and Baltimore.

* * *

DR. KING pointed out that strong support, as well as financial assistance, have already been pledged by the trade unions, including:

The United Automobile Workers, the United Steelworkers, the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, the Packinghouse Workers, the Wholesale and Retailers, the Transport Workers Union, the International Union of Electrical Workers and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

"We expect some support from liberal white religious leaders in the South," Dr. King added.

* * *

AFTER THE press conference, Dr. King was honored by The Religion and Labor Foundation, Inc., at a luncheon in the same hotel.

He was one of three distinguished civil rights leaders who were presented with the RLF's Social Justice Award.

The others were U.S. Senator Herbert H. Lehman and the Rev. Fr. John LaFarge, S.J.

The RFL luncheon was preceded by a conference on "Automation: A Challenge to the American Way of Life."

* * *

IN CHICAGO, the Washington Park Forum, the Rev. Joseph P. King, president, has pledged to send "the largest possible delegation" to the Washington mobilization.

In New York, more than 1,000 members of the District 65 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, AFL CIO, have indicated they will make the trip.

In a statement, accompanying a $500 donation to the national planning committee, the union said "We are dedicated to pray for the wiping out of the evils that still beset our nation."

Negro Ministers Veto Pilgrimage

Post Herald Wed. 5-1-57

LITTLE ROCK, April 30 (AP)—A group of 20 Negro ministers approved a resolution "condeming the pilgrimage on Washington or in any way interfering with the President's program at this time."

Birmingham, Ala.

The Rev. W. H. Hall, presiding elder of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, said the proposed pilgrimage was a "fanfare of publicity seekers."

P. 24

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Montgomery, Ala., leader of the Negro bus boycott there, and others have proposed a "prayer pilgrimage" to Washington May 17 in an effort to persuade Congress to pass civil rights legislation.

Hall said the Interfaith Fellowship of Ministers—which he said represented a cross section of Negro ministers here — disagreed with methods advocated by King and Phillip A. Randolph "to gain freedom for Negroes." Randolph is national president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

'No force can halt march to freedom'

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 4-20-57

ATLANTA — "There is no force nor individuals, nor combinations of groups able to stop the momentum which will carry colored citizens to complete and full equality."

P. 11

That's what Rep. A. Clayton Powell told a cheering audience at Wheat St. Baptist Church here Sunday at a mass meeting sponsored by the Interdenominational Minister's Alliance.

The great danger of delay "comes not from the hard core defiant states," Powell declared, but from the "weakening on the part of Northern whites and American liberals who thus become unwitting allies of Eastlandism."

* * *

THE NEW YORK congressman predicted "the day of destiny" should come "somewhere between 1963 and 1965, the centennial of American freedom."

Warning that the United States can automatically become a second - class power, Mr. Powell asserted that it was "agreed at Bandung that no nation with second-class citizens can be a first - class power in tomorrow's world."

Three significant events have taken place in Washington during the last two years, he said.

* * *

HE LISTED these as:

1. The end of the alliance between reactionary Republicans and reactionary Dixiecrats;

2. The refusal of so many Southern Congressmen to sign the Southern Manifesto, indicating there is no longer a solid South;

3. And the shoving of Senator Eastland to the background by his own fellow Southerners.

Mr. Powell praised the leadership being given in the fight for freedom by outspoken members of the clergy in the South.

* * *

"THE DAY that the Southern white clergy begins to give the moral witness that the colored clergy are now giving, that day will mark the complete and final end of communism's greatest weapon — segregation," he said.

Plans Made For Pilgrimage To D. C.

Daily Ward Tues. 4-23-57

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Plans were made for a Prayer Pilrimage to Washington during a meeting of 106 religious, labor and civic leaders, in New York, last Thursday. The Pilgrimage was set for May 17.

Atlanta, Ga.

Heading the planning committee was Rev. Thomas Kilgore, national director of the movement. On revealing an outline of the plans, he said regional officers have been opened in ten cities, with major ones in Los Angeles, Cleveland, San Francisco, Montgomery, Ala. Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore in addition to large headquarters in Washington and New York.

P. 1

Tens of thousands are expected to arrive in Washington by special trains, special busses, car pools hitch-hiking and even some plans for walking from New York and Connecticut. Those on foot plan to start on May 1, according to an announcement.

A. Philip Randolph, delivering the keynote address at the meeting, said "there are two kinds of rights -- human rights and civil rights. Human rights are God-given and civil rights are intended to implement himan rights". He continued.

HERE ARE THE PLANNERS—Organizers of the May 17 "Prayer Pilgrimage" to Washington's Lincoln Memorial gather around co-chairman A. Philip Randolph, in New York to discuss the plans. Left to right, seated, are A. Philip Randolph, Miss Ella J. Baker, the Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr. Standing: Bayard Rustin, Ricard Moore and Lance Roberts.

Use of Lincoln Memorial is granted Prayer Pilgrimage

Afro-American Baltimore Md. Sat. 5-4-57

NEW YORK — The NAACP has been informed that the Lincoln Memorial in Washington will be available for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom on May 17, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, said here Thursday.

Mr. Wilkins is cochairman of the pilgrimage with A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Dr. Martin L. King Jr., president of the Southern Leadership Conference.

Use of the memorial for this purpose was requested last month by Clarence Mitchell, director of the association's Washington bureau.

After a month's delay, the National Park Service at first turned down the request on April 16 on the ground that an assembly of 50,000 persons at the memorial would deprive thousands of tourists of the free access to the shrine.

Upon further representation by Mr. Mitchell who pointed out the symbolic significance of holding the meeting at the Lincoln Memorial, the earlier denial was rescinded on April 18. The meeting will be from noon until 3 p.m. on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in public education.

Leaders Launch Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom

Daily World Sat. 5-18-57 Atlanta, Ga. P. 1

BY HUGH MORRIS

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Leaders launched a "Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom" at the Lincoln Memorial Friday before an estimated 15,000 to 25,000 persons assembled from throughout the nation.

A three-hour program to dramatize the fight for civil rights featured addresses by the Rev. Martin Luther King, of Montgomery, Ala., Labor Leader A. Philip Randolph, educator Mordecai W. Johnson and Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D) N. Y., and Charles Diggs (D) Mich.

The leaders hailed the Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation in public schools, attacked Democrats and Republicans for failing to provide civil rights leadership, and urged a prayer crusade centered in the churches.

WITHHELD APPLAUSE

The audience was asked to withhold applause because of the "religious nature" of the program. However, speakers were interrupted frequently by shouts of "amen" and the fluttering of white handkerchiefs.

There was a disagreement on the size of the crowd. Park police inspector Melvin H. Leach estimated there were 15,000 persons, but pilgrimage officials insisted that 25,000 were on hand.

The pilgrims poured into the Nation's Capital by plane, train, bus, automobile, and even on foot, from more than 31 states for the mass meeting.

200 MILE HIKE

The Rev. Milton Perry, 21, pastor of the deliverance temperance church of Jersey City, N. J. completed a 200 mile hike. Perry, who started his walk Sunday, was met by an official delegation.

Rev. King, who led the year-long bus boycott in Montgomery, told the throng that the Negro's "most urgent request" is the right to vote. He declared: "Give us the ballot and we will no longer have to worry the Federal government about our basic rights."

The minister described the Supreme court decision as a "joyous daybreak to end the long fight of enforced segregation" but he said more aggressive leadership is needed to carry out the ruling.

He declared that "the executive branch of the government is all too silent and apathetic" and "the legislative branch is all too stagnant and hypocritical."

NON RACIAL

Powell accused both political parties of basic dishonesty and increasing hypocrisy" and urged establishment of a "third force" that would be non-partisan and non-racial but political in nature.

He said that this third force "must be housed only in the churches, led only by the clergy, powered through prayer with the masses acting in unity."

Diggs urged President Eisenhower to lift what he called "the curtain of silence which surrounds the White House" and to "speak out in defense of law and order and against the denial of citizenship rights to the Negro in the South."

Randolph, President of the AFL-CIO sleeping car porters, warned that Negroes want neither the leadership nor support of communists in the fight for Civil Rights.

Johnson, President of Howard University, said tht the Supreme Court's desegregation decision was "the greatest single act of government since the Emancipation Proclamation."

PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK:

Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 5-4-57

Directs 'Prayer Pilgrim'mage' to Washington

NEW YORK—What type of man is the Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church in Harlem, who will direct the prayer pilgrimage to Washington May 17?

He is a native of Woodruff, S.C. (Spartanburg County), attended Morehouse Colege inl Atanta, Howard University in Washington and Union Theological Seminary here.

Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C., has honored him with the honorary doctor of divinity degree.

While attending Morehouse in Atlanta he served as assistant pastor to the Rev. Martin L. King Sr., pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church there, and met the Rev. Martin L. King Jr., then a youngster, while dining at the Kings' home.

* * *

HIS FIRST church was in Winston-Salem, N.C. (Friendship Baptist), where he supervised the construction of the edifice and endared himself to the community.

In addition to his duties as pastor of Friendship Church, he also served as chaplain at Winston-Salem State Teachers College and is credited as being the founder of the first labor union with a mixed membership in North Carolina.

Later he became executive secretary of the North Carolina General Baptist Convention, one of the largest and most influential in the nation, serving in that post until he was called to the church here.

* * *

THE REV. Mr. Kilgore has offices at 20 W. 40th St. He lives here with his wife and two daughters, Lynn E., 11 and Jini M., 9. He was endorsed as national director of the prayer pilgrimage by 72 of the nation's leaders.

These include Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary; the Rev. Martin L. King, bus boycott leader in Montgomery, Ala.; and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and AFL-CIO vice president.

38a 1957 PILGRIMAGE

Prayer Political Action Urged to Help Solve Issues

A. C. POWELL

MRS. IRENE GAINES

A PHILIP RANDOLPH

The denial of the right to vote, the young clergyman declared "is a tragic betrayal of the highest mandates of our democratic traditions and it is democracy turned upside down. So long as I do not firmly and irrevocably possess the right to vote I do not posses myself. I cannot make up my mind—it is made up for me. I cannot live as a democratic citizen, observing the laws I have helped to enact—I can only submit to the edict of others."

Bystander p. 3
Thurs 5-23-57
Des Moines, Iowa

Four Areas

There are four areas in which "dedicated and courageous leadership must be developed, he asserted, "if we are to solve the problems ahead and make racial justice real."

First, he said, there must be "strong, aggressive leadership from the federal government." In the second place, he declared "there is need for strong leadership from the white northern liberals. Thirdly, "we must look for strong leadership from the moderates of the white South." And finally, he stressed the "urgent need for strong, courageous and intelligent leadership from the Negro community."

Asks for "Third Force"

Distressed by the lack of positive civil rights action by either Republicans or Democrats in Congress, Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) called for the establishment of a "third force", which, he said, should "be nonpartisan, but political; non-racial, but for the time being led by our Negro clergy who have given the greatest spiritual witness of any group in this country; non-demoninational inviting men of all faiths to follow."

Passage of the pending civil rights bill by the House of Representatives was predicted by Congressman Charles C. Diggs, Jr., (D. Mich.). However, he continued, 'if Lyndon Johnson, the Majority leader in the Senate, chooses not to try to stop the dilatory tactics of the Judiciary Committee headed by Eastland, it will be his responsibility to explain his inaction to those affected and concerned. If he does not explain it adequately, a lot of good Democrats are going to suffer in the next election, and more and more protest votes against Dixiecrats will be cast for Republicans by southern Negroes."

Senator Jacob K. Javits, who had been invited to participate in the program, sent a telegram expressing his regret that he could not attend and affirming his conviction that "the right of our citizens to peaceably assemble and petition the government for redress of deep grievances is one of the most precious rights secured by our Constitution."

Dr. Johnson Speaks

Other speakers included Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University who made an eloquent plea for defense of the NAACP in its fight for civil rights; four southern leaders of action to eliminate segregation in buses in their respective cities: Reverends William H. Borders, Atlanta; C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla.; F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham; and A. L. Davis, New Orleans. Mrs. William T. Mason, president, National Council of Negro Women; and Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president, National Association of Colored Women, also addressed the assemblage.

Mahalia Jackson, the popular and talented gospel singer, was featured artist of the program. There were other musical numbers by a chorus under the direction of Prof. Warner Lawson of Howard University and by the Philadelphia Fellowship House Choir under Mrs. Aileen Brown's direction. Miss Rose Battle English of New York sang the "Star Spangled Banner" to open the meeting.

Place Weath

Prayers and scripture readings were by Senior AME Bishop S. L. Greene of Atlanta; CME Bishop William Y. Bell; Rev. Ross A. Weston, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Arlington, Va.; Dr. W. H. Jernagin of Washington; Bishop R. C Lawson of New York City; and the Rev. T. M. Chambers of Los Angeles.

A "Litany of Freedom", written and led by Rev. Thomas Kilgore of New York City, was recited by a massed group of clergymen. Then year old James and eight year old Theresa Gordon who were barred from attending a school in Clay, Ky., last September, placed a wreath at the foot of the huge and brooding statute of Abraham Lincoln in the Memorial.

Estimated 200 Atlantans In Prayer Pilgrimage Today

Daily World Fri. 5-17-57 P. 1
Atlanta, Ga.

An estimated 200 Atlantans will take part in a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" today in the nation's capitol as some 50,000 Americans gather to celebrate the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 decision that made racial segregation in public schools unlawful.

A Greyhound Lines bus, bearing 39 people left from Wheat Street Baptist Church at 2 p. m. Thursday. It followed a motorcade of at least 20 automobiles laden with pilgrims.

Officials of the movement said a large group of people had already gone to Washington via train and plane to take part in the march on the capitol. It was estimated Atlanta will have more than 200 representatives.

The Rev. William Holmes Borders and officials of a local radio concern flew to Washington Thursday night. Rev. Borders, Pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church, had helped lead the crusade to Washington through the Love, Law and Liberation Movement.

Officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People ,including local president J. H. Calhoun, left in the earlier motorcade.

A mass meeting has been scheduled for Sunday afternoon to report on the pilgrimage. It was tentatively set for 5 p. m., but officials said there was some doubt as whether it would be changed.

The pilgrimage grew out of a two-fold idea. First, it was desired that the courts decision should be celebrated. Secondly, Negro leaders in many parts of the country have expressed concern that the federal laws of the nation are being openly unhonored in many places in the South. It was felt that the pilgrimage would encourgage the federal government to move faster and effectively to help bring civil rights to minorities.

A motorcade from Montgomery, Ala., passed through Atlanta at mid-day Thursday.

Savannah sent a bus-load of persons to the pilgrimage, while other Georgia cities and towns contributed cars to the movement toward the nationals capital.

PART OF ATLANTA PILGRIMAGE GROUP — This group of Atlantans, led by the Rev. William Holmes Borders, of the Triple-L Movement, was part of the delegation which left by bus, train, plane and automobile for Washington, D. C., where some 50,000 Americans are expected to converge for the national celebration of "Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom." — (Alexander Adams Photo)

Southerners Report On Real Citizenship Moves

Wkly. Wed. 5-22-52

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Emotions were aroused to a high pitch by speaker after speaker at the culmination of the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" at the Lincoln Memorial here Friday.

But just how the fervor of the crowd, estimated at 18,000, may be translated into action in the fight for first-class citizenship, is a problem with which the leaders must wrestle.

The program of song, prayer, scripture reading and oratory, lasting more than three hours, went off smoothly and orderly.

The speakers for the most part were topflight pulpit orators. They included Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of New York and the Rev. Martin Luther King, the leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott.

Other speakers on the program included Representative Charles C. Diggs, Democrat, of Michigan and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who presided, made remarks.

Randolph, Wilkins and King were co-chairmen of the pilgrimage.

"This great gathering is one of the most inspiring gatherings I have ever looked upon in all of the 50 years of my public life," Dr. Johnson told the crowd.

Reports of "Southern Freedom Fighters" were made by the Rev. William H. Borders, pastor, Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga.; The Rev. C. K. Steele, pastor Bethel Baptist Church, Tallahassee, Fla.; The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, pastor, Bethel Baptist Church, Birmingham, Ala., and the Rev. A. L. Davis, pastor, New Zion Baptist Church, New Orleans, La.

Baptist Church, New Orleans, La.

BORDERS REPORT

The Rev. Mr. Borders reported on the arrest of six preachers who boarded a bus in Atlanta and sat in front seats traditionally occupied by whites. The incident occurred last Jan. 7, after the Supreme Court had ruled racial segregation on buses operating within state and city limits unconstitutional.

"We were put in jail and the Governor of Georgia threatened to call out the state militia because the Georgia law on segregation as to common carriers had been violated," the Rev. Mr. Borders said.

The Rev. Mr. Steele, who was the leader of a bus boycott in Tallahassee, brought greetings from "the only unconquered state capital of the Confederacy.

SHUTTLESWORTH SPEAKS

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said bombs were continually being exploded in the South and men were being intimidated, threatened and even murdered for attempting to vote or send their children to unsegregated schools.

The voice of power in the South, he said, is that of White Citizens Councils and the Ku Klux Klan.

He described Birmingham as the city where the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was declared unconstitutional by a city judge.

The Rev. Mr. Davis told of sitting in the Federal District Court in New Orleans and hearing Judge Shelley Wright on Wednesday render his decisions outlawing segregation on buses and street cars and city parks in New Orleans.

KING WANTS VOTE

The Rev. Mr. King called upon the President and Congress to "give us the right to vote."

With the ballot, he asserted, colored people will protect themselves from violence, send men of goodwill to state legislatures, elect to Congress men who will not sign "southern manifestos, elect just judges, and implement the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools.

He charged that both political parties have betrayed the cause of justice.

"The Democrats have betrayed it by capitulating to the prejudices and undemocratic practices of the southern Dixiecrats," he said, adding:

"The Republicans have betrayed it by capitulating to the blatant hypocrisy of right wing, reactionary northerners."

Mr. King pleaded for the President and members of Congress to provide a strong, moderates of the white south and the colored community.

From New York . . . California . . . the Deep South!

They Came by the Thousands!

Courier P. 4 Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 5-25-57

WASHINGTON—A two-section, 30-car "special" rolled into Union Station Friday morning, to pace the thousands who poured into the city for the "Prayer Pilgrimage."

More than 2,000 people on this train, though, were just part of the better than 9,000 who came here from New York City, to lead the influx. In addition to the "special," more than 40 buses . . . a motorcade that stretched for two miles . . . and hundreds more came by private cars and other trains.

On Thursday afternoon, a giant four-motor plane sat down at the local airport, unloading 75 Californians (from Los Angeles and San Francisco) to represent their state.

Also, a 75-car motorcade from Richmond . . . a 50-car motorcade from Roanoke; imposing delegations from Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery.

A three-bus, 20-car motorcade from Pittsburgh.

A 200-person delegation from Louisiana, New Orleans, Shreveport, Baton Rouge.

Delegates from Texas, Atlantic City.

If there was any disappointment, it was over the fact that the citizens of Washington, D. C., didn't react as enthusiastically as the rest of the country.

Courier P. 4 Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 5-25-57

He Made It—The Rev. Milton Perry (center) of Jersey City, N. J., succeeded in walking all the way from his hometown to Washington, D. C., for the Prayer Pilgrimage rally held last week. He was met at the District line by this delegation composed of the Revs. Jackson V. Acox, D. Sheppard, Perry, Harvey and James W. Young, all of New Orleans, and Father J. von Brown of Dallas, Tex.—Cabell Photo.

Met Jim Crow on the Way

Pastor Walks 192 Miles To Prayer Pilgrimage!

Courier Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 5-25-57

By JOHN H. YOUNG III
(Special to The Courier)

WASHINGTON — The headlights of a motorist traveling along Route 1 (Boston to Miami) in a driving rainstrom, picked up a lone figure walking down the highway.

He was hatless . . . and wore no coat!

• The driver slowed down and then he saw it . . . the youngster was clutching a Bible tightly against his side.

"Can I give you a lift, son?" the man inquired kindly. But the traveler refused to take advantage of the offer.

As the driver pulled away, he looked and saw through his rear-view mirror that the small brown youth was "still marching" in the rain.

■

TO THE STRANGER, it was something he could not comprehend. But to the five-foot, 21-year-old youth who "kept on marching," it was just another episode.

• On Sunday, May 12, Rev. Milton Perry started on his memorable walk to the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom in Washington, D. C., five days later. Pastor of the Deliverance Temple in Jersey City, N. J., he was out to walk the 192 miles in the cause of freedom . . . and to do his best to let America know about the Pilgrimage.

Rev. Mr. Perry, who had started preaching at 13, knew how Moses walked in the wilderness to deliver his people. He had read of Gandhi walking over the poverty-stricken hills of India.

And sealed forever in his heart was the knowledge of "his people" walking the streets of Montgomery, Ala. . . . walking for the emancipation of free people, EVERYWHERE!

SO . . . THE IDEA of the march was born. He left his wife, Mary; his baby, Maria Faith Cherise, and his mother, Mildred.

From Jersey City to New Brunswick is only 30 miles. But start walking at 3:45 in the afternoon. You've never done it before. By midnight, you arrive . . . feet tired and blistered . . . your legs lead-heavy.

• It's enough to dampen the ardor of anyone but Rev. Mr. Perry. For there is a fresh sincerity and dedication that this young minister radiates, which tells it own story.

At 4 o'clock the next morning, he started the next leg . . . Trenton! He reached there 14 hours later. Thus it went.

There were things to remember on his memorable trip!

• The ministers who met him at Trenton's outskirts . . . walked with him to a vacant lot and held a prayer service which drew a thousand participants.

• Philadelphia . . . Rev. Leon Sulivan led him to a poetic ceremony at the Liberty Bell.

Lincoln University in Chester County, Pa., where he spoke with the students and was given a raincoat which a student took off his own back.

Bel Air, Md., where he was given the "keys to the city" by Mayor John Worthington and a Bible from Governor McKeldin.

■

ELKRIDGE, Md. . . . where he was denied the right to drink a malted milk by a white cafe owner. Rev. Mr. Perry had walked from Baltimore . . . a distance of 15 miles . . . and still had 25 miles to go.

• When he refused to pay for the drink, the owner became abusive and threatened to call the police. Rev. Mr. Perry did the diplomatic thing . . . he retreated. But he didn't pay, either.

• Then came Friday, May 17, 1957. Rev. Mr. Perry had made it! He walked into the nation's capital and through the streets . . . his head high, the Bible still clutched in his hand.

The drama and color of his act had spurred the press, TV and radio to give the event added publicity.

• When he reached the Lincoln Memorial, he was lifted before microphone and made an impassioned 90-second plea before he was overcome with emotion.

As he put the handkerchief to his eyes, many another eye throughout the vast crowd was moist. Women wept unashamedly and men blew their noses vigorously.

Rev. Mr. Perry . . . who weighed 140 pounds when he started . . . lost five pounds in five days.

He arrived with three dollars in his pocket . . . and his Bible in his hand!

He had made it!

Where Was Thurgood?

Courier Pitts. Pa. Sat. 5-25-57

Many People Were Wondering, So We Got the Story

WASHINGTON—Thurgood Marshall, the man whose brains and ability highlighted the NAACP's dramatic legal fight for racial justice . . . a fight which resulted in the May 17, 1954, decision outlawing school segregation . . . wasn't here Friday.

And thousands of people in the mammoth crowd wondered why!

So did we.

Here's the reason Mr. Marshall didn't show.

Mr. Marshall

He took himself out of the picture, voluntarily.

His reasons?

■

AS THE NAACP legal counsel, which is even now involved in litigation fighting for its existence in the South and also fighting for implementation of the Supreme Court's decision in other sections of the South, he felt his appearance would be unethical.

He also felt that anything he might say COULD be misinterpreted and used against the organization.

■

SENATORS Jacob Javits (N. Y.) and Paul Douglas (Ill.) never did agree to attend. Jackie Robinson couldn't get away.—WGN

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. Sat. 5-25-57

P. 10

South Carolinians Attend Prayer Pilgrimage

38a

This group of South Carolinians are arriving at Union Station en route to the Prayer Pilgrimage held May 17, at Lincoln Memorial. Many delegations of this type attended the pilgrimage. They are from left to right Mrs. Rachel Miller, Mrs. Mary Davis, Miss Bernice Robinson, Mrs. Etta Clark, Arthur Brown, George Talbert, the Rev. H. B. Butler, Mrs. J. Arthur Brown and the Rev. W. H. Barnes, all of Charleston.

Groups from other parts of the South were to join them in the nation's capital.

The Montgomery group, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King who will be one of the featured speakers, will participate in services at the Lincoln Memorial at noon today. Other speakers will include Negro leaders Roy Wilkins, Phillip Randolph, and Congressman Adam Powell of New York and Charles Diggs of Michigan.

Following prayer service at the First Baptist Church on Ripley street most of the delegates boarded four chartered which are buses due to arrive in Washington about 8:30 a.m. today. A number had already gone by car and train and still others left later in the day.

Ralph D. Abernathy referred to the joint services to be staged by Negroes from all over the nation as "the greatest demonstration on behalf of civil rights since the singing of the Declaration of Independence.

"We hope this will change the conscience and spirit of the nation in the whole area of civil rights," King said.

Montgomery Negroes who stayed behind will hold services of their own tonight at 6 p.m. at the Shiloh Baptist Church.

Delegates, loaded with luggage and other travel items, began arriving at the church before 5 a.m., along with some 150 well-wishers who attended the prayer service which got under way shortly before 6 a.m. Most of the people there were middle-aged and elderly persons. There were no children and few young people.

After a few free hours this afternoon for sightseeing the group will board their buses about 10 p.m. and arrive back in Montgomery Saturday night.

FOR MASS DEMONSTRATION

Advertiser Fri. 5-17-57

200 Local Negroes Join March On Washington

Montgomery, Ala.

By JO ANN FLIRT

About 200 Negroes left Montgomery early yesterday bound for the nation's capital for a mass demonstration there today celebrating the 1954 Supreme Court school segregation decisions.

It was thought to be the first "march on Washington" ever staged by Negroes in their many years of battle over civil rights.

The Rev. King left by plane shortly after 9 a.m. about two hours after the last bus pulled away from the church. He was to attend a committee meeting last night. Other local leaders were to follow by plane.

About 40 delegates were left behind for lack of space after last minute efforts to charter an additional bus failed.

Both the Rev. King and the Rev.

Urge All NAACP Units To Back D. C. Pilgrimage

Defender Sat. 4-27-57 Chicago, Ill. P. 3

NEW YORK — Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, has called upon all local and state units of the Association to rally to the support of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom in Washington on May 17, the third anniversary of the historic U. S. Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in public education.

The NAACP executive is serving as co-chairman of the movement together with A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a vice-president of the AFL-CIO and Dr. Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Leadership Conference and leader of the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott.

The Prayer Pilgrimage was launched officially at a meeting of 77 leaders of church, labor, civic and fraternal organizations in Washington on April 5. They unanimously approved a call to the nation to gether in Washington in observance of the anniversary of the court decision, in support of pending civil rights legislation, in protest against terror and violence in the South, and in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln.

NOT FOR PRESSURE

The Prayer Pilgrimage the NAACP leader said today, "is not a March-on-Washington in the sense of the 1941 movement inasmuch as it is not designed to exert pressure on the executive branch of the government."

An office for the Pilgrimage has been set up in the NAACP national headquarters, 20 W. 40th st New York 18, N. Y., with Rev. Thomas Kilgore, Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist church in New York, as executive director.

Kilgore will work under the supervision of the three co-chairmen. Additional working space has been set up in Montgomery, Ala., and in Harlem. Rev. Ralph Abernathy of Montgomery is southern director.

In a letter to all NAACP units, Wilkins called upon them to initiate steps to get a large delegation to make the trip. Aim is to get a minimum of 50,000 persons in the city for an open air meeting scheduled for the park area in front of the Lincoln Memorial.

The branches were urged to mobilize all civil rights supporters in their respectieve communities and to make arrangements for transportation.

NEGROES TO MASS IN CAPITAL MAY 17

Times p. 11-C Sat. 4-6-57

Turnout of 50,000 Expected for 'Pilgrimage' to Mark Ruling on Integration

New York

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5—Negro leaders of fifteen states laid plans here today for a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" in Washington on May 17.

It will mark the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing racial segregation in public schools.

Spokesmen for the planning group told reporters afterward that the visitation would "demonstrate the unity of the Negro community with regard to civil rights demands."

"The occasion will show our support of the Supreme Court opinion," said Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "We want to protest the intimidation and terror under which colored people are living."

Mr. Wilkins, as one of the spokesmen, emphasized, however, that the "pilgrimage" was not planned as a "march on Washington."

50,000 Expected to Join

His remarks were seconded by A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., leader of the recent bus integration movement in Montgomery, Ala.

The three leaders said they anticipated "a minimum" of 50,000 Negroes from religious, civic, labor and other groups from various parts of the country to make the "pilgrimage."

Preliminary plans call for an outdoor program at noon on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. The leaders said they had forwarded a request to the Department of Interior for use of the memorial site, but had not y received a reply.

A spokesman at the Interior Department said the request was being "processed." He gave no indication of the action officials might take.

Confident of Approval

The three leaders expressed confidence the request would be granted.

"We can't imagine the Government would refuse Negro citizens a right to use the Lincoln Memorial for a prayer meeting," said Mr. Wilkins.

In an official "call" to the pilgrimage, the leaders stated:

"As we approach the third anniversary of the ruling of the United States Supreme Court against racially segregated public school systems, we invite all believers in the God-given concept of the brotherhood of man and in the American ideal of equality, to assemble, review the national scene, give thanks for the progress to date, and pray for the wiping out of the evils that still beset our nation."

Mr. Randolph said the outdoor program would include speeches and the appearance of a musical artist.

The approach to the Lincoln Memorial was the scene of a recital by Marian Anderson, the Negro contralto, nineteen years ago. Miss Anderson had been denied the use of Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Harold L. Ickes, then Secretary of the Interior, invited her to sing at the memorial on Easter Sunday.

NAACP Branches Rallied For Prayer Pilgrimage

Call 3 ri. 4-19-57 p. 1

Kansas City, Missouri

NEW YORK.—Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has called upon all local and state units of the association to rally to the support of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom in Washington on May 17, the third anniversary of the historic U. S. Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in public education.

The NAACP executive is serving as co-chairman of the movement together with A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a vice-president of the AFL-CIO, and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Leadership Conference and leader of the successful Montgome Alabama, bus protest movement.

The Prayer Pilgrimage was officially launched at a meeting of 77 leaders of church, labor, civic and fraternal organizations in Washington on April 5. The leaders unanimously approved a call to the nation to gather in Washington in observance of the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision, in support of pending civil rights legislation, in protest against terror and violence in the South, and in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln.

The Prayer Pilgrimage, the NAACP leader said today, "is not a March-on-Washington in the sense of the 1941 movement inasmuch as it is not designed to exert pressure on the executive branch of the government."

An office for the Pilgrimage has been set up in the NAACP national headquarters, 20 West 40th Stret, New York 18, N. Y., with Rev. Thomas Kilgore, Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church in New York, as executive director. Mr. Kilgore will work undef the supervision of the three co-chairmen. Additional working space has been set up in Montgomery, Ala., and in Harlem. Rev. Ralph Abernathy of Montgomery is southern director.

Pitt. 4-19-57

In a letter to all NAACP units, Mr. Wilkins called upon them to initiate steps to get a large delegation to make the trip to Washington on May 17. The aim is to get a minimum of 50,000 persons in the city for an open air meeting scheduled for the park area in front of the Lincoln Memorial. The branches were urged to mobilize all civil rights supporters in their respective communities and to make arrangements for transportation to the nation's capital city.

'March' plans to be discussed April 5

Afro-American Sat. 4-6-57

Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK — Describing Southern defiance of the courts as a "threat to the spiritual fibre of the nation," Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, issued a call Thursday for a planning session for a "Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington."

National leaders from all sections of the country were urged to meet with A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; the Rev. Martin Luther King, head of the Montgomery Improvement Association, and Mr. Wilkins on Friday, April 5, at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Washington.

IN THE CALL for the session which will make plans for "a massive public expression of our determination to see justice and morality prevail," the three leaders of the movement declared:

"This nation is now on the threshold of momentous decisions. For the first time since Reconstruction, passage of civil rights legislation is a possibility.

"At the same time, the supremacy of law and order are increasingly endangered.

"Widespread terror is visited the people so honored must be upon law-abiding citizens, the clergy and churches.

"There is outright defiance of the courts and a threat to the spiritual fibre of the nation in the breakdown of morality.

"The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was mandated by its San Francisco convention last June to make a suitable public demonstration in support of federal action to protect civil rights and implement decisions of the courts.

Ready to March on Washington

Leaders of National Prayer Pilgrimage In Confab This Week

Courier p. 2
Pittsburgh Pa
Sat 4-6-57

NEW YORK—A "massive" public demonstration has been called a "necessity" by Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, who has announced plans to support proposed Federal action aimed at the protection of civil rights and the implementation of high court decisions.

Mr. Wilkins explained, "This nation is now on the threshold of momentous decisions. For the first time since Reconstruction, the passage of civil rights legislation is a possibility.

• "At the same time, the supremacy of law and order is increasingly endangered. Widespread terror is visited upon law-abiding citizens, clergy and churches. There is outright defiance of the courts and a threat to the spiritual fiber of the nation in the breakdown of morality."

The NAACP leader asserted that his organization was given a mandate by the San Francisco convention of last June to "make suitable public demonstration" in support of Federal action.

■

HE CITED the Feb. 14 meeting of Southern leaders which issued a mandate for a prayer pilgrimage to Washington.

• "In this context," continued Mr. Wilkins, "a dignified massive public expression of our determination to see justice and morality prevail seems to us a historic necessity. Support of all organizations and individuals, North and South, is needed."

Mr. Wilkins revealed that a meeting to formulate plans will be held Friday, April 5, at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R St., N.W., Washington, D.C. Interested individuals and groups are being urged to contact Mr. Wilkins, A. Philip Randolph and Rev. Martin Luther King at 20 W. 40th St., New York, N.Y.

'Freedom Prayer Pilgrimage' Set May 17 By Negro Leaders

Advertiser Montgomery Ala.
Sat 4-6-57
p. 6-A

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP)—Negro leaders announced plans today for a "prayer pilgrimage for freedom" May 17—third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision striking down racial segregation in public schools.

The three co-chairmen of the pilgrimage—Roy Wilkins, the Rev. Martin Luther King, and A. Philip Randolph — estimated at least 50,000 persons will attend the observance here.

They told a news conference they have asked the Interior Department for permission to meet at the Lincoln Memorial.

"We assume they won't refuse us," said Wilkins, executive director of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

The formal call for the pilgrimage invited "all believers in the God-given concept of the brotherhood of man and in the American ideal of equality, to assemble, review the national scene, give thanks for progress to date, and pray for wiping out the evils that still beset our nation."

"It all means that colored people want to be first-class citizens not second-class," Wilkins said.

King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala., protest against segregated buses, said the meeting should not be construed "as a threat to the President or anybody else."

King said Southern Negro leaders still want President Eisenhower to make a civil rights speech in the South, "but that isn't the purpose of this pilgrimage."

Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters described the pilgrimage as "a challenge to the conscience of America."

Negro sports and social stage.

While thousands of Negroes yelled themselves hoarse, the Dixie contingent was "talking" Mr. Dyer's bill to death.

Out of this disgraceful episode came a memorable article from the pen of the late Dr. Kelly Miller.

The piece was entitled "Fiddling While Rome Burns."

NEARLY 33 years later . . . On May 17, 1957 . . . another historic event took place in the nation's capital.

Negroes came here by the thousands. They came by plane, by bus, by auto, by foot, by train.

Once again, however, Negroes from this "voteless and voiceless" city were conspicuous by their absence.

This is not to say that some Washingtonians didn't show up. They did!

But conservati e estimates say the number of out-of-town "pilgrims" outnumbered Washington "pilgrims" by several thousands.

And this . . . in a city with a Negro population of more than 365,000; a city which has felt the full impact of the historic Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954.

■

WHY DIDN'T Washington Negroes respond with the enthusiasm and dedication, which swept the rest of the country?

We asked a lot of questions and were given a lot of reasons.

A university professor admitted that he asked two classes of Howard students how many intended to attend the prayer pilgrimage.

Out of a class of 24 students . . . ONE STUDENT RAISED HIS HAND.

Out of a class of 45 students . . . TWO STUDENTS RAISED THEIR HANDS.

Aside from the church groups, apathy was general and widespread.

We asked close friends of ours . . . and members of their families. Washington just wasn't concerned . . . they just didn't give a damn!

They were more interested in their bridge parties . . . in the harness races . . . in seeing a Washington baseball club which has consistently refused to engage a Negro American ballplayer.

This town is too blase . . . too sophisticated . . . too orientated for its own good.

To them, the renaissance has already arrived.

Five years ago, their hometown was the most jim-crow center in America.

They couldn't go to shows, to restaurants, to hotels! Twelve years ago, they couldn't use public recreational facilities, such as playgrounds, golf courses, swimming pools.

They couldn't vote then . . . and they can't vote now!

Because of pressures which they didn't help to generate, the town "got religion." Schools are integrated. They can go anywhere, do anything. They ride in taxis they didn't dare approach in 1952.

These people, thousands of whom are in Government service, are living off money Negroes from the rest of the country pay into the U. S. Treasury.

■

BUT THEY can't be seen at an affair like the "prayer pilgrimage." They can't afford to mingle with the common herd.

If they don't want the pilgrimage, our suggestion to the sponsors of the movement is to move it to another city.

Washington's Monument and the Lincoln Memorial are mere symbols of the things we want . . . and for which America is supposed to stand.

We would be just as close to the Executive Mansion and the hallowed (sic) halls of Congress if the affair were held anywhere else.

Why not carry the pilgrimage to New York's Yankee Stadium or Chicago's Soldier's Field in 1958!

Let's make it a real "prayer pilgrimage" . . . under the stars, and with the pomp, splendor and solemnity consonant with this magnificent event.

You'd get 100,000 Negroes . . . and whites . . . in either city, and the noise it would create would be heard just as easily in Washington, D. C.

Snubbed Pilgrimage

D. C. Negroes Just Didn't Care

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. p. 20
Sat 6-1-57

By WILLIAM G. NUNN SR.

WASHINGTON—Back in 1924 . . . Congressman Dyer introduced an anti-lynching bill in Congress.

The month was November, and the annual Howard-Lincoln football game held the center of the

FOR MASS DEMONSTRATION

Advertiser Tu. 5-17-57

200 Local Negroes Join March On Washington

Montgomery, Ala.

By JO ANN FLIRT

About 200 Negroes left Montgomery early yesterday bound for the nation's capital for a mass demonstration there today celebrating the 1954 Supreme Court school segregation decisions.

It was thought to be the first "march on Washington" ever staged by Negroes in their many years of battle over civil rights. Groups from other parts of the South were to join them in the nation's capital.

The Montgomery group, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King who will be one of the featured speakers, will participate in services at the Lincoln Memorial at noon today. Other speakers will include Negro leaders Roy Wilkins, Phillip Randolph, and Congressman Adam Powell of New York and Charles Diggs of Michigan.

Following prayer service at the First Baptist Church on Ripley street most of the delegates boarded four chartered which are buses due to arrive in Washington about 8:30 a.m. today. A number had already gone by car and train and still others left later in the day.

The Rev. King left by plane shortly after 9 a.m. about two hours after the last bus pulled away from the church. He was to attend a committee meeting last night. Other local leaders were to follow by plane.

About 40 delegates were left behind for lack of space after last minute efforts to charter an additional bus failed.

Both the Rev. King and the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy referred to the joint services to be staged by Negroes from all over the nation as "the greatest demonstration on behalf of civil rights since the singing of the Declaration of Independence.

"We hope this will change the conscience and spirit of the nation in the whole area of civil rights," King said.

Montgomery Negroes who stayed behind will hold services of their own tonight at 6 p.m. at the Shiloh Baptist Church.

Delegates, loaded with luggage and other travel items, began arriving at the church before 5 a.m., along with some 150 well wishers who attended the prayer service which got under way shortly before 6 a.m. Most of the people there were middle-aged and elderly persons. There were no children and few young people.

After a few free hours this afternoon for sightseeing the group will board their buses about 10 p.m. and arrive back in Montgomery Saturday night.

Negroes Start On Pilgrimage

Post-Herald Birm. Ala.

MONTGOMERY, May 16 (AP)—Groups of Negroes from across the South headed for Washington today in an anti-segregation "prayer pilgrimage for freedom."

About 200 Montgomery Negroes departed early today after a prayer meeting on the trip marking the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision against public school segregation.

Tu. 5-17-57

Up to 50,000 Negroes are expected to gather tomorrow on the anniversary of the May 17, 1954, decision at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

One of the leaders of the movement, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., told the prayer meeting that this is "an historic occasion that ranks in American history with the Declaration of Independence."

"We hope this will change the conscience and spirit of the nation in the whole area of civil rights," he said.

More than 5000 Negroes from the Deep South alone were expected to make the pilgrimage most of them from states in which school integration has not yet occurred.

Atlantans Report On Pilgrimage At Mitchell St. Rally

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. Sun. 5-19-57

Atlantans, who took part in a dramatic "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" Friday in the nation's capitol, will give first hand accounts of the salute to anti-segregation measures this afternoon at West Mitchell CME when a mass meeting convenes at 4 p.m.

The meeting, which will coincide with the monthly meeting of the Atlanta chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will bring to the public reports by leaders of the Washington journey which brought an estimated thousands of Americans from all over the nation together.

They will report on a three hour program which dramatized the fight for civil rights at the Lincoln Memorial, the site chosen because of the memory of the Civil War President who was responsible for freeing Negroes from slavery.

Atlantans were represented by more than 200 people who visited the nation capitol via bus, plane, train and private car. They had gathered together for the impressive pilgrimage by two men: the Rev. William Holmes Borders, leader of the Love, Law and Liberation Movement, and J. H. Calhoun, president of the local NAACP chapter.

SOUTHERN IDEA

The pilgrimage idea was launched by Southern leaders several months ago with a dual idea in mind. A plan of tribute to the now historic May 17, 1954 decision which outlawed racial segregation in public schools was desired.

Moreover, leaders wanted the national government to see the interest the Negro had in his own advancement, and hear complaints over the many delays in bringing first class citizenship to minorities.

Several nationally famous leaders gave voice to locally expressed feelings Friday during the program, conducted quietly in a religious manner. The Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala., labor leader A. Philip Randolph, Mordecai Johnson, Adam Clayton Powell and Charles Diggs, hailed the court's decision and attacked both major parties for failing to provide civil rights leadership.

The bulk of the Atlanta pilgrims returned here early Sunday morning and have been scheduled to make reports to local churches and organizations. They will, however, be present at the mass meeting to answer the questions of those who were unable to attend.

ELECT DELEGATES

An important part of the meeting will be the election of delegates to the national convention of the NAACP. The convention will be held this year in Detroit, Mich.

The national convention, which met here a few years ago, brings the top NAACP leaders of the nation together in a policy making body to discuss future plans, and taking care of problems that have developed.

It is expected the national meeting will take up the ousting of NAACP chapters in many parts of Dixie, and means to remain active in those areas which have opposed the organization since 1954, when the NAACP won its biggest decision.

Negro Plans Capital March by 50,000

World-Telegram Sun. 5-15

Some 50,000 persons will go to Washington May 17 on a Negro civil rights demonstration even if President Eisenhower comes out strongly for passage of pending civil rights legislation before then, the Rev. Martin Luther King declared today.

Wed. 5-24-57

"The Prayer Pilgrimage is not aimed at the President," the Negro leader of the famed Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott told a Hotel Sheraton Astor press conference.

"Its purpose," he added, "is to appeal to the conscience of the nation and to Congress" to support the pending bills and other objectives. About 10,000 of the "pilgrims" will come from New York, he added.

Negro leaders have been urging Gen. Eisenhower to make a statement strongly supporting passage of the "rights" bills.

Thousands Stand Durin 3-Hour-Long Program

Call Tu. 5-24-57 Kansas City, Mo.

BY LUCILE H. BLUFORD

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Prayer Pilgrimage program lasted for three and a half hours — from 12:06 to 3:38 p.m. — but nobody in that huge crowd of 25,000 seemed to get tired or bored. It was a most orderly and attentive crowd.

The vast majority of the people stood throughout as there were only 2,300 seats, which were filled by the early comers. In addition to the seats for the audience, there were 300 chairs for the singers and 150 seats on the platform.

The printed program was 13 and a half inches long. It was this long white sheet that members of the audience waved in the air when they were asked to refrain from applauding during the speeches.

Listed on the program were 31 numbers, including 14 speeches (12 of which were made) nine musical numbers, four prayers, the reading of a Litany of Freedom, an Affirmation and Pledge and four scripture readings. Actually, there were 35 items on the program because one of the numbers entitled, "Reports of Southern Freedom Fighters" included four speeches by southern leaders.

12 Speeches In All

Twelve speeches were made and all of them were good. All were different and none was too long, which probably accounts for the intense interest of the crowd. Some of the talks, of course, pleased the crowd more than others.

From the standpoint of audience appeal, the speaker who drew the most applause (program waving) and the most enthusiastic response from the crowd was Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, the dynamic and eloquent president of Howard university.

Time after time while Dr. Johnson spoke, the crowd vigorously waved programs in the air. Once or twice the people forgot and burst into applause.

PRINCIPALS IN PILGRIMAGE CELEBRATION — A Philip Randolph, of the Pullman Car Porters; Rev. M. L. King Jr., president of the Montgomery Improvement Association ,and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, stand before the platform dais at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington where thousands gathered on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling against public school segregation.

The next most popular speakers were Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York who despite his numerous critics has a tremendous following; and the newest leader of the race, the Rev. Martin Luther King, the powerful leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

Stand For King

Dr. King was the last of the 12 speakers. When his name was announced and he approached the speaker's stand, the great crowd of 25,000 arose as one man. It was a tremendous rising ovation for the 28-year-old religious leader from the South who won a battle against bombs and rocks with his non-violent, passive resistance program.

The crowd cheered Mordecai Johnson and Adam Powell but it expressed love, reverence and respect for Martin Luther King. The admiration for the young man was evident as the crowd stood in his honor.

The speakers, in the order of their appearance, were:

1. A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.
2. Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, Chicago, president of the National Association of Colored Women.
3. Mrs. William T. Mason, Norfolk, Va., president, National Council of Negro Women.
4. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard university.
5. The Rev. William H. Borders, pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist church of Atlanta. Ga.
6. The Rev. C. K. Steele, pastor of the Bethel Baptist church of Tallahassee, Fla.
7. The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, pastor of the Bethel Baptist church of Birmingham, Ala.
8. The Rev. A. L. Davis, pastor of the New Zion Baptist church of New Orleans.
9. Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the N.A.A.C.P., New York.
10. Congressman Charles C. Diggs, 13th district, Michigan.
11. Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, 16th district, New York.
12. The Rev. Martin Luther King.

With Mr. Randolph presiding, the program opened with the singing of the national anthem led by Miss Rose Battle English of New York. Then followed invocation by Bishop S. L. Greene of Atlanta, senior bishop of the A.M.E. church.

A chorus, directed by Prof. Warner Lawson of Washington, sang "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Next came the laying of a wreath at the foot of the huge Abraham Lincoln statue inside the Memorial by James and Theresa Gordon, children who were barred from attending a school in Clay, Ky., last September.

Then came Mr. Randolph's opening address.

Mahalia Jackson Sings

Bishop William Y. Bell of South Boston, Va., of the third Episcopal district of the C.M.E. church, read scripture from the new testament. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Ross A. Weston of the Unitarian church of Arlington, Va. Then came Mahalia Jackson's first number, followed by the addresses of Mrs. Gaines and Mrs. Mason.

The Rev. Thomas J. Kilgore Jr. pastor of the Friendship Baptist church of New York City, then led the big audience in the reading of "A Litany of Freedom" which was printed on the back of the programs.

Following this came Mordecai Johnson's stirring address followed by a song by the chorus and the audience.

The Reverends Borders, Steele, Shuttlesworth and Davis then made "Reports of Southern Freedom Fights," each telling of experiences in his home community.

At the conclusion of the reports, the audience stood again to sing "Lift Every Voice and Sing."

Prayer was offered by Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew congregation. Then came Roy Wilkins of the N.A.A.C.P. and one of the three co-chairmen of the Prayer Pilgrimage.

Quiet For Wilkins

Wilkins' speech drew no program waving as it progressed and little applause at the end, not because it was not a good speech but it was not delivered with the fiery oratory with which Powell, Diggs and Mordecai Johnson had whipped up the audience. While Wilkins talked, the people sat back and relaxed and let his thoughts and words soak in.

Following Mr. Wilkins, Dr. W. H. Jermagin of Washington, the 83-year-old Baptist leader, read passages from the Psalms, Exodus and Proverbs. Then Mahalia Jackson sang her second solo. "God Will Make a Way."

Another scripture reading followed with Bishop R. C. Lawson of New York's Refuge Temple selecting the text. Speeches by Diggs and Powell were next in order. A selection by the Fellowship House Choir from Philadelphia, directed by Mrs. Aileen Brown, preceded the speech of the Rev. Martin Luther King.

Following the talk of the pastor of the Dexter Avenue church of Montgomery, the audience recited an Affirmation and Pledge, "ending with the words, "We believe firmly in the ultimate triumph of this faith in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." Like the litany, the pledge was printed on the back of the program.

Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. T. M. Chambers, pastor of the Zion Hill Baptist church of Los Angeles.

Only three persons whose names were listed on the long printed program did not make their appearance. They were: Bishop William J. Walls of Chicago, senior bishop of the A.M.E. Zion church who was scheduled to read scripture from the old testament; Senator Jacob K. Javits from New York and Senator Paul H. Douglas, from Illinois.

It was explained to The CALL by Clarence Mitchell, chief of the Washington Bureau of the N.A.A.C.P., that neither Senator Javits nor Senator Douglass had stated positively that he would appear on the program. Neither had they said that they would not. So when time came to print the program, their names were listed.

Prayer 'Pilgrims' Hear Oratory At Its Best

Call Fri. 5-24 P.1

Kansas City, Mo.

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA) —Emotions were aroused to a high pitch by speaker after speaker at the culmination of the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom' at the Lincoln Memorial here Friday.

But just how the fervor of the crowd, estimated at 18,000, may be translated into action in the fight for first-class citizenship, is a problem with which the leaders must wrestle.

The program of song, prayer, scripture reading and oratory, lasting more than three hours, went off smoothly and orderly.

Because of the religious tone of the program, the audience was asked not to applaud. But they were allowed to express their approbation by waving handkerchiefs. When the spirit hit some members of the audience, however, there were shouts of "Amen!" or other words to urge the speaker on to higher oratorical flights.

The speakers for the most part were topflight pulpit orators. They included Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard university; Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of New York, and the Rev. Martin Luther King, the leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott.

Other speakers on the program included Representative Charles C. Diggs, Democrat, of Michigan, and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who presided, made the opening remarks.

Randolph, Wilkins and King were co-chairmen of the Pilgrimage.

"This great gathering is one of the most inspiring gatherings I have ever looked upon in all of the 50 years of my public life," Dr. Johnson told the crowd.

"I want to tell you how my heart is lifted up to look upon you and to see the noble, self-controlled, deliberate and prayerful manner in which you have answered the call of these pure-hearted leaders who have brought you here."

Dr. Johnson said: "We must never forget this day. It must be to us a symbol of what greater things yet lie before us when we respond to the call of pure-hearted leaders to work together for the great cause of freedom.

"We have come here in this holy place, in front of the great memorial to Abraham Lincoln to bring to remembrance in gladness and in prayer some of the great things that have been done for the emancipation of colored people, for the blessing of the people of the United States, and for the strength of the moral power and leadership of our country in the world.

"We have come in the presence of the memory of Abraham Lincoln and of God and the Father of our people, who have brought us thus far from slavery, to thank God for the Supreme Court decision abolishing segregation in the public schools and setting forth the principle, for the first time in 60 years, that under the Constitution of the United States it is not possible lawfully to classify a child on the basis of his race or color, and then force that child to go to an inferior accommodation of education.

Call P.4

"But under this law whatever accommodation for education is built for any child whatsoever belongs to every child of a citizen of the United States whatever his race, creed, or color may be.

"This is the greatest single act of government since the Emancipation Proclamation, opening the pathway of freedom for colored people and for the child of every human being that comes under the flag and Constitution of the United States.

"If the United States adheres to this decision, and the people of the United States follow it steadily, it will not be long before the colored people in the United States will possess every civil and constitutional right that is in the Constitution for them.

"To this cause we dedicate ourselves and upholding our hands before the living God, we call upon Him to remember: May our right arm losing its cunning and our tongue cleave to the roof of our mouth if we ever give up . . ."

The last words of the sentence were lost as the crowd, under the spell of Dr. Johnson's oratory, shouted "Amen!" and other sanctions.

"We have come here to express before God our great thanks to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, for the great work it has done in enabling us to work for these objectives, and for being the instrument through which this great decisions has come to us," Dr. Johnson said. adding:

"In the presence of Abraham Lincoln and God and the Father of our people, we declare that there is no law that can be passed, no criticism that can be said, no suffering that we will not undergo, including imprisonment, to keep alive in this country this organization in which we have complete confidence."

[illegible] Johnson express[illegible] [illegible]ern white people [illegible] [illegible]ted their schools. [illegible] [illegible]ically mentioned Dr. Hobart M. Corning, Superintendent of Schools of the District of Columbia, and teachers in the local schools, teachers in the northern part of Delaware. Governor Theodore M. McKeldin and other leaders in Maryland, the Governor and leaders of Oklahoma, West Virginia, and Missouri, and those people who were for integration despite their governors and state legislatures in Texas, North Carolina and South Carolina.

He said he wanted to tell the people of the south who have not yet responded to the decision that "we understand their fears."

"Finally, we want to rejoice over the meaning of this decision to our country," Dr. Johnson said, adding:

"Long before the morning papers got this decision, the United States Government had translated it into 42 languages and sent it around the world.

"Why did they do that? They knew that 1,350,000,000 black and brown people in India, China and Africa were listening with the ears of their hearts to find out what that decision was going to be.

"They dreaded a negative decision. If the Supreme Court had decided that segregation in schools of the United States was a just and righteous thing under the law and Constitution, the United States would have sunk . . . and before midnight the leaders of this world would have wrapped it up in Christmas paper and tied it with red ribbon and turned it over to the Communists.

"But when they heard that the United States had said that under its Constitution no human child shall be segregated and discriminated against in public education with the approval of the Government of the United States, they all broke out, like Madam Pandit of India, and said 'There is the America that we can trust and we can love.'

"This Supreme Court decision on segregation in schools has done more than any act of the Government of the United States since the Emancipation Proclamation to make the 1,350,000,000 free colored peoples turn to our country and face hopefully towards her leadership.

"It is a wonderful thing that what went out that May day was not propaganda but a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in answer to the plea of the humblest minority in this country."

In his opening remarks, Randolph said the pilgrimage was to memorialize the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision and to demonstrate the unity of colored people and their allies behind the civil rights bill pending in Congress to keep it from being "strangled to death by committee maneuverings and the filibuster."

Another purpose of the pilgrimage, he said, was to tell white supermacists in the South "to keep their evil hands" off the NAACP.

He called the fight against bus segregation in Montgomery "one of the great sagas of the struggle for human decency and freedom.

The pilgrimage, he said, was also to express "righteous indignation against and condemnation" of the Ku Klux Klan and White Citizens Councils.

Randolph called upon President Eisenhower to speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that beset colored people in the South.

In an added paragraph to his prepared speech, Randolph said:

"We reject the support and cooperation of Communists in the fight for civil rights because we are opposed to the use of immoral means to attain moral ends. Further, we know that Communists have no genuine interest in the solution of problems of racial discrimination but seek only to use this issue to strengthen the foreign policy of the Soviet Union."

Bishop William J. Walls of the AME Zion church, Chicago, was not present, and Bishop H. D. Medford of the AMEZ church. Washington, D. C., substituted for him in reading the scripture from the Old Testament.

Reports of "Southern Freedom Fighters" were made by the Rev. William H. Borders, pastor, Wheat Street Baptist church, Atlanta, Ga.; the Rev. C. K. Steele, pastor Bethel Baptist church, Tallahassee, Fla., the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, pastor, Bethel Baptist church, Birmingham, Ala., and the Rev. A. L. Davis, pastor, New Zion Baptist church. New Orleans, La.

The Rev. Mr. Borders reported on the arrest of six preachers who boarded a bus in Atlanta and sat in front seats traditionally occupied by whites. The incident occurred last Jan. 7, after the Supreme Court had ruled racial segregation on buses operating within state and city limits unconstitutional.

"We were put in jail and the Governor of Georgia threatened to call out the state militia because the Georgia law on segregation as to common carriers had been violated," the Rev. Mr. Borders said.

The Rev. Mr. Steele, who was the leader of a bus boycott in Tallahassee, brought greetings from "the only unconquered state capital of the Confederacy.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said bombs were continually being exploded in the South and men were being intimidated, threatened and even murdered for attempting to vote or send their children to unsegregated schools.

The voice of power in the South, he said, is that of White Citizens Councils and the Ku Klux Klan.

He described Birmingham as the city where the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was declared unconstitutional by a city judge.

The Rev. Mr. Davis told of sitting in the Federal District Court in New Orleans and hearing Judge Skelley Wright on Wednesday render his decisions outlawing segregation on buses and street cars and city parks in New Orleans.

The Rev. Milton Perry, 21-year-old pastor of Deliverance Temple (Pentacostal) church, Jersey City, who walked to Washington, was introduced and spoke briefly. He said he did not consider the 220-mile walk "anything special" because the people of Montgomery had walked to maintain human dignity and their rights.

Congressman Diggs blasted President Eisenhower and both political parties.

"The President must raise the curtain of silence which surrounds the White House and step out on the stage and, as the principal performer in this drama of human relations in this cradle of democracy, Eisenhower must speak out in defense of law and order and against the denial of citizenship" Diggs said.

If Senator Lyndon Johnson, of Texas, the Democratic leader, "chooses not to try to stop the dilatory tactics" of the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Senator James O. Eastland, Dixiecrat, of Mississippi, is chairman, "then it is going to be his responsibility to explain his inaction to those affected and concerned, in the next election.

"If Johnson does not explain it adequately a lot of good northern Democrats are going to suffer in the election in 1958, and more and more of them are barred from state employment. In Alabama county the state chargedone that since the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools, mobs have been turned loose "to shoot and burn and terrorize white and black alike."

Three years of such tactics have not changed colored people, who say-have remained steadfast in the face of terror and the threats, he said, adding:

"So now they have turned to the pilgrim-passing new laws. In South Carolina members of the NAACP are barred from state employment. In one Alabama county the state suggested Congressman Powell sent to President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon, Senator Johnson, and Speaker Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas, "demanding" an appoint-ment with each of them within 25,000 white and colored people, who have served a mandate must be heard." Wilkins called the pilgrimage a political but a "moral mandate," said, adding:

"So now they have turned to political tactics." Congressman Powell suggested to President Eisenhower that telegrams be sent to Vice President Nixon, Senator Johnson, and Speaker Rayburn, Democrat, of Texas, "demanding" an appointment with each of them within 25,000 white and colored people, who have served a mandate must be heard." Wilkins called the pilgrimage a political but a "moral mandate," said, adding:

"So now they have turned to the pilgrim-passing new laws. In South Carolina members of the NAACP are barred from state employment. In one Alabama county the state must be paid $5 for every NAACP member enrolled.

The NAACP secretary charged

"Mississippi has announced it will use secret policy. In Louisiana teachers and bus drivers may be fired for believing in integration.

"Special laws aimed at the NAACP have been passed in many states, ranging from Virginia to Texas.

"These laws set up new regulations designed to make it so difficult for the NAACP to operate that the people will be left without legal advice or protection in their struggle against Jim Crow.

"The key sections of the new laws would hamper, if not completely prevent, citizens going to court to challenge discrimination. These laws also would prohibit citizens from lobbying for or against so-called 'racial' bills in state legislatures.

"The NAACP is under injunction in Alabama and Texas and in most of Louisiana, and, under the new laws, is constantly faced with the possibility of swift action by states to put it out of business for any alleged violation . . ."

Wilkins charged that certain members of Congress are "using every trick" to prevent the Federal Government from protecting the right to vote.

Pointing out that civil rights legislation has been bottled up in the Senate Judiciary Committee, he said it was charged in the 1956 election campaign that Eastland would block civil rights. "His committee has done just that," Wilkins said.

If a meaningful civil rights bill is not passed, he said, voters in 1958 and 1960 will know where to place the responsibility.

A civil rights bill amended to provide for jury trials in contempt proceedings growing out of civil rights violations, Wilkins said, will not be a meaningful bill and will not protect the right to vote.

"The mere fact that Eastland is for such an amendment tells the story," he said.

The Rev. Mr. King called upon the President and Congress to "give us the right to vote."

With the ballot, he asserted, colored people will protect themselves from violence, send men of goodwill to state legislatures. elect to Congress men who will not sign "southern manifestos, elect just judges, and implement the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools.

"In the midst of the tragic breakdown of law and order, the executive branch of the Government is all too silent and apathetic," the Rev. Mr. King said, adding:

"In the midst of the desperate need for civil rights legislation, the legislative branch of the Government is all to stagnant and hypocritical."

He charged that both political parties have betrayed the cause of justice.

"The Democrats have betrayed it by capitulating to the prejudices and undemocratic practices of the southern Dixiecrats," he said, adding:

"The Republicans have betrayed it by capitulating to the blatant hypocrisy of right wing, reactionary northerners."

Mr. King pleaded for the President and members of Congress "to provide a strong, moral and courageous leadership."

He also pleaded for strong leadership from white northern liberals, the moderates of the white south, and the colored community.

Hennings Sends Greeting To Missouri Group

Call P.1 Fri. 5-24-57 Kansas City Mo.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senator Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., (D-Mo.), chairman of the Constitutional Rights committee, issued the following statement Friday, May 17, to the Missouri delegation attending the Prayer Pilgrimage at Lincoln Memorial:

"I extend my warmest greetings to members of the Missouri delegation who have come here to pray for the strengthening of our constitutional rights.

"I join with you today in your pilgrimage of prayer that some way can be found for once and for all to eliminate second-class citizenship within our borders and I thinking it both fitting and proper that you are holding your services today at the monument erected to the memory of an American who long ago prayed that this nation indeed would remain a government of "the people, by the people and for the people."

"I thought that you might like to know one of my most frequent prayers is that someday this great land of ours will know no discrimination based on race or creed, and that in the meantime I will be given divine guidance and the strength and courage to continue my work toward this goal.

"I assure you that I will continue to fight for legislation which would protect and defend the rights and liberties guaranteed to all Americans by the Constitution of the United States."

Plans had been made for the Missouri delegation to visit Senator Hennings in his office but the senator spent the week-end in the Bethesda Naval hospital for medical tests. J. Delmas Escoe, a member of Senator Hennings' legal staff, said that the senator regretted very much that he was unable to see the Missouri delegation in person.

Mrs. R. P. Beshears of St. Joseph, president of the Missouri State Conference of N.A.A.C.P. Branches, who was in Washington early, visited with Senator Hennings before he entered the hospital.

Governor Blair Proclaims Prayer Pilgrimage Day

Call P.1 Fri. 5-24-57 Kansas City Mo.

NEW YORK. — The governors of Missouri and Iowa proclaimed Friday, May 17 "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom Day" in their respective states, it was announced at NAACP headquarters here. The Missouri governor urged all Missourians to "join in . . . (the Prayer Pilgrimage) observance."

The Pilgrimage was under the co-chairmanship of Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary; the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., president of the Southern Leaders Conference; and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO.

Some 25,000 persons from all parts of the nation assembled Friday in front of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington to protest recent anti-Negro violence and terror in the South, commemorate the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation public school ruling, call for enactment of pending civil rights legislation, and pay tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln.

The proclamations of "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom Day" were issued by Gov. James T. Blair, Jr., of Missouri and Gov. Herschel C. Loveless of Iowa.

Both proclamations declared: "In the second half of the twentieth century America still seeks the fulfillment of its ideal of equality for all men of every color and creed . . ."

"National leaders of the churches, civic, labor and educational bodies have issued a call to the nation asking 'all who love justice and dignity and liberty, who love their country, and who love mankind, to join in a prayer pilgrimage to Washington on May 17 . . . where we shall renew our strength, communicate our unity, and rededicate our efforts firmly but peaceably, to the attainment of freedom.' "

No Message Comes From President

Call P.1 Fri. 5-24-57 Kansas City Mo.

Spiritual Meeting Draws 25,000 To Lincoln Memorial

By LUCILE H. BLUFORD

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Eisenhower completely ignored the 25,000 "pilgrims" who came to Washington from 36 states on May 17 to pray at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial. He played golf at his Gettysburg farm while they prayed.

The President was not invited by the Prayer Pilgrimage leaders to participate on the program, but with such a large group of citizens gathering in the nation's capital to commemorate the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision against segregation in public schools, it would have been appropriate for the chief executive of the land to have sent at least a greeting to the huge assembly.

The Washington Post reported that the President, after a morning of visitors, flew early Friday afternoon to Gettysburg and immediately upon reaching there, he headed for the golf course.

To Prick Conscience

The three leaders of the Pilgrimage, the Rev. Martin Luther King, A. Philip Randolph and Roy Wilkins, made it clear at a press conference held Thursday night that it was not the purpose of the Pilgrimage to exert any pressure upon government officials but that it was to be a spiritual meeting aimed at "pricking the conscience" of President Eisenhower and our nation's leaders.

Whether the nation's conscience was pricked cannot be determined so quickly after the history-making event, but the President's rush to the golf course does not indicate that his was pricked very hard.

But if his conscience was not pricked his ears should have burned as speaker after speaker called upon him to use the influence of his office to stop the wave of terror against Negroes in the South.

As speakers addressed the throng which sat and stood in front of the Lincoln Memorial, a helicopter flew over the crowd about five times drowning out the words of speakers. There was much speculation as to who was in the 'copter. Some said, "Maybe it's Ike giving the crowd the once over."

Powell Blames Eastland

Congresman Adam Clayton Powell, as he opened his rip-roaring, crowd-pleasing speech ventured facetiously that it was "Senator Eastland flying over to get an eyeful."

Powell said that he and Congressman Diggs of Michigan had called the Pentagon and asked that the helicopter not fly over the crowd. In a short while, the noise had stopped and the helicopter, whoever was in it, was seen no more.

Some word of encouragement in their fight to make America truly a land of democracy would have been appreciated by the crowd which came by train, by bus, car and plane from all parts of the country to celebrate the Supreme Court decision which declared segregated schools no longer legal.

The crowd applauded with vigor when A. Philip Randolph, in the first speech of the day, urged President Eisenhower, "as the highest expression of the moral and political authority of our country to help rebuild the shaken and shattered hopes of millions of Negroes and white peoples of the South by raising his voice of counsel to the people to obey the laws of the land."

Randolph, long a favorite speaker among the masses of Negroes made a stirring speech. When the crowd ignored the admonition on the printed program not to applaud, Randolph, who also was the presiding officer, asked the audience not to applaud until the end of the speeches. If they felt like applauding during an address, Randolph said, they could wave their programs or handkerchiefs.

Too Much To Ask

At the top of the printed program were these words: "Because of the religious nature of this program, we are asking that applause be withheld." But that was too much to ask of the crowd of 25,000 who had come to give vent to its feeling.

Many times during Randolph's and subsequent speeches, the audience waved the long white programs in the summer sun to express its approval of what was being said.

Randolph pulled no punches when he urged President Eisenhower to speak out. "We have come," he said in his distinctive New England voice, "to call upon President Eisenhower, our great national and world leader, who is undoubtedly possessed of a high sense of humanity, to speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that hang like a pall over the hearts of citizens of color in the South as a result of devastating bombings of their homes and churches, shooting and killing of citizens who have the courage to assert their constitutional rights and the intimidation of white and colored people by cross burnings and the parades of hooded men and women."

The long programs waved.

Praises NAACP

Randolph said that the crowd had gathered at the Lincoln Memorial "to proclaim our uncompromising support of the fight of the NAACP for civil rights and democracy under the able. resourceful and constructive leadership of Roy Wilkins, executive secretary. This is the agency which has been chiefly responsible for civil rights decisions in the courts of our land to eliminate second-class citizenship based upon race or color. We are here to tell those who worship the false gods of white supremacy in the South to keep their evil hands off the NAACP."

Another speaker who called upon the President to act was Congressman Charles C. Diggs of Michigan who said that "the President of the United States must raise the curtain of silence which surrounds the White House, step out on the stage as the principal performer in the drama of human relations in the cradle of democracy, speak out in defense of law and order and against the denial of citizenship rights to the Negro in the South.

"He has amply demonstrated that he has the right convictions. What kind of political pressures, then, can so lessen the courage of a man, who cannot constitutionally seek the same office again, that he shuns the hallowed duty to uuphold the great principles of the nation he leads?"

Congressman Powell said that "We meet here today in front of the Lincoln Memorial because we are getting more from a dead Republican than we are getting from live Republicans and Democrats."

The Rev. Martin Luther King also called for "strong, aggressive leadership from the federal government."

PLANNING PRAYER PILGRIMAGE early this week in Washington were, standing, left to right, Rev. Ralph Abernathy, Montgomery, Ala.; Franklin Williams, West Coast NAACP director and Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham. Seated, three leaders who called conference: Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery; A. Philip Randolph, New York, president of Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and Roy Wilkins, New York, executive secretary of NAACP.

Trio of Organizations

Courier p. 6

3 Top Clergymen Back Pilgrimage

Sat. 5-18-57

Pittsburgh Pa.

NEW YORK—Three of America's outstanding clergymen are in support of the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom," it was revealed in letters released by officials of the organization.

They were the Rev. Father John LaFarge, associate of the national Catholic Weekly; the Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine; and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of ethics and theology at Union Theological Seminary.

Officials releasing contents of the letters were co-chairmen Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Roy Wilkins and A. Philip Randolph.

Under the auspices of the organization, some 50,000 persons are expected to attend a religious ceremony at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C., on May 17.

■

"IN THE midst of such persistent attempts to confuse the issue and discourage people of good will, the high decision to meet hate by love, to seek heaven's help, stands out like a ray of light.

"You can be assured of the wholehearted support in prayer and hope of your many friends of the Catholic faith," wrote Rev. Father John LaFarge, associated editor of the national Catholic weekly, America.

The letters from the Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean, the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of ethics and theology at Union Theological Seminary, also were released.

"This Pilgrimage comes at a very good time . . . we need to dramatize the problem in a way to move the minds of men and disturb their complacency about the crucial problem of Christian ethics," wrote Rev. Pike.

■

DR. NIEBUHR said that he believed that the Prayer Pilgrimage would have "a great impact on the mind and conscience of the nation."

"I therefore want to join with all the supporters of racial justice and good will in wishing you well in this enterprise," he said.

Outstanding ministers of all races and creeds have given their support to the Prayer Pilgrimage, the officials' statement concluded.

Prayer Pilgrimage To Hear Songs By Mahalia Jackson

Call p. 1

Kansas City Mo.

Fri. 5-10-57

NEW YORK.— Mahalia Jackson, the popular and gifted gospel singer will be heard by the 50,000 persons expected to assemble in front of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom on May 17, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and one of three co-chairmen of the pilgrimage announced here this week.

Plans for the program which will include prayer, scripture readings music and addresses are being developed by the three co-chairmen, A Philip Randolph president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. president of the Southern Leaders Conference; and Mr. Wilkins

In addition to songs by Miss Jackson there will be a 700-voice community chorus under the direction of Warner Lawson of Howard university as well as hymn-singing by the audience.

Meanwhile reports received here indicate a large turnout for this assembly which will commemorate the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's historic ruling in the public school segregation cases, call for enactment of pending civil rights legislation, protest recent anti-Negro violence and terror in the South, and pay tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, the Great Emancipator.

NAACP branches, church groups, trade unions and other organizations in localities across the country are making arrangements to go to Washington by chartered planes and buses and by special trains and car pools. The Los Angeles group has chartered a plane as well as buses. New Yorkers will make the trip by special trains and chartered buses.

Children From Clay, Ky., To D.C. Pilgrimage

Call p. 1

Fri. 5-17-57

Kansas City

NEW YORK. — James and Theresa Gordon, the young children who braved the wrath of the mob in an attempt to break the color bar in the public schools of Clay, Ky., last September will participate in the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom in Washington on Friday, May 17, according to Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and co-chairman of the Pilgrimage.

James 10, and Theresa, 8, will lay a wreath at the foot of the monument of Abraham Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial where 50,000 persons from all sections of the country will gather to pray for human rights. They will be accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Louise Gordon.

Because of their efforts to enter their children in a nearby "white" school, Mr. Gordon was discharged from his job. Unable to find other employment in the community he has since moved his family to Fort Wayne, Ind.

State militia was called out to protect the children against threats of the mob. Later they were denied admission to the school on a ruling by the state attorney general. Subsequently they filed suit for admission under the United States Supreme Court ruling of May 17, 1954.

Serving as co-chairmen of the Pilgrimage with Mr. Wilkins are A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., president of the Southern Leaders Conference, and leader of the successful Montgomery, Ala., bus protest movement.

Negroes To Hold National Rally

Courier Pittsburgh

WASHINGTON, April 5—(AP)—Negro leaders announced plans Friday for a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" May 17—third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision striking down racial segregation in public schools.

The three co-chairmen of the pilgrimage—Roy Wilkins, Rev. Martin Luther King, and A. Philip Randolph—estimated that at least 50,000 persons will attend the observance here.

They told a news conference they have asked the Interior Department for permission to meet at the Lincoln Memorial.

"We assume they won't refuse us," said Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The formal call for the pilgrimage invited "all believers in the God-given concept of the brotherhood of man and in the American ideal of equality, to assemble, review the national scene, give thanks for progress to date, and pray for wiping out of the evils that still beset our nation."

NEGRO PILGRIMAGE ON DESPITE RED BACKING

Commercial appeal

35,000 Will Visit Lincoln's Memorial Friday

Mon. 5-13-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 12. — (UP) — Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro integration leader, told a news conference Saturday about 25,000 Deep South Negroes will take part in a pilgrimage to Washington Friday despite plans of the Communist Party to infiltrate the celebration.

Rev. King said the "prayer pilgrimage for freedom" will be held before the Lincoln Memorial on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision.

United Press reports indicated communists have been backing the pilgrimage—which is being sponsored by non-communist Negro ministers—and urging members of the party to attend.

King said, however, "The communists have had no part in the planning of the prayer pilgrimage and they will definitely have no place on the program."

Memphis, Tenn.

"The prayer pilgrimage for freedom is a spiritual movement supported by some of the nation's most renowned religious leaders." Co-chairman of the pilgrimage, which is expected to attract more than 50,000 Negroes to the nation's capital, are: Rev. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association; Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, a vice president of the AFL-CIO and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

All have anti-communist records.

Prayer Progress Report

Call

America's Negro prepares for an exodus to Freedom. As the great day of the Prayer Pilgrimage approaches, the plans become more definite and the results more clearly expressed.

In Washington, over 60 churches are being set up as reception centers so that when the buses and cars arrive in the city, there will be some way for the Pilgrims to get fast refreshments before the noon time ceremonies.

Kansas City, Mo.

7 p.m. 5-10-57

In New York, several auto dealers are setting up car pools with their own merchandise. They want to be personally responsible for seeing that at least 500 people from their area are in Washington on the 17th of May.

In Chicago, the NAACP is making arrangements to have a thousand people in Washington, by plane, train and auto. Also in Chicago, about a score of churches and labor organizations have joined in their Pilgrimage efforts.

In New York, the mammoth Civil Rights Rally to organize support for the Pilgrimage was held on Friday, the third of May at 9:00 p.m. The speakers included Martin Luther King Adam Clayton Powell, Roy Wilkins, and South Carolina's Billy S. Fleming.

Chartered planes seem to be the fashion for this movement, although, it's true that we're really running the gamut transportation wise—from walking by some in New York to planes from Nashville, Charlotte, Los Angeles, and several points south.

Call P.4

In Montgomery, the station wagons used in the historic boycott will be used to transport scores of former walkers to Washington.

5-10-57

Rosa Parks will be in New York to speak at another rally on the 12th. The rally will be the culmination of a parade which will be called the "Pre-mother's Day March" and will honor the heroic mothers of Montgomery. Most of the work, in this is being done by the newly delegated New York Ministers Mobilization Committee, which is working out of the church office of Rev. Adam Clayton Powell (Abyssinian).

The feeling of freedom is in the air and its lovers are working hard to make it a mate with reality.

-:- COME JOIN THE -:-

Daily World P.6

PILGRIMAGE TO WASHINGTON

Atlanta, Ga.

THE CAPITOL

Thurs. 5-9-57

Prayerful observance of 3rd Anniversary Supreme Court decision May 17 (Friday) at NOON at Lincoln's monument. Aboard charter Greyhound Luxury-Liners, air conditioned. Leave Atlanta Thursday 2 P. M., May 16 — arrive next day — 9 A. M. Round trip fare of $21.85 per person includes tax, life insurance and a specially arranged side tour for sight seeing of the 350th Anniversary Exposition of the founding of the Virginia Colony in the towns of Williamsburg, Yorktown and Jamestown — on Saturday morning 'til afternoon, arriving in Atlanta Sunday morning, 8:00 o'clock. Plenty of rest periods, food service stops for breakfast and dinner — at moderate prices!!! Travelers need little bags and few clothes. Bus leaves Washington midnight Friday for return trip via Williamsburg for the EXPOSITION sight seeing!

GET TICKETS NOW AT NAACP OFFICE, 204 Auburn Avenue, N. E. Office open daily — 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. NO tickets sold after 6 P. M., Monday, May 13.

Evelyn Cunningham

Courier P.14 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Riding With the Mayor to D. C.

THERE'S not much left to say about the Prayer Pilgrimage in Washington. Everybody who was there was moved, and nearly everybody dug why the big newspapers around the country and the TV and radio networks played it down or ignored it.

Sat. 6-1-57

So there's no point in going into what happened or where we're going from here. Because we're going.

So, outside of being real proud and figuring I'd have something to tell my grandchildren about the Pilgrimage, I had fun.

Cunningham

■

IT WAS FUN driving down from New York in the motorcade. Said motorcade consisted of about 250 cars, all lit up and everything, and under the guidance of one Reuben Patton, a big deal in the auto sales business in New York. Leading the caravan was the Mayor of Harlem, Dr. Jive, or Tommy Smalls, whatever your choice.

Natch, I went with the Mayor, since it was decided that he would lead the motorcade into the nation's capital. And I always like to be in the lead.

Well, the Mayor had other guests. There was a fellow named Pete who was one of those real funny cats who could break the race problem down to the barest essentials and get a whole lot of mileage out of one sentence. There was Junior, who drove and who was due to go into the Army three days after the Pilgrimage, and who scared the heck out of the Mayor, Pete and me when he would hit 90 and act like he didn't have anything to live for but the Army.

■

ANYWAY, WE WERE all filled to the brim with the joys of being colored. And as much as we laughed at each other, we kind of took the Pilgrimage pretty seriously.

The Mayor—Tommy Smalls—flashed his badge at strategic moments. And because he did it in a nice, quiet way, he got a lot of action out of state troopers and cops along the way. Then when some problem arose along the way—and, believe me, there are problems with 250 cars in a row—the Mayor would make soft talk with the local authority, while Junior, in his brash, Ivy League manner, would work on some other authority. Pete and I would sit in the car and make comments—which might as well be left unsaid since only colored people would understand them.

As we neared Washington, we got even prouder. We started to sit up straighter in the car and the fellows got their neckties in line. Junior turned around—as he'd been doing all during the trip, yet—and suggested that I comb my hair so that we all would be sharp when we arrived. I liked that. It was fun. And it was as serious as anything we had ever done.

ON THE PLATFORM.—Seated on the platform at the Prayer Pilgrimage held at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington last Friday were, left to right, Bishop S. L. Greene, Atlanta, senior bishop of the AME church; Bishop H. D. Medford of the AME Zion church; Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who presided; Bishop H. C. Lawson of New York Refuge Temple and the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala.

Powell Calls For "Third Force" To Save Freedom

Journal & Guide p. 9
Norfolk, Va.

Special to Journal and Guide

The following are excerpts from the speech given by Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., on the occasion of the Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom at the Lincoln Memorial, Washington, D. C.

"We meet here today in front of the Lincoln Memorial because we are getting more from a dead Republican than we are getting from live Democrats and live Republicans.

Powell

"We must face the basic dishonesty and increasing hypocrisy of our two political parties. Only the politically free Supreme Court views the American scene against a background of morality and uncompromising legality and acts accordingly.

"In the North and South amongst Republicans and Democrats we find a studied contempt of the law of the land—the Supreme Court decisions. Even the proponents of Civil Rights legislation have made deals behind the scenes to emasculate the present bill or see that it is passed only in one House. As for the executive branch, it refuses to exercise the massave majesty and prestige of its office as it should.

• • •

"I BEGGED the Democratic Party directly through the National Chairman, Paul Butler, to speak out during its national meeting, May 5th. They absolutely refused to say one word concerning the bombings, outrages, persecutions, and present civil rights legislation now being considered by a Democratic-controlled Congress.

"Therefore, it is mandatory that we establish a "Third Force!"—A Force that will be non-partisan, but political; non-racial, but for the time being led by our Negro clergy who have given the greatest spiritual witness of any group in this century; non-denominational inviting men of all faiths to follow. It must be housed only in the churches, led only by the clergy, powered through prayer with the masses acting in unity.

• • •

"THE NAACP is now being driven underground. The technique of the South is to outlaw the NAACP for the sole purpose of preventing it from presenting cases in local and state courts. This will be an insurmountable road-block to prevent the NAACP from reaching the Supreme Court.

"We can, through this "Third Force," raise funds and channel those funds to the NAACP to continue its monumental work and where they are blocked, present cases ourselves using the same NAACP lawyers.

• • •

"WE SHALL USE as our techniques, based solely on passive resistance nationally and locally wherever the situation calls for such action — work stoppages, economic boycotts, mass demonstrations, sit-down strikes, slow-downs, picket lines, and above all, political unity irrespective of party, for and against individual candidates.

"Through these techniques we can turn the tide from hypocrisy to honesty: from flaunting the law to respect for the law. We will welcome and we will aid openly or through the underground, those white church groups, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, who are on our side—the right side, the legal side, the moral side."

Psychiatrists Point Out Evils Of Segregation

Informer
Sat. 5-25-57
Austin, Texas

NEW YORK — A group of some 200-odd psychiatrists and social scientists made a public statement last week, contending that school segregation causes psychological damage not only to the individuals affected, but to the entire community as well.

The group was making the statement in connection with a report gotten out by then entitled, "Psychiatric Aspects of School Desegregation." Dr Dana L Farnsworth, president of the organization, said the report was drafted by psychiatrists and social scientists working in an interracial committee, and representing every region of the country.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
Sat. 5-25-57
P. 1

AT LINCOLN MEMORIAL, Washington, D. C., 25,000 Negroes from 48 states gather in Prayer Pilgrimage that commemorated Supreme Court ruling banning segregation in public schools. A portion of the vast crowd is shown in photo. Pilgrimage leaders are shown (inset) with Robert C. McLaughlin, president of the D. C., board of commissioners, who presented them with a key to the District of Columbia. They are A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, NAACP, and Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., leader of bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

Pilgrimage Highlights

"Hit And Run For Some; But

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

"Others Must Go Back To Face It Again" – Belafonte

Sat. 5-25-57

Special to Journal and Guide

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"We play a hit and run game up here," a tall slim, handsome man said. It was singer Harry Belafonte, talking to a friend. "We come down here like this and say our piece, and then it's all over. But the Rev. Martin Luther King has to go back to face it all again," he said.

P. 9

The popular entertainer was talking about the participants in the one-day Prayer Pilgrimage which attracted a huge crowd to Washington, D. C., Friday for the one-day, celebration of the third anniversary of the desegregation decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

The crowd was orderly but enthusiastic, and tightly packed in front of the Lincoln Memorial. Twenty-five of them fainted. A hundred more sought inhalants at a Red Cross first aid station.

• • •

THERE WAS Robert E. Lee, 70, a West Chester, Pa., landscape gardener with a silver beard and a worn black suit, saying: "You can run a dog just so far, and he'll turn and bite a little. We been drug around long enough. We're tired of it. This is like a drop in a bucket, drop, drop, drop. It will soon fill up, if it don't leak out. I left Florida as a young man because I got tired of that foolishness."

HARRY BELAFONTE
"Others Must Face It"

One face in the crowd was that of Rosa Louise Parks, a Montgomery, Ala., seamstress who refused to change her bus seat and went to jail instead and saw Montgomery torn by the segregation battles that followed.

• • •

"I'M JUST HERE out of curiosity," said 77-year-old R. Percy Allen of Harrisburg, Pa. "I'm a member of the NAACP, but I'm not radical about it all."

There were all ages in the crowd. "'This is on TV, isn't it?" asked Eugene Martin, 14, of Tuckahoe, N. Y. "It might wake up a lot of people."

• • •

THERE WAS sadness at the size of the crowd. They had hoped 50,000 would turn out, but no one estimated it at more than 25,000 and Park Police estimates went as low as 14,000. "I want to ask the people of Washington why they didn't come. There are 11,000 here from New York," said Charles R. Coleman, 47-year-old religious entertainment specialist from New York City.

There was humor amid the solemnity of the speeches. Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, interrupted by the noise of a helicopter, looked to the sky and said: "Sen. (James O.) Eastland must be flying that plane."

• • •

A WEARY, foot-sore preacher was the Rev. Milton Perry, 21, of Jersey City, who walked to Washington. Mr. Perry collapsed in his seat after his speech. He said he had "walked aloong the road for the cause of freedom." He was revived with smelling salts. He said he had walked about 180 miles.

One of the oldest of the Pilgrims was William R. Smith, 88, of 138 R street, NW, only living founder of Peoples Congregational Church. "You know," he said, "a strand of cotton will break, but when you put a lot of strands together it becomes strong. That is what this pilgrimage is."

Dr. Johnson In Knoxville Talk

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Knoxville College's baccalaureate and science building dedication services are set for Sunday, May 26, at 11 a. m. respectively, in MacMillan Chapel.

Speakers are Dr. Archibald K. Stewart, General Secretary, Board of American Missions, United Presbyterian Church, North America, Baccalaureate, and Dr. Percy Julian, president, The Julian Laboratories, Inc. (formerly Suburban Chemical Co.) dedication. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president, Howard University, will deliver the Commencement address to 70-odd candidates May 27 at 5 p. m., on the front campus lawn.

• • •

DR. STEWART, in whose honor the new science building will be named, has been general secretary 12 years. He is also vice president of the Knoxville College Board of Trustees and a member of the Committee on Church Relations, which committee has been and is dealing with the matter of union with the Presbyterian Church USA.

Associated Press Wirephoto

COMMEMORATE RULING ON SCHOOL INTEGRATION: A speaker, on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, addresses the throngs gathered to observe the third anniversary of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Negroes Hold Rally On Rights in Capital

Times Sat. 5-18-57

By JAY WALZ

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17—Many thousands met at the Lincoln Memorial today in a three-hour demonstration for more abundant civil rights. The rally was sponsored by Negro organizations.

The Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, which drew large numbers of Negroes from thirty states, observed the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

The pitch and pace of the ceremony rose as Negro leaders called on President Eisenhower to "speak out more firmly" for civil rights, and on Congress to act.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., told the assembly that the judicial branch of the Government had shown "strong, aggressive leadership" on civil rights issues.

As the crowd shouted loud "amens" in approval, the 28-year-old preacher asserted that the executive branch was "all too silent and apathetic," and the legislative branch" too stagnant and hypocritical."

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. called for an American third force to fight for civil rights.

"We meet here in front of the Lincoln Memorial," he said, "because we are getting more from a dead Republican than we are getting from live Democrats and live Republicans."

He said the third force should be nonpartisan, but political; nonracial, "but for the time being led by our Negro clergy"; and nondenominational, but centered in the churches.

The assembly, which gathered under cloudy skies, overflowed the memorial steps, spread over Memorial Circle and occupied the greensward around the end of the reflecting pool.

Melvin Leach, Park Police inspector, estimated the crowd at 15,000. But pilgrimage leaders said this figure was much too low. The Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church in New York, who was national director of the pilgrimage, said at least 27,000 persons were present.

Both figures were considerably short of the 50,000 the leaders had predicted would attend.

Throng Called Orderly

The metropolitan police, anticipating a traffic jam, had canceled all leaves for the day. But afterward the police said the crowd had moved in and out of the memorial area in a most orderly way. The ceremony, which lasted from noon until after 3 o'clock, went off without untoward incident. Some organizations of segregation proponents had issued "warnings" that disturbances might result from an influx of so many pilgrims.

Prayers, musical selections and scripture readings interlarded the speaking program, and the printed program asked that applause be withheld because of the religious nature of the ceremony.

However, A. Philip Randolph, a co-chairman of the rally, relaxed this request as the program got under way by suggesting that listeners might show approval by waving handkerchiefs and saying "Amens." They did.

Mr. Randolph, who is president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, had been applauded when in opening remarks he warned against the acceptance of Communist help.

"We know that Communists have no genuine interest in the solution of problems of racial discrimination," Mr. Randolph said, "but seek only to use this issue to strengthen the foreign policy of the Soviet Union."

Mr. Randolph praised President Eisenhower for his "high sense of humanity," but called on him to "speak out" against the "lawlessness, terror and fears that hang like a pall over the hearts of citizens of color in the South."

Representative Charles C. Diggs Jr., a Negro from Michigan, said he was a believer in the power of prayer, but that action also was needed to help the Negro get the civil rights due him. Those "who came here only to pray," he added, might as well have stayed at home.

Representative Diggs, a Democrat, said that if leaders of his party in Congress "don't assure action on pending civil right legislation in Congress," they "are going to suffer in the next election."

The House Rules Committee, which has had the civil right bill under parliamentary consideration for several weeks, ended hearings today. It plans to vote Tuesday on reporting the bill out for floor action.

WASHINGTON PILGRIMAGE

Times 5-12-57

The third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing racial segregation in the public schools was observed in a "prayer pilgrimage" to Washington by many thousand Negroes. They assembled at the Lincoln Memorial to pray not only for more speedy implementation of the court decision but also for more action by the Congress in the field of civil rights.

There is ground for their impatience in the matter of school segregation, but there is also ground for hope. Much progress has been made, albeit slowly, and the principle has been firmly established. In the general civil-rights field there is again good ground for apprehension because of developments in Congress. This demonstration will serve a good purpose if it makes plain the obstruction that has been so evident in Congress is becoming increasingly intolerable.

The character of this demonstration was noteworthy. When a march on Washington was first proposed there was much justifiable anxiety among those who remembered Coxey's Army and the Bonus March. There was also the reasonable fear that Communist agents might take advantage of the occasion to promote disorder. Fortunately, these anxieties proved groundless. The meeting was, in the main, thoughtful and orderly.

Our First Amendment, perhaps the most treasured part of our Bill of Rights, guarantees to this people the right peacefully to assemble to petition for the redress of grievances. The assembly in Washington was completely lawful in every respect and those who organized it and led it are to be congratulated.

Precisely because of this emphasis we are not in entire sympathy with Representative Adam Clayton Powell's urging upon these supplicants the use of boycotts, work stoppages and slowdowns to make their point. Their point has already been well made and their case will be stronger if they, unlike some of their antagonists, remain rigidly within the law.

What Prayer Pilgrimage Means To America . . . and the World!

Courier Pittsburgh Pa. Sat. 6-1-57

By WILLIAM G. NUNN SR. P. 14

WASHINGTON — Two things stand out in bold relief as an aftermath of the historical Prayer Pilgrimage at historic Lincoln Memorial on Friday, May 17, this year!

ONE . . . The challenge to both major political parties that . . . in the future . . . both will be judged by what they DO, rather by what they SAY, on legislation directly or indirectly affecting Negro Americans.

TWO . . . A rapidly crystallizing sentiment that the pilgrimage become an annual event, to balance the books on Negro progress for each 12-month period!

■

TO THE MEN and the organization which worked so unceasingly to "make a dream come true" . . . to Wilkins, King, Randolph, the NAACP, the Negro church, the Brotherhood and other labor organizations, and to the thousands of "just plain people" who wended their way to the meeting place . . . a bow and a salute!

Official Washington was concerned about the pilgrimage.

There was concern about the affair getting out of hand.

First newspaper reports estimated the crowd at 5,000 . . . then park policemen gave reporters a figure ranging from 15,000 to 25,000!

There was a definite reason for this.

Someone . . . we won't say who . . . didn't want the pilgrimage to be a success from the standpoint of attendance.

But the "architects of doom" were sorely disappointed.

Negroes . . . and whites too . . . came by the thousands. The 27,000 guess is conservative.

They came . . . behaved themselves as well-bred Americans should . . . listened and "waved" and "Amen-ed" the brilliant array of topflight orators . . . and returned to their homes. Well-dressed and orderly, they reflected the very finest type of citizenry. Not ONE INCIDENT marred the services.

It was significant that on the lips of thousands who attended, was the far-reaching thought that the 1957 "Prayer Pilgrimage" should become an annual event.

In no other way, said those who advocated its continuance, can the so-called "Negro problem" be so dramatically presented.

In no other way, they say, can the shortcomings of our legislative leaders be pointed to, and be made a part of the "official" record.

In no other way, they insist, can the world be made to know that Negroes in America are fighting . . . with all the legal tools at their command . . . to win their never-ending battle for first-class citizenship.

And . . . these people contend . . . in no other way will world pressures make themselves one of our strongest allies.

HIGHLY SIGNIFICANT was the tone of the leaders of the movement, as they faced the microphones. Courier

DR. MORDECAI JOHNSON: . . . "No suffering is too great for us now. We will not be turned back." P. 18

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH: "We have come to call upon President Eisenhower . . . to speak out against the lawlessness, terror and fears that hang like a pall over the hearts of Southern Negroes as a result of bombings and intimidation"

ROY WILKINS: "If a civil rights bill that has some meaning is not passed, voters in 1958 and 1960 will know where to place the responsibility."

ADAM POWELL: "We must face the basic dishonesty and increasing hypocrisy of our two political parties. Only the politically free Supreme Court views the American scene against a background of morality and uncompromising legality and acts accordingly."

CHARLES C. DIGGS: "What kind of political pressures could have resulted in the loss of courage of a man who is not running for re-election. More and more protest votes are being cast by Southern Negroes for Republicans, and I don't blame them."

REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING —"The Executive Branch of the Government is all too silent and apathetic . . . The Legislative Branch is all too stagnant and hypocritical . . . Both (political) parties have betrayed the cause of justice . . ."

■

The trend of proposed action to be taken by Negroes appears to have been forecast in these statements.

"Give Us The Ballot" . . . Dr. King repeatedly asked.

And it seems to us that this could be the "rallying cry" throughout the nation . . . in the North where Negroes do have the ballot, and in the South where they are denied its use.

From now on, these leaders were saying, the prime motivation is "strength through unity" at the polling places.

The appeal will be made from pulpits across the nation . . . and at public gatherings of every type and description.

The power of ballot could well become the Negro's theme-song as the Emancipation Centennial approaches.

They're Tougher Than Ever

Afro-American Sat. 6-1-57

Looked at one way the 25,000 persons who journeyed to Washington to pray for freedom and the ballot on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial is not a great number. Baltimore, Md.

There are 17 million colored people in the United States.

Nine million of them live in the South and every day millions of petitions go up to almighty God: P. 4

That America might become a better place for themselves and their children;

And that a filibustering Congress and a silent occupant in the White House may be aroused from lethargy and give this nation the dynamic leadership in civil rights these days require.

* * *

THESE 25,000 persons could have just as well prayed to their Heavenly Father from the sanctity of their closets at home except for one thing.

The Christian belief is that where 'one or two are gathered in My name I will grant their request.'

Here were not two, but 25,000 devout leaders talking to God, believing that He answers the prayers of their congregations and drawing upon the inspiration of the multitude to firm their convictions and stiffen their determination.

They talked to God.

God spoke to them.

They talked among themselves.

They believe and know now that those who deserve freedom must fight for it no matter what the odds.

* * *

WE DO NOT discount the impression the huge assemblage made on the general public, but as we see it the chief benefit of this pilgrimage was the affect upon the pilgrims themselves.

They are a tougher bunch to deal with today than they were before they marched on Washington.

30,000 'Pilgrims' Pray For Rights Legislation

Defender Chicago, Ill. p. 1

Sat. 5-25-57

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

WASHINGTON — Thirty thousand people from 33 states gathered here at the Lincoln Memorial for a solemn "Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom" service commemorating the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision in the Schools cases.

Washington police called the gathering the "most orderly crowd they had ever handled." Leaves had been cancelled for the entire force, but the police found their work easy with no incidents as anticipated by fearful legislators, many of whom packed their bags and left town before the hordes of pilgrims, mostly Negroes, began arriving.

The day before the ceremony, Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., one of the three co-leaders of the pilgrimage, read a statement to a crowded press conference that firmly stated the position of the leadership and quashed any ideas the Communists might have had of making capital of the rally.

NO PICKETING

Said Rev. King: "On behalf of the three chairmen and myself, all activation will take place solely at the Lincoln Memorial. There will be no picketing, no poster walking, and no lobbying in connection with the Prayer Pilgrimage.

"We have not invited Communists, nor members of the Ku Klu Klan, nor those active in White Citizens Councils. We do not want the participation of these groups, nor of individuals or other organizations holding similar views."

The program got under way promptly at noon, the hour at which the court handed down the decision on May 17, 1954. Presiding was A. Philip Randolph, jr., president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and a co-chairman of the rally along with Rev. King and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

POUR IN

Delegations had been pouring in since Thursday afternoon. The largest was 11,000 from New York City who came in on three special trains, by motor caravan, chartered buses and planes. It was the greatest mass exodus for one occasion in history. Some 8,000 pilgrims came from Southern states led by ministers prominent in the Freedom Fight there. The bulk of the participants came from church groups and labor unions who went all out in support of the cause.

In New York, union headquarters declared a holiday, Mayor Wagner issued a proclamation and some places like Lord and Taylor's dismissed all of their Negro employees to go to Washington. From Chicago, came a delegation of 300 people, with the NAACP taking the lead.

RISK OF JAIL

The crowd listened politely and attentively, but when Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard U., called for all out support of the NAACP even with underground methods at the risk of going to jail, the multitudes went wild and the pace of enthusiasm for the entire afternoon was set.

"If the Supreme Court had decided that segregation was constitutional," the noted educator declared" we might as well have wrapped up the leadership of the United States in Christmas paper and delivered it to the Communist Party."

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell called for the establishment of a "Third Force," led by clergymen to take up the fight in the South where the NAACP is being driven under ground and prevented from presenting cases in local and state courts.

ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

Defender

Powell charged both political parties with deceit and hypocrisy.

While Powell's speech stressed aggressive retaliation, Rev. Martin Luther King, jr. took a more sober thoughtful view. The Montgomery passive resistance leader was the last speaker on the program and he received a thunderous ovation when he was introduced by Randolph.

Speaking in slow measured tones to the quiet spellbound group he said:

Sat. 5-25-57

"This is no day for the rabble rouser, whether he be Negro or white. We must realize that we are grappling with the most weighty social problem of this nation, and in grappling with such a complex problem there is no place for misguided emotionalism."

Those who a few months ago thought of young King as a brilliant comet shooting across the sky never to be seen again, came away from the rally with a firmer conviction than ever of his mature wise leadership when he pinpointed the whole basic struggle of the Negro in these simple phrases:

"Give us the ballot and we will quietly and non-violently, without rancor or bitterness, implement the Supreme Court's decision of May 17, 1954. Give us the ballot and we will no longer have to worry the Federal government about our basic rights. The crowd took up the chant of "Give Us The Ballot," as five times the Reverend King invoked the plea.

He said the Executive branch of the government is all too silent and apathetic. Civil rights, the minister said is an eternal moral issue which may well determine the destiny of our nation in the ideological struggle with Communism."

Indirectly, the day was a tribute to the man who first began the agitation for full citizenship, 15 years ago in June, A. Philip Randolph who conceived the idea of a march on Washington. This was called off after President Roosevelt issued an Executive Order banning discrimination in War Industry.

For three hours, the audience listened to speeches, scriptures, prayers, a solo by Mahalia Jackson and two choirs, one an interracial group from Philadelphia. A touching highlight was when James and Theresa Gordon, formerly of Clay, Ky., the children who defied mob action to go to an integrated school, laid a wreath at the statue of the Great Emancipator.

After the benediction, everyone dispersed and the big trek back to cities and homes began. Said the Reverend King, "We anticipate that there will be some kind of follow up to the Prayer Pilgrimage."

NEGRO LEGION POSTS ARE ISSUED WARNING

Commercial Appeal p. 19

'Get Rid Of Radicals Or Face Expulsion'

Sat. 5-25-57

REPRESENTATIVE IS HIT

Memphis, Tenn.

The Associated Press

MAGEE, Miss., May 24.—Mississippi's American Legion commander Friday told Negro Legion posts in the state to "rid their membership of radical agitators or face expulsion from the organization."

The warning by Jack Pace of Magee, also criticized a Negro Representative for "inquiring about" a meeting of two white Legion posts jointly sponsored by the Jackson Citizens' Council.

"It was none of his business," Mr. Pace said of the inquiry Wednesday by Representative Charles C. Diggs (D., Mich.) about the American Legion-Citizens' Council meeting. Rep. Diggs had asked the national Legion commander if the organization "condones" a Legion group "joining with a group like the Citizens' Council," organized by white men to keep Negroes and whites segregated.

'Radical Agitators'

Pace's warning to Negro posts to oust "radical agitators" was contained in a news release from the State Legion Department's public relations division.

It said:

"Stating that there had been several incidents of late, such as Negro Legion post commanders condemning law enforcement agencies, radical Negro speakers being invited to speak to Negro Legion meetings, and efforts on the part of some to stir up trouble, such as the Diggs case, Commander Pace said that strong measures would be taken to put a stop to this."

The Legion-Council meeting, about which Representative Diggs complained was one addressed May 6 by New Orleans Police Sergeant Hubert Badeaux, who testified earlier this year before a Louisiana legislative committee about alleged communist infiltration of Negro organizations.

Mr. Pace said the May 6 meeting was "strictly a public service, provided by the American Legion."

As to the Citizens' Council's part in the meeting, Mr. Pace said he was "delighted to see that other organizations were waking up to the dangers of communism and trying to assist the Legion in its fight against communism and other subversive influences."

No Specific Post

Mr. Pace named no specific Negro Legion post but obviously referred to one in Jackson commanded by Albert Powell, who recently accused Jackson police of taking liquor payoffs.

Powell made the accusation at a meeting of the Progressive Negro Voters' League, a group which had asked that the city hire Negro policemen, firemen and city bus drivers.

Representative Diggs addressed a meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People here last Sunday and two days later wrote National Legion Commander W. C. Daniel about the joint Legion-Citizens' Council meeting.

Representative Diggs said the Legion "might as well tear up its charter of patriotism" if one of its chapters can meet jointly with "an organization whose announced objective is to defy the law of the land." He referred to the Citizens' Councils' opposition to the United States Supreme Court school integration ruling.

21 From Midwest At 'March'

Call p. 1

Fri. 5-24-57

Kansas City, Mo.

Missourians and Kansans Attend Prayers Pilgrimage

At least 21 persons from Greater Kansas City and nearby towns in Missouri and Kansas attended the Prayer Pilgrimage in Washington, D.C., Friday, May 17.

This does not include the delegation from St. Louis. The exact number of St. Louisians in attendance could not be obtained but estimates varied between 100 and 500.

In Washington from Kansas City, Mo., were: the Rev. C. S. Scott, vice president of the local branch of the NAACP; Clarence Laws, regional secretary of the NAACP; the Rev. Fred Stephens, pastor of the Bethel AME church; Joseph Gamble, Victor Barker, Oscar Jones and Fletcher Daniels, representing the Greater Kansas City branch of the National Alliance of Postal Employes; the Rev. C. E. Chapman, presiding elder of the Missouri district of the CME church; the Rev. R. E. Reid, 3344 South Benton, CME pastor in St. Joseph, and Miss Lucile H. Blu-

Call Fri. 5-24-57
Kansas City, Mo.
P. 1

THE CROWD AT PRAYER PILGRIMAGE.—Shown here is part of the crowd of some 25,000 which attended the Prayer Pilgrimage held on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial Friday, May 17. The crowd was variously estimated at between 15,000 and 25,000. The sponsors of the Pilgrimage placed it at 27,000. Early reports by the wire services that only 5,000 or 6,000 were in attendance were erroneous.

ford, managing editor of THE CALL.

Also present from the Kansas City area was the Rev. W. L. Blake of Liberty, Mo.

Two ministers were in attendance from Kansas City, Kas.: the Rev. H. Grady Neal, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist church, and the Rev. A. D. Banks, pastor of the Antioch Baptist church.

From St. Joseph, Mrs. R. P. Beshears, state president of the Missouri NAACP conference; the Rev. W. A. Sparks and the Rev. W. A. Phillips went to Washington.

From Wichita, the Rev. H. H. Brookins, Dr. C. A. Henson, the Rev. U. W. Barron and the Rev. J. C. Douglas were there.

The Rev. H. Calvin McMillan, pastor of the Bethel A.M.E. church in Hutchinson, Kas., was also there.

Bishop Frederick D Jordan presiding bishop of the fifth Episcopal district of the A.M.E. church was present. He and Mrs. Beshears had seats on the platform.

38a 1957

PILGRIMAGE MARCH
SPURNED BY 20 NEGRO MINISTERS

Rights March Spurned by 20 Negro Ministers

Constitution Atlanta Ga. Thus 4-30-57

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 29 (AP)—A group of 20 Negro ministers today approved a resolution "condemning the pilgrimage on Washington or in any way interfering with the President's program at this time."

The Rev. W. H. Hall, presiding elder of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, said the proposed pilgrimage was a "fanfare of publicity seekers."

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Montgomery, Ala., leader of the Negro bus boycott there, and others have proposed a "prayer pilgrimage" to Washington May 17 in an effort to persuade Congress to pass civil rights legislation.

The resolution thanked President Eisenhower "for all that he has done to alleviate the suffering of Negroes. . . .

now pending in Congress.

Bishop Tucker asserted: "I think the record shows that the Eisenhower Administration and President Eisenhower have done more to procure full citizenship rights for our group than any President or Administration since the time of Lincoln.

"Everyone knows that the delay in the enactment of civil rights legislation has been occasioned by the dilatory tactics employed by Eastland of Mississippi, Ervin of North Carolina, members of the Judiciary Committee of the U. S. Senate, and Smith of Virginia, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

"I think Brother Powell and Brother Diggs would perform a yeoman service to the country if they would do some missionary work with men like Eastland, Ervin, Talmadge, Smith, Byrd of Virginia, Johnston of South Carolina, McClellan of Arkansas, Ellender and Long of Louisiana, Hill and Sparkman of Alabama and others in the Congress of the United States too numerous to mention, who are members of the party to which they belong.

Bishop Tucker claimed that Texas Negroes had a "golden opportunity" to unseat Eastland as chairman of the Judiciary Committee during a special senatorial election held a month ago, but, the prelate continued, "90 per cent of them voted for Yarborough, the Democratic candidate, which meant the perpetuation of Eastland in office."

BISHOP E. C. TUCKER

Praises Eisenhower Record

Courier Sat 6-1-57

Bishop Tucker Raps Pilgrimage Leaders

Pittsburgh, Pa. P. 13

(Special to The Courier)

BATESVILLE, Miss. — Labeling the National Democratic party as "still the party of slavery, discrimination and segregation," AME Zion Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker leveled criticism at leaders of the Prayer Pilgrimage during an address delivered before the annual meeting of the board of trustees at the Johnson Institute commencement exercises.

..Bishop Tucker, chairman of the trustee board and presiding Bishop of the AMEZ Church's 10th District, took sharp issue with Congressmen Diggs and Powell, A. Philip Randolph and Rev. Martin Luther King for their criticism of the Eisenhower Administration's presentation of civil rights legislation

"To me, the national Democratic party is still the party of slavery, discrimination and segregation, and Negroes will never obtain their full civil rights nor acquire first-class citizenship until a Republican President is supported by a Republican majority in both houses of Congress."

The Rev. Martin Luther King, left, leader in the Montgomery, Ala., desegregation fight, listens to speakers. Later he made a 20-minute speech which drew many cheers.

By Vic Casamento, Staff Photographer

Sunday Booker, 7, left, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Bernadette Burroughs, 4, of New York City, played "pattycake" while the grownups listened attentively and applauded yesterday at the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom at the Lincoln Memorial.

NAACP BRANCHES, church groups, trade unions and other organizations in localities across the country are making arrangements to go to Washington by chartered planes and buses and by special trains and car pools.

The Los Angeles group has chartered a plane as well as buses. New Yorkers will make the trip by special trains and chartered buses.

Mahalia To Prayer Pilgrimage Star, 700-Voice Choir To DC May 17

Journal + Guide Sat. 5-11-57 Norfolk, Va. P.15

NEW YORK — Mahalia Jackson, the popular and gifted gospel singer, will be heard by the 50,000 persons expected to assemble in front of the Lincoln Memorial in Washington for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom on May 17, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and one of three co-chairmen of the pilgrimage, has anonunced here.

Plans for the program which will include prayer, scripture readings, music and addresses are being developed by the three co-chairmen, A. Philip Randolph president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; the Rev. Dr. Martni Luther King, Jr., president of the Southern Leaders Conference; and Mr. Wilkins.

• • •

IN ADDITION TO songs by Miss Jackson, there will be a 700-voice community chorus under the direction of Warner Lawson of Howard university as well as hymn singing by the audience.

Meanwhile reports received here indicate a large turnout for this assembly which will commemorate the third aninversary of the Supreme Court's historic ruling in the public school segregation cases, call for enactment of pending civil rights legislation, protest recent anti-Negro Violence and terror in the South, and pay tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, the Great Emancipator.

38a

Star Sat. 5-18-57
Washington, D.C.
P.5-A

PRAYER PILGRIMAGE—Most of the crowd of 15,000 who attended a civil rights rally yesterday afternoon is visible in this picture from the top of the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. The speaker (center) is A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.—Star Staff Photo by Paul Schmick.

Pilgrimage Speakers Hit Both Parties on Rights

Star Sat. 5-18-57 P.5-A
Washington D.C.

Some 15,000 persons listened for nearly four hours at the Lincoln Memorial yesterday to a succession of colored leaders calling on the President and Congress for immediate action on civil rights legislation.

The crowd of predominantly colored persons came from 30 States for the Prayer Pilgrimage which marked the third anniversary of the Supreme Court ban on public school segregation.

38a

Assembling in orderly fashion and leaving the same way—only a few spent the night in Washington—the crowd was enthusiastically responsive to the speakers. They waved white handkerchiefs in unison, applauded, cheered and cried "amen" time and again as speakers made their points.

They heard Representative Powell, Democrat of New York, bitterly assail the "basic dishonesty and increasing hypocrisy of our two political parties" and call for a new "third force" to fight for civil rights.

"Jim Crow" Politics Assailed

They heard Representative Diggs, Democrat of Michigan, attack "bipartisan Jim Crow politics" and warn that failure to pass civil rights legislation in this session of Congress will lead to an increasing protest vote by Negroes against "Northern Democrats and Southern Dixiecrats."

Most of the crowd stood throughout the program of prayer, songs and speeches. Even those who had seats rose to their feet when the main speaker was introduced, the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the successful anti-segregation bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

Mr. King charged the executive branch with "silence and apathy" and the Congress with being "stagnant and hypocritical" on civil rights. But he asked for "a leadership that is calm and yet positive." He said "this is no day for the rabble-rouser, whether he be Negro or white."

Mr. King spoke quietly and slowly. His speech was interrupted frequently with cries of "amen" and "give us the ballot." He was applauded loudly as he concluded:

"Each of us must keep faith in the future. Let us realize that as we struggle for justice we don not struggle alone, but God struggles with us."

Red Cross Treats 100

The crowd, the size of which wa sestimated by Park Police nspector Melvin H. Leach, extended down the steps of the Memorial, over the surrounding roadway and onto the grass at the Reflectitng Pool. Red Cross first-aid workers treated more than 100 persons, most of them for exhaustion, none apparently serious.

Other speakers included A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who had the idea for the Pilgrimage; Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University; and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Before the program began, District Commissioner Robert E. McLaughlin presented the keys of the city to the Pilgrimage leaders.

Commissioner McLaughlin commented, "There have been many pilgrimages to Washington that have been less unselfish than this one."

A cheer went up in the middle of the afternoon for the arrival of the Rev. Milton Perry, 21-year-old Negro minister who had walked all the way from Jersey City, N. J., to attend the ceremony. Mr. Perry said he was tired "but I would do it again for the same cause."

THE ROLE OF WOMEN in the Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington on May 17 is discussed with Mrs. Vivian Carter Mason of the National Council of Negro Women in the office of A. Philip Randolph in New York City. Left to right, Mr. Randolph, Mrs. Mason, Miss Ella J. Baker, staff organizer, and national director, the Rev Thomas Kilgore Jr.

Prayer Pilgrimage Preparations Made

Afro American Sat. 5-11-57 p.3

Baltimore Md.

WASHINGTON — By plane, by train, bus private automobiles and on foot, some 50,000 freedom-hungry colored people from all parts of the United States will converge at the Lincoln Memorial here Friday, May 17 for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom.

The pilgrimage was officially launched at a meeting of 77 leaders of church, labor and civic organizations here on April 5.

Designated as co-chairmen of the movement are the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Leadership Conference and leader of the successful Montgomery, Ala., bus protest movement; A. Philip Randolph, vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

* * *

DIRECTOR OF the movement is the Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church in New York City. Plans for the meeting were mapped out in meetings in scores of cities — North, East, South and West — last week.

Here in Washington, Friday, Walter Reuther, vice president of the AFL-CIO, and William Oliver, co-director of the UAW's Fair Employment Practices Department, called for unity in the fight for civil rights and for all unions in the CIO to support the May 17 pilgrimage.

"Never has there been a period in the history of our nation when the need has been greater for the extension and preservation of our civil rights and civil liberties to every American," the joint statement by the labor leaders points out.

May 17 will mark the third anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling which outlawed segregation in the nation's public schools.

* * *

MAHALIA JACKSON, world famous gospel singer, declared that she would be "delighted" to sing for the throng at the Lincoln Memorial, and prayers and speeches will be offered by leaders of the movement. In addition to songs by Miss Jackson, there will be a 700-voice community chorus under the direction of Warner Lawson of Howard University.

Preparations for the pilgrimage, as announced in a few of the cities whose people will participate in the movement, follow:

NEW YORK — Special trains and chartered buses will carry thousands of trade unionists and liberals to the nation's capital. One of the headquarters for planning for the march is Abyssinia Baptist Church, the pastor of which is the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (Dem., N.Y.)

* * *

MR. POWELL warned Thursday that "right thinking citizens of all races and creeds will meet the severest test of their sincerity" at the Lincoln Memorial meeting.

"The time for talk is over. The time for action has arrived. All real Americans will face this severe test by supporting this movement and by being present in Washington on May 17," Mr. Powell said.

CHICAGO — Willioughby Abner, president of the local NAACP, announced that special plans are under way for the organization of special Freedom trains and Freedom buses to go to Washington. Plans also include organization of car pools to transport the "pilgrims."

Bishop Walls is one of the honorary chairmen of the Chicago contingent of the pilgrimage.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dr. J. H. Jackson, president of the National Baptist Convention of the U.S.A., here urged all people of all races to make May 17 a "day of prayer."

He declared "we are happy over the general feeling throughout the country on desegregation and we shall endeavor to appreciate and encourage this fine spirit on the part of many people in many states."

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — A campaign to send 3,000 West Coast representatives to the Washington pilgrimage was launched by the Rev. Sylvester Odum, northwest chairman of the pilgrimage, who introduced the Rev. F. S. Shuttlesworth at a press conference here last week.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth is chairman of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights and a co-sponsor of the Prayer Pilgrimage. Two of his children were injured in Birmingham by a hate-ridden, hoodlum dynamite thrower.

LOS ANGELES, Calif —An NAACP-sponsored group here in this film capital of the world has chartered an airplane as well as buses and trains to make the trip to the nation's capital on May 17.

DETROIT — Special trains and buses will be used by some 5,000 persons, many of them from Local 600 UAW, who plan to be a part of the Freedom pilgrimage.

Spearheaded by locals of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and NAACP units, several hundred buses have been chartered in communities in Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida to carry participants from their homes to the capital for the occasion.

There lawmakers will be solicited to pass civil rights legislation and the administration will be urged to act against the mounting violence in the South in defiance against the Supreme Court's desegregation rulings.

Rev W. H. Jernagin Among Notables Who Will Speak

Globe

Washington, May 9 — The nation's leading clergymen will be joined by civil rights leaders, including two members of Congress, as speaker at the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom which is expected to bring 50,000 persons from all sections of the country to the Lincoln Memorial here on Friday (May 17) for spiritual guidance and inspiration in the struggle for human rights.

Nashville Tenn.

On call of the three co-chairmen — A Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., president, Southern Leaders Conference; and Roy Wilkinson, NAACP executive secretary—the people will assemble at high noon before the Lincoln shrine to "renew our strength, communicate our unity, and rededicate our efforts, firmly but peaceably, to the attainment of freedom."

In addition to the co-chairmen, speakers will include Adam Clayton Powell, the clergyman-congressman from New York City and Representative Charles Diggs of Detroit, ill in the Naval Hospital. William H. Dawson of Chicago, the third Negro congressman, will be unable to attend.

Four veterans of the Fight for Freedom in the South will report on conditions facing Negroes in that region. The Rev. William H. Borders, pastor of the famous Wheat Street Baptist Church in Atalnta, will tell of his experience in efforts to bring about integration in the buses of that city. Joining him in reporting on the bus integration movement in their respective cities will be the Rev. K. C. Steele, leader of the movement in Tallahassee, Fla.; and Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, of Birmingham, who challenged transportation segregation in his city.

There will be prayers and scripture reading by the Right Rev. Sherman L. Greene of Atlanta, senior bishop of the AME Church; the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, president, National Baptist Sunday School and Baptist Training Union; and other clergymen.

Music at the event will be furnished by Mahalia Jackson, the noted gospel singer, a 700-voice community chorus under the direction of Warner Lawson of Howard University and audience hymn singing. Prayers and scripture readings will include a "Litany of Freedom."

The purpose of the Prayer Pilgrimage is to commemorate the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling in the school segregation cases, call for enactment of pending civil rights legislation, protest recent anti-Negro violence and terror in the South and pay tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln.

To make the trip to the nation's capital, NAACP branches, church groups, trade unions and other organizations are arranging for chartered planes and buses, as well as for special trains and car pools.

World Watches Prayer Protest

Courier p.3

'Pilgrims' Begin Long March to D.C.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sat. 5-18-57

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The vanguard of an estimated 50,000 aroused Negroes are arriving here by train, car, bus, and other transportation to be part of the "Prayer Pilgrimage," to stick the pin of awareness into the nation's conscience of equal rights for all in a gigantic ceremony to be held Friday at high noon before the Lincoln Memorial.

The specific aims of the Prayer Pilgrimage are (1) to commemorate the third anniversary of the United States Supreme Court's historic 1954 school integration ruling which declared that racial segregation is legally dead; (2) "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice," and (3) to call for immediate implementation of the Supreme Court decision and for passage of civil rights bills.

Rev. King

The significance of the gathering is that "the era of Uncle Tom-ism," when most of America's largest minority passively accepted any morsels given by bigots, is dead.

Poitier

Belafonte

The feeling of thousands of members of the Pilgrimage who will demonstrate by peaceful but strong means, is personified by Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery bus boycott.

REV. KING, together with Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, and A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, are co-chairmen and Rev. Thomas Kilgore is national director of the Pilgrimage.

The new Negro, exemplified by this leader from the Deep South, where lynchings, bombings, floggings and economic sanctions attempt to keep the Negro in an inferior status, believes that he is inferior to no one.

Reports from the national headquarters of the Prayer Pilgrimage committee bear messages that the Friday ceremonies will be a great historic meeting.

Harry Belafonte, Jackie Robinson and Sidney Poitier are to lead a "personalities group" to Washington.

Mahalia Jackson, gospel singer, accepted the invitation to sing at the ceremonies with the words, "I will be just delighted to sing."

■

AMONG THE many endorsements have been that of Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers and vice president of the AFL-CIO.

Reuther's statement from the Washington AFL-CIO office called for unity in the civil rights fight and the support of all UAW unions for the Prayer Pilgrimage.

The Pilgrimage also has the endorsement of three leading national clergymen—Rev. Father John LaFarge of the national Catholic weekly; the Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of ethics and theology at Union Theological Seminary.

The Prayer Pilgrimage arrivals are being welcomed in Washington by over 60 churches, according to John H. Young III, publicity director for the event.

The grassroots movement has accepted the services of persons of various backgrounds and occupations.

Typical of them is New York City's Reuben J. Patton who has gathered hundreds of cars to transport pilgrims to Washington.

In the South, Rev. Ralph David Abernathy of Montgomery toured the various areas as the Southern coordinator to aid in getting a number of persons to attend the ceremonies.

As a symbol of this rededication to the quest of human rights, school children James and Theresa Gordon, who braved the wrath of a Clay (Ky.) mob last September to break the color bar at a school, will lay a wreath at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial.

The Pacific Coast will be represented by a delegation of 70 ministers.

The national Baptist Association, through its president, Dr. J. H. Jackson, is participating in the program.

■

REV. KILGORE announced a partial list of supporting organizations.

Heading for Washington and the May 17 ceremony will be locals of the following international unions:

Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, International Ladies' Garment Workers, United Auto Workers, United Steel Workers, Hotel, Restaurant and Bartenders, United Hatters, Cap and Millinery, Retail Wholesale Workers, United Transport Service Employes of America, and others to be announced.

In New York City, the powerful District 65 of the Retail Wholesale Workers, headed by Joe Overton, has taken the lead in rallying labor forces. This local alone, will have 100 cars in a caravan led by Reuben Patton, local Buick salesman.

Judge Hobson Reynolds, head of the Civil Liberties Division of IBPOEW, issued a call to 1,492 lodges of the order. "Elks all over the country will be in Washington in great numbers," he said. The call was signed by Grand Exalted Ruler Robert Johnson.

A partial list of social and fraternal organizations taking part in the Pilgrimage is as follows: Prince Hall Masons, National Council of Negro Women, National Association of Women's Clubs, National Bar Association and National Medical Association.

ATLANTA AUDIENCE HEAR REPORT ON PILGRIMAGE

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. p.1

Tues. 5-21-57

38a

BY EDDIE WILLIAMS

A small receptive audience in West Mitchell Street CME Church Sunday heard a recapitulation of the Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom program held Friday at the Lincoln Memorial, Washington, D. C.

The occasion was a meeting of the Atlanta chapter of the National Association For The Advancement of Colored People.

In its order of business, the chapter voted to send President J. H. Calhoun, Dr. E. C. Mitchell, Mrs. E. Frazier, Atty. A. T. Walden, and Miss Peggy Church to the national convention of the NAACP in Detroit June 26-30.

The group urged all eligible voters to return to the polls Wednesday to vote for their choice candidates.

Relating first hand information on the Pilgrimage were J. H. Calhoun, R. B. Harris, and the Rev. R. B. Short.

After the National Anthem was sung, Bishop S. L. Greene of Atlanta delivered the invocation. Opening remarks came from A. Philip Randolph who presided over the program. He is from New York City and is international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO.

Next on program were: Bishop William J. Walls of Chicago, Senior Bishop of the AMEZ Church; the Rev. Ross A. Weston of the Unitarian Church of Arlington, Va.; Miss Mahalia Jackson of Chicago; Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Colored Women; Mrs. William T. Mason of Norfolk, Va., president of the National Council of Negro Women; the Rev. Thomas J. Kilgore Jr. of New York City's Friendship Baptist Church.

One of the principal speakers of the day was Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University in Washington. Although all speakers were limited time-wise, Dr. Johnson, one of the country's top speech makers, elaborated for 15 minutes, giving the longest talk of the program.

Delivering a report on "Southern Freedom Fighters" was Atlanta's Rev. William H. Borders, pastor of Wheat Street Baptist Church.

Teaming with the Atlanta leader were the Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee, Fla., Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, Ala., and Rev. A. L. Davis of New Orleans, La.

The meeting continued with talks by Paul H. Douglas, Illinois Senator, Charles C. Diggs, Jr. from Michigan's 13th District, Jacob K. Javitis, Senator from New York, and Adam Clayton Powell, Representative of New York's 16th District.

Daily World

Representative Powell criticized Congress and the President for not taking a more formidable stand on civil rights.

Summarizing, Mr. Calhoun said: "The Pilgrimage was the greatest thing since the Emancipation Proclamation. Its purpose was to offer passive resistance to make American Christians think and work together."

Tues. 5-21-57

Mr. Harris said later, "Never in my life have I witnessed anything so terrific in impact, orderly and on such a high plane as the Pilgrimage."

p.4

He said that the Negro has already used two forces effectively in elevating himself toward first class citizenship. These are the ballot and economics. "Out of the Pilgrimage came a third force which will be most effective in a few years," he said, "and it is the Religious Movement." He explained that "the development of this third force will be the key to the solution of Jim Crow."

According to Rev. Short, "A new page is being written in American history due to Negro ministers and congregations assuming prominence."

38a

need to be aroused because of their attitude about the current race situation. They hide behind the NAACP instead of standing up with it. We have too many complacent people here."

With hearts satiated with pride having a five-hour tour of the Festival learned that "20 Negroes who and spirits "keyed up," the Atlanta came to Jamestown 12 years after contingent, enroute home from the the first white settlers played a big Pilgrimage, visited the Jamestown role in the colonization of Virginia, (Virginia) Festival which celebrated they were not slaves." They viewed the busts of the early Negro the anniversary of white settlement Americans in the Festival. in Jamestown in 1620.

Mr. Harris said "Atlanta Negroes Mr. Harris said the group, while

"Destination Freedom"

Atlanta Group Makes Final Plans For Pilgrimage Trips

Daily Worker Sun. 5-14-57 Atlanta, Ga. P.1

Atlantans are rapidly completing plans to attend the Prayer Pilgrimage on Freedom to Washington, D. C. on Friday, May 17.

In Washington, over 60 churches are being set up as reception centers so that when the buses and cars arrive in the city there will be some way for Pilgrims to get fast refreshments before the noon ceremonies.

All Atlanta delegates are to go directly to Lincoln Congregational Church, 1701 11th Street, N. W., where the Rev. C. Shelby Rooks is pastor. Busses will be provided to take them to the site of the program, the group is to assemble at the Uline Arena, Third and M Streets, NE.

The Transportation Committee here in Atlanta has set a deadline of 6:00 p. m., toway to secure tickets for the trip.

Plans for the program which include prayer, scripture reading, music and addresses are being developed by three chairmen. A. Philip Randolph, president of the Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., president of the Southern Leaders Conference, and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

NAACP branches, church groups, trade unions and other organizations in localities throughout the nation are making plans to attend.

The Atlanta delegation will depart Thursday, 2 p. m. and will arrive the following day in the nation's capital. Round trip fare is $16.85 per person which includes tax, life insurance and a specially arranged side tour of the 350 Anniversary Exposition of the founding of the American Colony in the towns of Williamsburg, Yorktown and Jamestown.

The Atlanta delegation will include the Reverends W. W. Weatherspool, T. C. Lightfoot, R. B. Shorts, Roy H Williams, Samuel W. Williams, A. Franklin Fisher, William H. Borders, J. L. Mitchell, George H. Dudley, M. L. Raglin, H. I. Bearden, R. Julian Smith, L. G. Long, J. A. Middleton, A. D. Williams, J. R. Hurley, Otis Moss, Benjamin Bickers, John Porter, Edsel Davis, Bruce Ross, Cameron Alexander, E. R. Searcy, Dr. C. Clayton Powell, Mrs. Annie Hudson, Mr. J. H. Calhoun, Mr. Charles W. Greenlea ,and Mrs. Daniel W. Young of Monroe, Ga.

Negro Women Back Prayer Pilgrimage

advocate P.1 Sat. 5-11-57

New York, May 7 — America's two main organizations of Negro women recently adopted a joint resolution endorsing the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, the May 17 nation-wide civil rights conclave in Washington, D. C.

The organizations are the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs whose president is Mrs. Harris B. Gaines and the National Council of Negro Women, whose president is Mrs. William T. Mason.

The resolution signed by the presidents of both organizations, said:

An Appeal To Women

The Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom to be held in the Nation's Capitol, Friday, May 17, 1957 at 12 noon will draw thousands of devout pilgrims to worship and find new strength and courage to continue the crucial struggle that all men may have the opportunity and right to live in human dignity and in grace toward one another.

We call upon women of every race and creed to support in some way this modern day Pilgrimage of spiritual unity.

We call upon the women in our respective memberships with special appeal for they have been throughout our history a beacon light, a bulwark of religious training and an enduring source of faith in God and his righteous works.

On this day of remembrance we must stand shoulder to shoulder in the shadow of our country's imperishable symbols of freedom; to rededicate ourselves to the great unfinished task of human rights, for we believe that "the God who gave us Life, gave us Liberty."

Until we meet, May 17, 1957 at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C.

Sat. 5-11-57

Signed: Mrs. Harris B. Gaines, President National Association of Colored Women's Clubs.

Mrs. William T. Mason, President National Council of Negro Women.

All Who Love Freedom May Go To Washington On May 17 To Express It

Call Kansas City, Mo. Tri. 5-10-57

Crowds gathered around the rostrum in front of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters' building on Manhattan's 125th St., Saturday, April 27, and watched three generations of Negro leadership in New York raise a banner calling for all who love freedom to come to Washington and express that love.

With drama and dignity, A. Philip Randolph took the rope line from the rigger and pulled the 35-foot emblem across the wide avenue as the throng cheered. Following him were Hulan borough president of M and the Rev. Thomas Kilg national director of the M Prayer Pilgrimage for Freed

Before the actual raising of "Banner for Freedom," there w brief speeches by Borough President Jack, Mr. Randolph and Congressman Alfred E. Santangelo.

Mr. Jack in an unassuming address to the crowd of over a thousand called for all those within the range of my voice "to come o Washington and proclaim this great day with many who love freedom and liberty."

With the shouting crowds roaring approval, the 67-year-old Randolph—one of the best known fighters for civil rights in the nation and an elder statesman in this perennial struggle—took the platform and gave the old war cry for liberty. "We have to demand our rights. I think some of us think they will come to us automatically"—and then very slowly, "well, we just are not going to get them by waiting. WE MUST ACT. We must go to Washington. We must fight by every legal means we know, to gain the rights we're due. Just remember, we're all going to Washington FIRST CLASS."

Pledging his active support in the civil rights fight in Congress, Mr. Santangelo said, "I shall not yield one inch in my efforts to secure sound and meaningful legislation to protect our citizens black and white."

He continued: "It is sad when Reverend King, representing an heroic community must travel to far off Ghana to make an appointment with the Vice President of our country...we rejoice because our President is a man of compassion, but when our President fails to heed the anguish of the terror-ridden South, our sense of decency is outraged." And finally, "The spirit of love, the spirit of brotherhood and the universal prayer shall be crowned with success."

Tri. 5-10-57

After Congressman Santangelo's address, all three speakers and Rev. Kilgore came to the platform and took the rope in their hands. With Randolph leading the way and seemingly bearing most of the weight in still youthful arms, they began pulling the heavy flag and its red, white and blue letters speed slowly out across the avenue in the sunny afternoon breeze: "PRAYER PILGRIMAGE FOR FREEDOM, WASHINGTON, MAY 17, at 12 noon."

The noon time ceremony was over in 35 minutes and as the crowd dispersed one old man, bent with age, was heard saying: "It don't matter how I get there, but brother, I'll be there with bells."

Around the nation from coast to coast and across the midlands, he's being echoed 50,000 times over.

DR. KING TO LEAD ANTI-BIAS TREK

Times P. 30 New York

15,000 Southern Negroes Going to Capital to Observe 3d Year of School Decree

Sun 5-12-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 11 (AP)—Next week a young Negro minister will lead a pilgrimage to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington to mark the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school desegregation order.

The observance is expected to attract 15,000 or more Negroes from the South. The man who heads it was virtually unknown three years ago. He is the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

From Montgomery alone, 1,000 persons are expected to go in chartered buses, private cars and the church-owned station wagons put into service during the city's long bus boycott.

"We will discourage a motorcade, because we feel it will be too hazardous," Dr. King said.

The 28-year-old Baptist pastor is working with Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. He arrived from Atlanta in September, 1954, to become head of the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, only a block from the spot where Jefferson Davis took the oath as president of the Confederacy.

Dr. King worked quietly among his parishioners, preaching the "social gospel" that a minister's duties go far beyond the realm of personal salvation. He once told an interviewer:

"A minister should attempt to improve social conditions of men at every point where they are not proper — education, cultural and economic. He must not only change a man's soul but a man's environment, too."

He was guided to a degree by the teachings of Hegel, the German philosopher who fathered the "dialectical process" of change through struggle. He said his mission as a minister was to translate the teachings of philosophy to his congregation.

The New York Times

LEADER: The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, who is to lead pilgrimage to Washington to mark anniversary of Supreme Court ruling on desegregation of schools.

Despite his youth and relatively brief residence here, Dr. King assumed leadership at the outset of the bus boycott in December, 1955. He helped the organizing and was elected president of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

The association guided the bus protest. Last Nov. 13, when bus segregation was outlawed by the Supreme Court, the group turned its efforts to other means of uplifting the Negro community.

Dr. King has said the next legal step probably will be toward integrating public schools or parks. Meanwhile, his organization is encouraging Negroes to improve their living conditions through their own efforts.

Throughout the boycott, and in the face of later bombings and gunfire attacks on buses, Dr. King held to his belief in "non-violence." Again and again he urged his people to refrain fror retaliation.

His home was bombed in the first weeks of the boycott. Later, a shotgun charge was fired through his front door. No one was injured.

After buses had been integrated, four Negro churches, three homes and a taxicab stand were damaged by bombings. An unexploded bomb containing twelve sticks of dynamite was found on the front porch of Dr. King's home.

Four white men were indicted by a country grand jury for the bombings and face trial late this month. Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal blamed the Ku Klux Klan.

Early in the protest, Dr. King was conviced of having led an illegal boycott. He received a 386-day sentence, which was suspended pending an appeal. Two weeks ago the appeal was thrown out of court on a technicality because Dr. King's lawyer had not filed the transcript of the trial testimony within the time fixed by law.

When the boycott began, the Negroes offered to settle for what they called a fairer system of segregation — a "first come, first served" seating arrangement on buses. City authorities turned this down, and subsequently a Federal court suit was filed that led to the integration decree.

5000 Deep South Negroes expected as prayer pilgrims

News P.3-B Sun. 5-12-57 Birm. Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 11 —(AP)—More than 5000 Negroes from the Deep South are expected to make the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom to Washington next week, Southern leaders said today.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, Southern director for the pilgrimage on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's public school desegregation decision, said today a goal of more than 6300 persons attending has been set in the South.

He called it "a broader expression of the Montgomery nonviolence movement which is now spreading."

THE REV. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR., a co-chairman for the pilgrimage and like Abernathy, a boycott leader, said a sunrise prayer service will precede departure of Montgomery Negroes for Washington Thursday.

Leaders hope for more than 50,000 persons at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington at noon Friday for a 2-hour program, King said.

Abernathy announced the following goals for Negroes from Deep South cities to make the pilgrimage include:

Jackson, Miss., 100; Mobile, Ala., 200, and Birmingham 100.

Between 200 and 300 are expected to attend from Montgomery, he said.

CLEANNON KING

Everything Not Big in Texas

Courier p.4

Barbara Smith, a 19-year-old native of Pittsburg, Tex., who is a student at the University of Texas in Austin, has discovered that everything is NOT big in Texas. Pittsburgh Pa.

One thing that she discovered is not big in Texas is the administrators of the university and another is Representative Joe Chapman from East Texas.

Miss Smith, a dramatic soprano, was removed from the leading female role of the opera production, "Dido and Aenaes," where she would have played opposite the white male lead. Sat. 5-18-57

According to some thinking (?) of little Texans, this situation would have led straight to miscegenation or, even worse, intermarriage, so it was felt best to remove her from the part, especially with the university's annual appropriation coming up in the Legislature.

Dr. C. P. Boner, the school's vice president, another little Texan, said smugly, "We're not going to have any statement to make," as if anybody had expected them to make one.

Then, there is something else in Texas that isn't big —the permanent injunction against the NAACP issued by District Judge Otis T. Duncan at Tyler, which restricts the activities of that organization in Texas and thus handicaps it.

We're beginning to think it was quite a tragedy when Mexico lost its biggest state because none of these things would be happening in Texas if it had not won its freedom.

Southerners Report On Real Citizenship Moves

Daily World p.1 Atlanta

BY LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Emotions were aroused to a high pitch by speaker after speaker at the culmination of the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" at the Lincoln Memorial here Friday. Sun. 5-19-57

But just how the fervor of the crowd, estimated at 18,000, may be translated into action in the fight for first-class citizenship, is a problem with which the leaders must wrestle.

The program of song, prayer, scripture reading and oratory, lasting more than three hours, went off smoothly and orderly.

The speakers for the most part were topflight pulpit orators. They included Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University; Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of New York and the Rev. Martin Luther King, the leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott.

Other speakers on the program included Representative Charles C. Diggs, Democrat, of Michigan and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP.

A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who presided, made remarks.

Randolph, Wilkins and King were co-chairmen of the pilgrimage.

"This great gathering is one of the most inspiring gatherings I have ever looked upon in all of the 50 years of my public life," Dr. Johnson told the crowd.

Reports of 'Southern Freedom Fighters" were made by the Rev. William H. Borders, pastor, Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Ga.; The Rev. C. K. Steele, pastor Bethel Baptist Church, Tallahassee, Fla.; The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, pastor, Bethel Baptist Church, Birmingham, Ala., and the Rev. A. L. Davis, pastor, New Zion Baptist Church, New Orleans, La.

Baptist Church, New Orleans, La.

BORDERS REPORT

The Rev. Mr. Borders reported on the arrest of six preachers who boarded a bus in Atlanta and sat hypocrisy of right wing, reactionary northerners."

Mr. King pleaded for the President and members of Congress to provide a strong, moderates of the white south and the colored community.

in front seats traditionally occupied by whites. The incident occurred last Jan. 7, after the Supreme Court had ruled racial segregation on buses operating within state and city limits unconstitutional.

"We were put in jail and the Governor of Georgia threatened to call out the state militia because the Georgia law on segregation as to common carriers had been violated," the Rev. Mr. Borders said.

The Rev. Mr. Steele, who was the leader of a bus boycott in Tallahassee, brought greetings from "the only unconquered state capital of the Confederacy.

SHUTTLESWORTH SPEAKS

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said bombs were continually being exploded in the South and men were being intimidated, threatened and even murdered for attempting to vote or send their children to unsegregated schools.

The voice of power in the South, he said, is that of White Citizens Councils and the Ku Klux Klan.

He described Birmingham as the city where the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was declared unconstitutional by a city judge.

The Rev. Mr. Davis told of sitting in the Federal District Court in New Orleans and hearing Judge Shelley Wright on Wednesday render his decisions outlawing segregation on buses and street cars and city parks in New Orleans.

KING WANTS VOTE

The Rev. Mr. King called upon the President and Congress to "give us the right to vote."

With the ballot, he asserted, colored people will protect themselves from violence, send men of goodwill to state legislatures, elect to Congress men who will not sign "southern manifestos, elect just judges, and implement the Supreme Court decision against segregated schools.

He charged that both political parties have betrayed the cause of justice.

"The Democrats have betrayed it by capitulating to the prejudices and undemocratic practices of the southern Dixiecrats," he said, adding:

"The Republicans have betrayed it by capitulating to the blatant

386a

At Prayer Pilgrimage

Courier Sat. 5-4-57 P.2

Voice of Negro Will Be Heard!

Pittsburgh, Pa.

(Special to The Courier)

NEW YORK—The voice was that of Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP!

The thundering echoes were the voices of 17,000,000 American Negroes, buttressed by Americans of good-will throughout the nation!

The dramatic climax will highlight an historic "Prayer Pilgrimage" which will descend on Washington, D. C. . . . our nation's capital . . . on Friday, May 17.

"It's a demonstration to arouse the conscience of the nation."

So spoke Mr. Wilkins last week, as details of the epochal event took shape.

To Mr. Wilkins . . . Rev. Martin Luther King . . . A. Philip Randolph . . . and the organizations they so ably represent, the events of May 17 are beginning to take concrete form.

The voice of Negro America is starting to be heard!

■

FROM 8,000 pulpits across the nation . . . crossing denominational and racial lines . . . will go ringing challenges to "stand up and be counted."

By special trains, buses, motorcades they'll storm the city where the nation's laws are made.

Telephones in the local office of the NAACP, national headquarters, are ringing incessantly.

Whenever the telephone rings . . . or a telegram arrives . . . the message is always the same.

They're telling those in charge: "Count us in!"

These messages are coming from California, Ohio, Texas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Michigan, Virginia, Pennsylvania, the New England states!

As the "Pilgrimage" mushrooms and expands into a national anthem of action, it is good to take stock of the whys and wherefores. From the morning of Feb. 15, this year, when Rev. Martin Luther King first announced the proposed "Pilgrimage" over Dave Garroway's TV show, the idea has grown . . . and grown . . . and grown.

It follows the same principle so successfully adopted by the Birmingham group in so vividly pointing up bus segregation in their town.

It's non-violent in concept and traditionally American.

"It's not a protest march, nor is pressure a dominant factor," Roy Wilkins noted as he outlined the four cardinal points to be stressed when that great crowd kneels in prayer at the Lincoln Memorial at noon of that Friday. Prayer . . . singing . . . speeches . . . they'll not last too long. Everything will be finished by 3 P. M. Then . . . home!

"We want to commemorate the third anniversary of the day when the U. S. Supreme Court handed down its now historic decision outlawing segregation in education," Wilkins continued.

"Then we want to register our protest against bombings, violence and the reign of terror which has swept the South.

"We also want to register our protest against the attacks on the NAACP.

"Finally," Wilkins concluded, "we want to dramatically call attention to the dire need for action by Congress to pass adequate civil rights legislation."

■

AS THE NAACP executive finished, one gathered that this demonstration, to him, marked another milestone in the Negro's unending fight for recognition as a first-class citizen.

It was evident he believed its impact would register around the world . . . with biting and helpful significance.

As we left the NAACP office, Wilkins added one statement:

"The technique is different, but the purpose forever remains the same."

the southern freedom fighters, to protest the crippling of the NAACP in the south, to protest violence directed against those in the south who stand for equality and freedom and to press for civil rights legislation before Congress which stands a chance for the first time since Reconstruction days of being enacted."

He added that the, "ease with which the Dixiecrats bottled up civil rights legislation adds great urgency to the Pilgrimage." Regarding southern participation in the Pilgrimage, Rev. King announced that a southern headquarters has been opened in Montgomery by Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who along with himself was a leader of the year-long bus protest action. Active mobilization is taking place in Atlanta, Birmingham, Tallahassee, Baton Rouge and New Orleans as well as in other cities.

In other sections of the country seven headquarters have been opened. Rev. King quoted a west coast organizer of the Pilgrimage as stating that 3,000 persons are coming to Washington on May 17 all the way from California. Over 50,000 persons from all sec-

Weekly P.1 New Orleans, La. Sat. 5-4-57

Rev. Martin Luther King

50,000 From All Sections Expected To Converge On D.C

Weekly P.1 New Orleans, La. Sat. 5-4-57

NEW YORK (ANP) -- Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., at a press conference here Wednesday described the objectives and plans for the May 17 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom of which he is co-chairman along with Roy Wilkins of the NAACP and A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

These aims, as stated by Rev. King, are "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice, to provide a means for people in the north to act in common on a great issue with tions of the country are expected to converge on Washington for the Pilgrimage in chartered buses, trains and planes, car pools and individually.

Rev. King said he expects particularly large deputations from Virginia and North Carolina -- the southern states closest to Washington -- and from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the New England states.

Asked what bearing a strong civil rights statement from President Eisenhower in the immediate future would have on the Pilgrimage, Rev. King asserted that the demonstration is not aimed at the President but is broader in scope since it is "an appeal to the conscience of the nation on these major issues we confront." He denied that President Eisenhower's April 23 message to interracial religious leaders in Nashville could be considered a strong statement and asserted that it was merely a message of greeting usually sent to gatherings of this type.

Expect 1500 In Pilgrimage Caravan

N.O. 'PILGRIMS'

Stirred by recent delays and the failure of Congress to enact adequate civil rights legislation, an exodus to freedom is sweeping New Orleans in a determined effort to send 1500 pilgrims to join the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom on next Friday, May 17, at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial in the nation's capital, Washington, D. C. at 12 noon, according to the Rev. Robert D. Sherard, chairman of the local pilgrimage committee.

"We expect hundreds of pilgrims from all walks of life and from every section of Louisiana to join us in swelling the national pilgrimage to 50,000. Already the response to our cause has been gratifying. Telephone calls, wires and letters are beginning to flood our office for reservations on the air-conditioned chartered busses which we are securing. There will be many who will go by plane and others by train."

"MUST BE REPRESENTED"

"We of the South must be fully represented," Rev. Sherard said "and if we fail, this will be propaganda for the Eastlands who will tell the world that only Negroes from the North, the East and the West are interested in breaking down racial segregation and not Negroes in the South. We are hoping that the largest representation to the pilgrimage will come from the South," Rev. Sherard added.

Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., president of the New Orleans Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, which spearheaded the bus segregation suit, announced that funds had been made by the Alliance to set up an office staff to work with and in connection with the organization and the promotion of the pilgrimage on a local basis.

Several committees with leaders in business, professional, fraternal, educational and other groups were formed to contact persons in all walks of life and even persons on the street for donations to charter enough busses to send at least 1500 persons to Washington.

All churches are urged to send their ministers and members of the laity.

A partial report meeting will be held at 7:30 P. M. Friday and the final report meeting on Sunday, May 12 at 4 P. M.

On the national scene, America's two main organizations of Negro women have adopted a joint resolution endorsing the pilgrimage. They are the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs of which Mrs. Harris B. Gaines is president and the National Council of Negro Women, whose president is Mrs. William T. Mason.

The Washington offices of the United Automobile Workers, Walter Reuther vice president of the AFL-CIO and William Oliver, co-director of the UAW's Fair Employment Practices and anti-discrimination department, called for unity for Civil Rights and for all unions in the UAW to support the May pilgrimage.

One of the main features of the pilgrimage will be the appearance of Mahalia Jackson, New Orleans' own gift to the realm of music. She has just notified the leaders of the pilgrimage that she will be "just delighted" to sing.

Harry Belafonte, the famed folk ballad singer, will also be present as a private citizen.

Meanwhile in New York, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D., N.Y.), today warned "right-thinking citizens of all races and creeds" that their sincerity would meet its severest test at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D. C. on May 17th.

Observance of the national Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom occurs on that date, he pointed out, and thousands of citizens from over the country would be assembling "in a moment of crisis" to demand immediate implementation of the Supreme Court decision on schools and the immediate passage of civil rights legislation by this Congress.

"In this observance of the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision, it is wise to note that our $10 million to Jordan is just so much money down the drain unless we are willing to let the world know, especially the two billion colored people, that we stand unequivocally for obeying our laws - mainly those of the Supreme Court," Congressman Powell warned.

Congressman Powell declared:

"Right - thinking Americans of all races and creeds have been long on talk and short on action at this crisis point in our history when hoodlums in the South have been bombing homes and churches of Negro ministers in a reign of terror designed to forestall freedoms guaranteed by the Supreme Court and the Constitution.

"The time for talk is over. The time for action has arrived. No matter what their race or creed, all real Americans will face this severe test by supporting this movement and by being present in Washington on May 17th."

WARNER LAWSON
Will Conduct Choir

MAHALIA JACKSON
Scheduled To Sing

Minister Plans 220-Mile Walk For Pilgrimage

NEW YORK—(INS)—A 21-year-old preacher will walk the 220 miles from Jersey City, N. J., to Washington next week as part of a "prayer Pilgrimage" against racial discrimination.

The Rev. Milton Perry, pastor of the Deliverance Temple Church in Jersey City, announced his plans today during a News Conference held at Freedom House.

He said he will leave for the Capitol Sunday, immediately after a mass meeting at his church called as a preliminary to the giant rally scheduled to take place at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington May 17.

This is the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in the public schools. Some 50,000 persons from all over the U. S. are expected to attend the meeting, which is sponsored by the "prayer Pilgrimage for freedom."

Officials of the Pilgrimage said they are making plans with local police and Red Cross chapters to take care of Perry on his trip to Washington along U. S. route 1.

Rev M L King Outlines Aims

Thousands To Descend On D C May 17

Sat 5-4-57 Houston, Texas

NEW YORK — Reverend Martin Luther King Jr at a press conference in New York last week described the objectives and plans for the May 17 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom of which he is co-chairman along with Roy Wilkins of th NAACP and A Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters

These aims, as stated by Rev King, are "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice, to provide a means for people in the north to act in common on a great issue with the southern freedom fighters, to protest the crippling of the NAACP in the south, to protest violence directed against those in the south who stand fir equality and freedom and to press for civil rights legislation before Congress which stands a chance for the first time since Reconstruction days of being enacted"

He added that the, "ease with which the Dixiecrats bottled up civil rights legislation adds great urgency to the Pilgrimage."

Regarding southern participation in the Pilgimage, Rev King announced that a southern headquarters has been opened in Montgomery, Ala, by Rev Ralph Abernathy, who along with himself was a leader of the year-long bus protest action.

Active mobilization is taking place in Atlanta, Birmingham, Tallahassee, Baton Rouge and New Orleans as well as in other cities.

In other sections of the country seven headquarters have been opened. Rev King quoted a west coast organizer of the Pilgrimage as stating that 3,000 persons are coming to Washington on May 17 all the way from California. Over 50,000 persons from all sections of the country are expected to converge on Washington for the Pilgrimage in chartered buses, trains and planes, car pools and individually.

Rev King said he expects particularly large deputations from Virginia and North Carolina-- the southern states closest to Washington-- and from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the New England states.

Asked what bearing a strong civil rights statement from President Eisenhower in the immediate future would have on the Pilgrimage. Rev King asserted that the demonstration is not aimed at the President but is broader in scope since it is "an appeal to the conscience of the nation on these major issues we confront." He denied that President Eisenhower's April 23 message to interracial religious leaders in Nashville could be considered a strong statement and asserted that it was merely a message of greeting usually sent to gatherings of this type.

Negro Civil Rights Show May 17, Certain, Says King

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Thurs 4-25-57

NEW YORK, April 24 (AP) — A Negro civil rights demonstration planned for May 17 in Washington, D.C., will be held even if President Eisenhower comes out strongly for civil rights legislation, a sponsor said today. P. 7-A

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who led the year-long bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., told a news conference that about 60,000 persons are expected to take part in the "prayer pilgrimage."

Both Acts Necesary

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 5-4-57

On May 17, the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's momentous school decisions, more than 50,000 Americans are expected to invade Washington on a gigantic "prayer pilgrimage."

The march is being directed by the triumvirate of Martin Luther King, A. Philip Randolph and Roy Wilkins.

Meanwhile at the call of National Baptist President Joseph J. Jackson, millions of Baptists are inaugurating a gigantic "Urge Congress" movement.

A committee of national leaders has been asked to formulate resolutions urging the prompt enactment of civil rights legislation, presently blocked in both the House and Senate by recalcitrant Southerners.

We think both efforts are laudable and necessary.

If the frustrating tactics of the Dixiecrats are to be overcome, all-out persuasion and influence of all freedom-loving Americans will be needed.

Let's bombard our Congressmen with letters demanding that they sign a petition to take the bill from the hostile House Rules Committee on or before May 2.

Then let's arrive in Washington by train, by air, or by auto on May 17, pray and then button-hole these legislators, Republican and Democrat, reminding them that both parties are pledged to act on this issue and that we are depending on them to fulfill their pre-election promises.

Asked if a strong presidential statement favoring pending civil rights legislation would affect the plans, he said it would not, tha "the pilgrimage is not aimed at the President."

"Its purpose is to appeal to the conscience of the nation and to Congress," he said.

He listed five objectives of the pilgrimage:

To demonstrate Negro unity, provide means for northern aid to "Southern freedom fighters," to protest against the "crippling of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People" in some Southern states, to protest against violence against "Southern freedom fighters," and to press for success of pending civil rights legislation.

He said participants will go to Washington from all parts of the country — by train, plane, bus and car pools.

Local Leaders See 1,000 Taking Part In Pilgrimage

Daily Worker Atlanta, Ga. Sun 5-12-57

A group of Atlanta leaders announced Friday evening that an estimate 1,000 local persons will participate in the Prayer Pilgrimage which is scheduled to terminate in Washington, D. C. May 17th.

The announcement was made following a meeting at Wheat Street Baptist church which was arranged by the Love, Law and Liberation Movement and the local branch National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Participating in plans for the Atlanta delegation was Rev. Ralph Abernathy, a leader in the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott, and Southern Director of the Pilgrimage. He revealed that plans have been made for the following cities to send delegates:

Montgomery, Ala. 1,000 Birmingham 1,500, Mobile, 200; St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., 1,000 Miami, Fla., 200; Jacksonville, Fla., 200; Baton Rouge, La., 150; New Orleans, La., 1,500; Memphis, Tenn., 100; Nashville, Tenn. 1,000; Jackson, Miss, 100, Savannah Ga., 100; Charleston, S. C., 100; Greenville, S. C., 100, Baltimore, Md. 1,000 ushers for the occasion and New York City, two trains and 10,000.

All of these delegates are instructed to gather at the Lincoln Memorial Monument in Washington at 12 Noon, Friday, May 17, the anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Some of the nation's outstanding Negro leaders will appear on the program; singer Marian Anderson and Mahala Jackson will sing selections. Other participants include: Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of NAACP, Rev. M. L. King Jr., president Montgomery Improvement Association; A. Phillip Randolph, president International Association of Sleeping Car Porters; Harry Belafonte; Bishop Sherman L. Greene, A. M. E. Church; Bishop John Love, Methodist Church, Bishop, Bishop W. Y. Bell, C. M. E. church, Bishop Joseph Walls, A. M. E. Zion Church, Rev. William H. Borders, Atlanta, Rev. R. T. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham, Ala., Rev. A. L. Davis, New Orleans, La., and Rev. E. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla.

The Atlanta delegation traveling by bus, is scheduled to leave from Wheat Street Baptist Church, Corner Auburn Ave. and Yonge St. at 2 p. m. Thursday May 16, and arrive in Washington at 9 a. m. Friday, May 17.

After the day in Washington, the busses will leave at midnight Friday, spend five hours Saturday in Williamsburg, Va., for the Anniversary Exposition of the founding of the American colonies in Virginia, and return to Atlanta at 8 a. m. Sunday, May 19.

That afternoon there will be a mass meeting in which delegates will report at 4 p. m. at West Mitchell CME Church.

The Atlanta participation is being sponsored by the Love, Law and Liberation Movement, Rev. Borders, president and the Atlanta Branch NAACP and of which J. H. Calhoun, president.

KING OUTLINES AIMS, PLANS FOR PILGRIMAGE

World Wed. 5-1-57 B'ham, Ala

P. 1

NEW YORK — Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr., at a press conference in New York Friday described the objectives and plans for the May 17 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom of which he is co-chairman along with Roy Wilkins of the NAACP and A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

These aims, as stated by Rev. King, are "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice, to provide a means for people in the north to act in common on a great issue with the southern freedom fighters, to protest the crippling of the NAACP in the south, to protest violence directed against those in the south who stand for equality and freedom and to press for civil rights legislation before congress which stands a chance for the first time since Reconstruction days of being enacted."

He added that the, "ease with which the Dixiecrats bottled up civil rights legislation adds great urgency to the Pilgrimage."

Regarding southern participation in the Pilgrimage, Rev. King announced that a southern headquarters has been opened in Montgomery by Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who along with himself was a leader of the year-long bus protest action. Active mobilization is taking place in Atlanta, Birmingham, Tallahassee, Baton Rouge and New Orleans as well as in other cities.

In other sections of the country seven headquarters have been opened. Rev. King quoted a west coast organizer of the Pilgrimage as stating that 3,000 persons are coming to Washington on May 17 all the way from California. Over 50,000 persons from all sections of the country are expected to converge on Washington for the Pilgrimage in chartered buses, trains and planes, car pools and individually.

Rev. King said he expects particularly large deputations from Virginia and North Carolina--the southern states closest to Washington--and from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Mary and the New England states.

Asked what bearing a strong civil rights statement from President Eisenhower in the immediate future would have on the Pilgrimage, Rev. King asserted that the demonstration is not aimed at the President but is broader in scope since it is "an appeal to the conscience of the nation on these major issues we confront." He denied that President Eisenhower's April 23 message to interracial religious leaders in Nashville could be considered a strong statement and asserted that it was merely a message of greeting usually sent to gatherings of this type.

Today, April 27 will mark an important step in the progress of the Pilgrimage plans. The Mayor, the Borough President of Manhattan, several Congressmen and the Co-Chairmen of the Pilgrimage have been invited to raise a banner at a noon ceremony. The banner will extend across 125th Street between 7th and 8th Avenues and will bear the message of the Pilgrimage to Washington. More will follow on this after the ceremony.

Chicagoans Preparing For Pilgrimage To Washington

Defender Chicago, Ill. P. 3

Sat. 5-11-57

A Chicago committee for the Prayer Pilgrimage or Freedom has been organized and is now at work to mobilize a delegation of at least 1,000 to attend the celebration of the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington on May 17 and is planned to "arouse the conscience of America in support of pending civil rights legislation in Congress and to protest terror and violence in the South," said Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago Branch of the NAACP and chairman of the Chicago committee for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom.

Serving as co-chairman is Dr. T. R. M. Howard, president of the National Medical association. Other co-chairman to head church, labor, fraternal and civic divisions are to be selected.

The Chicago Committee for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom was launched at a series of meetings last Friday at which Rev. Thomas Kilgore, Jr., national director of the movement outlined the plans for getting 50,000 to 100,000 people in Washington on May 17 "to express their deep desire for freedom and first class citizenship for all Americans."

Abner announced that plans are under way for the organization of special "Freedom Buses" and "Freedom Trains" to go from Chicago to Washington. Plans also include organization of car pools to transport the Pilgrims. Further details on travel arrangements will be announced within a few days.

Meantime all interested organizations and individuals are asked to call or contact the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom headquarters at the Chicago NAACP office 841 E. 63rd st., DOrchester 3-6406.

Among those attending the meetings and joining the Chicago Committee for the Prayer Pilgrimage were Willoughby Abner, president of the Chicago NAACP; Dr. T. R. M. Howard, president National Medical Association; Rev. Charles Wesley Burton, South Congregational Church; Manuel Golladara, Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers, AFL-CIO; and Rev. Alva Tompkins, Olivet Presbyterian Church.

Also, George McCray, American Federation State, County and Municipal Employees, Ken Douty, American Civil Liberties Union; Rev. William T. Baird, Essex Community Church; Leon Beverly, District i, United Packinghouse Workers, AFL-CIO; Atty. James T. Horton, Cook County Bar Association; Rev. Morris T. Tynes, Monumental Baptist Church; Atty. Willie M. Whiting, executive secretary Chicago NAACP; and Rev. T. J. Griffin, St. Matthew Methodist Church.

Also Morton Prinz, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL-CIO; George Mitchell, Chicago Branch, National Alliance of Postal Employees; Robert L. Thompson, chairman Northside NAACP Unit; Rev. H. B. Gibson, Gorham Methodist Church; Sam White, Men's Club, Good Shepherd Congregational Church; Sidney Williams, vice president Hyde Park NAACP Unit; Rev. James Wiley Brown, Lincoln Memorial Congregational Church; Raymond McMillan, Parkway Express Lodge No. 6132; Robert L. Birchman, director of publicity Chicago NAACP; Benjamin F. Bell, Jr. and Mrs. Eleanor Lofton, executive committee members Chicago NAACP.

Numerous church, labor, fraternal, community and civic organizations have indicated their support for the movement. Bishop W. J. Walls of Chicago is one of the honorary national chairmen.

Chicago members of the national committee of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom include Dr. T. R. M. Howard, president of the National Medical Association; Eugene E. Frazier, president of the United Transport Service Employees, AFL-CIO; Rev. Morris H. Tynes, pastor Monumental Baptist Church and Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, president National Association of Colored Women's clubs.

National co-chairmen of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom are Rev. Martin Luther King, president Southern Leadership Conference and leader of the successful Montgomery, Alabama bus protest movement; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO and a vice president of the AFL-CIO; and Roy Wilkins, exeutive secretary National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom was officially launched at a meeting of 77 leaders of church, labor, fraternal and civic organizations in Washington on April 5. In the call for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom after reviewing events since the historic Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools they said.

be released soon."

* * *

HE PRAISED the AFRO as "one of the finest papers we have in America."

Mr. Robeson said he is hopeful of accepting offers made for his appearance on the stage in England, despite the travel ban imposed on him by the State Department.

He was accompanied to Washington by Mrs. Robeson, who was filling a special press coverage assignment on the "historic occasion."

Robeson calls meeting an historic occasion

Afro-American Sat. 6-1-57 Baltimore, Md.

P. 13

WASHINGTON

"This is a real historic occasion. It represents to the nation and all people that we are united for full and complete citizenship."

The speaker was Singer-Actor Paul Robeson Friday on the grounds of the Lincoln Memorial where colored and white citizens gathered from all over the country for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom.

Mr. Robeson was surrounded by admirers, youths and adults, seeking his autograph.

* * *

"I'M HERE today as a part of my people," he said. "I'm a member of the AME Zion Church. I am very proud to be here. The church has been a part of our struggle for freedom."

Mr. Robeson said, "I'm resuming my whole career. I'll start a concert tour around the end of the month on the West Coast, beginning in Los Angeles.

"I made some records this week," he added. "They will

Leaders Sound Call For New Pilarimage

Defender Sat. 4-20-57 Chicago, Ill.

Here is a complete text of the call issued by leaders following a conference held late last week at which plans were made for a prayer pilgrimage for Freedom to be held in Washington May 17.

The date is the third anniversary of the U.S. Supreme court decision outlawing Jim Crow public schools, and the site of the pilgrimage is the Lincoln monument where Marian Anderson sang to a throng of 75,000 a decade ago after being denied use of Constitution Hall for a recital. P. 6

The call was issued by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Poters; Rev. Martin Luther King, world famous leader of the successful Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott and Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored eople.

The text follows:

As we approach the third anniversary of the ruling of the United States Supreme court against racially segregated public school systems, we invite all believers in the God-given concept of the brotherhood of man and in the American ideal of equality, to assemble, review the national scene, give thanks for the progress to date, and pray for the wiping out of the evils that still beset our nation.

The May 17, 1954, ruling against state-imposed segregation came about in orderly fashion, through the courts, from the lowest to the highest. Our appeal was based upon the Constitution of the United States of America. It was made after fifty-eight years of enduring the grossly unequal "separate-but-equal" doctrine laid down in 1896. It came after decades of patience and of reliance on morality and justice. It came slowly, step by step.

It came without violence, terror, or assassination. No bombs were thrown. No school shacks were burned down. No Jim Crow trains were dynamited. What was then the law of the land was not defied.

The Negro citizens of the land made the most of their circumstances. They got what education they could for their children. They "made out" with little or no public recreation. When they traveled they endured insult and physical assaults. They took such jobs as they could get at such wages as they were paid. They lived where they were herded. They were barred from the ballot boxes on election day.

They abided by the kind of justice they received in the courts. They served their country in a Jim Crow army. They were victims of the bestial crime of lynching. However, this blanket of inequality and oppression did not completely smother the struggle for human rights. Time after time the challenge was met with steadfastness and courage, even in the face of disheartening odds. The valiant freedom fighters for civil rights became inspiring for our time.

The May 17 decision, then, was a New Emancipation. At last Negroes were to be recognized as citizens and the states were forbidden to set them off by law, solely because of race, in public education and elsewhere. In Montgomery the people caught the meaning of the hour and struck a mighty spiritual blow for human dignity. 38a

On the public school question, nine states and the District of Columbia have either completed desegregation or have made a beginning. But eight states have defied the nation's highest court and have refused to begin in good faith with all deliberate speed, to comply with its ruling. In these states privately organized groups have exerted economic pressure upon Negro citizens who have simply asked obedience to the Supreme Court. Men and women have been fired from their jobs. Merchants have been refused credit and goods. Farmers have been d d loans.

The governments of these states have joined the assault on democracy by moving to put the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People out of business. While the NAACP is the declared target of these actions, the true victims are the white and Negro citizens who are thereby restricted in the exercise of their right to freedom of speech, freedom of assembly and petition, and freedom to seek redress of grievances through the courts.

In view of this historic role the association has played in the life of American Negroes, the attack upon it becomes a very special and particular one upon the constitutional rights of Negro citizens. Abridging the basic rights of citizens is in itself a high crime; but depriving them of the agency through which they have sought, in the courts, to secure these very rights is shameful compounding of the felony. It makes a mockery of citizenship.

The law enforcement agencies of these states have permitted violence to be visited upon individuals and institutions which oppose segregation. Ministers have been arrested, threatened and shot. Churches and homes have been bombed. School children have been threatened by mobs.

Accompanying all this has been a campaign of racial slander of the most vicious and reprehensible nature, typified by characterization of the Negro as inherently criminal and diseased, and as a mental incompetent.

This defiance, this legislative harrassment, this economic pressure, this slander and violence have been encouraged by public officials, including Mayors, Governors, Attorneys General, and United States Senators.

At the Federal level the civil rights bill has been trimmed and delayed in the Congress by members from the states where defiance of the Supreme Court is state policy. The avowed purpose is either to whittle it down to nothing, or to kill it altogether.

One hundred years ago, in the Dred Scott decision, it was held that the Constitution did not include Negroes in its protection of the rights of citizens. Even though a war was fought and the Constitution amended, some states today are seeking to wipe out history and to restore to force the Dred Scott decision of 1857.

In the words of Abraham Lincoln, this is a nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." We believe its people treasure the heritage of equality before the law. They uphold this principle because they know that every man, whatever his race, religion, or station, must be free if our nation is to remain strong.

We believe Americans are deeply religious and wish to order their lives and their country according to the great moral truths to be found in our common religious heritage.

As the Founding Americans prayed for strength and wisdom in the wilderness of a new land, as the slaves and their descendants prayed for emancipation and human dignity, as men of every color and clime in time of crisis have sought Divine guidance, so we now, in these troubled and momentous years, call upon all who love justice and dignity and liberty, who love their country, and who love mankind, to join in a Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington on May 17, 1957, where we shall renew our strength, communicate our unity, and rededicate our efforts, firmly but peaceably, to the attainment of Freedom.

Negroes Plan Washington Prayer Rally

Post Herald Sat. 4-13-57 Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, April 12 (AP) —Two officers of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. will lead a delegation of Montgomery Negroes to Washington May 17 to participate in a mass "prayer pilgrimage for freedom."

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of the Negro First Baptist Church said he and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the MIA, would attend the rally in addition to "large numbers" of other local people.

Abernathy and King attended a meeting in Washington on April 5 when plans for the rally were made.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has estimated 50,000 Negroes will participate in the rally, which will be held in front of Lincoln Memorial on the third anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision outlawing classroom segregation.

March on Capital on May 17

The American Sat. 4-13-57 Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

From all parts of the nation at least 50,000 colored people will make a prayer pilgrimmage to Washington, May 17, to "protest the terrible intimidations and terror in which colored people are living," according to a conference of 75 civil rights leaders who met here Friday afternoon.

The conference of leaders, representative of varied community organizations across the country, gathered at the Metropolitan Baptist Church to formulate the initial plans for the mammoth march whose stopping place is to be the mall in front of Lincoln Memorial.

Significantly, the prayer pilgrimmage will mark the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school integration decision. It will culminate in a day of prayer before the monument of the great Emancipator — Abraham Lincoln.

"The pilgrimmage is largely a spiritual renewal of our faith in America," Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, told a press conference after the meeting of conference leaders.

* * *

MR. WILKINS was co-chairman of the meeting, along with Dr. Martin L. King, leader of the Montgomery Bus Boycott and of the Southern Leadership Conference, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and vice-president of the AFL-CIO.

The NAACP leader told the conference that the plans for transportation of "a minimum of 50,000" colored people to the Capital City will be worked out on local levels, although there are headquarters set up in New York City for publicity and related affairs.

Also, he said, there are area headquarters set up in Montgomery and Harlem.

Mr. Randolph emphasized that the pilgrimage is "a spiritual march—not a march on Washington." He estimated that there would be "20,000 ministers alone" in the march.

* * *

ASKED WHETHER the pilgrimage is a "substitute" for the message President Eisenhower refused to bring to the South at the request of the Atlanta Conference of Negro Leaders, Dr. King answered: "We still want the President to make a speech." 4-13-57

"But," he added, "the purpose of this pilgrimage is broader than getting the President to make a speech."

Mr. Wilkins, with the other co-chairmen concurring, gave the conference leaders' purpose of the prayer march: P. 2

1. To demonstrate the unity of the whole colored community—to show that they are behind civil rights demands.
2. To demonstrate our support of the May 17 decision.
3. To show the desire of the colored citizen that the May 17 decision be implemented.
4. To protest the terrible intimidation and terror in the South which colored people are living.
5. To appeal to the conscience of the people of America.
6. To show the desire of the colored people in America to be first-class citizens.

* * *

CLARENCE MITCHELL, director of the Washington national office of the NAACP, said that he had asked the Secretary of the Interior, Douglas McKay, for permission to use the Lincoln Memorial area for the pilgrimage.

A reply has not yet been received, Mr. Mitchell said.

In answer to a reporter's speculation that permission to use the site might not be granted, Mr. Wilkins said:

"We cannot imagine that the Government of the U.S. will refuse colored people permission to pray before the monument of the man who freed us."

The leaders said the day of prayer will begin at noon (the hour the May 17 decision was handed down) and will last for approximately three hours.

* * *

NO OFFICIALS of the State Department have as yet been asked to participate, but responses suggested its possibilities.

Asked by a reporter whether "Senator Eastland, for example" would be invited to the prayer pilgrimage, Mr. Wilkins re-emphasized that the march was a "spiritual renewal of faith," and added: "I understand that Mr. Eastland is a good lay Methodist."

When one reporter pointed out that the May 17 date was "in the height of the tourist season," and added that there would be "thousands of people" wanting to come into the Lincoln Memorial area, Mr. Wilkins remarked: "That will make our occasion a little better."

* * *

DURING THE three-hour prayer program, the leaders said, noted artists would sing, and various persons prominent in the struggle for civil rights would be asked to speak.

Other leaders present at the conference representing 15 states included the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of the Montgomery Improvement Association; the Rev. C. K. Steele of the Tallahassee Inter-Civic Council; and Lloyd Miller, Los Angeles attorney; the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, leader of the Birmingham integration movement.

Also present were Bayard T. Rustin, longtime non-violence advocate; Mrs. Ella Baker, ardent civil rights advocate of New York City, and other representatives of labor unions, women's leagues and social fraternities.

Plan Pilgrimage To Nation's Capitol

Weekly P. 1
New Orleans, La.
Sat. 4-20-57

Plans for a May 17 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, to be held in the nation's capital, are announced in Washington by (left to right, at table): the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., leader of the Montgomery bus protest movement; A. Phillip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; and Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary. The Freedom Pilgrimage, which is expected to bring to Washington 50,000 civil rights advocates from all sections of the nation, will take place on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation school decision. The Pilgrimage will commemorate the Supreme Court decision, support federal civil rights legislation, and protest southern violence and resistance to the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decrees. The planning conference for the Pilgrimage was attended by 77 leaders of church and civic groups, organized labor, fraternal organizations and NAACP units, who came from 15 states to the April 5 meeting.

Mystery of the Missing Pilgrims

Courier P. 9
Sat. 6-1-57

It was widely and confidently forecast by the spokesmen for the recent "Prayer Pilgrimage" to Washington, D. C., that there would be from 40,000 to 50,000 Negroes at the Lincoln Memorial.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Actually, there was scarcely more than half that number, and the police (who are experienced in estimating crowds) placed the maximum at 15,000, or 12,000 less than the "Pilgrimage's" press agent said were present.

The panoramic picture of the gathering seems to support the estimate of the Washington police that about 15,000 were on hand.

It is therefore pertinent to ask where were all of the "pilgrims" who were supposed to "march" and so indicate their undying desire for the passage of civil rights legislation and their fiery opposition to terrorism in the South?

Within a radius of 250 miles from Washington there are almost 4,000,000 Negroes, so a prediction that 50,000 of this number would "march" to Washington seemed not too fanciful, and yet but 15,000 appeared.

With well over 300,000 Negroes in Washington (who could all have reached the Lincoln Memorial within a few minutes for a few cents) it is surprising that they did not swell the total attendance to the predicted total, but apparently they didn't nor, seemingly, did the 300,000 in nearby Baltimore.

Question: Where were all the "race piatriots"?

SEGREGATION FOES MARCHING ON WASHINGTON

Daily Tribune
Fri. 5-17-57
Chicago, Ill.

Washington, May 16 (AP)—The first contingents in an anti-segregation March began converging on Washington today.

Sponsors of the movement from all parts of the nation predict 50,000 will be on hand for noon ceremonies tomorrow at the Lincoln Memorial.

The first group to arrive was a contingent of 70, mostly west coast clergymen, flying from California.

Another big delegation — 200 Negroes—set out by bus from Montgomery, Ala., with a send off of prayers and good wishes from others of their race.

"Prayer Pilgrimage"

The leader of the Montgomery group, the Rev. M. L. King, prominent figure in the long bus desegregation fight in the Alabama capital, said the mission is a "historic occasion that ranks in American history with the Declaration of Independence."

The occasion is the third anniversary of the Supreme court's school integration decree.

Sponsors call it a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom."

The "pilgrims" aim at forcing action to put into effect the Supreme court's ruling against racial segregation in schools, passage of civil rights legislation in Congress, and an end to acts of racial discrimination, particularly in the south.

Co-chairmen of the demonstration are Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National association for the Advancement of Colored People [NAACP], A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car porters, and the Rev. Mr. King from Alabama.

Cancel Police Leaves

In expectation of heavy traffic jams to accompany tomorrow's demonstration, metropolitan and park police canceled all leaves for the day.

Backers of the movement stress its religious aspect and deny there is any prospect of disturbances or even of political features. A public relations spokesman said participants were asked not even to try to involve their own congressmen.

Jack Rathbone, board chairman of a group calling itself a chapter of "Defenders of State Sovereignty and Individual Liberties" in nearby Arlington county, Va., wired government and police officials to be on the alert for "possible civil disturbances and other overt acts that this vast horde of pressure lobbyists could set off."

Expecting 50,000

Courier P. 2

Prayer Day May 17 in Washington

Sat. 4-20-57

Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW YORK — Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, has called upon all local and state units of the association to rally to the support of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom, in Washington on May 17, the third anniversary of the historic U. S. Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in public education.

The NAACP executive is serving as co-chairman of the movement together with A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a vice president of the AFL-CIO, and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Leadership conference and leader of the successful Montgomery, Ala., bus protest movement.

■

THE PRAYER pilgrimage was officially launched at a meeting of 77 leaders of church, labor, civic and fraternal organizations in Washington. The leaders unanimously approved a call to the nation to gather in Washington in observance of the third anniversary of the Supreme Court decision, in support of pending civil rights legislation, in protest against terror and violence in the South, and in commemoration of Abraham Lincoln.

The prayer pilgrimage, the NAACP leader said, "Is not a March-on-Washington in the sense of the 1941 movement inasmuch as it is not designed to exert pressure on the executive branch of the Government."

■

AN OFFICE for the pilgrimage has been set up in the NAACP national headquarters, 20 West 40th St., New York 18, N. Y., with the Rev. Thomas Kilgore Jr., pastor of Friendship Baptist Church in New York, as executive director. The Rev. Mr. Kilgore will work under the supervision of the three co-chairmen. Additional working space has been set up in Montgomery, Ala., and in Harlem. The Rev. Ralph Abernathy of Montgomery is Southern director.

In a letter to all NAACP units, Mr. Wilkins called upon them to initiate steps to get a large delegation to make the trip to Washington on May 17. The aim is to get a minimum of 50,000 persons in the city for an open air meeting scheduled for the park area in front of the Lincoln Memorial.

Action On Violence Is Sought

Journal + Guide Sat. 5-4-57

Norfolk, Va.

Rev. Martin King

Outlines Aims Of D. C. Tour May 17

P. 11

NEW YORK — The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., at a press conference in New York last week described the objectives and plans for the May 17 Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom of which he is co-chairman along with Roy Wilkins of the NAACP and A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

These aims, as stated by Rev. Mr. King, are "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice, to provide a means for people in the North to act in common on a great issue with the southern freedom fighters, to protest the crippling of the NAACP in the South to protest violence directed against those in the South who stand for equality and freedom and to press for civil rights legislation before Congress which stands a chance for the first time since Reconstruction days of being enacted."

• • •

HE ADDED that the, "ease with which the Dixiecrats bottled up civil rights legislation adds great urgency to the Pilgrimage."

Regarding southern participation in the Pilgrimage, Rev. Mr. King announced that a southern headquarters has been opened in Montgomery by the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, who along with himself was a leader of the year-long bus protest action. Active mobilization is taking place in Atlanta, Birmingham, Tallahassee, Baton Rouge and New Orleans as well as in other cities.

• • •

IN OTHER sections of the country, seven headquarters have been opened. Rev. Mr. King quoted a west coast organizer of the Pilgrimage as stating that 3,000 persons are coming to Washington on May 17, all the way from California. Over 50,000 persons from all sections of the country are expected to converge on Washington for the Pilgrimage in chartered buses, trains and planes, car pools and individually.

Rev. Mr. King said he expects particularly large deputations from Virginia and North Carolina--the southern states closest to Washington--and from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the New England states.

• • •

ASKED WHAT bearing a strong civil rights statement from President Eisenhower in the immediate future would have on the Pilgrimage, Rev Mr. King asserted that the demonstration is not aimed at the President but is broader in scope since it is "an appeal to the conscience of the nation on these major issues we confront."

He denied that President Eisenhower's April 23 message to interracial religious leaders in Nashville could be considered a strong statement, and asserted that it was merely a message of greeting usually sent to gatherings of this type.

Paul Robeson Was Pilgrimage Spectator

Courier 5-4 Pittsburgh Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Paul Robeson, singer-actor-orator, and one of the nation's most controversial figures, was observed as an interested spectator at the Prayer Pilgrimage here May 17.

Sat. 4-20-57

An unconfirmed report also placed Benjamin Davis Jr., former New York City councilman, at the event.

When a March Is Not a March

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

Marking the third anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision outlawing racially segregated public school, Negro leaders from 15 states met in Washington last week to lay plans for a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" to the capital on May 17.

Sat. 4-20-57

Spokesmen for the group are said to expect 50,000 people to join the pilgrimage "to protest the intimidation and terror under which colored people are living," but denied that it is a "March on Washington."

P. 9

This would seem to be an excursion in semantics because there is really no difference between a pilgrimage and a march except that the former would seem to be a softer term implying a more peaceful approach to the same goal, more persuasion than force, and indicating a new approach in keeping with the avowed Gandhian principles of the Rev. Martin Luther King, one of the promoters.

Undoubtedly this demonstration will dramatize the Negroes' protest against Southern opposition to and disobedience of the U. S. Supreme Court's revolutionary decree with the hope of spurring enactment of a meaningful civil rights law, and will be so understood and publicized at home and abroad.

Whether this demonstration is a pilgrimage or a march, however, it will offer dramatic evidence of the solidarity and determination of the pilgrims (or marchers) in the fight for fullest citizenship for all.

'Give Us the Ballot,' Rev. King Urges

By WILLIAM G. NUNN

WASHINGTON — Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., whose name today is a symbol for a revitalized, fighting spirit among the nation's 17,000,000 Negro Americans, told the Prayer Pilgrimage Friday to "give us the ballot."

The 28-year-old Montgomery leader, co-chairman of the movement, electrified his audience as he word-painted his philosophy for the future.

"Give us the ballot," he said in measured tones, "and we will no longer have to worry the Federal Government about our basic rights.

"Give us the ballot, and we will no longer plead to the Federal Government for passage of an anti-lynching law; we will, by the power of our vote, write the law on the statute books of the Southern states and bring to an end the dastardly acts of the hooded perpetrators of violence.

"Give us the ballot," he said will transform the salient misdeeds of blood-thirsty mobs into the calculated good deeds of orderly citizens.

"Give us the ballot and we will fill our legislative halls with men of goodwill and send to the sacred halls of Congress men who will not sign a Southern manifesto because of their devotion to the manifesto of justice.

"Give us the ballot and we will place judges on the benches of the South who will 'do justly and love mercy,' and we will place at the head of the Southern states governors who have felt not only the tang of the human, but the glow of the divine.

"Give us the ballot and we will quietly and non-violently, without rancor or bitterness, implement the Supreme Court's decision of May 17, 1954."

Concluded Rev. King: "This dearth of positive leadership from the Federal Government is not confined to one particular party. Both parties have betrayed the cause of justice."

He termed their betrayal of legislators as men who "so often have a high blood pressure of words and an anemia of deeds."

"Big Three" Of Prayer Pilgrimage

The three co-chairmen of the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom pledge continuing work for racial justice directly after the May 17 program in Washington, D. C.

Left to right: Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, NAACP; the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, president, Southern Leaders Conference; A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO.

Secure Lincoln Memorial For Prayer Pilgrimage

NEW YORK (ANP) -- The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been informed that the Lincoln Memorial in Washington will be available for the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom on May 17, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, said here Thursday.

Use of the Memorial for this purpose was requested last month by Clarence Mitchell, director of the Association's Washington bureau. After a month's delay, the National Park Service at first turned down the request on April 16 on the ground that an assembly of 50,000 persons at the Memorial would deprive thousands of tourists of the free access to the shrine. E. T. Scoyen, acting director of the National Park Service, suggested that the meeting be held at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds.

Upon further representation by Mr. Mitchell who pointed out the symbolic significance of holding the meeting at the Lincoln Memorial, the earlier denial was rescinded on April 18. The meeting will be from noon until 3 P.M. on the third anniversary of the United States Supreme Court decision banning racial segregation in public education.

The Pilgrimage was called following a conference of 77 leaders of church, civic, labor and fraternal organizations in Washington on April 5.

The program will consist of prayers, music and addresses. A wreath will be placed on the Lincoln Memorial.

"Prayer Pilgrimage For Freedom"

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

Each May 17 since 1954 Negroes in the United States have observed this date on which the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional segregation by law in the public schools of the nation. Early this past April Negro leaders announced a "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" as the 1957 form of observance. The spokesmen said they expected a 50,000 attendance, but emphasized it was not to be a march on Washington. Nevertheless there were forebodings voiced in several quarters.

Last Friday the Negroes assembled under the pastor of a New York Baptist church. There were not 50,000 of them. But a crowd from 31 states, variously estimated at 15,000 to 27,00, stood on the steps and lawns in front of the Lincoln Memorial Police declare the throng was notably orderly. Demonstrations took a form familiar to Negro churchgoers: chorused and scattered "Amens."

Listeners heard speakers warn against accepting any Communist aid, acclaim the courts and Department of Justice, and express hope that President Eisenhower, with his "high sense of humanity," would speak out more strongly against violations of Negro rights. Speeches were punctuated by songs and prayers.

From here and there throughout the country come occasional reports of individual Negro boorishness, even violence—often provoked, no doubt, by personal insult of latent sense of group injustice. There is crime, too, and sometimes gang hoodlumism, which may or may not have racial significance. But thus far when American Negroes have taken considered action as a race and under their own leadership they command the respect of the nation.

Negroes on Pilgrimage Rap Ike, Both Parties

WASHINGTON, May 17 (AP)—Massed thousands of Negroes met in prayer and protest today—three years, to the very hour, after the Supreme Court banned segregation in public schools.

Ranged in a great semicircle before the Lincoln Memorial, for this unprecedented "prayer pilgrimage for freedom," they applauded speeches charging that President Eisenhower and congressional leaders of both parties have failed in the wake of the high court ruling to lead the way toward equal rights for all.

URGES PRESSURE GROUP

Rep. Powell (D-NY) set the tone by calling on Negroes to establish through their churches a "third force—nonpartisan but political"—to bring pressure on political leaders.

"We meet here today in front of the Lincoln Memorial," the Negro congressman said, "because we are getting more from a dead Republican than we are getting from live Democrats and live Republicans."

Pilgrimage Prayer

Courier Sat. 6-1-57 p.9

• The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who gained in stature as a leader, ended his rousing speech at the Lincoln Memorial in Washington on a note that could be summed up as the "Pilgrim's Prayer." Said Rev. Mr. King: Pittsburgh Pa.

"I conclude by saying that each of us must keep faith in the future. Let us not despair but realize that as we struggle for justice we do not struggle alone, but God struggles with us. He is leading us out of a bewildering Egypt, through a bleak and desolate wilderness, toward a bright and glittering promised land. Let us go forth into the glorious future with the words of JAMES WELDON JOHNSON resounding in our souls:

"'God of our weary years,
God of our silent tears,
Thou who hast brought us thus far on the way;
Thou who hast by Thy might,
Led us into the light,
Keep us forever in the path, we pray.

"Lest our feet stray from the places, our God, where we met Thee.
Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world we forget Thee;
Shadowed beneath Thy hand, may we forever stand
True to our God, true to our native land.'"

World Watches Prayer Protest

'Pilgrims' Begin Long March to D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The vanguard of an estimated 50,000 aroused Negroes are arriving here by train, car, bus, and other transportation to be part of the "Prayer Pilgrimage," to stick the pin of awareness into the nation's conscience of equal rights for all in a gigantic ceremony to be held Friday at high noon before the Lincoln Memorial.

The specific aims of the Prayer Pilgrimage are (1) to commemorate the third anniversary of the United States Supreme Court's historic 1954 school integration ruling which declared that racial segregation is legally dead; (2) "to demonstrate unity of Negroes in the struggle for freedom and justice," and (3) to call for immediate implementation of the Supreme Court decision and for passage of civil rights bills.

Rev. King

The significance of the gathering is that "the era of Uncle

Catholic weekly; the Very Rev. James A. Pike, dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of ethics and theology at Union Theological Seminary.

The Prayer Pilgrimage arrivals are being welcomed in Washington by over 60 churches, according to John H. Young III, publicity director for the event.

The grassroots movement has accepted the services of persons of various backgrounds and occupations.

Typical of them is New York City's Reuben J. Patton who has gathered hundreds of cars to transport pilgrims to Washington.

In the South, Rev. Ralph David Abernathy of Montgomery toured the various areas as the Southern coordinator to aid in getting a number of persons to attend the ceremonies.

As a symbol of this rededication to the quest of human rights, school children James and Theresa Gordon, who braved the wrath of a Clay (Ky.) mob last September to break the color bar at a school, will lay a wreath at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial.

The Pacific Coast will be represented by a delegation of 70 ministers.

The national Baptist Association, through its president, Dr. J. H. Jackson, is participating in the program.

Prize Photo

Afro Magazine Baltimore Md 8-57

Prize photo of Prayer Pilgrimage of 25,000 to Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. May 17, 1957. It was taken by AFRO staff photographer, I. Henry Phillips.

Bishop St. Paul Alvin Shelton of Washington, and his mother photographed at the services when pilgrims prayed for the success of President Eisenhower's Civil Rights program in Congress.

Note headdress, gown and prayer scarf of the erect and statuesque figure of the bishop's mother—her expression of faith and courage.

The clasped hands are eloquent of an emotion so well-controlled that it is not visible in her face.

The bishop wears his prayer scarf and holds in his hands Hiscox's Manual.

Magazine Cumberland Md 6-8-57 p.3

World P.1
Birmingham, Ala.
Sat. 4-13-57

PLANS FOR A MAY 17 PRAYER PILGRIMAGE for Freedom, to be held in the nation's capital, are announced in Washington by (left to right, at table): the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., leader of the Montgomery bus protest movement; A. Phillip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; and Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary. The Freedom Pilgrimage, which is expected to bring to Washington 50,000 civil rights advocates from all sections of the nation, will take place on the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation school decision. The Pilgrimage will commemorate the Supreme Court decision, support federal civil rights legislation, and protest southern violence and resistance to the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decrees. The planning conference for the Pilgrimage was attended by 77 leaders of church and civic groups, organized labor, fraternal organizations and NAACP units, who came from 15 states to the April 5 meeting.

A Job Well Done

Afro-American
Sat. 6-8-57
P.4
Baltimore Md.

More than 25,000 people poured into Washington for the Prayer Pilgrimage at the Lincoln Memorial.

Pilgrims came from all over the United States.

They made an impressive moral demand upon the Congress of the United States and the President to enact civil rights legislation.

It is estimated that the Pilgrimage cost in excess of $20,000 and it was worth it.

It was staged under the direction of the NAACP (Roy Wilkins), The Montgomery Improvement Association (Rev. M. L. King), and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO (A. Philip Randolph).

A tremendous amount of work was done. Thousands of pieces of mail, posters and circulars were distributed by the NAACP and labor, both of which have large national organizations.

Transportation (special busses, trains and planes) was arranged for in advance.

Places for registration, accommodations to house and to feed these delegates were set up.

Labor and the NAACP had to provide scores of people from their regular staffs to do the work. Help of NAACP branches and labor unions and churches in all sections of the country had to be solicited.

There were many committee meetings on the national level in which the NAACP, labor and the churches resolved their differing points of view and united upon the program, out of which came success for the gigantic movement.

Any program of this size, involving diverse organizations, calls for give and take among the planners — that's common even in small organizations.

But what we can be proudest of is the fact that they harmonized their differences, they overcame all opposition of the White Citizens Councils and other enemies who sought to smear the pilgrimage as Communist led.

Others intimidated government employees declaring the Prayer Pilgrimage a political movement and any participation in it would be a violation of the Hatch Act.

As we see it, A. Philip Randolph, the Rev. Mr. King and Mr. Wilkins are to be highly commended for a job well done.

Pilgrimage Goals To Be Pushed By College Groups

Daily World Wed. 6-5-57 P.1
Atlanta Ga.

BROOKLYN, N. Y. — (ANP) — Dr. Deborah Partridge, Qheen College professor and Grand Basiehs of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, last Sunday in a Brooklyn Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church Women's Day address characterized the present era as a "Time when it is not popular to be good."

"We pay more attention to what we do than what we say,' the Columbia University lecturer said. "Though we call ourselves Christians in this nation, we are still a long way from the goal of the Brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. We cannot talk about a home in Heaven until we have demonstrated our love for our fellow man," she stated.

DELTA CONFERENCE

In an interview, Dr. Partridge spoke of the June 1 special meeting of the American Council for Human Rights at the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority House in Washington, D. C. She emphasized the importance of the conference of leaders of the Zetas, Deltas, Alpha Kappa Alpha and Sigma Gamma Rho Sororities and the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity. She pointed to the urgency of the conference to consider the role of college organizations in implimenting the shgestions and ideas offered at the recent Prayer Pilgrimage to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

"If we can contribute a potent force toward the attaining of a full franchise for Negro voters as advcated by Dr. Martin Luther King, we will have achieved a major victory toward complete freedom," she said. She stressed also that there is a further need to awaken Negroes every where to a greater appreciation of the importance of voting and electing the right individuals.

Daily World

Labor To Participate In Mass Protest Rally

Defender P. 4 Sat. 4-13-57

WASHINGTON — A prayer pilgrimage for freedom protesting mounting unjustices in the South and possible passage of civil rights legislation for the first time since

ROY WILKINS

Reconstruction brought 75 of the nation's most prominent Negro leaders here to plan ways of bringing this about.

Co-chairmen of the all-important meeting Friday at Metropolitan Baptist church were Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary; Dr. Martin Luther King, of Montgomery, Ala., and A. Philip Randolph, AFL-CIO vice president and president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The pilgrimage to Washington planned by these leaders is expected to draw some 100,000 Negroes to the Nation's Capital on May 17, third anniversary of the famed U.S. Supreme Court decision against racially segregated schools.

ISSUE MANDATE

Following White House refusal to intervene in the Dixie racial disturbances, Southern leaders from some 40 communities issued a mandate on Feb. 14 for a prayer pilgrimage to Washington.

The meeting on Friday was a follow up to this mandate and gave top Negro leaders an opportunity to plan it.

Among those from Chicago who atteended the planning conference was Eugene Frazier, international president, United Transport Service Employees Union.

Frazier hurried to the conference in reply to a telegram from Dr. King, Randolph and Wilkins which stated in part:

"Supremacy of law and order increasingly endangered. Widespread terror is visited upon law-abiding citizens, clergy and churches

Chicago Tel

DEFIANCE CITED

"There is outright defiance of the courts and threat to the spiritual fibre of the nation and the breakdown of morality . . . in this context dignified massive public expression of our determination to see justice and morality prevail seems to us an historic necessity.

MARTIN KING

"Your counsel is of utmost importance in making the necessary plans for the observance."

Frazier said tentative plans call for 20,000 ministers representing all faiths, along with some 100,000 persons to meet at the base of the Lincoln Memorial here to dedicate and reaffirm their allegiance and loyalty to the Constitution and pledge support to impending Congressional civil rights legislation

A. PHILLIP RANDOLPH

$20,000 BUDGET

Frazier said an estimated operating budget of $20,000 was presented to the conference to cover expenses of the pilgrimage. Some $13,000 was pledged during the meeting, while $6,000 was collected in cash and checks.

Randolph who presided, declared:

"As the founding Americans prayed for strength and wisdom in the wilderness of a new land, as the slaves and their descendants prayed for emancipation and human dignity, as men of every color and clime in time of crisis have sought Divine guidance, so we now, in these troubled years, call upon all who love justice, dignity and liberty, who love their country, and mankind, to join in a prayer pilgrimage to Washington on May 17.

"We shall renew our strength, communicate our unity and rededicate our efforts to the attainment of freedom."

Negroes Plan Washington Prayer Rally

Post Herald Birmingham, Ala., Sat. 4-13-57

MONTGOMERY, April 12 (AP) —Two officers of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. will lead a delegation of Montgomery Negroes to Washington May 17 to participate in a mass "prayer pilgrimage for freedom."

P. 4

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of the Negro First Baptist Church said he and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the MIA, would attend the rally in addition to "large numbers" of other local people.

Abernathy and King attended a meeting in Washington on April 5 when plans for the rally were made.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has estimated 50,000 Negroes will participate in the rally, which will be held in front of Lincoln Memorial on the third anniversary of the U. S. Supreme Court's decision outlawing classroom segregation.

Citizens Are Thanked For $1,800.25 Gift

Black Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla. 7-27

Because of your investment, we were able to present the story of Martin Luther King Jr. to thousands of people and to participate on a program with Young Freedom Fighters from all over the United States.

Because of your investment, we were able to see New York City, live in luxury at the Henry Hudson hotel and sell Oklahoma City to people of all races, creeds and colors.

Because of your invesement, we were able to stop in 14 states, visit Washington, D. C., with all of its historical buildings, such as the White House, Capitol Building, Lincoln's Memorial, Jefferson's Memorial, Arlington Cemetery, Smithsonian Institute, Ford Theatre, Washington's Manument, the Pentagon; visit Mount Vernon, George Washington's home; The Hermitage, Andrew Jackson's home in Nashville, Tenn.; Fisk university, and many other places.

Because of your investment, we have a new lease on life, a new confidence in our fellowman, and a new determination to take our responsibility as citizens—citizens that you will be proud of.

Humbly submitted,

William Miles, Maxine Dowdell, Joe Hill, Criss Davis, Doris J. Luster, Joanne Johnson, Carolyn Lee, Alma Posey, and others. Clara Luper, sponsor.

The trip taken by the Oklahoma City Youth Council of the NAACP was a success and the play was presented three times. The officers from the high school division were William Miles, president, and Alma Faye Posey, secretary. Several officers for the elementary group attended.

The Youth Council wishes to thank the citizens of this city for this trip.

The Council will meet Monday, June 10, at the Fourth Street Branch YMCA.

On to New York City

"On to New York City" was the slogan of a group of people who were determined that 26 young people would participate in a Salute to Young Freedom Fighters program, which was sponsored by the youth and college division of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Hats off to Mr. D. J. Diggs, Jean Warmsley, Rev. J. S. Sykes, Atty. Green, John White and Dr. E. C. Moon for the success of this trip.

As our special thanks to you, we will present the play here soon. Watch for the date.

The following people contributed.

Rev. and Mrs. C. Brown, Omaha, Nebr., $7.50; Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Black, $3; Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Parker, $25; Mr. C. Butler, $50; Mr. M. A. Franklin, $40; Mr. Howell, $25; Mrs. Geneva Keyes, $1; Mr. and Mrs. L. Marshall, $1; Mr. G. W. Carmen, $1; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brown, $1; Mrs. Mattie Jackson, $1; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Reeves, $1; Mrs. Chaney Williamson, $1; Mrs. Wilma J. Alexander, $1; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McDaniel, $1; Mrs. Harmon, $1; Mr. Arthur Cork, $1; Mr. William Garrison, $1.

Mrs. Annie Torrance, $1; Mr. Yancy Lewis, $1; Mrs. Betty J. Garrison, $1; Mr. and Mrs. Ruby Terrell, $1; Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Hamilton, $1; Mrs. J. B. Jacobs, $1; Mrs. Betty J. White, $1; Mrs. Ruth Norton, $1; Rev. L. D. Farmer, $1; Mr. O. J. Mills, $1; Mr. Tom Morris, $1; Mr. Curley Sloss sr., $1; Mrs. Thelma Jones, $1; Mrs. Saundra Butler, $11.50; Mrs. Mattie Garrison, $2; Mrs. Iosa Sanders, $2.05; Mr. and Mrs. Lenox Battle, $2; Mr. D. W. Caulk, $2; Mrs. Ruth Allen, $2; Rev. and Mrs. Rankin, $2.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Taylor, $2; Mr. and Mrs. N. Wedgeworth, $2; Mr. and Mrs. T. Watkins, Los Angeles, Calif., $2; Mrs. Elizabeth Younger, $2; Mrs. Mary Wedgeworth, $2; Mrs. Addie Jordan, $2.50; Miss Ghita Anderson, $5; Mrs. Willie Peevy, Tulsa, Okla., $5; Miss Joyce Mitchell, $5; Mrs. Hollis, $5; Mr. John White, $5; Mr. Radford Leach, $5; Mr. W. B. Parker, $5; President G. L. Harrison, Langston university, $5; Mr. F. D. Moon, $5; Mrs. T. Crawford, $5; Mrs. E. Lee, $5; Mrs. Ponds, $3; Mr. Jimmy Stewart, $15; Mr. Bingham, $1; Mr. M. McMurray, $2; Mr. Roscoe Dunjee, $50.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Tucker, $5; Mr. Doc Williams, $40; Mr. D. J. Diggs, $100; Mrs. D. J. Diggs, $45; Mr. Stevenson, $10; Dr. Biscoe, $10; Mr. Scott, Bartlesville, Okla., $10; Dr. H. W. Williamston, Idabel, $50; Rev. J. S. Sykes, $20; Dr. E. C. Moon jr., $5; St. John Baptist, $40; Cleaves Methodist, $25; Fifth Street Baptist, $25; Fifth Street Senior Choir, $7.50; Metropolitan Baptist Junior Choir, $2; Bethlehem Star Baptist, $20.24; East Sixth Street Christian, $4.50; St. Mary's Benevolent, $2.50; Joe Hill's Church and friends, $59.

Junior Class, Dunjee School, $5; Senior Class, Dunjee School,, $5; Amigos Club, $5; Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, $100; New Farmers of America (Mr. Parker, sponsor) $27.50; N. H. A. (Mrs. Davis, sponsor) $5; Mrs. C. Daughty, $2; Mrs. Inez Luster, $15; Mrs. Florence Perkins, $15; Mrs. Adelle Harris, $10; Mrs. Kansas Lawrence, Oakland, Calif., $10; Mrs. A. F. Williams, $10; Floyd Blair and friends, $17.10; Donald Butler, $8.25; Criss Davis' friends and church, $44.25; Mrs. Essie Anderson, $1; Mrs. T. Browning, $2; Mrs. Cartwright, $1; William Wiley, $3; Alvin Mitchell's friends, $64; Winfred Parker's friends, $30.50; Gilbert Tampkins, $19.50; Veverlene Burke's friends, $27.30; Maxine Dowdell's friends, $42.25; Carolyn Lee's friends and church, $65; Shirley Scott's friends, $59; Mrs. C. Kemp, $15; Barbara Richardson's friends, $25.40.

Joyce Taylor's friends, $8.50; Mrs. Betty Osborne, $53; Gladys Williams, $40; Dr. S. J. Thompson, $5; Mrs. Helen Callaway, $5; Dr. Virginia Harden, $5; Mrs. Charles Atkins, $5; Mr. Charles Hardin, $1; Mr. L. L. Filson, $1; Mr. House, $1; Mr. Berryhill, $1; Mrs. Corine Breeding, $1; Mrs. Ida Price, $1; Rev. McCowen, $1; R. M. Fields, $1; Catherine Benford, $1; Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Deckard, $2; Mr. Raymond Fortune, $2; Mrs. Lydia Kemp, $1; Mrs. W. L. Sparks, $1; Mrs. Mauderie Wilson, $3.50; Mrs. Celia Miller, $7.50; Atty. Thompson, $2; Clara Luper, $50; Marilyn Luper, $25; Calvin Luper, $25; Saletta McCary, $1; Louise Reed, $1; Mr. and Mrs. M. Allen, $5; Mr. and Mrs. E. Benefee, $21; Mr. and Mrs. W. Ruth, $2; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Broadnax, $2; Mrs. Essie Anderson, $1; Mrs. Cornelius Adams, $1; Rev. J. B. Bratton jr., $1; Mr. A. F. Delaney, $1; Mrs. John B. Williams, $1; Mrs. Charles Daughty, $1; Clyde Taylor (Japan) $10; Charles Parker, $5; Willard Reed, $5.

50,000 Expected Here For Civil Rights Rally

Post Times Herald P. 1. B

Washington D.C.,

An estimated 50,000 civil rights advocates from 30 states are expected to attend a three-hour "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" today at the Lincoln Memorial.

Tu. 5-17-57

The three-hour ceremony—marking the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision declaring public school segregation unconstitutional—is to begin at noon.

Most of the pilgrims are expected to begin arriving here about 6 a. m. by bus, plane, trains and private motorcades. Metropolitan and Park police have canceled all leaves and assigned special police details to handle the traffic jams expetced to develop from the pilgrims at Lincoln Memorial.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., one of the co-chairmen of the pilgrimage, emphasized that all activities in connection with it will take place "solely" at the Lincoln Memorial.

He said that there will be "no picketing, no poster walking and no lobbying in connection with the Prayer Pilgrimage." If any such activities are done, he said, "they will not be done under our auspices or with our approval."

King, who gained national renown as leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, said the purpose of the pilgrimage is "to arouse the conscience of the Nation in favor of racial justice."

He said it would be attended by "persons of good will," both white and Negro.

The other co-chairmen are Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Spokesen at the pilgrimage headquarters, in the local NAACP office, said that the various delegations have been directed to go to Uline Arena and 32 local churches when they arrive in town. They will be taken to the Memorial in 200 chartered buses.

Parking for those arriving in private cars has been arranged on land cleared for the Southwest redevelopent project at 3rd and E sts. sw. Shuttle buses will take motorists from the parking area to the Memorial.

Most of the participants are expected to leave town immediately after the ceremony, spokesmen said.

March on Capital

Prayer Pilgrimage May Draw 75,000

Courier p.2 Sat. 4-27-57

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A veteran of the World War II FEPC "March on Washington" joined with other "generals" in mapping plans for a new pilgrimage to Washington which will take place on May 17, third anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation edicts.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The strategist is "General" A. Philip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (AFL-CIO). His troops are expected to number some 75,000 American citizens who will be equal in strength to five World War II-type triangular Army divisions.

The 75,000 "Pilgrims" would also be equal to the entire population of Kenosha, Wis.

• Randolph issued a call for volunteers here last week by asserting, "The implementation of civil rights legislation is a legal means of obtaining human rights. This is the hour of action. The question of civil rights is the most challenging issue to the American conscience. The Pilgrimage to Washington is intended to arouse that conscience."

The Pilgrimage's "chief of staff" is Rev. Thomas Kilgore. Serving as national director of the proposed march on Washington, Rev. Mr. Kilgore pointed out that the main problem that the Pilgrimage is facing is that of transporting the expected 75,000 people into Washington.

Rev. Mr. Kilgore pointed out that persons traveling from nearby cities, such as New York and Philadelphia, will be able to travel via special trains at half fares. Buses can also be utilized by these groups. In other parts of the country, car pools are in the process of being organized.

■

TO FACILITATE the "mustering" of "troops," a total of 10 regional Pilgrimage offices have been opened in such cities as Los Angeles, Cleveland, San Francisco, Montgomery, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and New York.

In support of the plans, those unable to attend the Washington meeting on May 17 are mapping plans for a nationwide fast and day of prayer.

The Pilgrimage is being timed to coincide with the proposed advancement of civil rights legislation in Congress.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

Outlines Plan for Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington May 17; Randolph Speaks

Bystander p.1 Des Moines, Iowa Thurs. 4-25-57

New York—A meeting of 106 religious labor and civic leaders was held on Thursday in New York to map plans for the Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington on May 17.

The meeting opened with an invocation and then a stirring address by A. Philip Randolph. "There are two kinds of rights—Human Rights and Civil Rights; Human rights are God-given; they belong to us as human beings. Civil Rights are intended to implement Human Rights and to do the work is to achieve these. The assembling of tens of thousands in the historic Prayer Pilgrimage will carry us toward our goal by arousing the conscience of the nation. The issue of civil rights is the most challenging issue of our time.

Offices Opened

After Randolph's address, Rev. Thomas Kilgore, National Director of the Pilgrimage, gaven an outline of the plans, so far. Regional offices have been opened in ten cities. The major ones are: Los Angeles, Cleveland, San Francisco, Montgomery, Alabama, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. In addition to these, there are larger headquarters in Washington and New York.

The main discussion revolved around the problem of transportation for tens of thousands of people into Washington.

Bystander p.6

Special Trains

As the plans now stand economywise, the Pilgrimage coming from most of the larger cities will be able to r de special trains to Washington at half fares. Busses will be travelling at lower rates also.

Courier 4-25-57

Car pools are reported from all over the country. There is talk of hitch-hiking and even some plans for walking from New York and Connecticut. Those on foot plan to start out of May first and average ten miles per day.

Communists Seek to Infiltrate Negro March on Washington

Post + Times Herald Washington, D.C.
Sun. 5-12-57

By Maureen Gothlin
United Press

The Communist party is making an all-out attempt to infiltrate a Negro "March on Washington" scheduled for next Friday, it was revealed yesterday. P. 12-A

Leaders of the pilgrimage have vowed to keep the Communists out.

The "march" was decided on at a meeting of 97 churchmen and leaders from all sections of the nation at New Orleans Feb. 4. Timed for the third anniversary of the Supreme Court's school integration ruling, its aim is to commemorate the decision, protest violence against Negroes, and press for enactment of civil rights legislation.

A United Press check showed the Communists have made infiltration of the mass pilgrimage their current number one objective. The Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker, has exhorted its readers to join it. Negro Communist leaders in several cities have summoned the party faithful to join the "march."

Organization of the pilgrimage, which is officially called a "prayer pilgrimage for freedom," is under three co-chairmen, each with an anti-communist record. They are Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, and A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Wilkins said in New York that the program is under control of the cochairmen and "no Communist has been or will be invited to participate either as a speaker, a singer, a prayer leader or a scripture reader."

He said the gathering will be a "public, open air observance" on Government property. He said the official call invited "all who love justice and dignity and liberty, who love their country, to join in a prayer of pilgrimage to Washington."

He added that the pilgrimage will be a "spiritual assembly inspired primarily by Negro clergymen and the NAACP." He noted that Communists "openly avow their opposition to all religious teaching."

Sponsors of the pilgrimage expect it to draw 50,000 participants to a mass meeting at the Lincoln Memorial, with 35,000 to 40,000 coming from outside Washington. The slogan adopted for the meeting is "to arouse the conscience of the Nation."

The Rev. Smallwood E. Williams, pastor of Bible Way Church, 1130 New Jersey ave. nw., is chairman of Washington activity for the event. Eugene Davidson, president of the District NAACP unit, is coordinator. Davidson emphasized the religious aspects of the pilgrimage.

[A permit for the use of the Memorial has been issued by National Capital Parks. Edwardd J. Kellyy, NCP sujerintendent, said the Memorial will be closeed to public visits from noon until 3 p. m. Traffic will be rerouted to the west of the structure.

Orders went out to get party members into the vanguard of delegations signing up for the pilgrimage, to use it as a means of demonstrating the strength of the party and to enlist white people in the pilgrimage as a means oftrying to convince negroes the party is working for them.

Washington hotels already have many reservations from prominent Negroes.

Rev. King Vows No Communist Help Wanted In 'Prayer Pilgrimage' At Washington Friday

Advertiser Sun. 5-12-57 Montgomery, Ala. P. 1

By ART OSGOODE

Negro leaders want no help from U.S. Communists when they put on a mammoth demonstration of unity in Washington next Friday, according to the Rev. Martin Luther King, one of the organizers of the coming "Prayer Pilgrimage."

The event, which commemorates the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing public school segregation, is expected to draw 150,000 Negroes to the nation's capital. It had been reported that U.S. Reds were planning to "infiltrate" the demonstration.

"Not at all," the Negro minister said here yesterday when asked if the Communists might horn in on the proceedings.

"We have had no Communists in on the planning. There are none on the program."

"We are not even asking their help. There is no place for atheistic Communism in this. . .this is a spiritual crusade."

King's comments were echoed in New York by Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary and a co-chairman of the pilgrimage.

"No Communists have been or will be invited to participate in the program either as a speaker, singer, prayer leader or scripture reader," Wilkins said. "There will be no place for the irreligious. . ."

King, in announcing plans for the event, said here that a number of nationally prominent whites have been invited to take part in the two-and-one-half hour event, which is to begin at the Lincoln Memorial.

King himself is to speak, as is Wilkins and A. Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and also a co-chairman for the pilgrimage.

The purpose of the pilgrimage is threefold, said King. He listed as its objectives:

1. The demonstration of the "unity of Negroes in their struggle for freedom."

2. A protest of "the violence and terror suffered in the South" by Negroes.

3. An appeal to Congress to pass civil rights legislation "now being sabotaged by a small group of reactionaries."

An estimated 300 or more Negroes are to leave Montgomery in chartered buses for the pilgrimage following a sunrise service at the First Baptist Church at 347 N. Ripley St. The service is to begin at 5:30 a.m. Thursday.

Montgomery Negroes attending the pilgrimage will pay $12 for the round trip, the remainder of the cost having been made up by contributions from individuals and businesses. The buses will not form a caravan, said King, because of traffic safety considerations. Sun. 5-12-57

However, he said, he does not expect the buses to meet with any violence on the trip. They will return to Montgomery almost immediately after the conclusion of the pilgrimage. P. 2a

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, Southern director in charge of preparations for the event, reported finding "great interest" in planning sessions held in major cities of the South.

Unless a large number of Southern Negroes is in attendance, the event will lose much of its effect, he acknowledged. Abernathy said 11,500 are expected to attend from New Orleans, 200 each from Baton Rouge, Miami, Mobile, Charleston, S.C., Greenville, S.C., and 1,000 each from Atlanta and Nashville.

"We are hoping that the presence of 150,000 people in the national capitol will show people there is a new Negro in the nation today who intends to be free and is willing to suffer and sacrifice in order to win freedom," said Abernathy.

Cab drivers' pilgrimage role cited

Afro-American Sat. 6-1-57 Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Count the service of more than 100 cab drivers in the generosity shown by Washington residents to visitors during the Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom. P. 15

Cab drivers gave from two to three hours of free service in transporting pilgrims to and from the Lincoln Memorial according to Frederick D. Gray, unit block 58th St., SE, who organized the effort.

"We had representation from every colored cab company in town," Mr. Gray said. "I had the pleasure of picking up Mahalia Jackson at the Statler Hotel, also Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell at the Memorial.

Others he rode were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gray of Alabama, attorney in the bus desegregation fight and later in the news when the local draft board reclassified him 1-A.

"I was very surprised to meet my name sake," Mr. Gray said. "I had heard so much about him."

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 5-18-57 P. 5

FINAL PLANS—Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, vice president of Alabama's Montgomery Improvement Association and southern director of the "Prayer Pilgrimage," goes over final plans for the "March to Washington" with the association secretary, Mrs. Maude Ballou, in Montgomery, Ala.

Pope To Reject Group's Bid To Keep Separation

Journal + Guide P.1

Sat. 8-17-57

Norfolk, Va.

Special to Journal and Guide

Sources in the Vatican said this week that Pope Pius XII is definitely opposed to all forms of discrimination and that the Pope has turn a deaf ear to the association of Catholic Lay-men's petition that Archbishop Francis J. Rummel be ordered to cease attempts to integrate New Orleans Parochial schools.

Archbishop Rummel has ended segregation in the churches and announced that he intends to end segregation in the schools. He also threatened to excommunicate the group if they did not cease activities.

* * *

THE NEW Orlenas association las tWednesday asked the Pope to declare that segregation is not a sin and that the Archbishop had no right to "define a matter of morals."

The Pope, it is said, is expected totake a dim view, when of the request for the high pontiff to make a public pronouncement of such a nature. It follows, church officials said, that the Church is completely and unalterably opposed to all forms of discrimination-in New Orleans as much as in the Union of South Africa.

As far back as Hitler's days the Catholic church has stood firmly against racial discrimination and its opposition has not weakened since. Nor does the Vatican attach any importance to argument that segregation does not necessarily constitute discrimination. The Vatican thinks it does and believes in any matter, that the matter was settled by the Catholic church teaches that Catholics must obey legal constituted aurtorities.

The Pope, whose word is law to some 30,000,000 Catholics in the United States, has throughout his reign made a special point of underlining the universal character of the church by emphasizing that all men are equal in his eyes.

Like his predecessor, he has created Negro bishops and had two white bishops in Africa consecrated by native African bishops. It was he also who elevated Chinese and Indian ecclesiastics to the Sacred College of Cardinals.

Opinion is in the Vatican that the Pope will take some occasion in the near future to speak or write about racial discrimination.

VATICAN ASSAILS SEGREGATION BID

Times

Sat. 8-10-57

Sees Grave Error in Request by New Orleans Group

New York

By ARNALDO CORTESI

Special to The New York Times.

ROME, Aug. 9—The Vatican took a serious and most unsympathetic view today of an appeal to the Pope by a New Orleans association of Roman Catholic laymen against racial integration in their archdiocese.

A high Vatican source said that the Catholic laymen had committed "a grave error" as far as the substance of their case was concerned. They apparently think it conceivable, he said, that the Holy See could declare itself against integration. This can never be, it was stated, because the church is "concerned with souls and all souls are equally dear to her."

It follows, the high Vatican source stated, that the Church is completely and unalterably opposed to all forms of discrimination—in New Orleans as much as in the Union of South Africa.

The Catholic laymen of New Orleans, who transmitted their appeal yesterday, compounded their doctrinal error with an error of form and an offense against church discipline, the Vatican indicated.

Their error of form is that they should have addressed their appeal not to the Pope, but to the Sacred Congregation of the Council, the spokesman said. This department of the Vatican administration is committed to the "universal discipline of the secular clergy and the christian people." The New Orleans catholics' breach of church discipline is that they let it be known publically that they had appealed to the Pope against their ecclesiastical superior.

The written appeal of the New Orleans Catholic laymen was understood to be under study by the Papal Secretariat of State today. It will probably be submitted to the Pope tomorrow in his summer residence, Castel Gandolfo. The appeal consists of a request that the Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans, take no further steps toward integration in Catholic schools and that the Pope make a solemn pronouncement that segregation of races is not morally wrong and sinful, as the Archbishop said it was.

Archbishop Rummel has ended segregation in the churches and announced that he intends to end segregation in the schools.

Council Expected to Act

Opinion in th Vatican is that the Pope will refer the appeal of the New Orleans Catholics to the Sacred Congregation of the Council, to which it should have been addressed in the first place.

This at least is what has been done in the past in cases of this sort. The Congregation of the Council will reply in due course, making it clear that it does so on instructions from the Pope and after consulting him.

It is considered virtually impossible that the Pope will allude to the appeal of New Orleans Catholics in a public pronouncement. It is possible, however that he may take some occasion in the near future to speak or write about racial discrimination in general and perhaps even about integration in particular.

It all depends, it was pointed out, on whether he thinks the problem grave enough to require his intervention. This is at any rate a subject into which the Pope has not yet entered in his public utterances.

Stands Against Discrimination

Although the Pope himself has not yet said the last word on these problems, there is absolutely no doubt of what the Holy See's opinion about them is.

As far back as Hitler's days the Catholic church stood firmly against racial discrimination. Its opposition has not weakened since. Nor does the Vatican attach any importance to argument that segregation does not necessarily constitute discrimination. The Vatican thinks it does, and believes in any case that the matter was settled by the Supreme Court of the United States. The Catholic church teaches that Catholics must obey their legally constituted authorities.

The Vatican has repeatedly made its opinion about segregation and kindred problems clear through its newspaper Osservatore Romano.

Rummel Commended

On Oct. 7, 1955, Osservatore was without any doubt reflecting the opinion of the Holy See and perhaps even of the Pope when it commended the Archbishop of New Orleans for the stand he had taken against segregation. It urged all Catholics to fight against racial prejudice, which it described as "inhuman rather than barbarous."

Since then Osservatore has commented more than once and always in the same sense on racial discrimination, not only in the United States but also elsewhere.

Pope Pius XII, it is pointed out in the Vatican, has throughout his reign made a special point of underlining the universal character of the Catholic Church by emphasizing that all men are equal in her eyes. His predecessor created the first Negro Bishops. The present Pope extended this practice and had two white bishops in Africa consecrated by native African Negro bishops. It was he also who elevated Chinese and Indian ecclesiastics to the Sacred College of Cardinals.

He created no native African Cardinals, it is said in the Vatican, only because no churchman of sufficient caliber has emerged in the African continent.

Pope Urged Integration To Help Bar

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. — (AP)— The Association of Catholic Laymen—bypassing its archbishop—today asked Pope Pius XII in Rome to stop racial integration in the church.

In a letter that challenged the right of Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel to define a matter of morals, the group of New Orleans Catholics asked:

"That Archbishop Rummel be requested "to take no further steps" toward integration of white and Negro Catholics pending a papal pronouncement, and.

"That the papacy decree that segregation is not morally wrong and sinful as the archbishop has said it is.

The letter also listed types of segregation in regions of the nation and the world outside the South.

STATEMENT LATER

Archbishop Rummel said he had no immediate comment. He said he would issue a statement later.

"For over two years now," the letter to Pope Pius said, "conscientious and sincere Catholics in the archdiocese of New Orleans have been confronted with the strange new doctrine, propounded by our archbishop, his excellency, Joseph Francis Rummel, that the segregation of the white and Negro races is 'morally wrong and sinful.'

"Indeed, this concept is both new and strange, for even the clergy and the church itself have participated and are participating in the perpetuation of this type of segregation by, among other things, sanctioning the establishment and maintenance of separate churches and schools.

"Despite the fact that no competent attempt has been made to offer a conclusive proof to establish the validity of the principle, nor to demonstrate a bishop's authority to define a matter of morals, Catholics have been admonished that they are bound in conscience under pain of possible serious sin to accept it."

'DEMORALIZATION OF SOULS'

As a result, the letter said, educated Catholics have become demoralized and uneducated ones scandalized.

"For the good of souls," said the letter, "something must be done and done swiftly."

The letter said some clergy had advised the laymen that the Pope would not consider the question worthy of direct attention, but "we can not be convinced that this is so."

Catholic consciences, the letter continued, seek to find out "whether the separation of any people or race from any other people or race is in itself 'morally wrong and sinful.'"

Pope Backs Stand Against Segregation

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 10 (AP)—Pope Pius XII and the Holy See stand squarely behind New Orleans Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel in his condemnation of racial segregation as "morally wrong and sinful," a high Vatican source said Saturday.

Archbishop Rummel

The source was commenting on an appeal sent to the Pope by a group of Roman Catholics in the New Orleans diocese. They asked the Pope to support racial segregation.

The source said it was highly unlikely that the Vatican secretariat of state would reply directly to the appeal. If anything, the source said, a reply would be made either through Msgr. Amleto Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, or through the New Orleans archbishop.

* * *

THE VATICAN source said a formal reply to the New Orleans Assn. of Catholic Laymen was unnecessary because the Pope already had made the church's opposition to racial discrimination crystal clear.

He said the Pope did this in the first encyclical of his reign—"summi pontificatus" (of the supreme pontificate), issued Oct. 20, 1939.

In the encyclical, Pope Pius declared all men to be "equal sons in the house of the Father" once they are baptized and enter the church.

He reaffirmed this viewpoint in 1945 when a world Jewish delegation called on him to thank him for what he had done to help the Jewish people during World War II.

Segregation Plea Loses At Vatican

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 10 (AP)—Pope Pius XII fully supports Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel of New Orleans in his fight against racial segregation in the church, a high Vatican source said today.

It appeared that the Vatican, indirectly, would reject an appeal to the Pontiff by the New Orleans Association of Catholic Laymen asking him to halt the Archbishop's program of racial integration.

The source said the Church's stand was contained in the first encyclical of the Pope's reign issued Oct. 20, 1939. In that encyclical the Pope declared all men "equal sons in the House of the Father" once they have been baptized and enter the church.

However, the source said it was unlikely that the Pontiff or the Vatican Secretariat of State would reply directly to the appeal of the New Orleans Catholics.

He said a reply probably would be made either through Msgr. Amleto Cicognani the apostolic delegate to the United States or through Archbishop Rummel himself.

Archbishop Rummel ruled that segregation in the church was "morally wrong and sinful," a statement which the semi-official Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano has echoed frequently in sharp editorial language.

In October, 1955 the paper said it was th duty of American Catholics to erase the "color smudge." At the time, Archbishop Rummel had closed down the St. Cecelia Mission at Jesuit Bend, La., as punishment because the parishioners refused to accept a Negro priest.

An even more bitter attack on segregation appeared in the paper last Sept. 6, when it charged that racial discrimination in the United States was a "sin against the nature of Christianity."

Anti-Negro riots in Oliver Springs, Tenn., sparked that editorial in which Osservatore said race discrimination "mortifies" the United States and denies it the full flowering of its "genius."

New Orleans Laymen Ask Pope Bar Integration in Archdiocese

By The Ass

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8 —The Association of Catholic Laymen of New Orleans, bypassing its archbishop, today asked Pope Pius XII to stop racial integration in the church.

In a letter that challenged the right of Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel to define a matter of morals, the group of New Orleans Catholics asked:

¶That Archbishop Rummel be requested "to take no further steps" toward integration of white and Negro Catholics pending a papal pronouncement, and

¶That the papacy decree that segregation was not morally wrong and sinful as the Archbishop said it was.

The letter also listed types of segregation in regions of the nation and the world outside the South.

Archbishop Rummel said he had no immediate comment. He said he would issue a statement later.

"For over two years now," the letter to Pope Pius said, "conscientious and sincere Catholics in the Archdiocese of New Orleans have been confronted with the strange new doctrine, propounded by our Archbishop, His Excellency, Joseph Francis Rummel, that the segregation of the white and Negro races is 'morally wrong and sinful'.

"Indeed, this concept is both new and strange, for even the clergy and the church itself have participated and are participating in the perpetuation of this type of segregation by, among other things, sanctioning the establishment and maintenance of separate churches and schools.

"Despite the fact that no competent attempt has been made to offer a conclusive proof to establish the validity of the principle, nor to demonstrate a bishop's authority to define a matter of morals, Catholics have been admonished that they are bound in conscience under pain of possible serious sin to accept it."

Demoralization Charged

As a result, the letter said, educated Catholics have become demoralized and uneducated ones scandalized.

"For the good of souls," said the letter, "something must be done and done swiftly."

The letter said some clergy had advised the laymen that the Pope would not consider the question worthy of direct attention, but "we cannot be convinced that this is so."

Catholic consciences, the letter continued, seek to find out "whether the separation of any people or race from any other people or race is in itself 'morally wrong and sinful.'"

"We respectfully submit that, viewed in this light, the resolution of this question of worldwide significance becomes a most serious obligation of your Holiness," the letter said.

Jackson G. Ricau, association executive secretary, said the letter closed with assurance the association would accept as final any papal decree.

The association's letter came only a few weeks before the start of the 1957-58 parochial school year.

The Archbishop, however, indicated that conditions must be right before he would order integration. There has been no indication whether the traditional segregation would be abolished when Catholic schools open next month.

Emile Wagner Jr., association president and a New Orleans lawyer, said the association was formed in the spring of 1956 and its membership numbered "some thousands." He later estimated membership at 2,000 to 3,000.

Mayor Closed Operations

Mr. Wagner, who made the letter public, said the association had ceased operations when Archbishop Rummel last year issued a decree ordering its discontinuance.

The letter emphasized that it sought a ruling on the morals of segregation as it affected the Southern Negro. It said that while segregation of Negroes from whites "obtains openely here, it is equally true that it obtains throughout the rest of the nation, although great pains are taken to deny the fact in many areas."

"Besides," it said, "there are other types of segregation in this country as well as in the rest of the world: the American from the Mexican in Texas; the Caucasian from the Oriental on our Pacific Coast; the Caucasian from the Indian in the Midwest and Northwest; the Christian from the Jew in the Northeast; the white from the Negro in Africa, and, among others, the caste system in India."

Archbishop Rummel has been a leader in efforts to integrate Catholics in the Archdiocese of New Orleans. In October, 1955, he suspended masses at St. Cecilia Mission at Jesuit Bend, twelve miles south of New Orleans, after parishioners objected to a Negro priest assigned to the mission by the Archbishop. The suspension is still in effect.

At Shamrock Press Conference

Mrs Roosevelt Lashes Eisenhower's Civil Rights Attitude; Lauds Negro Actions

By GEORGE A McELROY

HOUSTON — The people of the United States — Southerners in particular — Must realize that the Supreme Court's decision is the law of the land. This was the answer of Mrs Eleanor Roosevelt when she was asked if she was in accord with the high tribunal's 1954 school integration decree.

In a press conference in her 14th floor suite of the Shamrock Hilton Hotel Wednesday evening, the former 'First Lady' boldly told the press corps that she is definitely a pro-integrationist, that she is a member of the national board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Eisenhower is as timid as a pet white rabbit as far as civil rights legislation is concerned."

Mrs Roosevelt, one of the world's most respected women, chastised the methods Southerners are employing in attempting to evade the domestic issues.

She said it is a known fact that the South has many customs, restrictions and statutes, "but they must be innovated in order to comply with the laws of the Supreme Being and the regulations of the Supreme Court.

When informed of the local school integration case now in progress, Mrs Roosevelt reminded the group that she is not a Texan and she did not come here to give her views on the local situation. However, she — in a wide — eyed manner — lashed the 'gradual' process fo integration which is seemingly the ace that Southerners hope to get when the courts deal the cards.

A reporter told the 73-year-old states-woman that the local school officials have pointed out that Negro pupils are far behind whites on the same grade level, and asked her if she didn't believe that immediate integration would be a disadvantage to the Negro.

Mrs Roosevelt did not answer the query but asked, "Do you think it's so?"

Smiling as only she can, she then asked, "Do you think the conditions that lead to this should continue?"

Then Mrs Roosevelt pointed out that inadequate schools — for the most part — turn out inferior pupils.

"But America needs intelligent youth if she is to continue to be a pace setter in global competition," she added.

When asked by this writer if she is still on the national board of the NAACP, Mrs Roosevelt answered with a cheery, "Why certainly!" She added that she is also a member of the non-discrimination housing committee in New York City.

After answering several questions on the Egyptian-Israeli conflict of last year, Mrs Roosevelt continued to answer questions issued by this writer. She said that she was "terribly shocked" when she learned of the injunction placed on the NAACP in Texas last fall.

"We felt that we were operating according to Texas laws, however, there seems to have been a technicality which caused the action," she added.

The reknowned writer—diplomat—world traveler pointed out that America's Negroes have used only non-violence procedures in their efforts to obtain their just rights, and referred to Dr Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala, boycott, as a 'modern day Ghandi....

She called the violence of the Southerners—the bombing of Negro churches, home and business places—fuel for Russia's gigantic propaganda machine.

"We must realize that our domestic problems have far-reaching affects on the world situation.

"If we are to be world leaders, we must have our problems solved first," Mrs Roosevelt said. "You cannot tell others how to operate their affairs if yours is in a state of turmoil and disunity," she added.

Speaking of the national political forecast, Mrs Roosevelt—an ardent booster of Adlai Stevenson—said she believes Mr Stevenson is a "dead duck" politically. She said it's too early to know who will run on the Democrat's ticket in 1960, but she quickly added, "If Dick Nixon runs, I hope he (the Democrat) wins.

Mrs Roosevelt was in the city as the main speaker for the "Bonds for Israel" banquet in the Shamrock Hilton Wednesday night.

During the banquet a group of pickets, reportedly from the White Citizens' Council, paraded in front of the hotel entrance in protest of Mrs Roosevelt speaking in the city. The widow of the former president said, however, that she did not know that the picket line was formed until after she had completed her speech.

About 9:15 p m, the lone man in the seven-person picket line was beaten by a reporter for the Houston Post when the picket, who wore a Confederate Army cap, referred to Mrs Roosevelt as a "Jew lover." Later the segregationist cursed the newsman and called him a "no good ——— Jew."

The reporter hit the picket twice and sent him scurrying away in his automobile.

One of the placards borne by the race haters read: "NAACP Officials Unwelcome."

Dispute on Civil Rights Bill Is a Shame, Mrs. FDR Says

Herald Mon. 6-17-57 Miami Fla

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK — It seems a pity that there should be a rift between people who should stand together in getting the civil rights bill through the House of Representatives without crippling amendments.

ELEANOR

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.) may have thought that by his letter he was helping the cause, but judging from the reaction it received, the letter seems to have created violent antagonism.

I know nothing about the pros and cons of this difficulty, but I feel that anyone who is genuinely interested in getting these House and Senate bills passed should avoid any possible antagonism of those who support them.

The proposed amendments must be defeated or the bills will have no value at all. The bills are not very strong, but if the amendments are accepted, the legislation will be completely useless.

★ ★ ★

ALL WOMEN must be proud of the fact that it was a woman scientist, Rose R. Ichelson, director of research at St. Luke's and Children's Medical Center in Philadelphia, who is reported to have succeeded in isolating and cultivating a germ responsible for multiple sclerosis.

Her findings have to be proved and experiments will have to be made, of course, but she has given hope to a great many people who have felt they were incurable once they were stricken with this disease.

Of course, the cure must still be found, but once the cause of the disease has been isolated, one feels much more certain that the remedy soon will be discovered.

★ ★ ★

I WENT to Boston to attend commencement exercises at Brandeis University.

Former President Harry Truman made the commencement address, and for those of us interested in constitutional government and the powers of the presidency it was particularly interesting.

Mr. Truman made it clear that the president's position is different from that of any other head of state and that there were great powers of leadership inherent in the position as it has been developed.

The nicest touch of the whole day came at the luncheon when President Sachar of Brandeis presented Mr. Truman with two bibs and a most adorable dachshund, with an academic cap on its head, for the former president's new grandchild. I hope that the dog in a few years will be one of Clifton Truman Daniel's favorite toys!

MRS. ROOSEVELT WARNS ON SOVIET

New York

Back From Visit, She Sees Urgent Need to Counter Moscow's Diplomacy

New York Times

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt returned yesterday to New York from a twenty-five-day tour of the Soviet Union with a warning about the urgent need for Americans to counter the Soviet diplomatic offensive.

At a press conference at New York International Airport at Idlewild, Queens after her arrival, Mrs. Roosevelt described the Soviet Union as "a going concern that cannot be defeated by military force.

"We've got to beat it by being far better than they are," she said.

To make a successful appeal to the world against the Soviet Union's persistent and carefully conducted diplomacy, Americans need greater knowledge and understanding of that country's background and motives, Mrs. Roosevelt declared.

"As a people we know remarkably little and understand less" about the Russians, she said.

To achieve better understanding of the Russians, Mrs. Roosevelt advocated that Americans "study history as you have never studied it before," she also urged "greater interchange" with Russia, "and much greater confidence in ourselves."

Silent on Interviews

The wife of the late President declined to give details about her two-and-three-quarter-hour interview with Nikita S. Khrushchev, leader of the Soviet Communist party.

"I went as a journalist and I am going to write articles about the interview myself," she said. She went to the Soviet Union as the representative of The New York Post and United Features.

Stories about the conflict over school integration in Little Rock, Ark., and in Kentucky, were the only news about the United States printed in Soviet papers while she was there, Mrs. Roosevelt said with a touch of bitterness.

Mrs. Roosevelt deplored the fact that "in the twentieth century we in the United States had to have something like that happen to shame us before the world."

Asked for her opinion about the integration situation, she replied, "the only solution to the problem is to obey the law."

Dr. A. David Gurewitsch, medical director of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled in Manhattan and of Blythedale Hospital in Valhalla, N. Y., and Miss Maureen Corr accompanied Mrs. Roosevelt on the trip. Dr. Gurewitsch, who speaks Russian, was helpful as an interpreter, but went primarily to study health services in the So-

Mrs. F.D.R.'s Dilemma

Afro-American p. 15

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has apparently run into one of those rough days according to her "My Day" column in the Monday issue of the Scripps-Howard press when she stated that the reporters gave her a hard time on her recent visit to Texas.

Baltimore, Md.

In her article Mrs. Roosevelt says, "I was in Texas when a court hearing was being heard on the speed for compliance with the Supreme Court's order on desegregation of schools. This led the press to ask me a number of questions which it was unfortunate for me to have to answer, particularly since I feel that my attitude and belief on this question have been so well known."

Sat. 6-8-57

This is probably Mrs. Roosevelt's main difficulty. Neither the anti-desegregation people of Texas nor her friends on the opposite side of the fence know exactly where Mrs. Roosevelt stands.

On the one hand she has appeared to be a great liberal and forthright on most questions affecting the race as evidenced by her membership on the executive board of the NAACP, her resignation from the DAR for their insult to Marian Anderson and her smashing of tradition by entertaining the followers of Mrs. Bethune annually during her sojourn in the White House.

But under the present circumstances she has expressed opposition to the Powell Amendment to the Public Schol Construction Bill, which would deprive those states which defy the Supreme Court desegregation ruling of sharing these funds.

This amendment was designed to put the teeth in the Supreme Court ruling by hitting the recalcitrant states in the pocketbook where it would hurt. In short, Mrs. Roosevelt appears to both her friends and her hecklers as a person who is opposed to law breaking but is timid at calling the police. No wonder the Texas press gave her a rough time.

viet Union, Mrs. Roosevelt said Miss Corr is her secretary.

Associated Press

RETURNS FROM RUSSIA: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt conversing with reporters at Idlewild Airport yesterday.

Russians Slowed Down For Mrs. FDR

Herald P.I.C. Miami, Fla.

Fri. 9-6-57

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

MOSCOW — We arrived in Moscow Tuesday evening, and I was struck by the number of planes on the ground, most of them two-engine craft but far more than one would see coming into New York's Idlewild or La Guardia airports.

FALL FEATURAMA FESTIVAL

We were met by a most efficient tourist guide who had two cars waiting. An assistant took our baggage while our special guide, Mrs. Anna Lavroa, went in the car with us, pointing out various things of interest on the way from the airport.

-Herald Staff Photo by Ray Fisher

Mrs. Roosevelt

. . . touring Russia

She said she had seen my husband at Yalta and that they very much liked my granddaughter, Kate Roosevelt, and found her well educated, very pretty and very nice To be remembered so long is a real compliment, I think.

On the first part of our trip into town we merely crawled along the road until one member of our party decided that perhaps they were going so slowly because of my age.

So we queried the guide on the speed limit and discovered we might go somewhat faster. This we did, shortening considerably our trip into town.

Each of us has different first impressions of Moscow. Mine are of the tremendous amount of building going on in the two sides of the city — one through which we passed in driving into town and one through which we drove after dinner Tuesday night.

The Kremlin, lighted up, is most impressive when you see it for the first time at night. The moon is on the wane, but it was very brilliant Tuesday night, and Red Square looked very beautiful.

We got out of the car and looked into the windows of a department store which covers three blocks on one side of the square. Prices seemed to us to be very high, but certain things aren't so expensive at the tourist rate of exchange. And, of course, the real cost of living must be figured in relation to the amount people earn.

Mon. 9-30-57

Herald Tribune photo by Morris Warman

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at Idlewild Airport yesterday

Herald-Tribune, New York, N.Y.

Mrs. Roosevelt In, Says Force Can't Beat Reds

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt returned yesterday from a twenty-five-day visit to the Soviet Union. She said the United States can triumph over the Russians, not by force but only by being "far better than they are."

Arriving at Idlewild Airport, Mrs. Roosevelt was accompanied by her secretary, Miss Maureen Corr, and Dr. A. David Gurewitsch, director of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled, 400 First ave.

Mrs. Roosevelt called for "a greater understanding" between ourselves an dthe Russians and "much greater confidence in ourselves." She advised students of Russian affairs to "study history as you have never studied it before."

She described Communist party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev, whom she met in a two and three-quarter hour interview, as a "strong personality, an articulate person, a worker and one who genuinely feels that communism is the wave of the future."

38a 1957

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

MRS. F.D.R. EXPLAINS

Why Russians Don't Have Private Farms

Herald p. 1 Section E

Fri. 10-18-57

Miami, Fla.

38a

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK — Agriculture is basic to the life of nearly all great countries, but in the Soviet Union it is very important indeed because so many people have to be fed.

Mrs. Roosevelt

So, the Soviets decided to do away with agriculture run on a private basis.

This was not very difficult to put across with the employes of large estates. They were serfs accustomed to doing what they were told to do and quite willing to continue along these lines.

But there were peasants who had risen to owning their own land and some difficulty was experienced with these people.

The first effort was to establish collective farms and now the second experiment is in state farms.

My first excursion into an agricultural area was to see a state farm 28 kilometers outside of Moscow. It is called Lesnie Poljana, which means Prairie Among the Forest.

Two thousand acres are under cultivation and the farm produces milk and milk cows for breeding purposes. The name of the breed is Holmogor, and the farm has 550 pedigreed cattle in all, 226 of which are milking.

All feed for the cattle is raised right on the farm and only a concentrate is bought from outside.

Two hundred and thirty people work on the farm all year round and about 20 extras are hired in summertime. The milk is shipped in cans to institutions only.

Women work in the cow barns and much of the milking is done by hand, although they also have machines.

The beef cattle do not look to me as well fattened as ours look and certainly meat in the Soviet Union is not as tender as ours, probably because they don't hang their meat as long. Whether this is because the old type of refrigeration is not adequate, I cannot tell.

But even chickens are usually freshly killed and therefore, are not as tender as ours. One rarely has a roast chicken. It is always boiled or minced in croquettes or used in soup in some way.

★ ★ ★

Houses Are Overcrowded

ON THE STATE farm I asked if I might go into one of the worker's homes and I was told that at the lunch hour it would be possible. So they took me to one of the newly built homes right across the street from some of the old ones.

I tried to get over to get a look into the latter and was promptly told they were not as good because the families did not have separate entrances.

I realized that several families probably lived in the same room, for there seemed to be a good many people pouring out of these houses.

The new house had a good-sized plot of ground around it, which was surrounded by a fence. The house consisted of a little entry which held for the most part winter shoes and winter coats hanging on nails along the wall.

Then down a little corridor on the left there was a small kitchen. This not only had the traditional wood stove, but there was a one-plate electric burner.

Our hostess, who was one of the workers with the dairy cattle, took us into the one other room of the cottage. A dining table stood in the middle of it, with some chairs around it. There were two beds on opposite walls and one sofa bed on the third. There also was a TV set and a radio and one or two extra chairs.

The room was horribly overcrowded, as you can imagine, and it evidently was used for sleeping, eating and living.

I asked the woman whether she had running water in the house and was told "no," but she did not have to carry it from too far away. By another year, she hoped, they would have it piped into the house.

The house was immaculately clean but they still had an outside toilet. This woman earned 800 rubles ($80) a month and her husband, who works in a factory nearby, made about 1,000 rubles ($100) a month. On the whole, they seemed fairly well off.

★ ★ ★

This Is a State Farm

A STATE FARM differs from a collective farm in that all the employes on a state farm are paid a salary by the state.

They are given a house and a small plot of land, which they cultivate on their own. The manager of a state farm is appointed by the state.

Of course, a state farmhand does not take the risk that a collective farmer does if the year is a poor one, but a collective farmer, as you will see when I describe a collective farm, in a good year can raise his income considerably.

Mrs. R. Sees Texas Cows In Russia

Herald, Miami, Fla.

P. 9A Sat. 10-19-57

38a

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

When we went down to Tashkent we visited a collective farm, and there in Central Asia cotton was the main crop. The collective farm was called the Usbeckistan Farm, and the financial organization was as follows:

MRS. FDR

Seven per cent of the total made on the farm goes to the government in payment of taxes; seven per cent is taken from the collective and is divided among capital reserve, hospital and welfare services, amortization and the individual incomes that go to the members of the collective.

This particular farm, while it had cotton as its main crop, also had cattle for meat and for milk. It had 1,160 houses and 1,700 able people for work. Twelve different nationalities were represented in these families.

We were shown one of the old houses on the farm as well as one of the new ones. There was still no running water in the houses but there was electricity.

Each farmer, annually received 30 pounds of meat, a certain amount of grain, and 150 pounds of potatoes. And he is allowed to plant and own the products from 0.15 hectares of land, and he can have one cow.

He can sell on the free market whatever he does not need for his family. The cow's food comes from the collective.

The manager of the collective farm is chosen by a board of directors. He acts as chairman and after a year he reports on his work. If it is satisfactory, he is allowed to continue.

The board of directors is selected by the members of the collective and its size depends on the size of the farm.

One little item may be of interest to those Americans who know a breed of cow called Santa Gertrudes which comes from the King Ranch in Texas.

Some of these cows were sent to the Soviet Union a few years ago and I was told they had disappeared and nobody knew what had happened to them.

When I asked about them at the ministry of agriculture, I discovered that they were living and thriving in the southern part of the Ukraine and that the minister himself took a special interest in them.

I think we have to realize that just as we ourselves would show the best we have to foreigners, these two farms were probably better than the average, perhaps even pilot projects.

But the mere fact that they exist means that more and more will develop along the same lines.

When things do well, it is safe to assume that they are going to be duplicated as quickly and as often as possible in the U.S.S.R.

What A Difference 40 Years Makes!

Today Education In Russia Is Free

Ex-First Lady Notes Contrasts With Czarists' 10 Pct. Literacy

380

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

New York, Oct. 15.—Forty years ago, before the revolution in the Soviet Union, only about 10 per cent of the people could read and write. Today education is free.

It is a little difficult to divide Soviet education and health and social welfare into completely separate departments because the training of a doctor comes under education and certain medical institutes come under social welfare.

Actually, education starts in the first year of a child's life. From the time he is born the mother takes the child to the district center once a month for medical attention and is trained herself in ways of exercising and training her baby. Then the baby goes to a nursery, after that to a kindergarten.

May Go to Technical School

From the kindergarten the child begins seven- or 10-year-school. At 14, when he completes seven-year-school, the child may decide to take a technical education. Here there may be three or four years of training, leading toward some kind of a skilled job. A nurse, for instance, would have seven years and three or four more in specialized training.

If a child goes on to 10-year-school, he then must make up his mind whether he wishes to be an engineer, an architect, a teacher, or a lawyer. Five years are needed to prepare for a chosen profession.

Must Give State 3 Years

If the child decides to be a doctor, he must have six years, after which three years are given to the State, wherever the State decides. At present, though, an effort is made to consult the wishes of the student. After that, the doctor may specialize, and higher examinations must be taken.

Anyone who goes to technical school for three or four years may take an examination if he decides to go on to a university.

Visited Moscow University

In Moscow, I visited Moscow University, a new building with a tall tower that gives a beautiful view of the city. There is a separate building for engineering and for other facilities.

In the 1955-57 term there were 22,000 enrolled in the university, 16,000 on full-time and 6,000 in correspondence or evening courses.

In the country as a whole, there are 1,800,065 enrolled in 765 universities and colleges. Students are divided as follows:

Gets Subsistence Grant

Engineering, science and architecture, transport and communication operators, agronomists, economics and law, teacher training, medicine, and sports. There are 3,800 technical institutions.

A student is granted 290 rubles ($29) to live as a student for the first year and 780 rubles in the higher grades. Twenty-one rubles pays for a room and three rubles, three kopecks for a meal, three meals a day.

My main impression of Soviet education was the fact that the pattern laid down in Moscow is actually carried out throughout the whole country. Nurseries exist everywhere—on State farms, collective farms, and in factories. So do the kindergartens; so do the schools.

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Actually, in a country as big as the U.S.S.R. with a varied population, there have to be educational adjustments in various parts of the nation. Each republic, they told me, is independent.

Local Language Taught

In many cases, where the language is different, the schools teach the local language, with Russian as the second language. I will tell you how this is accomplished in Tashkent, in the Republic of Uzbekistan, which is as far as I could get from Moscow.

The organization of education, medicine, or social welfare is much the same everywhere. In Tashkent, as I went through an academy of music, I was told they had 30 schools of music in the Uzbek Republic. Specializing in music at the academy requires five years of training.

This academy has 350 students and 150 teachers. Its purpose is to seek out young people gifted in music to become teachers or enter into any of the many musical careers open to them throughout the Soviet Union, where there are many orchestras. Music is provided in the amusement parks and in many of the city squares.

Academy Has Orchestra

I was told that 40 years ago there were no music schools and the music of the area was handed down from generation to generation. While the music of all countries now is taught, the playing of national instruments is still preserved.

This particular academy in Tashkent has a philharmonic orchestra with two divisions, and the State provides 6,000,000 rubles a year to run the academy. The academy is not only interested in music, however. There are 30 theaters in the Republic of Uzbekistan, providing employment for youngsters who take drama.

A new development in the U.S.S.R. school system is the boarding school. I went to visit one in Tashkent. Here children enroll as they leave kindergarten, going home to their families on the weekends.

I surmise these boarding schools are established largely for political reasons, to control the thought of young people. But I was told they were set up to make life easier for the families because, as yet, housing is difficult and, since all the women work, it is not easy to look after the children at home.

Interested In Research

There are 12 boarding schools in Tashkent and 19 in the whole Uzbek Republic, as well as 85 orphanages for the very needy. The Republic has 72,000 teachers.

Samarkand, near Tashkent, is a very old city. The oldest part was destroyed and only the ruins are left, but much is being restored and some of the colors of the old mosaics have remained brilliant.

In Samarkand, there are 41 schools with 26,000 pupils. They have 16,000 students in four colleges and 1,400 students in the medical institutes. They have six scientific research institutes.

I would like to stress the fact that the Government of the U.S.S.R. is interested in research in every possible field and the advances being made are due to the fact that both money and men are available to these research institutes.

Samarkand is the center of a great agricultural district. It also has factories. Some make cinema apparatus, but they concentrate on the food industry and spare parts for agricultural machinery.

I went through a Samarkand hospital where 260 children suffered from bone tuberculosis and had come from throughout the district.

Engineers Get Top Pay

In Tashkent, I went through a factory that makes cotton and thread and employs 18,000 workers, of whom 75 per cent are women. The average factory wage is 750 rubles ($75) a month. But for engineers the wage is 1,200 to 2,000 rubles a month and the chief engineer who showed us around makes 2,500 a month.

The factory runs on three shifts and, while I was assured that the air is kept free from lint, I was not convinced that this was done to the point of absolute safety.

This will give you some idea of the extent of the organization of education and of the way health, education, and social welfare all impinge on each other.

All Planned In Moscow

It is well to bear in mind that everything in the Soviet Union is planned in Moscow and carried out along much the same plan in every part of the country, except for minor adjustments that may be absolutely essential. But whatever form is adopted, it is compulsory.

There were many questions in my mind that could not be answered in my short stay in the Soviet Union. I am trying, however, to give you a picture of conditions there as they are today. But, remember, we have to look at this from the point of view of people who had very little of either education or medical care in the days before the revolution.

Backgrounds Different

There are many things that Americans would get very little out of and would resent, because our background and opportunities have been entirely different. But it is a mistake not to recognize what is happening in the U.S.S.R. so that we may be better prepared to meet the challenge and show the real gains that can be made in a free country to the benefit of the world.

Mrs. FDR Lauds Bill On Rights

Lexington Herald Chicago, Ill. Sat. 11-3-57

NEW YORK — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said last week that the biggest achievement of President Eisenhower's second term has been the passage of the Civil Rights bill.

Praising the administration for the passage of this controversial legislation, the former First Lady stated that "it may not be all that some of us would like it to be, but it is a beginning — a step in the right direction—and therefore a great achievement."

Mrs. Roosevelt made this statement in her monthly question-and-answer column in the current issue of McCall's magazine. Asked to name the worst mistake of the President's second administration, Mrs. Roosevelt pointed to foreign policy.

She said, "The great mistakes have been, I think, in the area of foreign affairs. I think real statesmanship and foresight might have averted the Suez crisis, from which so many other difficulties have stemmed."

Mrs. Roosevelt Hits Demo Leadership

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga. Wed. 10-23-57

WASHINGTON, — (INS) — Eleanor Roosevelt declared Sunday that the Democratic party's leadership in Congress has been "poor."

Asked if she meant Senate Majority leader Lyndon B. Johnson she replied that Johnson is one of the "ablest" meneuverers "but I see no real decisions as to what the Democratic party stood for.."

The former first lady made the comments in a television interview on "Meet The Press" (NBC), devoted mostly to her recent 27-day trip to Russia and private, three-hour interview with Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev.

She said she thinks Khrushchev was "honest" when he told her war is "unthinkable" because it would mean mass destructon. But she said there is "no basis at prescent for "cooperative coexistence between the West and Communist worlds."

She said the Russians have made up their minds they "can win what they want without war, and the U. S. must therefore prove to the neutral nations that democracy can do more for them than communism in order to keep them out of the Red sphere.

Asked if President Eisenhower is providing proper leadership in this respect, she replied: "I can't tell." But she added that the "people have not been curious enough to bring about the right kind of leadership."

She described the administration as a "businessman's administration that has had "more concern about financial questions' thn other matters.

Then, in answer to a question she said: "Our (Democratic) leadership (in Congress) has been poor."

Mrs. Roosevelt Leaves For Russia

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left today by plane for her first visit to Russia.

She said before boarding a plane at Idlewild that she would visit Red China if she were granted a visa.

Sat. 8-31-57

Mrs. Roosevelt termed ridiculous Dulles' previous ban on travel to Red China. She said she had always wanted to go there and would go if she were granted a visa.

She said she was going to Russia as a journalist to learn all the facts she could and that she expected to speak to top government officials.

Eleanor Roosevelt Comments on Saud

Des Moines, Iowa

New York City—(CNS)—Eleanor Roosevelt, in her column, "My Day" aired her views on the controversial subject of King Saud and his treatment here in New York. Said she:

"There is undoubtedly great feeling in this country against certain policies and practices which have been prevalent in King Saud's kingdom. To many of us, the King does not seem to have exercised his powers to raise the standard of living of his people, to get rid, at this late date, of all slavery in his kingdom, or to have been a factor for reasonable and peaceful solutions in the troubles of the Middle East.

"He has traveled enough in the Western world to realize that a nation like Israel, once created by the United Nations and having existed for 10 years, cannot be wiped off the map. He could understand, too, the difficulties of the other Arab states and he might have been a force for peaceful solutions.

Herald 2-9-57

"All these may be the reasons why President Eisenhower has felt that through personal contact he might accomplish better results. Had the President told us all of his reasons, I think we would have respected them, even if we might have been doubtful he could achieve the results he hoped for."

Race Hate Incidents Harm U.S.

Herald p. 14E

Miami 38a

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

CHICAGO — I was nothing less than shocked to read the newspaper account of how a crowd in Birmingham, Ala., attacked a white man after he had been sitting beside a Negro couple in a railroad station waiting room.

ELEANOR

When he left the station the attackers followed him, beating and threatening him. And after escaping in his car in a shower of stones, the court fined him for reckless driving!

I wonder if people who take part in this kind of thing realize that such news is flashed around the world and they have made enemies for their country in the whole of Asia and Africa. No diplomatic representation or expressions of good will can wipe out the effects of one story of this kind.

Mrs. FDR Says Equality In U.S. Vital To Peace

Call Fri. 2-15-57 P. 2a

Kansas City Mo.

BROOKLYN.— (ANP)— Mrs Franklin D. Roosevelt told more than 1,000 persons at a scholarship benefit program at the Concord Baptist Church last week that the hope for achieving a permanent world peace through the United Nations is fraught with responsibility.

The "First Lady of the World" said that while the U.N. furnished the machinery, the success or failure depends upon peoples of the world accepting each other without compromise. Pointing to the United States, she declared that, because of its responsibility of leadership, it behooves America to get its house in order.

"People learn by examplee," she stated. "What we do here in every community is the picture we paint."

This in her opinion, is why Americans cannot treat their minorities unequally, if they expect to win on their side the two-hirds of the world's peoples in India, Asia and Africa.

The presentation of Mrs. Roosevelt was by the Brooklyn Chapter, American Association for the United Nations, Mrs. Harry Schoenfield, president, and the Sisterhood of Concord, Mrs. Hortense Brahm, president. Warren Marr II served as general chairman.

Ministers participating were: Dr. Gardner C. Taylor, host pastor; the Revs. J. Archie Hargraves, Nazarene Congregational Church and Henry B. Hucles III, St. George Episcopal church.

Special music was presented by Samuel Dilworth, pianist, and Jimmy Randolph from Carmen Jones.

U.S. Government Can't Run Schools, And We Do Need Federal Aid: Mrs. R

Herald Sun. 3-26-57 Miami, Fla. P. 1-C

38a

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

EN ROUTE TO MOROCCO—An old cliche, which says that if you accept money from the federal government for such things as construction of school buildings, the federal government will control the schools, is haunting Congress again.

MRS. F.D.R

This false fear has always frightened people all over the country and, as a result, frightened their representatives in Congress. More and more people are coming to realize, however, that you cannot educate children without schoolrooms and teachers.

When I was in Washington a short time ago, I found the school situation all over the United States being discussed. There is no doubt that a public school crisis exists.

★ ★ ★

I HAVE BEEN traveling widely throughout the country, and if our representatives in Congress think that the shortage of schoolrooms is to be encountered only here and there, they are very much mistaken. Everywhere I went I had only to mention schools and children's education to get an immediate reaction.

At one place a mother told me that her child, just entering school, would — unless a miracle made school building possible—have only two hours a day in school for the next seven years.

Our forefathers realized the importance of education to a nation, and particularly the importance of an educated people in a democracy, but we seem to have forgotten what sacrifices they made to start a public school system in this country.

★ ★ ★

IT IS A SHAME that the country with the biggest national income, far exceeding that of any other nation in the world, is unable to provide today's children with an opportunity for education.

It seems to me that we had better review what happened to an administration bill introduced into congress last year at the request of Marion B. Folsom, secretary of health, education and welfare, with the President's backing.

It was introduced by representative Stuyvesant Wainwright II, New York Republican. But in the debate on the legislation he said:

"I should never have introduced that bill. The federal government should stay out of local school districts . . . Historical analysis proves that the evil leaders of each and every totalitarian state, on seizing control of that state, first put their paws on the educational system of that nation. You can say that it cannot happen here, and maybe it cannot. But let us not give it a chance to happen here."

What a courageous man to pilot such a bill through Congress for the administration! He fell before the old cliche, not before reality, for there was nothing in the bill that could have given the federal government control over the curriculum of any school. All it provided was help to build schools.

My Day

Herald

South May Lead North On Races

Thurs. 4-18-57 Miami, Fla. P. 23e

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

LOS ANGELES — I was interested in the story and picture in the New Orleans Times-Picayune recently which told of three ministers and a priest presenting a statement to New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and the city of New Orleans asking for a positive program to bring about desegregation on the city buses and street cars.

ELEANOR

The statement was signed by 41 ministers and priests, most of them white, and the total signers numbered 125.

It is encouraging to see these little straws in the wind coming up from the South. It may well be that something will be done more quickly in the South in the matter of complete desegregation than in some of our northern states.

★ ★ ★

AN EXCELLENT article on the increase in urbanization in our country appeared in one of our metropolitan newspapers and to this was added some pertinent information by D. A. Williams, administrator of the Soil Conservation Service of the Agriculture Department.

Mr. Williams said an estimated million acres of productive land are converted to non-agricultural uses every year. The Soil Conservation Service has estimated that in the last 15 years more than 17 million acres of the best farm lands have been converted to such use.

"The projection of the present rate indicates that an additional 27 million acres of productive land will be withdrawn from agriculture by 1975," it was pointed out. "Once buried under steel or concrete, productive land, for all practical purposes, is never again available for agricultural production."

Williams points out that it is impossible to stop urbanization but we must be concerned as to where urbanization takes place. He feels that "the growth of our cities, our highways and our industries should be directed away from our most productive lands."

There often are alternative areas to be considered for urban development, and if we do not choose the least productive areas for this purpose, we will find ourselves at some time in the future unable to produce sufficient food for our increasing population.

Because we have farm surpluses now does not mean we will have them forever, particularly since our population is growing so rapidly.

We have had, comparatively speaking, cheap food in our country. The average family spends one-fourth of its income on food, whereas in some other countries 40 to 80 per cent of income goes into food. The availability of relatively inexpensive foods has been one of the greatest factors in our industrial growth.

This is a note of warning to which we should now pay attention.

7 Segregationist Pickets March at Mrs. FDR's Hotel

Herald Miami, Fla. P. 21-A

Fri. 5-24-57

HOUSTON—(AP)—Seven pickets favoring racial segregation marched outside a Houston hotel as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke at a "Bond for Israel" rally of 500 persons.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she knew about them but she did not otherwise comment.

MRS. ROOSEVELT HITS GOVT. STAND ON INFORMATION

Herald Sat. 4-20-57 38a

Birm. Ala. P. 8

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. — (INS) — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt Wednesday criticized the Federal government for not keeping the American people informed in the field of Foreign Affairs.

The widow of America's only four-time president said in an address at the United Auto workers convention in Atlantic City that the government "has not been very articulate in the information it has given us, particularly in the area of foreign affairs."

Noting that the United States, as a result of the middle East crisis "has taken on the responsibility alone for keeping the peace of the world," she said:

NO RIGHT TO

"Now this is a great responsibility It is greater than we have ever carried before, and we are a democracy, and have no right to take on these responsibilities and then let our people be unconscious of the great responsibility that they as people in a Democracy now carry."

Mrs. Roosevelt said American Workers "have a responsibiltiy to know what goes on in the world, to make a study of where we stand and to make sure that our government does not fall short and leave a vacuum in which the only possible way to have it filled would be by the Soviet Union."

SOVIET UNION

"This is the struggle that we now face," the speaker added. "Will we fill the position of leadership in the United Nations, in the world that we have assumed or will it be taken over by the Soviet Union?

UAW president Walter Reuther presented the Union's 20th Anniversary freedom award to Mrs. Roosevelt for "distinguished service to mankind." The award was made last year but she was unable to accept it in person at that time.

Talking to reporters earlier she said President Eisenhower had been "about as aggressive as a little meek rabbit" on civil rights.

Asked about a segregation suit now being tried in Houston, she said: "I'm not a Texan. I'm not here to tell Texans what to do. Now, if you ask me what I believe—I believe in obeying the law."

Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary received a telegram, addressed to the former first lady, which said: "Trains and planes are going each way. Goodbye Elinor, you've had your day."

It was signed: "The Texas Citizens' Council."

The same message, including the misspelling of Mrs. Roosevelt's first name, appeared on the placard carried by one of the seven pickets.

In her speech at the bond rally, Mrs. Roosevelt said "strengthening Israel is one of the ways to build peace in the Middle East."

She described the Eisenhower administration's policy in the Middle East as "negligent."

Mrs. Roosevelt's Talk Picketed By Segregationists

Courier-Journal Fri. 5-24-57 Louisville, Ky.

Houston, May 23 (AP)—Seven pickets favoring racial segregation marched outside a Houston hotel last night as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt spoke at a "Bonds for Israel" rally of 500 persons. P. 4

At a news conference earlier she said President Eisenhower had been "about as aggressive as a little meek rabbit" on civil rights.

Asked about a segregation suit now being tried in Houston, she said:

"I'm not a Texan. I'm not here to tell Texans what to do. Now, if you ask me what I believe—I believe in obeying the law."

Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary received a telegram, addressed to the former First Lady, which said:

"Trains and planes are going each way. Good-by Elinor, you've had your day."

It was signed: "The Texas Citizens' Council."

Mrs. F.D.R.'s Dilemma

Afro-American WASHINGTON

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has apparently run into one of those rough days according to her "My Day" column in the Monday issue of the Scripps-Howard press when she stated that the reporters gave her a hard time on her recent visit to Texas.

Baltimore Md.

In her article Mrs. Roosevelt says, "I was in Texas when a court hearing was being heard on the speed for compliance with the Supreme Court's order on desegregation of schools. This led the press to ask me a number of questions which it was unfortunate for me to have to answer, particularly since I feel that my attitude and belief on this question have been so well known."

Sat. 6-8-57

This is probably Mrs. Roosevelt's main difficulty. Neither the anti-desegregation people of Texas nor her friends on the opposite side of the fence know exactly where Mrs. Roosevelt stands. P. 15

On the one hand she has appeared to be a great liberal and forthright on most questions affecting the race as evidenced by her membership on the executive board of the NAACP, her resignation from the DAR for their insult to Marian Anderson and her smashing of tradition by entertaining the followers of Mrs. Bethune annually during her sojourn in the White House.

But under the present circumstances she has expressed opposition to the Powell Amendment to the Public Schol Construction Bill, which would deprive those states which defy the Supreme Court desegregation ruling of sharing these funds.

This amendment was designed to put the teeth in the Supreme Court ruling by hitting the recalcitrant states in the pocketbook where it would hurt. In short, Mrs. Roosevelt appears to both her friends and her hecklers as a person who is opposed to law breaking but is timid at calling the police. No wonder the Texas press gave her a rough time.

My Day

News & Observer

By Eleanor Roosevelt

Sat. 8-11-57

HYDE PARK, N. Y., August 9 — I had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Adlai Stevenson for a short time the other afternoon, just after he had faced a mammoth press conference. It is rather hard, I think, to be asked so many questions about situations in the United States on the first day you are back here from travels abroad. You have hardly had time to catch your breath before you are asked about things that you have only seen reported in foreign papers, which naturally do not cover them as completely as do our papers, and it is extremely difficult to be prepared to answer.

I agreed entirely, however, with what Mr. Stevenson said on the Civil Rights Bill. He would prefer to have even the little that will come with this bill than to have nothing.

In his travels, he has had the opportunity to see the change that is coming about, even in the last two years, among peoples in many areas of the world. As in Central Africa, for instance. Mr. Stevenson knows, therefore, how important what we do here is for our position in countries where people want freedom and respect as human beings and a chance to grow. Little as this Civil Rights Bill seems to do, it will at least give us some chance of growing, in this country.

I think the Southern senators, led by Senator Lyndon Johnson and Senator Richard Russell. have won a costly victory — because this fight for civil rights is not going to stop. If the people of Africa are on the move, the people of the United States are also on the move. Our people are not going to be satisfied with crumbs such as this Civil Rights Bill gives them. It will bring us no peace, but it is better to pass it and see what we can achieve with even this slight change.

I hear from Washington, however, that the Republicans, in all probability, will just let it lie over and do nothing, and then will try to use it as an issue in the next campaign. Vice-President Richard Nixon and Senator Johnson both are trying to fool the people, white and colored people alike. It will be interesting to see how far they both succeed.

12 State Talks On Bias Urged By Harriman

ALBANY, Nov. 6.—Gov. Harriman announced today that he and Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan have invited the governors of ten other states with effective anti-discrimination procedures, to meet in New York City on Dec. 12, for a mutual exchange of information on the operation of their respective programs, and for a discussion of ways to improve such programs against discrimination in all of its aspects.

Gov. Harriman said that representatives of the twelve states will meet in Detroit on Nov. 18 to arrange an agenda for the December meeting of the governors. The governors are McNichols of Colorado, Ribicoff of Connecticut, Furcolo of Massachusetts, Freeman of Minnesota, Meyner of New Jersey, Holmes of Oregon, Leader of Pennsylvania, Roberts of Rhode Island, Rosellini of Washington and Thomson of Wisconsin, in addition to Govs. Harriman and Williams.

In a telegram of invitation it was noted that although the principal emphasis of the civil rights issue in recent months has been focused on the South, states in the North have their own special problems pressing for solutions.

"We believe," the telegram read, "that all the states with effective laws for the protection of these minorities should at this time assess the situation in the light of what they have accomplished to date, and outline a program that will accelerate the fulfillment of their objectives."

desegregation

News + Courier
Tues. 6-11-57
P. 9-a

The Deep South Says

Charleston, S.C.

NEVER!

Thousands of articles have been published in recent months on the tense and critical problem of segregation in the Deep South! Unfortunately, many of these articles are biased, slanted, often fragmentary reports tailored to fit any number of prejudices without respect for fact or the truth!

It is for this reason that The Saturday Evening Post sent famous prize-winning reporter John Bartlow Martin into the Deepest South with the instructions "to report what is actually happening!" What reporter Martin found will bring comfort to neither the opponents nor proponents of integration—but will bring you what we believe to be the most honest, penetrating and eye-opening look at the problem yet published in the United States!

You'll learn:

- the major, yet seldom expressed, reasons why many Southern leaders say there will "never" be desegregation in the South—and why they claim the Southern position is, in reality, more humane than what the North offers.
- how the Citizens' Council, the white instrument for segregation in the South that includes many top civic organizations, actually operates—and the big difference between the Citizens' Council and the Ku Klux Klan.
- the story behind the famous Emmett Till and Autherine Lucy cases.
- the little-understood positions of Southern leaders such as Senator James O. Eastland, former Supreme Court Justice James Byrnes, and Georgia's Herman Talmadge.
- what segregated life is really like in the hard-core deep Southern states – and why it has worked hardships not only on the Negroes, but on the whites themselves.

Don't miss this deep-digging report on the most critical social issue of our time! Get your copy of The Saturday Evening Post and read "The Deep South Says 'Never!'" by John Bartlow Martin.

Also in this issue:

Showdown with WYATT EARP

When Post writer Pete Martin got the drop on Wyatt Earp (alias actor Hugh O'Brian) and began firing questions, the famous marshal, cool as cactus juice, shot back some straight-from-the-shoulder answers that will surprise even his most devoted fans!

In this exclusive Post interview O'Brian gives you a bead on:

- the real Wyatt Earp, and why he (O'Brian) feels so close to him.
- why he has battled to keep excessive gunplay and bloodshed out of his shows.
- his off-camera life—including the plans he is making for his own romantic future.
- his attitude toward his television audience and the reason why it's 66% adult.

Be sure to read: "I Call on Wyatt Earp" by Pete Martin.

IN ALL, 8 articles, 4 stories, 2 serials, many cartoons.

Get your copy today!

38a

Desegregation!

News + Courier
Charleston S.C.

Victories— and Failures— of Citizens' Councils!

Tues. 6-25-57
P. 3-A

In this week's Saturday Evening Post, famous reporter John Bartlow Martin corrals the head men of the Citizens' Councils to dig out the real story behind such explosive items as:

- the feud between Council men Sam Engelhardt and gun-toting Ace Carter—and what effects it could have on the whole segregation movement.
- the Council's plan to ruin Alabama's Gov. Folsom.
- the part that anti-Semitism plays in the Councils.
- the charge that Councilman John Kasper is an N.A.A.C.P. "plant."
- Mississippi Council leader Patterson's claim that their "cause" is spreading North.
- the struggle in the "new" Ku Klux Klan that recently erupted in gunplay.

Don't miss "The Deep South Says 'Never!'" in this week's Saturday Evening Post.

IN ALL, 7 articles, 4 stories, 2 serials, many cartoons.

Get your copy today!

The Saturday Evening
POST
June 29, 1957 - 15¢

Magazine Tells How South Is Blocking Progress

Call P. 20
Fri. 6-28-57
Kansas City, Mo.

PHILADELPHIA. — (ANP) — The Saturday Evening Post is currently carrying a series which graphically depicts how the Citizens Council movement has been successful in blocking integration in the Deep South.

Entitled, "The Deep South Says Never," the first article tells how the first Citizens Councils was founded in Indianola in the summer of 1954. The founder's name was Robert Patterson, of Greenwood, planter and former college football player.

"At that time, desegregation seemed inevitable and not far off," the article says. "Today, in the Deep South, it seems unlikely in the foreseeable future.

"At that time the South was divided, perplexed, resigned. Today, the solid South is a fact and its resistance to desegregation is granitic."

The article speaks of Circuit Judge Thomas Brady of Brookhaven as the "intellectual father of the council movement" and quotes extensively from the jurist's book "Black Monday."

It also tells how the council outmaneuvered the NAACP in the petitioning of admission for Negroes in five Mississippi cities to white schools, the Emmett Till case, and the University of Alabama—Autherine Lucy case—all of which are examples of how the Citizens council has been constantly on the move to fight down the once rising tide of integration.

DESEGREGATION

News + Observer
Tues. 7-2-57

How long can the White Council resist the law of the land?

Raleigh, N.C.
P. 9

Famous reporter John Bartlow Martin gives you a penetrating look at the major forces in conflict over the nation's most critical social issue — and presents a stark picture of the South as it is today — and as it could be tomorrow!

In this week's Saturday Evening Post, he reports on:

- ★ The real power behind the Citizens' Councils — and their possible future.
- ★ The "wellspring" of NAACP strength.
- ★ The forces that could lead to economic suicide in the South.
- ★ How labor unions may affect the outcome of the whole issue.
- ★ The possible alliance between the Councils and the KKK.
- ★ The parts political figures like Senator Eastland and Governor Coleman, Senator Talmadge and men like Barr and Perez really play in the conflict.

Don't miss, "The Deep South Says 'Never'" in this week's Post!

38a

In all, 7 articles, 4 stories, 2 serials, many cartoons.

Get your copy today!
The Saturday Evening POST

The Saturday Evening
POST
July 6, 1957 - 15¢

Lays Action To Talks' Widening

Other 4 Governors Will Keep Date on Integration Issue

By Robert C. Albright
Staff Reporter

Members of a special mediation committee of Southern Governors last night determined to go right ahead with today's scheduled conference with President Eisenhower despite last-minute withdrawal of a deep South member of the group.

Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia, lone Democrat segregationist on the five-member negotiating group, wired Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida, newly elected chairman of the Conference of Southern Governors, he won't be here for the meeting.

Griffin based his withdrawal on the President's move to broaden today's discussion beyond the main question the Dixie Governors are interested in, getting Federal troops out of Little Rock.

Collins voiced keen disappointment at Griffin's refusal to come to Washington, but indicated the conference with the President will go on as scheduled at 12:30 p. m.

Dangerous 'Times'

"These are dangerous and critical times," the Florida Governor said before leaving Tallahassee for Washington. "If we close the barriers to discussion we just make our position more difficult."

Collins conceded the resolution setting up the mediation committee mentioned only the school issue, but said he felt individual Governors might be helpful in giving the President a clearer understanding of conditions we are facing."

Clement First to Arrive

Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee, first of the governors to arrive in Washington for the White House talks, voiced a similar view.

Said Clement: "We can't tell other nations to put down their bayonets and sit down at the conference table, and then refuse to do the same thing at home."

Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina, chairman of the negotiating committee of governors, and Maryland's Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin, only Republican member of the mediating group, similarly made it plain they intended to go ahead with the meeting. An 8 a.m. breakfast meeting of the group is tentatively scheduled to talk over the agenda in advance of the conference.

Meantime it was learned that Gov. Clement has urged Gov. Collins to aname another Governor from the deep South to replace Griffin. As things now stand the three Southern Democrats on the negotiating committee, Hodges, Clement and Collins, are all "moderates," representing the middle of the road Southern view, whereas Mr. Eisenhower's actions are staunchly championed by the lone Republican member, McKeldin.

May Pick Coleman

Clement thinks it is essential the deep South be represented as well. One of those under consideration as a Griffin replacement is said to be Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi.

Griffin had insisted from the outset that nothing would come of today's meeting, even though he agreed last Wednesday to attend it.

He based his turnabout on Mr. Eisenhower's request for a discussion of the whole school integration problem.

"The President has not agreed to discuss the only subject (use of Federal troops in Little Rock) the Committee was authorized by the Southern Governors Conference to discuss with him," Griffin wired Collins.

"I cannot accept your (Collins') suggestion that as Governor of Georgia I should undertake to discuss with the President at this meeting the operation of the public schools of Georgia.

"Therefore, I will not be present in Washington on Tuesday."

(Griffin's name was an 11th-hour entry against Collins for chairman of the Southern Governors Conference at the annual meeting in Sea Island, Ga., last week. Collins was unanimously elected, however.)

McKeldin's View

McKeldin told reporters he will be glad to discuss Maryland's integration problems and any other questions with the President. He termed Griffin's attitude "in sharp and, I believe, unhapy contrast to the position of our Conference chairman (Collins) that 'each of us will be free to discuss any phase of the integration problems cordially and respectfully'." He said he hoped Griffin "will change his mind and join with us."

Clement, on his arrival at National Airport, told newsmen he had a "plan of action" of his own to place before today's meeting, but declined to disclose it in advance.

It is probable the so-called "moderate" bloc — Hodges, Clements and Collins—will present a united front when they meet with the President this afternoon. These three Southern governors worked closely together at Sea Island, and are likely to talk over a common approach before they go to the White House.

TV's 'Segregation and the South' Pulls No Punches, Shows 'Rehearsal' During Boycott, Offers Talmadge

Constitution Mon. 6-17-57 Montgomery, Ala. P. 19

By J. P. SHANLEY

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, June 16—"Segregation and the South," the filmed documentary shown today on television, was, despite some marked technical imperfections, a balanced and impressive study of a vital national issue.

This one-hour presentation, made by the Fund for the Republic, was distilled from a mass of 35,000 feet of film. Most of the material never had been shown before; a small amount of it was from newsreels. The film covered a three-year period that began with the U.S. Supreme Court's decision ordering integration in the nation's schools on May 17, 1954.

The same subject had been previously investigated for television by the Columbia Broadcasting System's program, "See It Now." Today's production was less effective technically, it offered a more comprehensive picture of the consequences of the Supreme Court's action.

Shown as part of the American Broadcasting Co. series, called "Open Hearing," "Segregation and the South" did not gloss over the unpleasant side of the situation. It brought before its cameras and microphones several speakers, including Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, whose opposition to integration was deep rooted and unequivocal.

It covered a white student expelled from the University of Alabama as he indulged in a gratuitous and irrelevant denunciation of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. It showed meetings of the Ku Klux Klan at which anti-Negro sentiment was expressed venomously.

But the most valuable contribution made by the telecast was its placing of the entire situation in proper perspective. For, besides showing the dissension wrought by the court's order, it also presented a hopeful side. It showed a group of white and Negro students at Talladega College, in Alabama, as they discussed the problems involved in achieving integration.

The film contrasted facilities available to white and Negro children in Clarksdale, Miss. But it showed also that despite the inequalities, representatives of the white and Negro communities in that town are meeting to discuss the problem, and thus demonstrating "the beginning of interracial communication at the community level."

The telecast dealt also with the bus boycott by Negroes in Montgomery, Ala. This was one of the most effective parts of the program. At one point the severity of the theme was relieved by an amusing sequence in which a group of Negroes "rehearsed" for their first bus ride on a nonsegregated basis, with a clergyman portraying a bus driver.

Several times during the program it was emphasized that the question of equal rights was not limited to the South but had arisen also in northern communities, sometimes with violent consequences. John Secondari, who introduced the film, described it as "a progress report," commenting: "It shows how far we have come and how much further we still have to go."

The program also provided heartening statistical evidence of the progress made by integration, placing proper emphasis on the number of districts in which segregation had been eliminated without incident.

"Segregation and the South" would have been more effective if it had avoided isolated fragments of film that were of no particular significance. There were, particularly in the early stages of the program, a number of these brief and inconclusive episodes.

At one point in the program, a superintendent of schools in St. Louis said: "We feel that the pupils themselves have been the real leaders in this desegregation pattern." If there were any attempts to pursue this interesting statement there was no evidence of it on the TV screen. The program moved immediately to another scene.

But, these deficiencies were of far less consequence than the positive contributions of the program. Its writer and director, James Pack, and its producers, George M. Martin Jr. and Herbert Bernard, chose for their attention a topic of tremendous scopt and importance. In bringing it to the home screen they provided an admirably balanced, informative hour of television.

pattern picture of this "separate but equal" school monstrosity, so long and still the shrine around which the segregation diehards choose to worship. The school at Clarksdale, Mississippi was held out as an example.

It must be said that TV is making a meritorious contribution in the field of education through exposure. Hardly any one witnessed the show Sunday failed to gain modified emotions and as John Secondire, who introduced the program said — it does show truly how far we have come as well as the distance we still have to go.

'Segregation And South' On ABC Network Sunday

Call Fri. 6-14-57 Kansas City, Mo

NEW YORK. — "Segregation and the South," a full-hour documentary film study of progress and reaction in the three years since the Supreme Court ordered integration of the nation's schools, will be shown in ABC Television's "Open Hearing" Sunday, June 16. Because of the length of the film, "Open Hearing" will start one half hour early, at 3 p.m., central standard time.

The picture, made by the Fund for the Republic, traces the effects of the Court's epochal 1954 school ruling and subsequent integration orders in other fields, through the sometimes peaceful desegregation in 'fringe' communities, the rise of White Citizens' Councils and the reborn Ku Klux Klan, the Montgomery, Ala., Bus Boycott, violence and martial law in Clinton, Tenn., and the current stirrings toward interracial cooperation in even Deep South areas.

Key figures of the desegregation struggle featured in the special "Open Hearing" study include the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., Sen. Herman Talmadge (D., Ga.), Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), Thurgood Marshall, General Counsel for the NAACP. and John Kasper, leader of violent anti-integration sentiment.

"Segregation and the South" was written and directed by James Peck. Executive producer was George M. Martin, Jr. The producer was Herbert Bernard.

ABC Washington Bureau Chief John Secondari will introduce "Segregation and the South."

The first half hour of the special "Open Hearing" broadcast is in the time now occupied by the "Dean Pike" program. "Dean Pike" ended its season on June 9.

The Film, "Segregation And The South" Makes Its Debut

Daily World Thurs. 6-20-57 Atlanta Ga. P. 4

Those thousands who watched "Segregation and the South," a one hour filmed documentary report on TV last Sunday came upon an innovation at least.

The film, according to information was made by the Fund for the Republic which included a three-year period of the most interesting history in the life of this nation.

While the film was highly interesting and an educational feature as well, it must be cited as a feature fraught with mixed emotions, with periods in which the hair curls and the blood curdles.

The older TV fans who recall "Senator" Cleghorn of Southern burlesque proportions, must have already had an introduction to much of the matter seen in "Segregation in the South."

A show of its nature would have been woefully incomplete had there not been appearances of Senator Herman Talmadge, high priest of segregation, with the other end featuring Dr. M. L. King, Jr., Roy Wilkins and other high stars figuring in the Montgomery, Alabama bus crusade.

One thing the film did afford, and impressively so, was a

'No Guts' Tag Hits 4 Southern Chiefs

COLUMBIA, S.C. — (AP) — A former South Carolina governor Thursday termed "spineless" the four Southern governors who conferred Tuesday with President Eisenhower on the use of federal troops to force integration at Little Rock's Central High School in Arkansas.

"If they had any backbone, it was to support the president," former Gov. R. M. Jefferies said in an interview.

He said this of the four:

"Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida is an opportunist.

"Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee used his Tennessee National Guard to escort Negroes to a white high school" last year.

"Gov. Frank McKeldin of Maryland nominated President Eisenhower in 1952.

"Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina is not on the fence, he's on both sides of the fence."

As for Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, Jefferies said "he hasn't been as firm and positive all the way as he should have.

"However, he does represent the sovereignty of the individual American state and I want that to prevail, hell or high water."

Jefferies, now state senator from Colleton County, said "no martial law ever was declared" in Little Rock, which he viewed as a necessary preliminary to sending in federal troops.

The senator is a member of the state segregation committee that has planned most of the state's segregation legislation designed to protect the state's school system against racial integration.

TOWN HAS BROWNINGS TO FIGHT U.S. TROOPS

Submachineguns Bought By Union, S. C.

TO RESIST INTEGRATION

By The Associated Press

UNION, S. C., Oct. 6.—Union County announced Sunday it has purchased nine new Browning sub machineguns and ammunition to fight off any "invasion of United States troops" that may be sent into the area over segregation or any other matter.

State Senator John D. Long of Union said the purchase, made by the county's legislative delegation, amounted to $1,000 and included 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

Implement Arsenal

The weapons are for Sheriff J. Harold Lamb and his eight deputies to implement their present arsenal of two machineguns and two tear gas guns.

Senator Long said Sheriff Lamb had assured the county legislative delegation that his officers will fight any lawful or unlawful military or civil violation of county laws, such as those demanding school segregation.

"Anyone violating our laws," Senator Long said, indicating this included state laws, "will be arrested, jailed and treated the same as any other accused person."

Senator Long said his county expects no repetition of what he called "an invasion of Federal troops" such as Little Rock experienced. "But we're ready," he added.

Senator Long quoted Sheriff Lamb as saying that he will act unless he is ruled out of office by a presidential proclamation, war or insurrection, or by an act of the Governor.

The sheriff is a constitutional officer in South Carolina and is not easily removed from office. Governors can do it.

Right To Resist

Senator Long said, "We in Union County also feel that a private citizen not only has a right to mak ean arrest, but a right to resist—even to killing—any false arrest."

He spoke of the "horrors of Federal troops with ammunition, bayonets and clubbed guns felling unarmed civilians" in Little Rock, and said, "We don't intend to let that happen in Union."

Senator Long quoted from a 1946 United States supreme court opinion in Duncan vs. Kahanamoku, involving a conflict between military and civil jurisdiction in Hawaii right after Pearl Harbor, in which the court said in upholding the civil:

"The military should always be kept in subjection to the laws of the country . . . the law shall alone govern" and that "real or imagined threats to the public welfare" cannot be used "to abbrogate" fundamental rights of civilians.

Senator Long, an ardent states right advocate, is a Senate leader on such matters as public welfare, labor and other legislation.

Other members of the county delegation have authored many segregation legislative pieces in the house.

Union County itself rates historically as one of the most patriotic in the nation. There was no World War I draft in the county as all eligibles volunteered. Volunteers more than filled the county's World War II quotas.

Finds Life Different In New York

Rev. DeLaine Now Pastor Of Church In New Rochelle

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—The Rev. Joseph A. DeLaine, who fled from mob violence and an arrest warrant two years ago from South Carolina is now pastor of a church in this suburb of New York City.

The minister reported last week "We're doing fine now. Things are so much different here," he added.

• • •

REV. MR. DeLAINE explained that his flight from South Carolina in the face of a warrant charging he fired at some white men and in the midst of an insurance probe on the burning of his church at Lake City, S. C. had left "effects on all the family."

The minister found a haven from South Carolina mobs and race hating officials at the home of the Rt. Rev. D. Ward Nichols of New York City after fleeing north. His new congregation is the Mount Carmel AME Church. He took over his new duties here after spending several months with Bishop Nichols.

• • •

THE PASTOR'S flight from his home state was widely reported. Negro and white newspapers carried several news items on his encounter with a group of white men who were reported to have fired at the minister's home. A Buffalo, N. Y. AME Church was named for him and retired District Judge J. Waties Waring of Charleston and New York—the DeLaine-Waring Church.

Judge Waring was one of the most liberal white judges in the South. It was his decision which opened formerly all-white South Carolina Democratic Party primaries to Negro voters in 1946. He ruled also in favor of Negro litigants in school cases.

• • •

WHEN REV. MR. DeLaine left South Carolina, he was charged with spraying a car occupied by four white men with shotgun fire. He has been a refuge from arrest ever since.

REV. JOSEPH A. DeLAINE
Has New Church

The minister said he wanted to mark the car as being one from which he said shots were fired at his house. Officers reported at the time after an investigation, however, there was no evidence DeLaine's house had been fired on.

• • •

SOUTH CAROLINA officials from Governor Timmerman down are opposed to Rev. Mr. DeLaine because of his activities in the school case in Clarendon county. Said the governor, "South Carolina is well rid of this professional agitator" in caustically criticizing federal authorities for failing to order the minister's return from New York on a fugitive warrant.

The minister lived in Clarendon county before moving to Lake City in Florence county. The Clarendon Summerton school district was the scene of the school integration suit ruled on by the U. S. Supreme Court May 17. 1954 in which Rev. Mr. DeLaine had a hand.

Rev. Mr. DeLaine moved from Clarendon after his house, insured, was burned and after he lost a libel suit brought by another Negro. Soon after his flight from Lake City his church there burned. There was also insurance on the church. Insurance investigators began a probe that was never completed or conclusive.

Mixed band leaves Clemson in tizzy

Afro-American Sat. 10-26-57 Baltimore, Md.

By JOHN H. McCRAY

COLUMBIA, S.C. — It seems that while Gov. George Bell Timmerman, Jr., was deeply engrossed in backing up Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas somebody slipped a "racial mickey" over on the South Carolina chief executive.

It developed this week that there has been some "mixing" of the races at state-supported Clemson College very recently and the matter has the White Citizens Council and Klan dizzy and responsible state officials in a tizzy.

At Lake City, the small town which, two years ago, shotgunned out of the state the Rev. J. A. DeLaine of the Clarendon county school suit, a petition seeking 2,000 signatures was being circulated and scheduled to represent a formal protest and demand for an investigation of Timmerman.

38a

THE GOVERNOR has withheld comment until the petition is delivered.

The embarrassing situation grew out of the Oct. 5 game between N.C. State College and Clemson, on the latter's campus.

Carolinian

Unclear reports are that one or two colored N.C. students, members of the institution's band, made the Clemson trip and, shades of grandpa, ate, unsegregated and unmolested, with white students in the Clemson dining hall.

The WCC petition considers the incident as a "foot in the door" approach to breaking down South Carolina's segregated schools.

Sat. 10-26-57

IT DEMANDS, among other things, that appropriate steps be taken to prevent similar "mixing" when N.C. State College plays the University of South Carolina at Columbia on Nov. 23.

38a

While the White Citizens Council charges that there were two colored students involved, thus far only one has been referred to in general discussion.

The unnamed student in the North Carolina band was also the college's No. 1 freshman tennis player last spring and is expected to make the varsity next spring.

North Carolina has tennis schedules with Clemson next April 18, and with USC in Columbia the next day.

BOTH Attorney General T. C. Callison and Clemson president, Dr. R. F. Poole said that state policy for state-operated colleges forbids competition of racially mixed teams in intercollegiate sports meets.

USC athletic director, Rex Enright, deferred comment until the matter actually comes up. Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner, James Weaver of Greensboro, N.C., also had no comment. N.C. State, USC and Clemson are all ACC members.

GENERAL TALK speculated that while South Carolina colleges are not allowed to field a racially mixed team within their boundaries, outside of the state a South Carolina team might play against a racially mixed team, "if that is the custom in that locality."

There was also speculation that North Carolina State might not bring its colored band member, or members, when it comes to Columbia.

BEN SCOTT WHALEY
'Violence Never'

Violence Will Never Solve Mixing, Charlestonian Says

News & Courier, Charleston, S.C. Fri. 10-18-57

SUMMERVILLE, Oct. 17 (Special)—By intelligent action, the South will find it possible in time to overcome the obstacles placed in its path by the segregation ruling of the Supreme Court —by violence, never.

That was the message of Ben Scott Whaley, Charleston attorney, addressing the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce here tonight.

"It may be possible, perhaps not in my lifetime or yours, to change the decision of the Supreme Court," Whaley declared counseling "moderation" in acts and speech and warning against violence in words or deeds.

GUNS TO ANSWER

It cannot be changed, the speaker warned, by ordering eight machine guns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition for Union County. . . by cutting off the little state and county aid given to the National Guard . . . nor are there sufficient deputies, sheriffs or local militia to question the power of the U. S. Army, Marine Corps, Air Corps and the Navy.

"That issue in my opinion was decided at Appomattox in 1865."

But, he asserted, "we have every right as citizens to discuss our situation intelligently, calmly and dispassionately, to advocate a change in the Supreme Court and its decisions."

Whaley suggested: Register to vote. Discuss the problems with Northern visitors. Support the unbiased press outlets Be courteous and considerate of our colored people, their feelings and their rights.

CITES NORTHERN PROBLEM

"Remember that racial unrest is more in the North than it is in the South. It is brought on in the South by the Northern politicians of both parties but it festers in the North of its own accord."

The attorney cited as precedent the Prohibition Amendment ratified in 1919 and 15 years later in the wake of popular opinion repealed.

Referring to the Little Rock situation, he predicted that because of action taken there "I assume the Republican Party will never again achieve any semblance of strength in the South."

He remarked that the only way the Republican Party can continue in power is by capturing the Negro vote in the Northern states and counting on division in the South.

WORD OF CAUTION

To Gov. Byrnes' suggestion that the South should unite to regain its rights, Whaley added a word of caution:

"For those of us who would look to Governor Faubus as a leader let me quote to you some of Governor Faubus' own words and let you determine whether or not you are interested in having him as your leader."

He then brought in Faubus' claims of having successfully engineered integration in his state in transportation, state - supported colleges, eight public schools; his claim to have been first Democratic governor of the South

AT SUMMERVILLE CHAMBER BANQUET
S. B. Jones Jr., Ben Scott Whaley, R. Lowndes Bailey, G. G. Miler

Violence Not Solution Says Ben S. Whaley

News & Courier PM Charleston, S.C.

Continued from Page 1-A

to place Negroes on the Democratic State Central Committee; his part in abolition of the "white" primaries and his statement that his only child attends an integrated college.

Fri. 10-18-57

Sidney B. Jones Jr. acted as master of ceremonies for the banquet, held at the Squirrel Inn.

ACTIVITIES LISTED

A summary of the past year's Chamber activities was given by the retiring president, R. Lowndes Bailey.

He spoke of the work of the Industrial association headed by George G. Miler in encouraging the location of industry in the area, of the issuance of some 100 building permits on home improvements or new homes alone as indicative of the Chamber's promotional activities.

He told of the advertising program that has been carried out, erection of promotional traffic signs, correspondence with inquiring tourists.

The Chamber, he said, was represented among units opposing increased state sales tax, favoring teacher pay raises.

Chamber representatives participated in the Charleston Christmas parade, promoted caroling in Summerville, took part in the state meeting at which Aaron Barshay was named to the board of directors.

TAKES NEW LEASE

The Chamber took a new five-year lease on the Country Club and actively promoted various town beautification projects.

Election of three new members of the board of directors also took place. The new boardmen are C. A. Chellis Jr., A. M. Jones and H. D. Byrd.

National

NEWS BRIEFS

There's Strength In Union, S. C.

UNION, S. C.—So Sheriff J. Harold Lamb and his eight deputies can fight any lawful or unlawful military or civil violation of Union County laws, such as those demanding school segregation," the county's legislative delegation headed by State Senator John D. Long of Union County, has purchased nine new Browning submachine guns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

"We don't intend to let Little Rock happen in Union," said Senator Long.

Moderate Race Stand Tied to Blast

GAFFNEY, S. C., Nov. 20 (AP) A dynamite time bomb smashed windows and cracked walls last night at the home of a prominent physician whose wife had urged a moderate approach to the racial question. None of the four occupants was hurt.

The blast occurred at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James H. Sanders. It blew a small hole in the yard about three feet from an outside wall.

Mrs. Sanders told a reporter the bombing might have been in connection with an article she wrote several weeks ago for a pamphlet urging moderation toward the racial [illegible]. The pamphlet was criticized by segregation groups, including two units of the Ku Klux Klan.

Investigators found three sticks of unexploded dynamite at the scene and said the blast could have been considerably more serious if they had gone off. They could not determine how many had been detonated.

Resistance To Integration Key To Who Will Be S. C. Governor

By W. D. WORKMAN, JR.
Editorial Correspondence

COLUMBIA, Oct. 19 — What sort of a yardstick will South Carolina voters use in selecting a governor next year?

If this writer is any judge of the temper of the people, that yardstick will be calibrated in degrees of resistance to integration. That same scale will be marked in shades of state sovereignty as well, for South Carolinians seem determined to assert their right to local self-government despite any pressures that may be brought to bear against them by either national party or by the federal government.

All this will be reflected in their search for a governor to be the state's chief executive for the four years beginning with January of 1959. And that four years is a meaningful consideration in the minds of most South Carolinians. Whoever is elected governor, indeed whoever runs for the office, will be called on to pledge himself for four full years of resolute service to the people of his state.

The onetime characteristic of using the governor's office as a midterm stepping stone into the United States Senate has fallen into disrepute in recent years and the state's last three governors have served, or are serving (as in the case of Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr.) their full term of office. This means that the successful candidate next year must manifest much greater interest in the state's welfare than in his own personal or political ambitions for the future.

As a matter of cold, hard realism, the man who serves South Carolina as governor during the coming term may well find himself at a distinct political disadvantage at the end of that term in 1962. If he serves his state with the dogged determination they now seem to want, it is inevitable that he will antagonize the big wigs of both national parties and thereby alienate any propsects for national position thereafter.

At the same time, although this is not an assured thing, he may incur the hostility of the growing Negro vote in South Carolina and thereby face that obstacle in any subsequent political endeavors. If the Negroes do not congeal into a bloc, however, and instead divide naturally among candidates on bases rather than race alone, the Negro vote may be a healthy addition to rather than a worrisome element of the body politic.

The next governor will be expected to be a man who can promote internal unity within South Carolina, to the exclusion of political factionalism which so often attaches to the office. Although there will be, as there always are, those individuals who attach themselves to a promising political elevator with the expectation of getting a free ride upward, there are many times their number who will vote their convictions next year out of a concern for the state.

These independent - thinking South Carolinians will pay less attention to political money than to the man, so that financial backing will not be a determining factor. Money will be needed, of course, for any candidate to get himself effectively before the people, but any lavish spending over and above that will be of little help, and may actually prove of hurt.

If present prospects materialize, South Carolinians will have a number of individuals against whom they can apply their yardsticks. The list is neither complete nor crystallized at this stage of the game, for another name was injected into speculation only this week.

The latest addition to the list of possible candidates is Greenville attorney and interim U. S. Sen. Thomas A. Wofford. Like the others whose names have been in general discussion, he is making no public disclosure of his plans, but if he cannot be ruled into the race at this point, neither can he be ruled out.

Those whose names had been earlier in speculation, and still are, include Lt. Gov. E. F. Hollings, of Charleston; Rep. Burnet R. Maybank, of Greenville; and President Donald S. Russell, of the University of South Carolina.

The name of Sen. L. Marion Gressette of Calhoun County, chairman of the state's special segregation committee, is once more moving into the picture and should not be disregarded.

Still another possibility is Solicitor J. Allen Lambright, of Spartanburg.

That particular political pot, however, is just now beginning to simmer. It will not reach a boil for several months to come, closer to the June 10 Democratic primary.

Policy Is 'Clear'

By DEL BOOTH

COLUMBIA, Oct. 16 (AP) —Athletic teams of South Carolina's state supported colleges apparently will not compete on home soil against racially mixed teams of other colleges.

Both Atty. Gen. T. C. Callison and President R. F. Poole of Clemson College made it clear today that this is the present policy.

Teams of South Carolina state supported colleges apparently will be guided by the policies and laws of the states in which they are playing when engaged out of the state.

Athletic Director Rex Enright of the University of South Carolina said the matter has not come up as far as the university is concerned, but when it does, "we will deal with it."

It came up at Clemson Oct. 5, indirectly, when the N.C. State College band, there for a football game, showed up with a Negro member who ate with the band in the Clemson College dining hall.

A result is a petition now being circulated in the Lake City area of the state, directed at Gov. Timmerman, and to be delivered to him when at least 2,000 people have signed. One thousand had signed through last week.

The petition asks the governor to see that such racial mixing doesn't occur again, especially when N.C. State visits the University of South Carolina here Nov. 23.

The petition calls the Clemson incident "a foot in the door" wedge against the state's official and adamant stand for segregation.

Callison said, without quoting any particular law, that the entire segregation structure of state supported schools and colleges presupposes that any integration on school grounds is untenable.

Poole said he had mentioned the matter to N.C. State on the same basis—that mixing violates the spirit of laws under which state-supported institutions operate and receive state funds.

The state - supported colleges with intercollegiate athletic teams are State College at Orangeburg, for Negroes only; Clemson; the university; and The Citadel, Military college at Charleston.

Clemson and the university are especially concerned with the prospect of meeting teams of mixed races because they both are in the same athletic conference — the Atlantic Coast Conference — of which N.C. State is a member.

The Negro student in the N.C. State band was the No. 1 tennis player on State's 1957 freshman team, and is expected to be a candidate for the 1958 varsity. State has April 18 and 19 tennis dates, respectively, with Clemson at Clemson and with the university here.

Commissioner James Weaver of the ACC, at his Greensboro, N.C., office, had no comment.

N. C. State Chancellor Carey H. Bostain said if any South Carolina law prohibits an N.C. State student from playing on a team against a South Carolina college in South Carolina, "it would seem very unwise to ask any member of one of our teams to put itself in the position of violating" a law.

Bostain said the question "must be faced" but before making a policy decision he would confer with President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, of which State is a part. He said he also planned to talk to Poole.

Gov. Timmerman has declined comment on the situation, indicating he would have nothing to say before the Lake City area petition reaches him.

There are "several alternatives" State could follow in complying with the suggestion, Bostian added. He said the youth could be left behind when the team plays at Clemson, the match could be called off, or it could be played in North Carolina.

Bostian said he did not expect a decision until late winter or early spring when the tennis team is selected and "when we know we have a problem," adding, "I'd rather cross bridges when I get to them."

Bostian said he does not expect Poole to send him a formal request in addition to the "suggestion." He added, "he doesn't need to" because "I'm fully aware of the problem he faces." He said he understood South Carolina has a law which prohibits Negroes and whites playing on the same team, and making violations a criminal offense.

He added State College's policy in regard to Negro students trying out for athletic teams is that "all students are treated alike."

Broad Powers To Cope With Race Rows Sought

Courier-Journal P.4
Louisville Ky. Fri. 3-1-57

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 28 (AP)—A bill giving South Carolina governors broad powers to cope with possible disturbances arising from racial integration was introduced in the General Assembly today.

The legislation was proposed by Senate members of the State's 15-member Segregation Committee. It would give a governor injunctive and military powers to "cope with such dangers."

The State's Segregation Committee, composed of five Senate and five House members appointed by the respective presiding officers and five men appointed by the Governor, has sponsored most of the State's recent segregation legislation. Senator Marion Gressette of Calhoun County is chairman of the permanent committee and introduced today's bill.

Includes 'Any Measures

The measure, which Gressette said is aimed at protecting persons and property, would authorize the governor to discontinue transportation or any other public facilities or have the State operate them. He could take any "measures which he may deem necessary to prevent violence or threats of violence. . . ."

A governor also could "by proclamation declare that a danger exists" and then may order any individual, association, or corporation "to refrain from doing any act or thing which would appear to endanger life, limb or property." Such an order would stand until the governor revoked it and he could call out the State militia to enforce it.

Further, all City, County and State law-enforcement officers would be at his beck and call in such a situation "to maintain peace and good order."

Four Indicted In Hooded Attack

Times Picayune New Orleans Fri. 2-22-57

CAMDEN, S. C., Feb. 21 (AP)—Four men were indicted for assault and battery here in the midnight beating of Guy Hutchins, Camden High school band director.

Hutchins told officers the hooded men who attacked him last Dec. 27 said they did so because he had made pro-integration statements. Hutchins said he had expressed no opinion about integration publicly. P. 23

Indicted by the Kershaw county grand jury were Horace W. Fields, 56; George D. Bigbee, Jr., 40; John Walter McManus, 32, and Steve B. Broadway, 33. They originally were charged with aggravated assault and battery.

Neal W. Seegars, 62, and Horace William Frith, 39, charged with conspiring to violate civil rights, were not indicted.

Hutchins said he was attacked when he stopped to change a tire on his automobile. He was returning to Camden from Charlotte, N. C., where he plays in the city's Little Symphony Orchestra.

Hutchins was hospitalized for several days. He said he was certain that the beating was not inspired by the Ku Klux Klan.

Scrap Sale 'Caper'

Vandals Hit Negro Pool; Closing Seen

News + Courier Tues. 6-6-57 Charleston, S.C.

Damage due to vandalism at the Negro swimming pool at Harmon Field has cost the city about $200 to repair and if repeated may cause a shutdown of the pool, John R. Bettis, city waterworks engineer, said yesterday. P. 15-B

Bettis said vandals, apparently using screwdrivers and wrenches, had stripped the water meter serving the pool of various parts, particularly brass fittings. Bettis theorized that the vandals used the metal parts for resale as scrap.

Fortunately, he said, the parts required to repair the meter were on hand and the meter is now back in operation. Had the parts not been handy, however, Bettis remarked, it could have taken up to six months to obtain spares. "Chances are," he said, "the pool would just be shut down until the spares were available and the repairs made."

He estimated the cost of the spare parts and labor required to repair the meter at $200.

Ministerial Group Plans Racial Stand

News + Courier, Thurs. 7-4-57 Charleston, S.C. P.1

Five Pastors Circulate Prospectus Seeking Support For 'Moderation'

COLUMBIA, July 3 (AP)—Gov. Timmerman today made public the plans of a group of five South Carolina ministers to form an organization designed to support "moderation and reason in the current controversy over segregation and de-segregation."

The governor distributed to the press a "prospectus" which he said the preachers had been circulating privately in an attempt to enlist the support of "citizens of prominence" in their campaign.

Their stated aim is to obtain from such citizens statements of belief on the race question which are to be published in a book, to be financed by contributions.

The ministers, according to the prospectus, will sign their names to a jointly written foreword.

The preachers, as identified in the prospectus, are the Revs. John Lyles, Presbyterian, Marion; John Morris, Episcopal, Dillon; Joseph Horn, Episcopal, Florence; Larry Jackson, Methodist, Florence, and Ralph Cousins, Episcopal, Marion.

They said they are in the process of organizing as "Concerned South Carolinians, Inc."

In publishing their "prospectus," which was being circulated without fanfare, the governor said:

"It has come to my attention that this so-called 'prospectus' is being circulated provately in South Carolina. In the belief that it is of interest generally to the public, I am making it available for publication.

"All South Carolinians, not just these self-appointed few, are 'concerned' South Carolinians."

The preachers said they were applying for a state charter so that contributions could be deducted from income taxes.

They listed eight statements as "a minimum basis for understanding" around which the statements they seek are to be built.

The "moderate position" they have adopted was outlined as follows:

1. That God created all men in His own image and therefore all races are equal in His sight.

2. That although there is no "superior" race, certain differences are to be recognized because of environment, but these differences are not due to an inherent inferiority.

3. That the public school system must be maintained for all the people.

4. That any solution to the present dilemma must be sought within the framework of Supreme Court decisions, which are legally binding and morally valid.

5. That, nevertheless, cultural patterns cannot be changed quickly and the reality of this cannot be wisely ignored in seeking solutions.

6. That neither the extreme pressure of the NAACP nor the extreme resistance of some Citizens Councils offers the best direction for the South.

7. That personal freedom of choice and association in social relations must be maintained within the bounds of a democratic society, even if desegregation becomes the accepted procedure for tax-supported institutions.

8. That all Southerners should explore the situation thoughtfully in the light of Christian love and our democratic heritage, believing that we can go forward together, even though slowly.

U.S. Bias Shocking To Ghana Student

Weekly Messenger Indianapolis Sat. 7-13-57

Columbia, S.C. - (ANP) - when the Rev. Richard D. Ansah landed in America three months ago from his native Ghana, first student from the new state to arrive in this country, he had an opinion about racism, not quite what he has today.

On arrival at Allen University in April, Mr. Ansah told a reporter that he liked America and had not encountered racial differences since landing a week before at New Orleans.

But this week, the 48-year-old ministerial student, completing his seminary training in this country after raising his boat fare from the sale of pigs, was baffled and frustrated.

The Rev. Mr. Ansah related three experiences which have confused him, all occurring late in June.

On that day:

"I decided to get a sandwich and a cup of coffee while waiting for my bus to Winnsboro, S.C., at the Columbia bus terminal," he said.

Attired in his clergy rainment, Mr. Ansah entered the cafe section of the station, an exclusive lily-white arrangement, and placed his order.

"The woman (waitress) told me they didn't have any cups for coffee," the minister said adding:

"I saw several white men sitting at the counter drinking coffee from cups, and many other cups ready for use. "I asked her what she meant that there were no cups. I asked her what were they being used for."

Mr. Ansah said that by this time whites at the counter were noting the episode. The white waitress told him that she would serve him in the bus terminal's kitchen.

"I say to her, 'why should I go in the kitchen. My wife she's not in the kitchen to prepare my food. I have no business in kitchen," he said he told the woman.

"Are you under race prejudice, "Mr. Ansah said he asked the woman, who made no reply. Finally, she brought him a sandwish, but no coffee.

He left the sandwish untouched and later, boarded his bus for Winnsboro.

Returning after church services that night, he said he had sat down, still in his ministerial garb, on the third seat from the front, in the aisle opposite the driver.

A white passenger (male) instructed him to take a back seat.

"I asked him what did he mean 'back seat', Mr. Ansah said.

"I told him I paid the same fare, this seat was empty and I preferred it. I told him that your American Vice President Nixon had come to our country and had bowed before our rulers and that if necessary I'd call on him to get people straight about my status in Ghana," Mr. Ansah said.

He posed several questions to the unidentified passenger, who did not answer further. Mr. Ansah took the seat. The bus driver remained silent.

Two Sunday nights later, on another bus schedule from Winnsboro to Columbia, Mr. Ansah said he encountered a similar experience with another white passenger.

His remarks were similar, but this passenger surrendered his seat for the 26 mile run into Columbia.

"What I do not understand," he said, "is why some Americans try to suppress the colored man."

"They told me that this was a free nation of people, like our Ghana is. There, "we sub shoulders with all races and colors. It's the law of our country."

In the latter case, as in the first, the bus driver made no comment nor did he pretend to be aware of the matter.

Mr. Ansah has been filling preaching engagements in Winnsboro and other nearby churches. Income from these help cover incidental expenses connected with his training at Allen University.

Negro who befriends white man beaten by white band

News p. 38
Times Herald 7-25-57

GREENVILLE, S. C., July 25 (AP)—A white, partly disabled truck driver spoke sorrowfully but sternly today about the beating of a Negro neighbor who took care of the white man's children during an emergency this week.

"These people never bothered anybody," 34-year-old Sherwood Turner of Greenville County said. "If they had, it would have been different."

He spoke of 58-year-old Negro farmer Claude Cruell and his wife, who were entrusted with Turner's seven small children Sunday night while the truck driver took his wife, stricken with a kidney ailment, to a hospital. Cruel, who owns a 100-acre tract of land four miles from Travelers Rest, said a band of about 15 white men broke into his house that night, chained him by one arm and beat him with blackjacks and sticks.

THE NEGRO was hobbling and bruised two days after the incident. His wife tearfully said that the intruders "said they did it because we were taking care of those white children. They didn't like it because we own all this land."

The Turner children have been moved to a relative's home at a nearby town. Turner said that if the white men come back "I pity them. A man's supposed to protect his home."

Sheriff's officers reported they picked up several suspects, but released them after questioning.

Cruell's wife said she was forced to ride with the men several miles from their home, then let out to walk back barefooted.

The Cruells bought the land about 25 years ago. They live in a neat-looking five-room house.

S. C. theatre owner sues for same dates as whites

Afro-American Sat. 7-13-57 P. 18
Baltimore Md.

NEW YORK — There is no reason why colored theatre goers in the Deep South should have to wait to see first-run movies at their neighborhood houses.

That is the opinion of Carver Theatre, Inc., operator of the Carver Theatre, Rock Hill, S.C. And it backed up its contention in Federal Court here last week.

The Carver firm entered a suit for $1,350,000 seeking triple damages in antitrust action against all the major studios except RKO.

Named as defendants are Warner Brothers, Loew's, 20th Century Fox, Republic, Paramount, Columbia, United Artists, Universal Allied Artists and Buena Vista.

* * *

ALLEGING discrimination involving the licensing of pictures, the house argued that it was not in competition with the neighboring houses catering to white patrons.

It charged the distributors with maintaining illegal clearances and availabilities, favoring the other Rock Hill exhibitors.

"No clearance or prior run by another theatre is justified," the complaint holds.

Segregation being maintained in Rock Hill, colored patrons can see films nowhere but at the Carver.

For reasons of caste snobbery white people wouldn't be seen at the house.

THEREFORE, argues, the Carver, what's the use of pretending that the colored house is in competition with the "white" house?

The Carver suit says it must wait for pictures even if the other operators refuse them, and that it is being served poor prints. The conspiracy charge covers the period from May, 1953, to date.

Baby Sitter Beaten

Afro-American Sat. 8-3-57
Baltimore Md.

Coring for white tots angers mob

(By Staff Correspondent)

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Sheriff and state officers continued their search Friday of 15 white men who broke into the home of a 58-year-old colored farmer and, in the presence of his wife and the seven white children they were befriending, badly beat and assaulted him.

Greenville county sheriff J. R. Martin said Annie Marie Turner, 11, one of the children, told officers, "everyone of these men had guns, knives and sticks."

Sheriff's officers, who were joined two days after the attack by agents of the State Law Enforcement Division, were running down leads furnished by the victim, Claude Cruell, his wife Mrs. Fannie Cruell and the children.

* * *

OFFICERS GAVE this picture of the beating:

Mr. and Mrs. Cruell, who own an attractive 100-acre farm near Travelers Rest, a farm they purchased about 25 years ago, offered as "Good Neighbors" Sunday night for a white tenant family living on the Cruell farm.

The family was that of Sherwood Turner, 34, a partially disabled truck driver.

Mrs. Turner had become stricken with a kidney ailment Sunday and had to be rushed to a Greenville hospital. Mr. Turner accompanied her and told officers he had sat up all night Sunday and again Monday night at the hospital with his ill wife.

* * *

HE HAD LEFT the seven Turner children at the nearby home of the Cruells, whom he described as "good and respectable and liked by everybody." The Turners live in a small house not far from the Cruells.

Some time after 9 p.m., the mob smashed in windows and doors of the Cruell home, terrorized the children who watched while Mr. Cruell was flailed with sticks, fists, pistol butts and kicked until he was unconscious.

Mrs. Cruell, still visibly wrought over the horrible experience, said the men "were hollering and talking about us trying to mix with white people, and keeping white children in a colored home."

* * *

SHE SAID THE men also indicated dislike that the Cruells owned a valuable and attractive tract of land, and had white tenants.

Annie Marie Turner told officers the night invaders told her and the other children to get out and that if they were ever again caught in the house all of them would be beaten.

The frightened, screaming children scampered into the night and hid in the darkness until the attackers drove away. Since, officers said, they have been placed with relatives of the Turner family, pending the outcome of their mother's illness.

* * *

OFFICERS SAID that white families in the Travelers Rest vicinity were bitter and incensed over the crime. All, they said, "liked the Cruells."

It was the first recorded mob action in Greenville county since 1947 when 24-year-old Willie Earle, an epileptic, was bludgeoned and shotgunned to death on a frost-covered road leading into Pickens county in February of that year.

Earle's lynchers, some 31 white taxi drivers and associates, were subsequently acquitted by an all-white jury.

* * *

GREENVILLE COUNTY, early this year, paid Earle's mother, Mrs. Tessie Robinson, the $2,000 statutory sum stipulated for such deaths.

Several months ago a Travelers Rest magistrate tried several young white women and their tan dates for violations of state racial laws.

U. S. JUDGE IN SOUTH ASSAILS HIGH COURT

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 25—A Federal district judge whose son is Governor of South Carolina Thursday labeled the United States Supreme Court "a hierarchy of despotic judges that is bent on destroying the finest system of government ever designed."

Judge George Bell Timmerman Sr. spoke before the Thomson, Ga., Rotary Club "as a private citizen." He charged that the Supreme Court had been "reading meanings into the Constitution and out of it that discriminate against white citizens, especially those of the so-called Deep South."

The text of his address was released in Columbia, where he lives.

The South Carolina jurist said also "the court has been construing the Constitution so as to make it a protective shield for the criminally disposed and disloyal elements in our population."

If the "discrimination" against white persons in the Deep South is continued, he said, eventually it will affect adversely the white populations of all other sections of the nation.

SC County Buys Guns; May Fight

Journal p. 1
Wilmington N.C.
Sat. 10-12-57

UNION, S. C.—The Union County Sheriff's Department is being outfitted with new guns to fight off a possible invasion by federal troops or anyone else seeking to enforce racial integration but there was some disagreement this week as to just what kind of guns had been ordered.

State Senator John D. Long said the county legislative delegation had appropriated $1,000 to buy 10 sub-machine guns and 1,000 rounds of ammunition for the Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff J. Harold Lamb, who was out of town, was quoted as saying the new guns would be automatic shotguns and not machine guns.

State Rep. John Calhoun Hart, who with Long and Rep. James Arthur comprises the Union delegation, said he was "under the impression we were discussion machine guns" when the delegation authorized the expenditure last weekend.

Long said the additions to the county arsenal were ordered through Begley's Paint and Hardware Store of Union. When asked by United Press what kind of guns he had an order for, Britton Begley—the store's operator—snapped "No comment, mister. "I'm trying to make a living selling paint, shotguns, toys and things and I don't want to get mixed up in anything like that."

Long said Lamb had assured the county legislative delegation he and his eight deputies would fight off "any military or civilian violation of county laws."

The Senator added Union County "expects no invasion' 'by federal troops such as at Little Rock, Ark., but if it comes, "we're ready."

Hart, a school teacher who has established a reputation as the most outspoken segregationist in the South Carolina Legislature, said Long "spoke of machine guns" when the subject was first discussed and "I was under the impression we were buying machine guns."

"I don't believe any South Carolinian is going to accept integration hands down," Hart declared. "If the federal government tries to force integration there is going to be a lot of unpleasantness and somebody is going to get hurt."

"We will have a lot of integrated cemeteries in South Carolina a long time before we have integrated schools," he added.

Associated Press Wirephoto

"HOUSE IN ORDER"

Gov. Timmerman

Governor Hails 'Peace' In Carolina

Journal, 1-10-57
Atlanta, Ga.

COLUMBIA, Jan. 9 (AP) — Segregated South Carolina enjoys "continued peace and good order," Gov. Timmerman advised the general assembly today.

"We were among the first to put our house in order" to keep racial separation after the U. S. Supreme Court began declaring enforced segregation unconstitutional, the governor said.

"It is to the credit of all our citizens," he said in his annual message to the assembly, "that we have not been disturbed by serious outbreaks of violence."

He said he had no recommendations for further hold-the-segregation-line laws, such as were enacted by the past two sessions of the legislature.

The governor hewed to the hold-the-line budget proposed earlier in the week by the state budget and control board he heads. It approves a 10 per cent average pay increase for teachers and state employes.

South Carolina to Stand Pat With Anti-Integration Laws

Journal + Constitution Jan. 1-6-57
Atlanta Ga. P. 5-e

Effort to Maintain Segregation In Schools Seems More Unified

By S. L. LATIMER JR.

Editor, The Columbia State
Special to the Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Jan. 5—Unless there is some unanticipated development, no drastic segregation legislation is expected during the meeting of the 1957 General Assembly which convenes in 10 days. From all appearances South Carolina is going to stand pat on the program it has developed over the last three or four years.

Determination in official circles not to integrate in the public schools is just as pronounced now as it ever was. In fact, if anything, the effort to maintain segregation is more unified.

The attorney general of the state, T. C. Callison, does "not expect 1957 to see any change in the attitude of South Carolina on the subject of segregation." He added that he thought South Carolina was in a better position, in so far as disorder, agitation and violence are concerned" than other states. He said he was confident "the races can work out their own educational program under the dual system" and in his opinion it is for the best interest of both races that such a program be followed.

Additional Precautions

While South Carolina had previously taken steps looking toward continuation of the present school setup, the 1956 General Assembly added several precautionary measures. For one thing, it ordered any state-supported white college to close if a Negro were admitted by federal decree and directed the simultaneous closing for South Carolina State College for Negroes at Orangeburg. The assembly, upon recommendation of Gov. Timmerman, passed a resolution seeking to interpose state authority between public schools and any federal court order for integration. The same resolution condemned "the usurpation of and the encroachment on the reserved powers of the states by the Supreme Court of the United States." Approximately 20,000 copies were printed and distributed.

The last General Assembly bolstered a previous provision at any elementary or high school that accepts a pupil by federal court order will forfeit all right to tax money as will the school from which the child was transferred, but there has been no occasion to apply this drastic penalty.

South Carolina's schools are operating this year on the dual system without untoward incident. The multimillion-dollar school program is continuing for both races with new schools definitely designated as being for white or Negro use. Transportation is provided on the same basis for both races and Negro teachers are paid the same salaries and given the same retirement rights as white teachers. There are more than 7,000 Negro teachers in the state who draw approximately 20 million dollars in pay.

The Gressette committee, which is composed of legislators and appointees by the governor, and which is the segregation "watchdog," is active and has met several times during the year, but apparently is functioning now more or less, on a standby basis. If it makes any recommendation for the new General Assembly they will be minor ones.

Callison's Explanation

Atty. Gen. Callison, thinking of decorum, had this to say:

"The only way the state can guarantee proper discipline, law and order in connection with the public school program will be on a segregated basis. We need no aid from the Federal Government and we want none for our public school system. We merely wish to be left alone in order that our people may live together peaceably, each having proper respect for one another. It is my candid opinion that our people are not ready for and will not submit to an integrated public school system."

SOUTH CAROLINA

Pulse of the Public

Constitution P. 4

South Carolinian Asks Calmness, Humility And No Violence in Settling Racial Disputes

Mon. 1-14-57 Atlanta, Ga.

Greenville, S. C.—After taking a thorough course in constitutional law I conclude that our highest court has written some very strange decisions. The law is based highly on common sense and reasoning; our court has departed from the law as the basis for its opinions.

In 1941, long before law school, I was appointed to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. After West Point, I later lived in New York City for some 18 or 19 months. There was no segregation in seating on surface buses and trains or on subways; this alarmed me for a while, until I concluded that it was of no consequence on which seat a person sat (although some people sincerely believe that it matters). I concluded at that time that they were sincere but confused; I still conclude that they are confused.

The real question is where is the individual person going? (I refer not to this temporary world—but to the permanent world, which all people must spend at one of two places!) It is my fixed opinion that one's actions will determine which direction he will travel in reaching his permanent world!

In this connection, let's look at Matthew 5:9. "Blessed are the peacemakers." If we contribute to violence caused by those whose actions indicate that they do not believe in the Sermon on the Mount, are not we, too, then guilty of violence?

Let me add that I was raised on the farm and some of the best people I have ever known were local, God-fearing colored people, who lived simple (not confused) lives. Christ lived the same sort of life. More humility surrounded His entire earthly life than most of us, white or colored, possess. He was born in a stable, wore clothes of a peasant and traveled on a donkey.

Please, no violence!

WINFIELD T. MARTIN.

South Carolina Gov. 'Satisfied' With Bias Laws

Daily World Fri. 1-11-57
Atlanta, Ga.

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (INS) — South Carolina's Governor indicated Wednesday that he was satisfied with the state's laws to prevent integration and would not recommend any new ones to the general assembly.

P. 6

Gov. George Bell Timmerman, Jr., in an address to the legislature, boasted that the laws instituted by earlier legislatures had made "serious outbreaks" non-existant, and said the present laws were "a credit to all our citizens."

He said that South Carolina law made it legal to discontinue educational aid to any public school that begins integration, and said the same was true for state parks.

The only proposal dealing with segregation now facing the current legislature is a measure which could legally hinder the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from beginning desegregation suits in the state.

The bill states that any organization which is found guilty of promoting a dispute for the purpose of carrying out its own policies would be liable to prosecution. Those found guilty could be fined and jailed.

Timmerman also approved a proposed $21-million bond issue for state ports improvement.

6 Nabbed In S. C. Beating

Defender P. 3 Sat. 1-12-57

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (INS) — Six men were arrested last week, charged with beating a Camden High school teacher for allegedly making an anti-segregation speech.

Guy Hutchins, 51, beaten Dec. 27 on a lonely South Carolina highway by a group of masked men, told police the following day from a hospital bed, "They had the wrong man. I've never made an anti-segregation speech in my life."

Police Chief J. P. Storm said that at least one of the six admitted being a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but refused to give any names.

South Carolina to Stand Pat With Anti-Integration Laws

Journal + Constitution Sun. 1-6-57 P. 5-C

Atlanta, Ga.

Effort to Maintain Segregation In Schools Seems More Unified

By S. L. LATIMER JR.

Editor, The Columbia State
Special to the Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Jan. 5—Unless there is some unanticipated development, no drastic segregation legislation is expected during the meeting of the 1957 General Assembly which convenes in 10 days. From all appearances South Carolina is going to stand pat on the program it has developed over the last three or four years.

Determination in official circles not to integrate in the public schools is just as pronounced now as it ever was. In fact, if anything, the effort to maintain segregation is more unified.

The attorney general of the state, T. C. Callison, does "not expect 1957 to see any change in the attitude of South Carolina on the subject of segregation." He added that he thought South Carolina was in a better position, in so far as disorder, agitation and violence are concerned" than other states. He said he was confident "the races can work out their own educational program under the dual system" and in his opinion it is for the best interest of both races that such a program be followed.

Additional Precautions

While South Carolina had previously taken steps looking toward continuation of the present school setup, the 1956 General Assembly added several precautionary measures. For one thing, it ordered any state-supported white college to close if a Negro were admitted by federal decree and directed the simultaneous closing for South Carolina State College for Negroes at Orangeburg. The assembly, upon recommendation of Gov. Timmerman, passed a resolution seeking to interpose state authority between public schools and any federal court order for integration. The same resolution condemned "the usurpation of and the encroachment on the reserved powers of the states by the Supreme Court of the United States." Approximately 20,000 copies were printed and distributed.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The last General Assembly bolstered a previous provision at any elementary or high school that accepts a pupil by federal court order will forfeit all right to tax money as will the school from which the child was transferred, but there has been no occasion to apply this drastic penalty.

South Carolina's schools are operating this year on the dual system without untoward incident. The multimillion-dollar school program is continuing for both races with new schools definitely designated as being for white or Negro use. Transportation is provided on the same basis for both races and Negro teachers are paid the same salaries and given the same retirement rights as white teachers. There are more than 7,000 Negro teachers in the state who draw approximately 20 million dollars in pay.

The Gressette committee, which is composed of legislators and appointees by the governor, and which is the segregation "watchdog," is active and has met several times during the year, but apparently is functioning now more or less, on a stand-by basis. If it makes any recommendation for the new General Assembly they will be minor ones.

Callison's Explanation

Atty. Gen. Callison, thinking of decorum, had this to say:

"The only way the state can guarantee proper discipline, law and order in connection with the public school program will be on a segregated basis. We need no aid from the Federal Government and we want none for our public school system. We merely wish to be left alone in order that our people may live together peaceably, each having proper respect for one another. It is my candid opinion that our people are not ready for and will not submit to an integrated public school system."

'Impeachment' Up In Carolina

Advertiser P. 1 Fri. 4-5-57

COLUMBIA, S.C., April 4 (AP)—A resolution calling for impeachment of six of the nine justices of the U.S. Supreme Court corpped up in the General Assembly today.

Rep. John C. Hart of Union, author of the resolution, said it was identical to one passed by the Georgia Legislature asking Congress to remove the justices from office.

Montgomery, Ala.

The resolution charges the six have "unlawfully usurped the powers of the people to amend the constitution . . . have exercised legislative powers vested solely in the Congress or reserved to the states . . . and have given aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States."

Doctrine Of Race Supremacy Deplored By White Ministers

Journal + Guide Sat. 1-19-57 P. 19

Norfolk, Va.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Thirty white ministers of Rock Hill, denouncing the Ku Klux Klan compared the racial situation in the South to Soviet-oppressed Hungary and jointly stated, "we do not believe racial supremacy can be supported in the Bible."

The declaration came from the Rock Hill Ministerial Association, composed of about 30 ministers of this textile community. Rock Hill is 60 miles north of Camden, where hooded men, attacked two white men, allegedly because of racial views, in recent weeks.

* * *

"WE FEEL that those who believe that the supremacy of one race of people over another is taught in, or is substantiated by the Bible are in error," the association said.

Referring to a recent newspaper article which quoted the Ku Klux Klan official as saying the Klan wants to maintain white supremacy without violence, but will use it if necessary, the statement said:

"WHATEVER the name, origin, or history of any organization or group, we consider it a serious and deplorable matter for it to suggest promoting some of its activity by the method of inciting fear, using threats, and lawless and secret violence in our Christian and American way of life.

"The express purpose to use secret and unlawful violence to suppress a people in nothing short of much of the world is now deploring in the actions of Communist Russia in Poland and Hungary."

* * *

THE ASSOCIATION urged each person associated with the KKK or similar group to "carefully re-think his position."

Further, the ministers declared:

"We firmly believe that whatever attitude, and opinion we now have regarding the relationships of the races —and we agree there is room for different convictions here —we do not believe that racial supremacy can be supported by the Bible."

It Has Happened Here

Afro-American Sat. 2-2-57

A blight has fallen upon the Southland.

It was described last Sunday by the Rev. Styles B. Lines, a Camden, S.C. minister, who declared that, "Fear covers South Carolina like a frost."

Baltimore, Md. P. 4

The Rev. Mr. Lines spoke of the beating of a member of his congregation by a mob of hooded hoodlums.

The beaten man, bandleader at a white high school, was accused of making pro-integration remarks.

Other men have been beaten; other men have been slain; had their homes bombed; fled to the safety of other places.

Yet, because the first of those beaten, slain or exiled were dark men; because those who sympathized were afraid, no counter-swell of effective indignation or protest has met the rising tide of intimidation and oppression.

"Men are afraid to speak up," declared the Rev. Mr. Lines, "There is no freedom of speech except for those who choose to run with the pressure groups."

The blight of fear is upon the Southland.

The peddlers of hate who make up the pressure groups today are a small minority.

Today their victims are dark men and women who seek the equality and freedom promised in the scriptures and the Constitution.

Tomorrow their victims may be the entire South and the Nation.

Hitler had a small band of followers in the early thirties, and their slogan was "Tomorrow—the world."

That same sort of "tomorrow" can come to America.

38a 1957

SOUTHERN NEGRO LEADERS CONFERENCE

Negro leaders to meet, think over Ike's 'no'

News P. 2
Thurs. 2-7-57
Birm. Ala.

Negro leaders from "troubled areas" will meet in New Orleans Feb. 13 to consider President Eisenhower's "refusal to come South to appeal for law and order."

38a

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, speaking for a group of Negro leaders who met recently in Atlanta, said the president's negative reply was in response to an invitation issued by the Southern Negro Leaders Conference.

SHUTTLESWORTH said that along with the White House statement, the group also received word from Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell, who declared he would not grant an interview to representatives of the conference.

Members of the conference who signed the letter inviting President Eisenhower South were the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, the Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee, Fla., the Rev. T. J. Jemison of Baton Rouge, and Shuttlesworth.

In calling the New Orleans conference the leaders stated:

"At a time when our churches and homes are being bombed, when the darkness of each night brings physical danger to our people, President Eisenhower has decided not to come South to put the moral weight of his office against the breakdown of law and order.

"It is ironic that less than three weeks ago millions of dollars were spent on an inaugural ceremony, the climax of which was the oath by President Eisenhower 'to uphold the Constitution of the United States.'

"We Negro leaders of 29 communities and 10 states ask for nothing more than this—and we ask for it here in the South, and now."

SHUTTLESWORTH, in a prepared press release, said widespread disappointment at the president's decision was quickly expressed by major Negro leaders in both Northern and Southern communities.

"Significantly," he said, "many of these leaders were prominent supporters of President Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956."

The two-day conference is scheduled at the New Zion Church in New Orleans. Shuttlesworth said working sessions will be closed to the public, but a press conference would be held following the consultations.

Leaders to meet in N.O.

Afro American p.2 2-16-57

NEW ORLEANS — Leaders from the troubled areas all over the South will meet here Feb. 13 and 14 to consider President Eisenhower's refusal to make an appeal for law and order in the South.

Baltimore, Md.

In announcing the New Orleans conference, the Rev. Martin L. King Jr., of Montgomery, president of the Southern Leadership Conference, asserted:

* * *

"AT A TIME when our churches are being bombed, and the darkness of each night brings physical danger to our people, President Eisenhower has decided not to come out to put the moral weight of his office against this breakdown of law and order.

"It is ironic that less than three weeks ago millions of dollars were spent on an inaugural ceremony, the climax of which was the oath by President Eisenhower to uphold the Constitution of the United States.

"We, leaders from 29 communities and 10 states ask for nothing more than this . . . and we ask for it here in the South, now."

Afro 2-16-57

SPREAD disappointment at the President's decision was quickly expressed by major leaders in both north and southern communities. Significantly, many of these leaders were prominent supporters of President Eisenhower in his election campaigns of 1952 and 1956.

p.2

Simultaneously with the release of the White House communication the Southern Leadership Conference also received a message from Attorney Brownell declaring that he could not grant an interview to conference representatives.

The meeting in New Orleans will consider its reaction to this communication as well.

* * *

THE CONFERENCE will convene at 4 p.m. on February 13 and continue through the 14th at the New Zion Church, 2319 Law St., New Orleans, La. Rev. A. L. Davis Jr. is pastor.

The working sessions wil lbe closed to the public. However, following the consultations, a press conference will be held late Thursday afternoon, Feb 14.

Meanwhile, President Eisenhower said, in effect, Wednesday, that he was too busy to accept the invitation of colored Southern leaders to go South and speak out against the violence directed at colored people who are fighting against continued racial segregation on public buses and in public schools.

* * *

SHERMAN ADAMS, the assistant to the President, wrote the Conference on Transportation and Non-Violent Integration, which met in Atlanta early in January, that it was not possible for the President to schedule the requested speech. His reply was dated Jan. 18.

The request, sent Jan. 11, was signed by the Rev. C. K. Steele, a bus boycott leader in Tallahassee, Fla.; the Rev. F. L. Shuttleworth, Birmingham, Ala.; the Rev. T. L. Jemison, Baton Rouge, La., and the Rev. M. L. King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott.

Asked why it was not possible for him to go south and make the address, Mr. Eisenhower replied:

* * *

"WELL, I THINK have a pretty good and sizeable agenda on my desk every day, and, as you know, I insist on going for a bit of recreation every once in a while, and I do that because I think it is necessary to keep up the state of tiness essential to this job.

"Now, I have just got as much as I can do for the moment, and I will say this, however. I have expressed myself on this subject so often in the South, in the North, where ever I have been, that I don't know what another speech would do about the thing right now."

4 FAMU ROTC cadets second lieutenants

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Four Florida A. and M. University ROTC cadets were sworn in the U.S. Army as 2nd lieutenants during a brief ceremony in the office of the president on Tuesday, Feb. 5.

They are Elmer Tossie, Jacksonville; Jimmie Johnson, Jacksonville, and Timothy Langston, Tampa. The three will be sent to Fort Sam Houston, Fort Benning and Fort Knox, respectively.

The oath of office was administered by Lt. Harold Webb. Dr. George W. Gore, president of the university, presented them.

Negro Leaders Tell Ike:

'COME SOUTH OR WE'LL MARCH ON WASHINGTON!'

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 2-23-57 p.1

Negro Leaders Tell Ike:

'Come South or We'll March on Washington!'

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. p.3 Sat. 2-23-57 38a

By JOHN E. ROUSSEAU

NEW ORLEANS—The Southern Negro Leaders' Conference, composed of 97 leaders from 35 communities in 11 Southern states, met in New Zion Baptist Church, with Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Ala., presiding, and called upon President Eisenhower to come South to encourage the maintenance of law and order during the integration transition.

Left to right: The Revs. A. L. Davis Jr., New Orleans; F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham; M. L. King Jr., Montgomery, and T. J. Jemison, Baton Rouge, draw up message to Mr. Eisenhower

They proposed a "Pilgrimage of Prayer" to Washington if the President does not come South.

A telegram sent from the conference asked President Eisenhower to re-examine his decision not to speak out to the South on the question of law and order; and further, to call a White House Conference on the maintenance of law and order similar to those held on education and juvenile delinquency.

NEW ORLEANS—The Southern Negro Leadership Conference, in a closed session, elected Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Montgomery, Ala., as its first president here last week.*

Other officers are Revs. C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla., first vice president; A. L. Davis Jr., New Orleans, second vice president; Samuel Williams, Atlanta, third vice president; T. J. Jemison, Baton Rouge, secretary; Medgar W. Evers, Jackson, Miss., assistant secretary; Ralph Abernathy, Montgomery, treasurer, and F. L. Shuttlesworth, treasurer; Atty. Louis Berry, Alexandria, La., parliamentarian, and Atty. Israel N. Augustine Jr., New Orleans, executive committee member.

TELEGRAMS WERE also sent to Vice President Richard Nixon, Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Senator Thomas C. Hennings and Congressman Emanuel Celler. Signers of the telegrams were the Revs. M. L. King, Montgomery; F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham; T. J. Jemison, Baton Rouge; C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla., and A. L. Davis Jr., New Orleans.

The message to the President said, in part: "We believe your inability to come South is a profound disappointment to the millions of Americans of goodwill—North and South—who earnestly are looking to you for leadership and guidance in this period of inevitable social change.

"Mr. President, we urge you to give democratic leadership to the confused citizens of the South and the nation in this critical hour. We implore you to enunciate, whether in the North or South, an Eisenhower Doctrine for Democracy at Home.

"In the absence of some early and effective remedial action, we shall have no moral choice but to lead a Pilgrimage of Prayer to Washington.

"If you, our President, cannot come South to relieve our harassed people, we shall have to lead our people to you in the capital in order to call the nation's attention to the violence and organized terror directed toward men, women and children who merely seek freedom and first-class citizenship."

■

THE TELEGRAM to Vice President Nixon said, in part, "We note that you have been chosen to represent the United States Government at the Gold Coast Independence Celebration March 6, when that first Negro country in Africa receives its freedom from colonial domination.

"We are convinced that you will better be able to represent America's defense of justice and freedom at the celebration if, prior to your leaving for Africa, you arrange for the fact-finding trip we have proposed into the South."

Another telegram from the conference commended Attorney General Brownell for his statement, "that 165 years is far too long a period for Negroes to have sought justice."

The telegrams to Senator Hennings and Congressman Cellers urged that their committees hold sessions on Civil Rights Legislation in the Southern communities where violence has been directed toward Negro citizens who merely seek their rights under the American Constitution.

States represented at the conference were Louisiana, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Virgiina, Kentucky, Georgia, Mississippi, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Arkansas.

The conference ended with a public mass meeting in New Zion Baptist Church, the Rev. A. L. Davis Jr., pastor.

38a 1957

3 SOUTHERN LEADERS CALLED TO HEARINGS
HENNINGS SUBCOMMITTEE ON CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

REV. GUS COURTS, BELZONI, MISS.,
ATTY. AUSTIN T. WALDEN, REV. WILLIAM HOLMES BORDERS, ATLANTA, GA.

3 SOUTHERN LEADERS CALLED TO HEARINGS

Daily World Tues. 2-19-57

Atlanta, Ga. P. 1

BY ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

Three Southern leaders came to Washington last week to give a first hand account of pressures forced upon Negroes in their area to prevent them from using the franchise. They were expecting to appear before the Hennings subcommittee on Constitutional Rights.

These distinguished leaders were the Rev. Gus Courts of Belzoni, Miss.; Attorney Austin T. Walden and the Rev. William Holmes Borders of Atlanta, Ga.

They were originally scheduled to be heard on Thursday, the opening day of the hearings. But unfortunately the committee ran into two stumbling blocks from opponents of civil rights legislation. First they were refused permission to continue an all-day hearing by Senator Long of Louisiana.

According to Senate rules a committee is prohibited from holding hearings while Senate is in session unless permission is granted by unanimous consent. When the request was made in the Senate to continue the sessions all day, it was opposed by the Louisiana Senator, whose one vote would made it necessary for the hearings to adjourn until the following day.

The second road-block was a well organized one-man filibuster staged by Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina, who prolonged the hearings by cross questioning the first witness, Attorney General Herbet Brownell.

Brownell appeared before the subcommittee in support of the Administration's four-point civil rights bill. He was dragged-over-the-coals by the North Carolinian for a total of about nine hours, covering a period of three full half-days. Ervin's questioning could not officially be classified as a filibuster as they were confined entirely to legal questions and interpretations of the Constitution and existing statutes. The questions, however, became repititious and boring. When Ervin ran "out of steam" he turned the questioning over to Robert Young, a member of the staff of the Eastland Judicial Committee.

When there was some question as to whether a staff member should be permitted to question an Attorney General of the United States Hennings finally decided in favor of Ervin.

This procedure prevented other witnesses from being heard, who had been sitting in readiness for the three day period.

The subcommittee did hold all-day meetings Friday and Saturday since the Senate was not in session those days. After Brownell left the witness chair, they heard testimony from Senators John Stennis of Mississippi and Herman Talmadge of Georgia, both opponents of civil rights legislation.

The proponents testifying were Senators Paul H. Douglas of Illinois and Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania. Senator Ervin Ives of New York submitted his testimony for the record to expedite time.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, NAACP, was also waiting to be heard but he was willing to relent his time to the three gentlemen who had come such long way to tell their story to this committee Congressman Charles C. Diggs was also scheduled but was apparently willing to wait until a later date.

Finally Courts, Walden and Borders were called up, sworn in, and asked to return next week. This brought a wave of protest in the committee chambers from civil rights proponents who had waited to hear these three star witnesses.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau, NAACP, pleaded that they be given time to testify since they were in Washington at their own expense, and one was here at great physical sacrifice. He was referring to Courts who has suffered from a nervous condition since he was shot. This condition has affected his heart and he has no use of his left arm.

In spite of Mitchell's pleading, the committee chairman, Senator Thomas Hennings of Missouri, contended that there just wasn't time to hear them because the committee just couldn't sit all day, everyday and into the night on Saturday.

"I SOLEMNLY SWEAR" — These are the words uttered by three prominent Southerners who were requested to take an oath before giving their testimony before the Hennings Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. The Rev. Gus Courts, (left), who was shot in Belzoni, Mississippi, because of his efforts to get Negroes registered to vote; Attorney Austin T. Walden (center), and the Rev. William Holmes Borders, both of Atlanta. These three men sat through three days of hearings in Washington awaiting to be heard. Finally late Saturday afternoon they were called up before the subcommittee — all three at one time — and unlike other witnesses who had appeared, they were asked to take an oath although they were not subpoenaed. When the swearing-in ceremony was completed they were informed that there wasn't time for them to be heard, and they would have to return to Washington later the following week.

Mitchell contended that each of them could read their statements in 10 minutes, but Hennings declined to hear them. Then the NAACP executive asked that they be given time to summarize their statements in their own words, but this request was denied. He then asked if the statements could be submitted to the record and they be allowed to subject themselves to committee questions, but this plea was in vain.

The subcommittee adjourned at 4:00 P. M. Saturday. Atty. Walden said he had to return to Atlanta but would try to arrange to be back in Washington by Wednesday if he was assured that he would be heard.

It was not determined what Courts had planned to do. The committee was not sure at adjournment time whether it would be able to sit Monday. There was an executive meeting scheduled for the full Judiciary Committee, of which Senator Eastland is chairman, Monday morning. It was not likely that the Senate would give unanimous consent for it to sit Monday afternoon while the Senate is in session. So Washington and the world are still waiting to hear these men from the south outline the problems of the Negro in Mississippi and Georgia before a subcommittee of the Senate of the United States.

IN MEMPHIS — Russell R. Lasley, left, international vice president, Packinghouse Workers, presents $11,000 check to Dr. Martin L. King, center, for educational aspects of voting crusade of Southern Christian Leaders Conference. Ralph Helstein, right, international president of union, looks on.

38a

Negro Chicagoan Praises Memphis

Commercial Appeal p 3
Memphis Tenn.

Impressed By Opportunities Offered His Race

To The Commercial Appeal:

Today I sent the following letter to Edmund Orgill, Mayor of Memphis:

Sun. 5-5-57

"I was born in Memphis and left in 1910 to go to college. For many years, I have been a career social worker in Chicago.

"Recently, I had an opportunity to visit my home town and I am happy to say it is a clean and beautiful city, of which anyone can be proud.

"Being a Negro, I was especially impressed with the splendid high school buildings attended by a large number of students. This investment by the taxpayers warrants that these well trained citizens will not be confined to the same categories of work as their untrained ancestors.

"A friend of mine drove me all over the city and I was amazed to see so many beautiful and well-kept homes as well as attractive public housing projects in areas occupied by Negroes. We sincerely hope the city authorities consider these people an asset to the community. They have a great economic potential and I observed that about 80 per cent of the retail merchants in the Negro neighborhoods are white and seem to be enjoying a prosperous business.

"This is to say, briefly, that I enjoyed my short visit to my home town and congratulate you and your associates for the splendid job you are doing."

FRAYSER T. LANE
Frontiersman
2410 South Michigan Ave.
Chicago 16, Ill.

TVA Shuts Cafe For Race Policy

Post-Herald
Thurs. 6-13-57

Operators Didn't OK Serving Negroes

CHATTANOOGA, June 12 (AP) —The Tennessee Valley Authority has notified the operators of a small restaurant in the Electric Power Board building that it will cancel their license because they have not agreed to serve Negro employes of TVA should they apply for meals.

Randolph Perry, assistant to the TVA director of property and supply, said today notice of termination of the license, effective Sept. 4, was given Mrs. Clara Angel and her husband, R. E. Angel.

Perry said the TVA board of directors has a policy in line with the executive order of fair employment practice, which does not permit segregation.

A cafeteria at Wilson Dam in North Alabama has been operated on a desegregated basis for more than two years, Perry said.

KASPER'S ATTORNEY ASKS TO SEE RECORDS

Commercial Appeal
Memphis Tenn.

Wants Access To Evidence In Integration Case

Wed. 6-12-57

KNOXVILLE, June 11.—(UP) —An attorney for John Kasper Tuesday filed a motion in United States District Court demanding to inspect Government evidence in the Clinton, Tenn., school integration cases.

p 13

J. Benjamin Simmons of Washington based the motion on a United States Supreme Court ruling June 3 that Government records used in Federal criminal trials must be submitted to the defense.

Dist. Atty. John C. Crawford said he would reply to the motion within 10 days.

Kasper, a White Citizens Council organizer, is charged with criminal contempt of court for allegedly violating a permanent injunction against interfering with racial integration at Clinton High School.

He and 15 other white persons go on trial July 8 on charges of contempt by conspiring and acting in concert to force the withdrawal of Negroes from the school.

Oak Ridge!

Courier p 7
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Complete Integration Near in Atomic City

By TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON
(Courier Staff Writer)

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. — This "Atomic City" is all dressed up and she's looking mighty good and pretty in her new outfit . . . She's wearing her "integration gown" and it's fitting her like a Dior. Except for two or three small facial blemishes—soon to be removed—Oak Ridge is a brand new person!

Sat 6-15-57

Eight years and two months ago, The Courier came to the Atomic City and we went away with a sickened stomach and a stench in our nostrils over what we found.

We made much noise about it and showed the pictures of the filthy, horrible slum housing; we told about the lack of Negroes in the echelon of the Atomic Energy Commission's nuclear and fission work; we let the world know about the shocking inequities in a city owned and operated by Uncle Sam himself.

In fact, we brought on a joint Senate-House investigation here in Oak Ridge.

Well, we are happy to report but for two or three minor items, the integration picture at Oak Ridge is just about perfect.

There isn't a single slum area anywhere—and Negroes are living in sections other than those usually called "Negro" sections; the churches have Negro members; every street in the "Negro" areas (and all others) is a well paved street, not a "topped" surface either.

■

TOO, IN THOSE highly secret facilities which bear the fascinating titles of X-10, K-25, ORINS, etc., there are Negroes hard at work in the realm of science to help make this a safer and better world for all of us. They weren't there in 1949, but they are there now!

So, doff your hat to Oak Ridge, Tenn., which has come a long way in making itself a true model of democracy, and when the town opens up her bowling places and theatres, you can mark her record "100 per cent good."

These gains have been achieved mainly during the last two years, with the exception of the housing which was getting under way when we went in 1949.

The first Negro scientist came here in 1950 and left last August to take a supervisory position at Palmer, Ohio, with Union Carbide and Chemical Company, the actual makers of atomic and nuclear products and materials. He was Dr. Al Stewart, a chemist from the University of St. Louis. He was at X-10.

■

TODAY THERE are three Negroes engaged in scientific work at Oak Ridge. They are:

Dr. David H. Woodbury Jr., only 27, a graduate of Johnson C. Smith University, who is a bio-chemist now doing research in the control of dangerous mechanisms in the field of radiation.

Dr. Alonzo Fairbanks, a physicist from the University of St. Louis, who is carrying out a one-year research program.

Mrs. Cooper, wife of a faculty member at Knoxville College, who is on the math panel at X-10 on a part-time basis.

Over on the AEC side, "On the Hill," as it is called, there are three Negroes in responsible posts. They are:

Charles Hargraves, also a Johnson C. Smith man and son of the late W. C. Hargraves, who is a technical abstractor.

Nathaniel Johnson of New York City, a commercial artist, whose posters adorn not only Oak Ridge, but decorate many faraway places in the world.

Miss Sandrith is a secretary in the AEC offices.

■

THERE HAVE BEEN other Negroes at Oak Ridge in scientific work in between times. They have included:

Dr. Evelyn Gadsen, a Virginia State College graduate; Miss Doris Scott, a nurse at X-10; Jimmy Henderson, a plant pathologist; Dr. Donald Edwards of A&T College; Dr. Gladys Russell, also of A&T, and Mrs. Lila Carter, who did research in plant bio-chemistry.

Oak Ridge eating places serve Negroes, and this was accomplished in a most sagacious and unusual manner with the cooperation of the newly formed Oak Ridge Community Relations Council. Dr. Alonzo Fairbanks was the "guinea pig."

The council, which includes Dr. Woodbury and E. H. Upton, a very dedicated young man who is active in all community affairs, talked with the manager of Oak Terrace, the largest and finest place here.

■

THE MANAGER said he would serve Negroes, but wanted to run a two- or three-week trial period."

So, for two weeks Dr. Fairbanks went to the Oak Terrace every night for dinner and every night accompanied by a different white couple. Out of it came a total of two questions to the manager and one was for information only. There was just the one objection. That was the end of that.

The housing integration came about with a bit of turmoil. Charles Hargraves was first to move to the "dormitories." His room was fired into with pistol bullets, but he stayed on, and later was joined by Nathaniel Johnson. Now that is accepted generally here.

Two Negroes have served on the City Council through elections. They are Herbert Teasley, first to be elected, and Dr. Stewart who succeeded him, and helped write the city charter.

THE CHURCHES are integrated and Dr. Woodbury and his wife, the former Miss Mildred Taylor of Danville, Va., are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Woodbury is superintendent of the nursery, and Dr. Woodbury is a program chairman in the church. Nineteen whites quit the church out of 900 members when the Woodburys joined. Now they are back.

There are two Negro women members of the sacrosanct League of Women Voters, one of them Mrs. Woodbury, the other is Mrs. Birdie Scott.

The high school is integrated and graduated four Negroes in a class of 327 Friday night.

Oak Ridge's integration picture also embraces the YWCA which is already integrated. The YMCA is one of the three remaining blemishes. Recreation is also on an integrated basis, thanks to the tireless energy of William (Bill) Scott Jr., recreation director.

Bill has a team in the Intermediate Baseball League of 13-15-year olds, and a team in the Junior Baseball League of 16-19-olds. This team last year played the white Clinton team in Clinton.

Oak Ridge High School in addition to being integrated on the student level, also has a Negro instructor, Fred Brown, who teaches industrial education. He is a Tuskegee graduate. The Rev. C. C. Fuller (colored) has been a vice president of the Oak Ridge Ministerial Association.

BUT IF PROGRESS is to continue in Oak Ridge, according to Dr. Woodbury, the town must have more Negro scientists. Dr. Woodbury says he and his associates would be willing to help Negro scientists get into the projects.

He warns that would-be applicants must definitely be qualified, or they might as well not apply.

Dr. Alexander Hollander, chief of the division, has been lauded as an extremely fair man, whose policy is to hire scientists not on the basis of their color or nationality, but solely on their ability.

Well, there's the challenge, scientists. The Atomic City and its Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies (ORINS) await you—all dressed up in their new and pretty integration gown.

Kasper And Group Denied Separate Trials In Clinton

Daily Worker
Birm, Ala.
Sat 3-23-57

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., — (INS) — U. S. District Judge Robert L. Taylor Friday denied seperate trials for the 17 persons accused of stirring racial disorder in Clinton last fall.

The Judge announced he would set a date for the mass trial next Monday.

John Kasper and 16 others are charged with criminal contempt of court for violation of a permanent injunction prohibiting interference with the peaceful integration of Clinton High School.

Attorney's for the defense had filed written motions for the 16 residents of Anderson County, contending that a joint trial with John Kasper would prejudice the case.

Kasper has already been sentenced one year in prison for a previous contempt violation of the court order, and is appealing his case.

In making his decision for one trial, Judge Taylor said that "no sound reasons" were given for granting them separately.

TVA kicks out Jim-crow cafe

Afro-American
Balto. Md.
3-23-57

~~CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Angel, operators of a cafe in a Tennessee Valley Authority building, last week were notified that their license has been canceled because of their refusal to serve colored TVA employees.~~

~~Randolph Berry, assistant to the TVA director of property and supply, said no reply has been received from the Angels with reference to the termination of license, effective Sept. 4.~~

Probe Of Racial Unrest Is Asked In Tennessee

News + Courier
Chars. 7-4-57
Charleston S.C.

Lawyers For 15 In Clinton Case Wire Eastland

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. July 3 (Special) — Lawyers for the defense of the "Clinton 15" have telegraphed Sen. James O. Eastland of Mississippi requesting a Congressional investigation of the forces behind racial unrest in Anderson and Knox counties.

The wire to Sen. Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and Internal Security Subcommittee, said:

"We request that your committee immediately give serious consideration to conducting a full-scale investigation into suspected subversive activities behind racial unrest in Anderson and Knox counties, Tenn.

"Our initial investigation indicates an urgent need for your committee to make a thorough investigation with a view of prosecutions for un-American activities. There is evidence of expenditure of large sums of money to influence the thinking and actions of individuals in this community by organizations dedicated to the destruction of the American way of life and system of government."

"We will be glad to furnish you a list of people that we believe should be considered for investigation. Their activities, in an area which includes the Atomic Energy Center of Oak Ridge, Tenn., are cause for special concern. Respectfully, Robert L. Dobbs, Thomas Paige Gore, W. M. Shaw, of the counsel for the defense."

The "Clinton 15" will go on trial here Monday in U. S. District Court on charges of violating an injunction barring prosegregation activities in Clinton. Disturbances followed integration of Clinton High School last year.

SOUTH'S CHIEFS SEEN COURTING CIVIL WAR

Commercial Appeal
Memphis Tenn.
Mon 9-2-57

Integrationist Hits Byrnes, Byrd And Coleman SPEAKS AT MONTEAGLE

By The Associated Press

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Sept. 1 —Activities of a "small group of Southern states could plunge the nation into another armed rebellion in which the South stands to lose everything it has gained."

That was the prediction Sunday of Aubrey Williams, former head of the National Youth Administration, before the 25th anniversary of the Highlander Folk School here.

King On Program

On the program with Mr. Williams, who was at one-time assistant to Harry Hopkins, an adviser to President Roosevelt, was Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who led the boycott of segregated buses in Montgomery last year.

"Men in the South," Mr. Williams' said, "are acting and talking in the manner of persons who have forgotten what happened to their states in a similar stand against the morals of mankind."

"Southern leaders," he said "are counseling complete defiance of the Federal court decisions aimed at extending equal protection under the law to the Negro people."

Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia, Gov. James Byrnes of South Carolina, and other leaders are suggesting defiance of all Federal law, Mr. Williams said, whenever the laws conflict with their term "the Southern way of life," Mr. Williams said.

"The right to criticize any law, passed or proposed or any decisions of any court, is the right of every citizen," he continued. "It is one thing to criticize and work for the repeal of a law or to change the basis of the law in order to secure a different decision by the court, but it is quite another thing to disobey, defy, 'plough around' a law or a decision of the courts.

Disagreement or Defiance

"One is a constructive act of citizenship, the other is a destructive act of citizenship. There is a vast difference between disagreement and defiance."

Mr. Williams quoted Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi as saying, "we have no intention of complying with the decision (the Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation in the public schools) which we regard to be utterly unconstitutional."

"It is one thing," Mr. Williams said, "for him to work and to advocate defeat of a Civil Rights Bill, but it is quite another thing for him to defy the act and to plan with others who are also officers of the peace, open defiance of what has become law. No reasonable person can describe such an act as anything else than a violation of his oath and a breach of the peace.

"When six candidates for the governorship of Alabama in the coming election, openly advocate circumventing and open defiance of the Federal court decisions and Federal laws, they go beyond the rights and privileges of any citizen . . . they are advocating defiance and rebellion against the Government," he stated.

From Defiance To Violence

"When the attorney general of the State of Alabama takes it upon himself to engage in a seizure of records of a citizens organization whose activities are limited to protesting a law which had wiped out their right to vote, then the attorney general is engaged in a violation of the very office and oath which he has sworn to support and maintain," Mr. Williams contended.

"It is only a short step from defiance of the law to general violence," he said.

"The conduct of Southern leaders," he concluded, "is that of men who have not thought through the full implications and potential consequences of what they are doing . . . they are following a course which will lead only to continuous strife and trouble and which may lead . . . to a situation which could quickly get out of control. Who today can say what the end result will be?"

CLEMENT TO OFFER SEGREGATION PLAN

Times-Picayune
New Orleans

Tennessee Assembly to Get 5 Bills Enabling Boards to Delay Integration

Sun. 1-6-57

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 5—Gov. Frank G. Clement will propose to the Tennessee Legislature next week a series of bills designed to strengthen the hand of local school boards in dealing with segregation problems.

Mr. Clement will make a special address to the Legislature on the segregation issue on Wednesday, when the five bills are expected to be presented.

Backers of the bills say they embody the "best" features of laws enacted in North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Mississippi and other Southern states. They say the laws do not in themselves seek to preserve segregation in the public schools, and do not prohibit local school boards from adopting integration.

Instead, they set up administrative procedures under which advocates of the measures believe it will be possible for a local school system to delay desegregation for three to four years.

The bills are described as unlikely to please either the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People or the pro-segregation organizations, such as White Citizens Councils.

The Legislature will convene at noon Monday and receive copies of a study of racial problems. The report will cover the Tennessee public schools and laws enacted on segregation by other states since it was outlawed in May, 1954, by the United States Supreme Court. The study was prepared by two Nashville attorneys at the request of Governor Clement, who described it as the most complete document of its kind available.

Mr. Clement's address on Wednesday will be in advance of his "state of the state" address in mid-January. Normally that is a Tennessee Governor's first message to the Legislature.

In his segregation address Mr. Clement is expected to ask "moderation," and to declare that he will resist with all the force available any effort to abolish the public school system in Tennessee. He also is expected to express opposition to any measure that will voice defiance of the United States Supreme Court.

The series of bills probably will be introduced immediately at the end of the address.

The major bill is the one strengthening the powers of city and county school boards. It would authorize them to determine the schools that students were to attend and to require hearings on requests for transfer from one school to another. The boards also would be given authority to employ counsel.

Other bills in the series are said to deal with school buses, finances and necessary adjustments in existing state statutes.

In none of them is there a reference to race or to the court decisions outlawing compulsory segregation.

FULL SHELBY BACKING

Commercial Appeal

Document Pledges Efforts To Preserve Rights—Clinton Echoes

Tues. 1-8-57

(Text on Page 13)

By JAMES EWING

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

Memphis, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 7. — A Tennessee manifesto denouncing the United States Supreme Court had 69 signers Monday as the 80th General Assembly opened.

Among the signers were most administration leaders and the entire Shelby County delegation.

Identical copies of the resolution were introduced by Senate Speaker Jared Maddux and 11 other senators and House Speaker James L. Bomar and 56 other representatives.

The Senate is composed of 33 members. The House of Representatives has 99 members.

Await Clement Address

Action is expected to be deferred until after Gov. Frank Clement addresses a joint session of both houses Wednesday on segregation problems.

The manifesto "deplored and denounced" the decision of the United States Supreme Court outlawing public school segregation laws as "an abuse of judicial power" and an invasion of rights reserved to the states.

It resolved to maintain and defend the Constitutions of the United States and of Tennessee against every attempt "whether foreign or domestic" to weaken and destroy the structure of the state and Federal Government.

It also pledged support to an amendment to the United States Constitution allowing states to operate racially separate but "substantially equal" public schools.

It proposed the Senate and House pledge "firm intention to take all appropriate measures, honorably and legally available, to resist all illegal encroachments upon the powers reserved to the State of Tennessee in order to control its own institutions according to its exclusive judgment."

Other states were called upon to join in efforts to "prohibit further encroachments by the Federal Government upon the powers reserved to the separate states and the people thereof."

Cites Clinton Trouble

The manifesto cited experience in the integration of Clinton High School as an example of "problems that have harrassed and hampered students of both the white and Negro races" and said this has greatly interferred with orderly training and education of the students.

"Disastrous consequences" werecited at Clinton, the District of Columbia and elsewhere. Public school officials of Tennessee were said to be apprehensive that compliance with the court decree will result in "severe damage to the public school system of this state and undermine the great progress that has been accomplished in public education in Tennessee through the years."

Anti-Integration Bills Introduced

Times-Picayune
Wed. 1-9-57

By GAVIN SCOTT

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 8 (AP) —Gov. Frank Clement's top legislative leaders introduced surprises at the opening of the general assembly harshly criticizing the United States supreme court's ban on segregated schools.

Minutes later a pupil assignment bill designed to meet the problems raised by the integration rulings was introduced by Sen. Clifford Allen (D-Nashville), but this was not an administration measure.

The resolutions were offered in both houses of the new session, pledging opposition to what was termed "any illegal encroachments" on the state's control "of its domestic institutions according to its own exclusive judgment."

House Speaker James L. Bomar and Senate Speaker Jared Maddux ordered the resolutions held on the desk for final action at a later date. They both signed the resolutions as cosponsors.

Tennessee Governor Takes Decisive Stand On Issue; Legislators Sign Manifesto

Commercial Appeal
p. 2 Section 5

Memphis State College May Attain University Status Under Compromise Plan — Shelby Introduces Anti-NAACP Legislation

Memphis, Tenn.

By LOUIS SILVER

TENNESSEE Gov. Frank G. Clement took his first clear-cut public stand on school segregation last week with a five-bill legislative program on the controversial subject.

Sun., 1-13-57

The Governor's proposals to the Tennessee General Assembly in Nashville headed the Mid-South news in a week that saw the lawmakers themselves take a strong stand against the 1954 segregation decision by the United States Supreme Court.

Memphis State College supporters got a big morale boost with the news that Governor Clement would support the fight to change the name of the institution to Memphis State University. The Governor announced that decision in an amplified long distance telephone call to about 500 students and faculty members who gathered in the Memphis State student center.

Louis Silver

Reaction from legislators was generally favorable to the Governor's segregation proposals that would:

Give boards of education in each local school system the full power to place, assign and transfer pupils under its jurisdiction; allow local school officials to provide separate schools for white and Negro children on a voluntary basis; clarify and strengthen the law authorizing transfer of pupils from one school system to another; authorize two or more local boards to operate schools jointly; and amend the School Bus Transportation Law to make it conform "to the program herein outlined."

No mention of race is included in the Governor's proposals.

The legislators themselves introduced a manifesto into both houses of the Tennessee Legislature at the opening 1957 session which "deplored and denounced" the decision of the Supreme Court outlawing public school segregation laws as "an abuse of judicial power" and an invasion of states' rights.

Ovation Greets Governor

Governor Clement's announcement to Memphis State supporters produced a thunderous ovation. J. M. Smith, college president, said a bill elevating the college to a university would be introduced Tuesday in the Legislature.

The compromise proposal—efforts had been made to make Memphis State part of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville—calls for the local institution to remain under the State Board of Education. Effective date for the change in status would be Sept. 1.

The Shelby County delegation introduced two bills in both houses of the Legislature aimed at curtailing activities of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

One bill would require registration of persons and organizations engaged in promoting or opposing race legislation. The other requires filing detailed information with the secretary of state by fund-raising organizations engaged in litigation in which they do not have a "pecuniary right or liability."

Roving Judgeship Asked

Senator Albert Gore (D., Tenn.) announced in Washington he favors a new roving Federal judge for Tennessee with statewide jurisdiction. His announcement came as Chairman James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee introduced an omnibus Administration bill to create two additional circuit judgeships and 35 new district judgeships.

The new judgeships would include a roving judge for Tennessee as well as a second permanent judgeship for Middle Tennessee, and a second judgeship for South Mississippi.

Millsaps Fitzhugh, United States district attorney here, has been strongly mentioned as a possible appointee for a new Tennessee judgeship.

SEGREGATION BILLS APPROVED BY HOUSE

Commercial Appeal

Clement's School Measures Pass Easily

Fri. 1-18-57

SENATE STUDIES THEM

Memphis, Tenn.

By JAMES EWING

From The Commercial Appeal Nashville Bureau

P. 23

NASHVILLE, Jan. 17. — Gov. Frank Clement's five school segregation bills won overwhelming approval in the House Thursday and cleared a major hurdle in the Senate.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, which had previously approved four of the bills, recommended the fifth bill for passage after hearing the state's highest legal officers express the conviction that all five are constitutional.

Local Bills Are Due

The Senate, which will consider local bills only Friday and Monday, is expected to take up the school bills as the first order of business Tuesday.

Senate Speaker Jared Maddux predicted they would all be approved.

The House and the Senate Judiciary Committee also approved the "Tennessee Manifesto" which deplores the United States Supreme Court ruling on school segregation.

Representative Damon R. Headden, administration floor leader, steered the five bills to passage in the House. Efforts by the Hamilton County delegation to have them referred to the Judiciary Committee for further study were voted down.

The three bills strengthening pupil assignment powers of local school boards, authorizing transfer of pupils from one system to another and amending the pupil transportation law were approved without a dissenting vote. The Hamilton delegation was listed as present and not voting.

Opposed By 2 Votes

Only two votes were cast against the other two. Representatives G. L. Aderhold of Etowah and Omar Robinson of Rogersville voted against the bill authorizing voluntary segregation of schools.

Mrs. Brown Taylor of Nashville and Representative Clarence Schettler of Sweetwater voted against the bill authorizing two or more school boards to operate schools jointly by contract.

Approval by the Senate Judiciary Committee of the bill authorizing voluntary segregated schools followed testimony by Atty. Gen. George F. McCanless, Asst. Atty. Gen. Nat Tipton, former Asst. Atty. Gen. Harry Carter and Val Sanford, former law partner of Governor Clement.

All expressed the belief the bills are constitutional and that if any one of them were invalidated by the courts it would not affect constitutionality of the others.

Some of the senators had expressed concern over the voluntary segregation bill. Senator Clifford Allen of Nashville contended it is counter to the Supreme Court ruling that separate educational facilities are "inherently unequal."

Statement Released

Mr. Phillips and Mr. Sanford, who drew the bills following an extensive study and report on laws passed by other states dealing with school segregation, released a statement to the committee which said in part:

"Under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the school segregation cases any statute which results in racial segregation against the wishes of the people involved clearly will be held unconstitutional by the courts.

"But this statute does not come within that bar. It does not involve either of the two principles above set forth. In the first place any segregation which results from this statute will not be the result of the will of the state or of any state agency but of the voluntary election of all persons involved.

"Second, there can be no discrimination under this bill, no deprivation of any rights, because the bill does not compel action, it merely permits the citizens to act. A person is not being deprived of a right when the course which he follows is one which he voluntarily elects to follow."

Mr. McCanless testified, under questioning by Senator Allen, that the bill would not guarantee retention of segregation at a white school if a Negro sought to enter the school.

Tennessee Pulls Punch at Court

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
2-28-57

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 27 (AP)—The Tennessee Senate approved by voice vote today the "Tennessee manifesto" deploring the U. S. Supreme Court integration rulings but flatly refused to approve an interposition resolution.

The "manifesto" was approved in the House last month. It is not a joint resolution and does not require Gov. Frank Clement's signature.

The interposition resolution failed of passage by a 2-2 vote with 20 senators voting present. Passage would require 17 votes.

Tennessee Lawmakers Follow Clement Lead on Segregation

Journal + Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
P. 7-E
Sun. 3-24-57

Governor's Middle-of-Road Bills Adopted, Other Legislation Fails

By JOE HATCHER

Staff Writer, The Nashville Tennessean
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 23—Through the 75 days of the Tennessee legislative session just ended, the outstanding feature has been the refusal of the membership at any time to be stampeded or pushed into the segregation maelstrom of legislation.

Moderation and middle-of-the-road approach to the issue was the carefully mapped policy of the administration of Gov. Frank Clement, and the Legislature itself never yielded to pressures to deviate to any extent.

The governor's proposed school program, involving the pupil assignment principle, was enacted early, and since that time one House or another has rejected all moves for stronger legislation.

Condemn High Court

Both Houses did adopt somewhat watered-down resolutions condemning the U.S. Supreme Court on the grounds that the court was infringing on States' rights, and writing laws in decisions. But the interposition resolution was kept tightly bottled up.

The Senate beat back a bill to ease the compulsory attendance laws, after defeating all efforts to write such easements in the early assignment bills. The bill that would authorize the governor to close schools if threatened with integration troubles also was defeated.

A last-minute move to ask the governor to use police powers to transfer Negro students from the Clinton School was bottled in committee after the county's representative refused to sponsor the resolution and asked it be held in committee.

An invitation for Rep. John Bell Williams of Mississippi to address the Legislature became a major issue in the House, and was soundly defeated eventually, upon motion, strangely enough, by a West Tennessee member from the strong segregation areas.

Some lesser laws that may be involved in the segregation question were passed. The Memphis delegation sponsored laws that would outlaw barratry, or the practice of sponsoring or paying for lawsuits. But the laws were written to apply equally to the NAACP, the White Council, or any other organization in segregation matters. Likewise the Memphis delegation put through a bill requiring such organizations to register and account for funds, but again applying to all such organizations without mention of race, creed or color.

TENNESSEE

Gov. Clement, in signing the bills, declared that he did so with the understanding that they applied to all organizations. Discrimination may be possible, but the laws themselves make no such provisions, sponsors explained.

Actually there was one segregation bill for schools enacted. Nashville's Sen. Harlan Dodson, later voted the outstanding member of the upper house, sponsored a bill that would permit boards of education to operate schools segregated by sexes. No racial restraints of any kind were provided, but only the change from co-educational systems to schools for male and for female — presumably for both races on an integrated basis, if decided by local boards.

Local Authority

The bill followed the over-all principle of the vesting of all authority over schools with local boards, and almost complete separation from any state authority.

The ultimate result is that each county, city or special school district will face its own integration problems.

The Federation for Constitutional Government, the leading segregation group in the state, failed to get sponsors for a majority of the bills it sponsored in either house. The key bill to ease compulsory attendance laws failed to pass.

One other measure, passed after several failures and much maneuvering, might be indirectly classed as segregation legislation, or at least economical pressure on the question.

The new law removed 13,000 illegitimate children from the state's child welfare rolls—without discrimination, however. Instead, some $2,800,000 was made available to meet cases of need for illegitimates, at the discretion of county authorities. A large portion of the dependents were assumed to be Negro children, from the illustrations given by several members in their arguments.

The plan removes the children from the federal-aid lists, where no control is possible by local authorities.

But, all in all, the Legislature adhered strictly to a moderate, middle-of-the-road approach all the way.

Federal Intervention Called Illegal at Clinton

Post + Times Herald
Wash. D.C.
Fri. 4-12-57

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 11 (AP)—Terming segregation "more American than the hot dog and baseball," defense attorneys have called Federal intervention illegal in the Clinton integration cases.

The assertions were contained in final defense briefs filed yesterday in United States District Court on behalf of 16 Anderson County residents charged with criminal contempt in connection with racial disorders.

Race Baiter Dies While Awaiting Court Action

Chicago Ill.
Sun. 3-31-57

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A 41-year-old pro-segregationist here, awaiting court action on federal charges of interfering with racial integration at Clinton high school, died here last week, cheating the court before it could try him.

He is John Gates, owner of a cafe where White Citizens allegedly held meetings and a sidekick of race baiter John Kasper.

Gates was one of 18 whites arrested on federal warrants under charges of criminal contempt of court for the alleged violation of an injunction prohibiting interference with the peaceful integration of the Clinton high school.

Gates was free under $5,000 bond at the time of his death.

Segregation Trial Opens In Tennessee

Advertiser P. 1
Jul. 7-9-57
Montgomery, Ala.

Clinton Defense Blocks Seating Of Negro On Jury

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 8 (AP)—The defense won a hard-fought victory today in gaining the dismissal "for cause" of the first Negro appearing as a prospective juror in the Clinton segregation trial.

U. S. Dist. Judge Robert L. Taylor dismissed the talesman, Albert Cloud, 26, errand boy at a Tazewell, Tenn., bank after Cloud acknowledged he "couldn't feel kindly" toward the lone Northern defendant, Frederick John Kasper of Washington, D. C.

Cloud, testifying in a low mumble, insisted he wasn't prejudiced and wouldn't be "embarrassed" if he sat on the jury in a major test case over segregation.

Defense Atty. Robert L. Dobbs repeatedly sought to disqualify Cloud-first on the ground that as a nonproperty owner he was "not qualified" to serve as a juror, and secondly because he had admitted feeling "unfriendly" toward Kasper.

Taylor patiently went over and over Cloud's reactions to the Clinton integration dispute. He refused to disqualify Cloud because of his status as a nonproperty owner, ruling that it was not necessary to be "a freeholder" to become a juror in a federal court.

FIRST FOUR SEATED

However, when Dobbs pressed Cloud with reminders that Kasper had engaged in "many unfriendly conversations" toward Negroes and suggested that Cloud must feel some hostility toward him, the talesman admitted:

"I don't feel as kindly to him as to the others."

With that, Taylor waved him aside, saying: "All right, Albert. You are excused."

Earlier, before a packed crowd of spectators in the air-conditioned courtroom, the defense and prosecution agreed on the seating of the first four jurors—three men and one woman.

Taylor indicated he expected the full jury to be empaneled Wednesday. He excused all defense witnesses until Thursday morning, but instructed prosecution witnesses to return tomorrow.

"If you get any telephone calls from anybody, don't answer them," the judge admonished the jurors. "Don't read the newspapers, and don't look at television."

The first four jurors seated were:

John T. Reynolds. 27. LaFollete

the full jury to be empaneled Wednesday. He excused all defense witnesses until Thursday morning, but instructed prosecution witnesses to return tomorrow.

"If you get any telephone calls from anybody, don't answer them," the judge admonished the jurors. "Don't read the newspapers, and don't look at television."

Advertiser

FIRST FOUR SEATED

The first four jurors seated were: P. 2-a

John T. Reynolds, 27, LaFollete bank teller.

W. E. Coker, 67, former justice of the peace, from Louisville, Tenn.

Powell May, 64, retired Western Union operations manager, of Knoxville.

Mrs. Jessie Burnett, of Talbott, Tenn., former school teacher and mother of three grown children.

A bare sprinkling of Negroes sat with whites in the middle section of the three-section spectators' seats, solidly flanked by two all-white groups.

During the day, Taylor ruled that none of the jurors would be "required" to state an opinion about mixing whites and Negroes in public schools. But he said they could do so if they desired.

REJECTS RACE MIXING

Reynolds, the first juror seated, told the court he believes federal court orders should be obeyed, but he declared:

"I don't believe in mixing the races."

On trial in what has been heralded as a major test in the bitter controversy over segregation are 15 residents of the little (pop. 4,500) Cumberland Valley town of Clinton, 20 miles northwest of here, and Kasper, 27.

Frederick John Kasper, 27, former Washington bookseller and executive secretary of the Seaboard Council of White Citizens Councils, Washington, D. C.

Lawrence J. Brantley, 50, Clinton car dealer and former grocer.

William Brakebill, 41, service station and grocery operator, Clinton.

The Rev. Alonzo Bullock, 50, carpenter and part-time Baptist preacher, Clinton.

Clyde Cook, 35, fireman at an atomic energy installation in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Clifford Carter, 35, laborer, Clinton.

Edward Henson Nelson, 22, grocery clerk, Clinton.

Zella Nelson, 19, his wife.

Virgil Cleo Nelson, 23, carpenter and brother of Henson.

Chris Foust, 35, Anderson County school bus driver.

John B. Long, 31, house painter, Clinton.

J. L. Coley, 43, carpenter, Clinton.

Raymond Wood, 35, house painter, Clinton.

W. H. Till, 43, Oak Ridge machinist and segregation advocate, former White Citizens Council leader.

Mrs. Mary Nell Currier, 39, housewife, Clinton.

Thomaes Sanders, 42, employe of Knoxville Utilities Board.

The defendants are accused of violating a federal court injunction, issued by Judge Robert L. Taylor last September, forbidding any interference with the peaceful integration of 12 Negro students in Clinton's previously all-white high school.

Both sides staked out the major issues in the case with questions emphaszing constitutional guarantees of the right of free speech and assembly, the power of federal courts to enforce anti-violence injunctions, and the debate over mixing whites and Negroes in school.

MAXIMUM SENTENCE

Conviction could lead to a maximum sentence of six months in jail or a $1,000 fine, or both.

But the overriding point of interest is whether the federal government, through the courts, can get a Southern jury to convict white defendants accused of violating a federal injunction.

Outlining the "ground rules" for the trial, Taylor said the government must prove that the "Clinton 15" committed "overt acts—that they congregated along the path taken by the Negro children going to school" and acted "in an unruly or threatening manner."

In addition, he said, the government must show that the defendants "had knowledge and a reasonable understanding" of the injunction he issued last fall.

HISTORIC QUESTION

Taylor issued the injunction, following the historic Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954, ruling that segregaton of whites and Negroes in the nation's public schools violates the U. S. Constitution.

The injunction was issued after a series of outbreaks of mob violence in the Clinton area, starting over Labor Day weekend last year. At issue in the current trial are renewed outbreaks in November and December, in whch crowds of white men and a few women threatened the Negro students and bloodied the nose of the Rev. Paul Turner, white pastor of Clinton's First Baptist church. Turner was beaten after safely escorting some of the Negros to the school Dec. 4.

As the trial began, members of a battery of 19 defense lawyers emphasized their reluctance to have the "Clinton 15" tried with Kasper, ardent segregationist and executive secretary of the Seaboard Council of white citizens councls.

Blast rocks Chattanooga

38a Tenn

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 5—(AP)—Police today were investigating the third dynamiting incident in Negro sections here since Oct. 27.

The latest explosions occurred Sunday night or early Monday, virtually destroying a vacant house and causing several hundred dollars damage to another.

The houses were located in a new subdivision designed exclusiveely for Negroes. None of the 65 houses there is occupied.

Clinton

The shattered four-room dwelling, valued at $7400, was virtually a total loss. Police said all its windows were broken, the front door splintered, the concrete block foundation blown off on two sides, and a hole torn in the hallway floor.

Investigators found unexploded dynamite under the flooring of one of the houses.

The Oct. 27 explosion ripped a hole in a field near a Negro occupied area. The following night, a house rented by a Negro couple was damaged by a dynamite blast in the front yard.

Police said they had no theories on the reason for the explosions.

Negro Asks Right To Use Memphis Library

Commercial Appeal
Memphis, Tenn.
7-17-57

Memphis, July 16 (AP)—A Memphis Negro asked the Memphis Public Library Board today for permission to use the facilities of the main City Library, now closed to members of his race.

The request was made by Jesse H. Turner through his attorney. He asked that his children as well as himself be issued library cards.

The City operates separate libraries for Negroes and whites.

Shun Tennessee Roads On Visit To Religious Shrine, Groups Told

World Sat 8-17-57 B'ham, Ala. P. 2

38a

BY GEORGE M. COLEMAN

ATLANTA, Ga. — (SNS) —

The top official of the "Field of the Woods" religious shrine Wednesday declared that all people are welcome to visit the "Biblical Wonder of the World" regardless of race or church affiliation, but urged visiting Atlantans to shun Tennessee roads and "come by the Georgia route."

The declaration and plea came from The Cleveland Tennessee, pub-relations center for the Church of God in Prophecy, owner of the shrine which has been threatened by alleged members of the Ku Klux Klan.

M. A. Tomlinson, general overseer of the shrine, locaetd in southern North Carolina, declared: "We don't have any discrimination whatsoever. We have the place open for all groups, nationalities and churches."

NO RESTRICTIONS

"There are no restrictions placed on colored people," Mr. Tomlinson said. He said the manager of the Woods had reported the incident to him, and they were looking into the matter.

He referred to a report that members of the Klan had burned a cross a few miles from the shrine last Saturday, and allegedly threatened to bomb the actual property.

News of the event had brought inquiries to this newspaper concerning the possibility of further trouble at the shrine.

"We don't know what it amounts to," Mr. Tomlinson said, but quickly pointed out that "it seems to be on the Tennessee side. There has been no hint of anger in North Carolina."

BEST ROUTE

He explained that the field of the Woods is located in Cherokee County, North Carolina, near Pope County Tennessee. Pamplets have been passed out listing the shrine's location as 51.2 miles from Cleveland, Tennessee. The best route is on highway 294, leading from Turletown, Tennessee to the Hiawartha Dam. The shrine is also located near the north border of Georgia.

Tomlinson said the only reason for trouble he could think of was the fact the buses from Georgia have been traveling through Pope County, Tenn. on the way to the shrine.

"They don't allow colored people in that county," the overseer said. "Its been their policy for years not to let colored people live anywhere in the county."

CROSS BURNED IN TENN.

He said the Pope county residents were mainly "mountaineers" and "they want to keep all the jobs available for whites."

The cross was actually burned in Tennessee, Tomlinson said, and so far the alleged klansmen had not crossed over into North Carolina although they had threatened to.

However, he admitted that the Pope County line is located only three miles from the border of the "Field of the Woods" property. He said he felt it would be best if Atlantans use the Georgia route to reach the shrine.

"No trouble is expected in North Carolina," Tomlinson said. "I don't think the group will come across.

He said there may have been some amount of confusion due to the large number of people that have been attracted to the shrine

"When they come in such large numbers we just don't have the facilities needed," he declared. However, he added, "We'll just have to increase them."

The overseer said that 21 bus loads of people visited the shrine last Sunday.

The shrine is owned and operated by the Church of God in prophecy. Headquarters are located in Cleveland, Tennessee where the White Wing Publishing House and Press an affiliation, is located. Mr. Tomlinson is editor of the press.

The shrne was started by the Bishop A. G Tomlinson in 1940. The present overseer, a son of the bishop took over the shrine after his father died in 1942.

The shrine, listed as the "Biblical Wonder of the World," is not a profit making idea. "We don't charge anything for visits," Tomlinson said. "The church keeps it up."

38 a 1957

INTEGRATION SEMINAR

HIGHLANDER FOLK SCHOOL
MONTEAGLE, TENNESSEE

Peninsula Citizens Are Puzzled By Mysterious Newspaper Article

NEWPORT NEWS — A three-column news story in a local afternoon newspaper last Thursday started off as follows:

Journal and Guide

"A Georgia legislature investigating committee has introduced into its records information that Dr. Alonzo G. Moron, president of Hampton Institute, recently participated in an integration seminar at Highlander Folk School in Tennessee, an institution which the (Georgia) committee alleges is a 'Communist training school.'"

P. 9

According to the Georgia report, from which the paper got its information, Dr. Moron participated on a panel discussion of "What is the impact of integration on the People."

Letter 11-1-57

OTHER MEMBERS of this panel were named, and also were named Donald L. West, Rev. James B. Thompson, James Dombrosky and Aubrey Williams, who the Georgia report identified as "four of the leaders of Highlander Folk School." The report said that these men had "communist affiliations" and represented "the nucleus of this Communist training school."

Editor's note: The Georgia legislative committee, whose findings were the basis of the three-column article on Dr. Moron in the Newport News paper, is on a par with Virginia's Thomson committee on "racial activities and law reform." This committee—or the chairman thereof — recently called on Virginia schools to furnish it a list of text books used and a list of library references books on hand. The chairman, James Thomson, said he "wanted to see if the reference books contained any racial information.)

Subtle Motive Behind Article Seen

It is not clear to the casual observer what the purpose of the newspaper was in devoting fully three columns to President Moron's participation in a panel discussion on some aspect of integration at the Highlander School in Tennessee. If the purpose was to convict him of Communist leanings by association, the newspaper could have learned by a proper inquiry that this small training school in the Tennessee highlands has been accused of, or associated with Communism many times, but has been cleared of all of these accusations by the United States Department of Justice.

AUBREY WILLIAMS, who is said to be one of the supporters of the school was born in Alabama and received his education in Tennessee, Ohio and in France. He started life as a professionally trained social worker. He has a long record of public service of high character. At the present time Mr. Williams is editor of Southern Farm and Home, published in Montgomery, Ala. This paper, which goes mostly into the homes of southern farmers and home-makers is reported authoritatively to have a circulation of more than 400,000 copies each printing.

Rarely does a "Communist" command such support and for so long a time anywhere in the United States. The truth is that Mr. Williams, like all of the others mentioned in the newspaper article as having "alleged Communist affiliations" is among those who the McCarthy committee "accused." These accusations, in practically every case, were investigated by the Department of Justice and found to have no foundation in fact.

King Pleads, 'No Violence'

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

MONTEAGLE, TENN., Sept. 2 (AP)—A Negro leader said today his race must be willing to accept continued violence without striking back as the price for tearing down the barriers of segregation.

"We must struggle passionately and unrelentingly for the goal of justice," declared the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., "but we must be sure that our hands are clean in the struggle."

Press 9-3-57

"We must not struggle with falsehoods, hate or malice — we must never become bitter," he added. "We must never succumb to the temptation of using violence . . ."

The Negro's defense, he explained, is "to meet every act of violence toward an individual Negro with the fact that there are thousands of others who will present themselves in his place as potential victims."

"If the oppressors bomb the home of one Negro for his courage," King continued, "then this must be met by the fact that they will be required to bomb the homes of hundreds and thousands of Negroes.

"If they deny bread and milk to Negro children whose parents want them to be free, then they must be required to deny these children every necessity of life—water and air itself."

"You will leave him glutted with his own barbarity," he added.

Aubrey Williams Blasts Southerners' Fight Against Civil Rights Measure

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. P. 4-A

Sun 9-1-57

Activities of "a small group of Southern states . . . could plunge the nation into another armed rebellion in which the South stands to lose everything it has gained," Aubrey Williams of Mongomery says in a speech prepared for delivery a Monteagle, Tenn. Monday.

Williams today released an advanced copy of an address he said he plans to deliver at the 25th anniversary of the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle. The school conducts classes for both white and Negro students.

The former head of the National Youth Administration and one-time assistant to Harry Hopkins, is to be one of several speakers at the four-day celebration.

KING ALSO SPEAKS

Another Montgomerian also scheduled to speak is the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who led the boycott of segregated buses here last year.

Men in the South, Williams' speech continues, "are acting and talking in the manner of persons who have forgotten what happened to their states in a similar stand against the morals of mankind."

Southern leaders, he says "are counselling complete defiance of the federal court decisions aimed at extending equal protection under the law to the Negro people."

Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia, Gov. James Byrnes of South Carolina, and other leaders are suggesting defiance of all federal law, Williams says, whenever the laws conflict with what they term "the Southern way of life."

RIGHT TO CRITICIZE

"The right to criticize any law passed or proposed or any decisions of any court, is the right of every citizen," he continues "It is one thing to criticize and work for the repeal of a law or to change the basis of the law in order to secure a different decision by the court, but it is quite another thing to disobey, defy, 'plough around' a law or a decision of the courts.

"One is a constructive act of citizenship, the other is a destructive act of citizenship. There is a vast difference between disagreement and defiance."

Williams quoted Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi as saying, "We have no intention of complying with the decision (the Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation in the public schools) which we regard to be utterly unconstitutional."

"It is one thing," Williams comments, "for him to work and to advocate defeat of a civil rights bill, but it is quite another thing for him to defy the act and to plan with others who are also officers of the peace, open defiance of what has become law. No reasonable person can describe such an act as anything else than a violation of his oath and a breach of the peace.

"When six candidates for the governorship of Alabama in the coming election, openly advocate the circumventing and open defiance of the federal court decisions and federal laws, they go beyond the rights and privileges of any citizen . . . They are advocating defiance and rebellion against the government.

"When the attorney general of the State of Alabama takes it upon himself to engage in a seizure of records of a citizens organization whose activities are limited to protesting a law which had wiped out their right to vote, then the attorney general is engaged in a violation of the very office and oath which he has sworn to support and maintain."

"Who would have thought a year ago that the Alabama Legislature would report out favorably a bill to abolish whole counties, such as Wilcox, Lowndes, Bullock, Macon, Conecuh, Covington etc?

"It would seem that such a move would make cities like Camden, Union Springs, Fort Deposit, Hayneville and Tuskegee ghost towns with property worth probably 10 cents on the dollar, and businesses largely destroyed. There may well be a lot going on to stop such violent proposals, however, if there is, it does not get into print and it is not heard. I hope that such is the case."

The conduct of Southern leaders, he concludes, "is that of men who have not thought through the full implications and potential consequences of what they are doing. . . . They are following a course which will lead only to continuous strife and trouble and which may lead . . . to a situation which could quickly get out of control. Who today can say what the end result will be?"

King To Speak At Anniversary Of Mixed School In Tennessee

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

Sat 8-31-57

By JIM ELLIOTT
Of The Nashville Banner Staff

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Aug. 30 (Special)—Two hundred and fifty former students and interested persons are expected to attend the 25th anniversary celebration which opens today at the controversial Highlander Folk School.

Dr. Martin Luther King, leader in the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott, will be a featured speaker at the four-day celebration.

Located on 200 mountainous acres near here, the Highlander Folk School conducts its courses for both Negro and white students.

Aubrey Williams, former head of the National Youth Administration and once assistant to the late Harry Hopkins, also is listed to speak.

The anniversary observance opens this afternoon with "an overview of integration in the South today."

Reporting on integration progress and problems will be Rosa Parks, a former Highlander student whose arrest triggered the Montgomery bus boycott.

Among six other speakers on a panel will be Ralph Helstein, president of the United Packing House Workers Union.

Saturday's program will include a panel on "What Is the Impact of Integration on the People?"

Among four speakers will be Allen McWain of Clinton, Tenn., who brought the suit which led to desegregation last year of Clinton High School.

Myles Horton, director of the school and chairman of its board, said the courses presented here are of one or two-week duration.

A native of Savannah, Tenn., Horton, 53, has been director of the school since its birth.

He said courses are designed

(Continued From Page 1)

for community leaders both white and Negro.

Meeting without discrimination and in an atmosphere of academic freedom, Horton said, the issues are examined and "attention is focused on what can be done."

A recent ruling by the Internal Revenue Service has eliminated Highlander as a school from the standpoint of donations, Horton said. The school is protesting the ruling.

Sat 8-31-57

Under the new IRS decision, donations to the school cannot be listed as income tax deductions.

Horton admitted this has restricted the school's normal $65,000-a-year budget but he said this shortage has been made up for in terms of new contributions.

Williams and King are scheduled to speak Sunday morning, Williams on "A New Dealer Looks at the Present" and King, "The Look to the Future."

38a 1957

HIGHLANDER FOLK SCHOOL
MONTEAGLE, TENNESSEE

Highlander Folk School

Integrated Negroes Praised for Courage

By JACK NELSON
Constitution Staff Writer

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Dec. 18—Negro students who have cracked the racial barrier in Southern white schools are glorified by Highlander Folk School and urged to extend integration to social events.

At a recent Highlander session, Negroes from three integrated schools were told that they were courageous, that they were writing history and that the whole world was watching them.

(Fifth of Seven Articles)

The students, representing schools at Clinton, Tenn., Greensboro and Winston-Salem, N.C., were encouraged to mix with white students at dances and other school socials.

A reporter and a photographer for The Atlanta Constitution sat in on the session, held Nov. 30 to climax a three-day Thanksgiving weekend workshop. Also present were parents of some of the students and other pupils from a Chattanooga Negro high school.

Negroes from an integrated school at Sturgiss, Ky., attended all sessions except the one held Nov. 30. Mrs. Septi. Clark, Negro who directs the integration workshops, explained that the Sturgis students had to leave early.

Negroes from Little Rock's Central High also were scheduled to attend the three-day workshop, but had to stay home over the holiday weekend to receive extra tutoring so they could keep up with their studies, Mrs. Clark said.

On the grounds that they were from Georgia, the reporter and the photographer were barred from a Nov. 29 morning session of the workshop.

Myles Horton, director of Highlander, said "Georgia is on the black list" because of the Georgia Education Commission's published report branding Highlander a "Communist training school stirring up racial strife in the South."

"We've never had anything as low-level as Gov. Griffin's smear happen to us before," Horton said. He added that he didn't think he could trust anyone from Georgia except people he already knew and trusted.

"It looks like we're going to have to close Highlander to everybody from Georgia we don't know," Horton said. "I guess nobody from the Soviet Union or Georgia should be allowed to attend.

"You know you could be up here representing the Georgia White Citizens Council."

Horton claimed that until the Nov. 29 visit by the Atlanta newspapermen, all Highlander sessions from the first one in 1932 had been open to the press.

He said the Nov. 29 session was open to newsmen from other states. However, there were no other newsmen present and Horton acknowledged the workshop had not been publicized. On an earlier visit to Highlander, the Atlanta reporter learned the workshop was scheduled.

After the morning session was over, Horton and Mrs. Clark invited the newsmen to a night session on Nov. 29. And they agreed to allow the newsmen to attend the "workshop evaluation" session of Nov. 30.

"A BRAVE THING"

At the night session, Dr. Robert A. Dagan, young professor of economics at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., told the Negro students that he represented a "large number of people in the South who believe you have done a brave and necessary thing."

At the following day's session climaxing the workshop, Mrs. Clark continued the program of praise. Here are excerpts from her remarks to the students:

"Millions of white and Negroes admire you . . . the whole world is watching . . . you are making history . . . you are helping build the United States of tomorrow."

"NEED FOR INTEGRATION"

Emphasized at the workshop was what Horton earlier had called "motivation for integration." He said Highlander impresses upon Negroes the "need for integrating." Segregationists probably would use the modern term, "brainwashing," to describe this. A softer term would be indoctrination.

The students were told that integration was "the right thing in the eyes of man and in the eyes of God." They were told that because it is "right morally," it will come to pass if they work hard for it.

Mrs. Clark obviously was trying to impress the visiting reporter with the way the Negroes have been "accepted" at the integrated schools. And while there were some testimonials of acceptance, there also were some statements which indicated the Negroes are far from achieving social integration of the schools.

SENT FLOWERS

Mrs. Clark asked the students to relate some of the interesting experiences they had heard in the workshop.

A Chattanooga girl mentioned a Sturgis student's story of how white classmates sent flowers to the funeral of a Negro student's father. Mrs. Clark remarked that this was a "good sign of acceptance."

The Chattanooga girl also mentioned a Sturgis student's account of how Negro students went to a school dance but left because they weren't asked to dance. And she quoted one Sturgis girl as saying the Negroes had gone to a school social event "but only the chaperone was there, so they left before there was trouble."

Mrs. Clark advised the students that they should be aggressive in trying to tear away the racial curtain at social events.

DON'T BE TIMID

"Don't stand off; don't be timid," she instructed them. "You have to offer and if they refuse, don't worry, don't be embarrassed."

According to the other students, the Negro pupils at Sturgis say "things are going pretty well and they have some very good friends among the white students." They also reported they are still subjected to "a few catcalls," which they said they ignore.

On catcalls, one of the smaller North Carolina Negro boys, who appeared to be about 12 years old, had this bit of advice: "Just smile at 'em and look 'em in the eye. They'll quit. They'll look foolish."

The same boy, the only Negro in his class, told of being elected class treasurer. When Mrs. Clark shot a quick glance at the reporter and remarked that this was another "good sign of acceptance," the boy replied:

"No, ma'am, they were just trying me out to see if I was honest."

Mrs. Clark recovered—temporarily, at least—with a comment that it sure was "nice" of the white boy to nominate him as class treasurer.

"No, ma'am," the boy said, "the boy who nominated me was one of the most radical ones. He was just joking and everybody started laughing. He didn't think I'd get any votes, but I got almost all of them.

The boy said he had made a good class treasurer and had made many friends among white students.

A Clinton High School student said he had had several arguments with white boys, but had not been involved in any fights. He said the white boys "and some of the white girls" still "act a little funny" around him. He didn't elaborate.

A Clinton girl declared that some Negro families consider the Negro pupils in the integration cases to be "outcasts."

"They say we're causing trouble," she said, "and say we think we are better than they and want to go to school with whites."

She said some of those Negroes didn't want the Clinton students to go to Highlander because it might cause more trouble.

A North Carolina boy said he was having no trouble at school and was making "some friends" among white students.

Asked if he attended the school's football games, the boy said, "The principal said I'd better not go to any games because there was no supervisor there to look after me."

The boy said that the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People furnishes tutors to help him keep his grades up.

Mrs. Clark emphasized to the students the importance of "passive resistance," and told them to refrain from violence.

Quoting the Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who led Montgomery's bus boycott, Mrs. Clark said, "Don't bow to mob rule. Don't fight. Feel sorry for those who resort to violence."

She quoted another Negro preacher as saying, "We have to hit the white man in his pocket where it hurts. Then we can make him livable. We can live with him."

In Friday's Atlanta Constitution: Highlander, a political and propaganda organization.

Staff Photo—Charles Pugh

MYLES HORTON, DIRECTOR OF HIGHLANDER SCHOOL: Says School Has No Connection With Communism

RACE-MIXING CENTER UNDER FIRE

Highlander Director Says School Not Communist, But in Same Field

By JACK NELSON
Journal-Constitution Staff Writer

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Dec. 14. About two miles from this mountain resort is a small institution where race mixers plan the fight against segregation in the South.

Its name — Highlander Folk School—has an innocuous ring that belies its controversial record of involvement in labor and racial strife.

Constitution p-10B

Highlander's current activities are concentrated on training large numbers of whites and Negroes to touch off integration attempts throughout the South.

Atlanta, Ga.

Myles Horton, director and one of the founders of Highlander, acknowledges that the school has been connected with most integration attempts since the U.S. Supreme Court decision of 1954 prohibiting public school segregation.

* * *

THE SCHOOL WAS established in September, 1932, by Horton and Donald L. West, a Georgian with a long record of affiliations with Communist front groups.

It didn't take the school long to establish itself as a center of controversial social philosophy.

On Dec. 15, 1932, the Grundy County Board of Education barred Highlander from using county school buildings because of alleged teaching of political matter that was "Red or Communist in appearance."

The school has continued under close surveillance by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Horton himself says, "I've been investigated so much the FBI knows my record for 25 years."

* * *

HORTON HOTLY denies that he or the school has ever had any connection with communism.

"I got a passport to go to Europe this past summer," he said. "I had to sign an affidavit saying I was never a Communist to get the passport."

Horton explains the FBI investigations by saying, "We're in the same field the Communists are in—we just use different methods." Asked to elaborate, he said:

"They say they are interested in social equality. We're interested in social equality."

Highlander hit the headlines two months ago when the Georgia Commission on Education published a four-page newspaper-size report charging that the institution is a "Communist training school."

* * *

THE COMMISSION, set up by the Georgia Legislature to help preserve segregation, charged that Highlander's race mixing plans are part of a communist scheme to create strife.

As "proof," the commission reported that a number of persons who had been connected with Highlander also had been connected with organizations labeled as communist fronts by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

* * *

BUT THE RECORD should be set straight on one thing:

There was no cloak-and-dagger work necessary to get the information compiled by the Georgia Commission on Education.

T. V. Williams Jr., the commission's executive secretary claimed that the commission's report on the integration workshop held at Highlander over the Labor Day weekend was based on information gained by Ed Friend, a state employe, who "infiltrated" the sessions.

Williams made it appear that the integration sessions were super secret.

Actually, the meetings were open to the press and were covered by Tennessee newsmen. Friend registered at the school as an employe of the State of Georgia.

As for the subversive organizations listed by the report which was signed by Gov. Marvin Griffin as commission chairman, they are a matter of public record and have been for some time.

* * *

THE GEORGIA REPORT named one known communist — Abner W. Berry, a Negro identified as an official of the American Communist Pary and a reporter for the Daily Worker—as being in attendance at the Labor Day integration workshop.

Horton claims he did not know Berry until introduced to him by Georgia's own Ed Friend, the "undercover" agent. Berry enrolled at the workshop as a free-lance writer, Horton declared.

Horton blasted Gov. Griffin for sending a "stoolpigeon" to Highlander and said the Georgia governor might also be guilty of "planting Berry, an alleged Communist, at the school."

"I say 'alleged,' because he could be working for the FBI," Horton said.

The Georgia report showed a picture of Berry and three other persons, one of whom it identified as Ralph Helstein, president of United Packinghouse Workers of America.

Helstein, who partiicpated in the integration workshop as a panelist discussing labor union experience in integration, blasted "the governor of Georgia's deceitful attempt to make the fight for desegregation appear to be a Communist monopoly."

"The flagrant dishonesty of the governor's alleged report," Helstein said, "is apparent in a caption appearing under a photograph which purports to identify me as one of a group including a person said to be a Communist Party member by the name of Berry.

"I don't know Berry or whether he even appears in the picture, for I have never met the man; but I do know that I am not the person whom the caption identified as me."

That Highlander has been extremely active in some of the same fields as the Communists is obvious.

* * *

WHETHER THE school has been guilty of communistic activity is another question—one that has hounded Highlander ever since that December day 25 years ago when it was barred from using local school buildings.

During the depression, Highlander engaged in vigorous union organizing campaigns and brought down upon itself the wrath of business leaders.

Highlander's labor efforts soon became the object of a congressional investigation. And on Nov. 30, 1942, U.S. Rep. Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, listed Highlander as "decidedly communistic."

* * *

THREE YEARS AGO a former Communist testified at a hearing of the Senate Internal Security subcommittee in New Orleans, La., that Highlander was working "in close cooperation with the Communist Party."

Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss.), subcommittee chairman, had Myles Horton ousted from the same hearing after the Highlander director refused to answer whether James Dombrowski was affiliated with the school. Dombrowski, who has been a member of numerous organizations labeled "subversive," was with Highlander at one time.

Succeeding articles on Highlander will go into more detail on this hearing, previous investigations and the school's part in the turbulent labor movement.

Highlander has not been without its staunch defenders, some of them nationally prominent.

* * *

ON THE WALL in the office of Highlander's main building is a letter on White House stationary to Dombrowski, who was on Highlander's staff from 1934 until 1942. The letter begins, "My Dear Mr. Dombrowski:

"I am sending you the same amount as I sent you last year as my contribution toward a scholarship in the Highlander Folk School.

"I have had the school checked by people in whom I have absolute confidence and am convinced that the newspaper attack and the groups which have been opposed to you are not opposed to you because of any Communist activities, but because they are opposed to labor organization, and, therefore labor education.

"This seems to me a most unwise and shortsighted attitude and, therefore, I am continuing my support. I hope this spring to come down to see the school myself."

The letter was signed, "Very truly yours, Eleanor Roosevelt." It was dated February 1941.

* * *

HORTON SAYS Mrs. Roosevelt still contributes to the school. "We got a letter from her just the other day," he said.

John Dewey, who was head of the philosophy department at Columbia University in New York, was chairman of Highlander's Committee of Sponsors until his death four years ago, according to Horton.

Horton said that Dewey and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary in New York both advised him in the founding of Highlander. He studied under both educators. Dr. Niebuhr still supports the Highlander.

Horton said that while Highlander has become accustomed to being criticized, "we've never had anything as low-level as Gov. Griffin's smear happen to us before."

"But we've weathered storms before," Horton said. "Griffin ought to read the record. We've gone through much more effective smear tactics than this."

Horton said it is "dangerous tactics" for Griffin and other segregationists to "identify every integration movement in the South as Communistic."

* * *

HE SAID THE Highlander report by the Georgia Commission on Education was "calcuated to keep people away from the school, but "it's not scaring people." He said 60 persons attended the Thanksgiving Day weekend workshop although only 30 were invited.

The short-run effect of the Georgia report has been to increase contributions to Highlander by three times," according to Horton.

"I don't know about the long-range affect," he said. "Some people are hesitating now to be identified with the school because of the smear."

Highlander is supported by contributions from individuals, organizations served by the school, foundations and tuition.

* * *

MONDAY in The Atlanta Constitution: Former Communist organizer testifies Highland cooperated with Communist Party.

Segregation Issue Cited By Educator

Journal & Guide Sat. 5-4-57 Norfolk, Va.

Those With Degrees Should Now Begin Their Education

P. 10

FORT WORTH, Tex. — The Dean of University College at Tulane University, has charged liberal arts colleges with failing to communicate the meaning of a liberal education.

38a

Dr. John P. Dyer told members of the Association of Texas Colleges meeting in Fort Worth that "it would be difficult to find a time in our history when so much intellectual intimidation existed in our country."

* * *

DR. DYER stated that the idea of conformity being essential to national well being is becoming an accepted half truth in the country. "Our great fear," he added, "is different."

"We are living in a time", says Dr. Dyer, "when the bland lead the bland. Intelligent dissent has almost disappeared from our national life."

* * *

DYER SINGLED out the segregation issue, and said: "Many people continue to oppose integration through fear of what their neighbors will think."

On the other hand, Dr. Dyer said the NAACP is laying down a straight pattern of thought for Negroes.

* * *

HIS SOLUTION for intellectual blandness is "an extra dimension in education — the liberal education of adults."

"Adult education," explained Dyer, "is needed for those who already have their degrees and are ready to begin their education.

Negro Loses Lead Role In School Opera

Post Herald Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 5-8-57

AUSTIN, May 7 (AP)—A University of Texas co-ed was ousted from the lead of a school opera because she is a Negro, a state legislator revealed today.

Rep. Joe Chapman said Barbara Smith, 19, was taken out of the lead of "Dido and Aeneas" after he protested to university officials.

P. 2

"I think that from a point of public relations that it is probably not smart to create controversy of this type by putting a Negro in a role as a heroine where the script for the opera calls for a white person," Chapman said.

Miss Smith, of Pittsburg, Tex., and university officials refused to comment or confirm that she had been ousted from the role.

However, Chapman said someone from the university telephoned him that the girl was no longer in the cast.

The Austin Statesman today said Miss Smith had been assigned to a minor role.

Miss Smith was to have alternated with Martha Ann Kelly of Austin for the two presentations, Friday and Saturday. Miss Kelly will sing the lead both nights.

For the first time, the university admitted about 50 Negro undergraduate students this year. Graduate students have been admitted in previous years.

Filibuster Ends; Senate In Texas Votes Segregation

Courier-Journal Sat. 5-4-57 Louisville, Ky.

Austin, Tex., May 3 (AP)—Senator Henry Gonzalez, San Antonio, today gave up his bitter filibuster against a segregation bill that was quickly approved after a record-smashing delaying action.

P. 3

He and Senator Abraham Kazen, Jr., Laredo, who joined in blocking the bill for 36 hours and 2 minutes, pledged themselves to a similar effort against eight other House-passed color-line bills pending in the Senate.

"I intend to fight every one of them to the last ditch," said Gonzalez, after he finally capitulated at 2:02 a.m. to the pleas on both sides that everybody was too bone weary to go on.

"They had the votes and so I agreed," said the 41-year-old freshman senator — one of the few Latin-Americans ever to serve in the upper house of the Texas legislature.

Students Protest Removal Of Girl From Opera Lead

Daily World Wed. 5-15-57 Atlanta, Ga.

AUSTIN, Texas — University of Texas President Logan Wilson is slated to have received some 1,000 student petitions, protesting the removal of Barbara Louise Smith from the lead role in an undergraduate opera.

P. 1

The 19-year-old Pittsburgh, Texas, coed was awarded the lead opera role last fall but was later removed by the university because she was a Negro.

38a

The petitions were circulated on campus yesterday.

Wilson said that the girl lead in a student opera was removed to prevent "major demonstrations and vituperative public attacks and defenses.

Texas

Wilson said in an address before a meeting of the faculty that threats of bodily harm against the student, Miss Barbara Smith of Pittsburg, Tex., had been telephoned to the university when it became known she would play opposite a white male student in the opera, "Dido and Aeneas."

Wilson said several anonymous calls also had threatened "reprisals against the university."

The president asserted the decision to remove the 19-year-old coed from the opera's cast was his own, and was arrived at a day prior to the time that Rep. Joe N. Chapman called him to declare the "presentation would be unwise and would have serious negative effects upon the public relations of the university."

U. of T. Students Hang Texas Solon In Effigy

Journal & Guide Sat. 5-18-57 Norfolk, Va.

AUSTIN, Tex. — (INS) —A newspaper-stuffed effigy of a Texas lawmaker who objected to the starring of a colored coed in a student opera at the University of Texas was hanged in the State Capitol Rotunda early last Thursday.

State house guards said the figure, bearing signs "Joe Chapman," "U.T." and "Babbara Smith," was found hanging from the second floor balcony. It was taken down and turned over to building authorities.

38a

THE INCIDENT was evidently tied to the recent removal of Miss Barbara Smith, a colored soprano, from the cast of the student opera "Dido and Aenaes" which opened at the university Friday night with a white girl in the leading role.

State Rep. Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs, sponsor of several bills aimed at continuing segregation of the races in the public schools, has confirmed reports that he called university officials several weeks ago in regard to Miss Smith's appearance in the play opposite a white male lead.

* * *

CHAPMAN said he made no threat of legislative reprisals if she weren't dropped from the role, but told president Logan Wilson the situation might cause "bad public relations" for the school.

Prejudice Removes Girl From Play

Call P. 1 Fri. 5-17-57 Kansas City, Mo.

AUSTIN, Texas — (AP) — A Negro coed has been removed from a lead role in a University of Texas student opera because of a warning from a member of the state legislature.

Miss Barbara Smith, 19, of Pittsburgh, Tex., was replaced by a white girl in the cast of the opera "Dido and Aeneas" which is scheduled to open Friday night on the campus in Austin.

State Rep. Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs, sponsor of several bills aimed at continuing segregation in the Texas public schools, confirmed Tuesday that he called University President Logan Wilson several weeks ago about Miss Smith's appearance in the opera.

He said he made no threat of legislative reprisals if she wasn't removed, but merely told Wilson it would be, "bad public relations" for a Negro girl to appear in the production opposite a white male lead.

Chapman said Miss Smith wasn't at fault in the situation, and never complained about her dismissal from the role. He added:

"Most of the 17,000 students at the university are loyal, solid Texans, but there are a few, maybe 50, starry-eyed liberals always trying to stir up something."

38a Call P. 1 Fri. 5-17-57 Kansas City, Mo.

USTED FROM LEAD IN OPERA. — Miss Barbara Louise Smith, 19, of Pittsburgh, Tex., co-ed at the University of Texas who was dropped from the cast of the student opera "Dido and Aenaes" after Texas Representative Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs asked that she be removed "for the betterment of the university." Miss Smith is shown here as she talks on the phone in the Music building on the college campus at Austin, Tex. Rep. Chapman did not want her playing opposite a white male student in the Lone Star State.

Texas Bias Kills Negro's Opera Role

State Times

A University of Texas coed was ousted from the lead of a school opera because she is a Negro, a state legislator disclosed last week.

Joe Chapman, Texas representative said Barbara Smith 19, was taken out of the lead after he protested to university officials.

"I think that from a point of public relations that it is probably not smart to create controversy of this type by putting a Negro in a role as a heroine where the scrip for the opera calls for a white person," The Texan said.

Mrs. Smith of Pittsburg, Tex., and university officials refused to comment.

Miss Smith was to have alternated with Martha Ann Kelly of Austin for the two presentations, Friday and Saturday.

She was to portray Dido, Tyrian princess and founder and queen of Carthage, where she entertained Aeneas, prominent in the defense of Troy. The setting is in the ancient Grecian era.

Chapman said he learned of the Negro girl's being in the opera cast when Representative Jerry Sadler of Percilla made a speech at a legislative breakfast.

Chapman and Sadler are co-authors of a group of bills designed to strengthen state segregation laws. All have passed the house.

Sadler said he had informed the house twice that he would not vote for appropriations for the university because of the racial integration policy.

"After Jerry's speech, I called up Dr. Logan Wilson, university president," Chapman said. "I don't know the girl. It's a question of policy so far as I'm concerned. I had no idea what the girl's name was. The Negroes should be given training but not be allowed in mixed public performances."

University officials refused comment.

A newspaper-stuffed effigy of a Texas lawmaker who objected to the starring of the Negro co-ed in a student opera at the University of Texas was hanged in the state capitol rotunda early Thursday.

Statehouse guards said the figure, bearing signs "Joe Chapman," "Ut," and "Barbara Smith," was found hanging from the second floor balcony about 6 a.m. It was immediately taken down and turned over to building authorities.

A 3-day nightmare

Afro American Baltimore Md.

AUSTIN, Texas — An attractive, 19-year-old University of Texas coed was the center of activity that ranged from hate-inspired threats to shame-faced apologies over the past weekend.

It was undoubtedly a long three-day recess for Barbara Louise Smith, a talented music major, whose name had been given national publicity as result of her ouster from the spring opera presented annually by the school.

During the period from Friday, when the opera "Dido and Aeneas" went on without her singing the lead as originally planned, until late Sunday, Miss Smith was forced to take refuge with friends.

* * *

UNTIL SHE did so, the pretty Pittsburg, Texas, girl had been hounded by threatening telephone calls, reports of her figure burned in effigy on the State Capitol grounds and news reporters seeking interviews, among other things.

The weekend recess, however, was not a total loss, the AFRO learned from sources close to Miss Smith.

Brightening the picture were letters of encouragement from eight members of the State Legislature and internationally famed singer Harry Belafonte.

Naturally, the phone calls threatening the life of Miss Smith were anonymous, and the persons responsible for burning the effigy remained unidentified. At least one of the calls was made by a woman's voice, it was disclosed.

* * *

ACCORDING to Dr. E. William Doty, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, white members of the cast had also been warned by telephone that Miss Smith's presence in the opera "could lead to intermarriage."

While David Blanton, the white tenor who was to have played the Aeneas role opposite Miss Smith, declined to comment on the girl's removal for publication, friends quoted him as saying:

"I am distressed by this action. Barbara has a very fine voice and this is a most unfortunate situation."

* * *

REGARDING the apology that Miss Smith received, it came in the form of a message from legislators who have fought the segregation-bloc bills, sponsored in the main by Representatives Joe Chapman and Jerry Sadler.

Signed by Reps. Maurice Pipkin, Menton Murray, Malcolm McGregor, W. M. Woolsey, Bob Wheeler, Oscar Laurel, Bob Mullen and Eligio DeLa Garza, the letter said:

"We deeply regret the incidents of recent date which have resulted in you not being able to play one of the leads in a student opera.

"We particularly regret any part of it which may have been caused by actions on the part of any member of the Texas Legislature.

"You are to be highly commended on 'keeping your head' when others about you are losing theirs, and on accepting the decision of the university at such a high personal sacrifice to yourself."

The reference to the part played by members of the legislature had reference to the fight waged by Chapman and Sadler early last week, to force the dropping of Miss Smith from the lead role of Dido in the opera. It was a part she had won in auditions last October and to which she had been assigned by the faculty committee in charge of casting.

* * *

CHAPMAN and Sadler admittedly brought pressure on the president of the university, Dr. Logan Wilson, threatening a cut in appropriations, among other things, in reprisal if Miss Smith were not ousted.

No effort was made to conceal the fact that the action was demanded because of Miss Smith's race.

The young woman is a transfer student from Prairie View University and is credited with possessing one of the most beautiful voices in Texas college ranks.

THE LETTER from Belafonte stated that its purpose was to assure Miss Smith that somebody is behind her.

It reportedly offered to aid Miss Smith to continue her education at Texas or elsewhere, through the Belafonte Foundation.

Texas U. students rap ban of singer

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

AUSTIN, Texas — More than 1,000 University of Texas students rallied to the cause of Barbara Louise Smith last week, signing a petition formally protesting her removal from the lead role in an undergraduate opera production.

The 19-year-old, soft-spoken Pittsburg, Texas coed was barred from singing the part of Dido in the spring presentation of "Dido and Aeneas," because she is colored.

Shortly after the petition had been delivered to University President Logan Wilson, the administrator explained that the action was taken to avoid "bitter controversy."

* * *

HE SAID the action was necessary because of the school's efforts to achieve orderly and gradual integration. The university was opened to colored students on the undergraduate level for the first time last September.

"We were convinced that if the opera were produced as planned, it would become a symbolic incident which would stir up bitter controversy about every aspect of our efforts to make an orderly and gradual transition," Wilson said.

* * *

READING stiffly from a prepared statement Wilson told a faculty audience that the decision was made after "threats of violence to the student in question" and others directly involved.

Miss Smith was not present when Wilson made his explanation, the first public statement he has made on the controversy.

State Rep. Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs, a leader in a legislative segregation block, said he had asked Wilson to remove Miss Smith from the role for the betterment of the university.

Racist Held In Brawl On Plane

HOUSTON, Texas — A rich white pro-segregationist was jailed for three hours here after an airline pilot accused him of having created a drunken disturbance while in the air.

• The individual involved was oilman R. W. Milner, 59, who is chairman of the White Citizens Council of America in Texas, Inc.

MILNER WAS nabbed after his National Airlines plane landed at the local airport and released after he posted $5 bond. Capt. C. J. Delk, pilot of the plane, stated that he is going to try and file a Federal charge against Milner.

CAPT. DELK alleged that Milner was "very belligerent," waving a whiskey bottle, and threatening and cursing him (Capt. Delk) when ordered to take his seat.

• Milner was returning from a big WCC rally in New Orleans in the company of Bert Winston and Mrs. Sam H. Davis, arch-segregationist leaders.

Milner denied that he was drunk. He charged that the whole thing was a "big frameup," threatened to sue the airlines, and blamed the plane's stewardess for the incident.

HE SAID that he had become involved with the stewardess in a discussion over politics and segregation. He charged, "she decided she didn't like us. She got all stirred up about segregation. I didn't create any disturbance."

TEXAS NEGRO PROTESTS

Says Circus Denied Him Use of Dallas City Auditorium

DALLAS, Nov. 20 (AP) — A Negro lawyer who is a leader in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said today he had been refused circus tickets at Dallas Memorial Auditorium unless he sat in a section reserved for Negroes. He said he planned to protest to the City Council.

The attorney, V. Simpson Tate, said a woman ticket seller refused him three tickets to the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey show.

"I have been denied the use of the auditorium of which I as a citizen and taxpayer, am part owner," Mr. Tate said. "I think I have been wronged and I am rather unhappy about it."

Elgin Crull, City Manager, said Dallas had leased the auditorium to the circus, which set its own policies regarding segregation of the races. Mr. Tate, he said, has been informed of this.

In Waco (Tex.) Restaurant

Actress and Educator's Wife Denied Food!

Courier 10-26-57

WACO, Tex. — Like the proverbial tree "planted by the water," two Negro women refused to be moved in their determination to be served cups of coffee at the local airport restaurant which refuses to serve Negroes.

Mrs. J. H. Adams, whose husband is president of Paul Quinn College here, and Rita Jordan, an actress and a faculty member at Southern U. in Baton Rouge, La., refused to move from their seats in the restaurant and were not served.

Miss Jordan told reporters, "I feel I am owed an apology."

Sat 10-26-57

ACCORDING TO police, the incident was a "disturbance" which was "settled without arrest." However, the officer who was reportedly involved could not be found for a statement.

In addition, Mrs. Adams declared, "If the police were called, we didn't know it. We sat there for 30 to 45 minutes and it doesn't take but about 15 minutes to get to the airport from the city."

Mrs. Adams had accompanied Miss Jordan to the airport where the latter was slated to take a plane for Houston. A waitress asked the ladies to move into an adjoining room, but was told that the customers were "comfortable" and simply wanted a cup of coffee.

The protestors then asked to see the manager but were told that he was out. Another man came up and asked both ladies to move. The restaurant manager, Walter Smith, could not be reached for comment.

BIAS FOE IN TEXAS TELLS OF INSULTS

AUSTIN, Tex., May 2 (AP)—A Texas Senator filibustering segregation bills said today his wife had been subjected to anonymous telephone calls last night referring to him as a "nigger lover."

Senator Abraham Kazen Jr. of Laredo told the Senate he also had been called a "traitor" in a telegram from the Houston Citizens Council—a group opposing integration.

Senator Kazen, Senator Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio and a small band of Senators from sections where integration already is a fact clung stubbornly to their delaying action, which started yesterday at 11:16 A. M. Their districts have heavy Latin-American populations.

Fighting what Senator Kazen conceded might be a futile battle, they hoped to defeat or at least delay a Senate showdown on a series of segregation bills already approved by the House. The measures are designed to continue separation of white and Negro students in Texas' public schools.

Senator Gonzalez and Senator Kazen during long hours of oratory said over and over that the measures were unconstitutional on their face, written solely to circumvent the United States Supreme Court's desegregation orders.

CAFETERIA NOW CLUB TO DODGE NEGRO RULING

Houston, Tex., April 9 (AP)—The county courthouse cafeteria, closed to avoid a Supreme court ruling that it must serve Negroes, was reopened today as a private club for county employes and their guests.

W. F. Dee Derrington, who gave up his lease after his appeal to the Supreme court was rejected, was hired as manager by the county employes' association.

Derrington will get 90 per cent of the net and county employes 10 per cent. Luster Allen Jr., chairman of the newly formed employes' club board, said no membership dues will be charged. Employes and their guests will be admitted on "recognition" by Derrington.

Barred From Opera Cast, Negro Girl Plans to See It

AUSTIN, Tex., May 8 (AP).—A University of Texas music major plans to see an undergraduate opera, even though she was removed from a leading role because she is a Negro.

"Of course I'm going to see it," said Barbara Louise Smith, 19, of Pittsburg, Tex. "We support these things."

State Representative Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs said he asked that Miss Smith be removed from the opera because, as he put it, "the people of Texas don't want mixing of Negroes and whites publicly and the University of Texas should not do it from that standpoint."

Mr. Chapman is a leader of a bloc of legislators demanding stronger segregation measures.

University officials refused to comment. President Logan Wilson was attending a convention in New York.

No Reflection on Ability

Miss Smith was reluctant to say specifically why she was taken out. She only said it was not because of her singing ability.

"Don't you know that if it was my singing ability," she said in an interview, "I would never have been selected for the part in the beginning.

"I know now that it's too late to keep it quiet, but the less said the better. If anyone else wants to say why, that's their business."

The opera, "Dido and Aenaes," was scheduled for performances Friday and Saturday at the university. Miss Smith was to play the lead role of Dido, founder and queen of Carthage in a Greek myth.

Mr. Chapman said he had asked that Miss Smith be removed for the betterment of the university.

Admitted as Undergraduates

Some 50 Negro students were admitted to the university on the undergraduate level for the first time this year. Graduate classes have been integrated since 1950. Miss Smith is a junior transfer student from Prairie View College, an all-Negro school.

"There would have been nothing said about it if it hadn't been for a bunch of left-wing students out there rabble-rousing," Mr. Chapman said. "Some of those faculty members have been raising hell, too, trying to get the rest of the cast to quit unless they put the girl back."

He said Miss Smith was removed from the lead about a month ago.

"I told him (Dr. Wilson) that any Negro student is entitled to the same training as far as training is concerned," said Mr. Chapman. "But I think that from a point of public relations it is probably not smart to create a controversy of this type by putting a Negro in a role as a heroine where the script for the opera calls for a white person."

Giving Negro Role Naive, Student Editorial Asserts

AUSTIN, Tex., April 8 (AP) — The University of Texas student newspaper today said the faculty committee which named a Negro coed to sing the lead in an undergraduate opera displayed "striking naivete."

"They — the committee—should have known the temper of the times," the Daily Texan editorial said.

Miss Barbara Louise Smith, 19, Pittsburg, Tex., was removed from the student opera production "Dido and Aeneas" after State Rep. Joe Chapman said he asked she be removed. He said he told the university president, Logan Wilson:

"The people of Texas don't want mixing of Negroes and whites publicly and the University of Texas should not do it from that standpoint."

Chapman is a leader of the segregation bloc.

University Regent's Chairman Leroy Jeffers of Houston was quoted by the Texan as saying the administration's decision to remove Miss Smith was not because of "legislature pressure."

Other university officials have refused to comment.

Speaking of the opera cast selection committee, the Texan editorial said:

"Even last October, it was no secret that some members of the Legislature were planning the — segregation — bills now being considered. Even if the girl chosen had the best voice, and we do not doubt that she did, it would have seemed only the better part of discretion and wisdom not to have cast her in a romantic role opposite a white male lead."

Miss Smith was reluctant to say specifically why she was taken out, except to say that it was not her singing ability.

"Don't you know that if it was my singing ability, I would never have been selected for the part in the beginning?" she told The Associated Press. "If anyone else wants to say why, that's their business."

Dr. E. William Doty, dean of the College of Fine Arts, last night commended the cast for declining to comment.

A statuesque dramatic soprano, Miss Smith was to have played Dido, the founder and queen of Carthage in a Greek myth. Dido was in love with Aeneas.

Seek Equal Use Of Public Park, Beach

HOUSTON — A [illegible] was filed in Federal District court Monday, asking for a declaratory judgment as to whether or not Negroes have a legal right to use the public park facilities, lands and concessions and other recreational facilities in Harris County on an unsegregated basis.

Aimed specifically at opening up Sylvan Park Beach to Negroes, the suit names Judge Bob Casey, and Commissioners Phillip E. Sayers, V V Ramsey, W Kyle Chapman and E A Lyons and charges that Judge Casey made a public statement denying Negroes the use of the Million-dollar pleasure park on an unsegregated basis, when the park first opened in 1956.

Plaintiffs are Leroy J Beverly, Burrell C Harris, Mrs Shelley Hawthorne, Leo Rushing and W D Wyatt. They are being represented by Attorneys Henry E Doyle and Francis S Williams.

The petition alleges that white citizens are permitted to use the beach at all times without restrictions, but that Negroes are not permitted to use it unless they make reservations for a specific time.

The suit which is for all other Negroes in the county, contends that the plaintiffs and other Negroes have contributed through the payment of taxes to the purchase, support and maintenance of the Sylvan Beach Park, including lands, buildings, equipment and facilities and are entitled to admission and enjoyment of the beach and facilities without restrictions.

Leroy J Beverly, Burrell C Harris, Leo Rushing and W D Wyatt, allege that on or about the 4th of June, 1956 at about 2 pm they went to the main entrance of the park during the regular hours of business and were willing to conform to and abide by all lawful rules and regulations with respect to the lawful entering and using "of the park but that they were turned away because of race" in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States."

Mrs Shelley Hawthrone, alleges that she carried six children to the beach on or about August 8, 1956 and they were refused admittance by a park employee who told them "colored people could not enter the park at anytime unless they leased it."

The petition alleges that the elected representatives and commissioners court held a bond election in 1953 for the erection and maintenaance of County Parks and that the bonds were voted, and that Negroes have been, since the opening of the park on about May 12, furnishing to the white citizens of Harris County and permitting white citizens to use and enjoy" the park without restriction and the defendants, judge and commissioners, through Judge Casey, have publicly stated that Negroes would not be allowed to use the park unless they rented the dance pavilion for a particular period.

The suit asks: (a) that the court declare the rights of the plaintiffs so that the declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment on decree.

(B) That the court enter a judgment order or decree declaring the policy, customs, practice and usage of the defendants, their agents, servants and employees, and each of them in allowing and permitting the white citizens of Harris County to use and enjoy the Sylvan Beach Park . . . and denying the use and enjoyment of it to Negro Citizens.

(C) That the court issue a temporary or in the alternative, a permanent injunction prohibiting the judge and commissioners from maintaining such a policy which denies Negroes the use of the beach.

Negro Coed Is Ousted From U T Opera Role

AUSTIN — A top ranking student and admittedly possessor of an excellent voice, Miss Barbara Smith of Pittsburg, Texas, has been ousted from the leading role in English romantic opera at the University of Texas it was revealed Monday.

Opposition to the Negro girl serving in the role that she had proven herself qualified to handle was triggered by Rep Joe Chapman of Sulphur Springs, who called the university president, Dr Logan Wilson, after Rep Jerry Saddler of Percilla had made a threatening speech before an East Texas legislative delegation numbering 40.

The decision to place color above talent was, according to reports, made by top university of Texas officials. Comment on removal of the girl was at a premium. The president's office was the only source authorized to comment.

Miss Smith was chosen for the part of "Dido," a quee of Carthage by a faculty committee. A white music student was given the male lead.

Reports are that Miss Smith, who is a member of the choir of the University Baptist Church, received threatening telephone calls.

"My feelings on some things are rather calloused," she said in what brief comment she made.

They're Naive

The Nation P. 450

In the judgment of the editors of the campus daily, the faculty committee at the University of Texas that named a Negro co-ed to sing the lead in an undergraduate opera was guilty of an act of "striking naivete." The faculty committee will stand rebuked.

How artless of these old fogies not to have known that, in any conflict between principle and prejudice, only the naive will insist on principle. (See comments The Nation, May 18, p. 429).

Reopens in Texas

Herald Tribune Wed. 4-16-57 p. 17

Court Cafeteria Now a Club To Evade Integration Ruling

Newyork N.Y.

HOUSTON, Tex., Apr. 9 (AP).—The county courthouse cafeteria, closed to avoid a Supreme Court ruling that it must serve Negroes, was reopened today as a private club operation for county employees and their guests.

W. F. Dee Derrington, who gave up his lease after his appeal to the Supreme Court was rejected, was hired as manager by the County Employees Association.

Mr. Derrington will get 90 per cent of the net and county employees 10 per cent. Operating expenses and $500 a month rent to the county will be subtracted before the division. Under Mr. Derrington's old contract, the county was guaranteed $700 a month rental.

Luster Allen jr., chairman of the newly formed Employees Club Board, said no membership dues will be charged. Employees and their guests will be admitted on "recognition" by Mr. Derrington.

Negro Loses Lead Role In School Opera

Post Herald Bishop, Okla. Wed. 5-8-57

AUSTIN, May 7 (AP)—A University of Texas co-ed was ousted from the lead of a school opera because she is a Negro, a state legislator revealed today.

Rep. Joe Chapman said Barbara Smith, 19, was taken out of the lead of "Dido and Aeneas" after he protested to university officials.

"I think that from a point of public relations that it is probably not smart to create controversy of this type by putting a Negro in a role as a heroine where the script for the opera calls for a white person," Chapman said.

Miss Smith, of Pittsburg, Tex., and university officials refused to comment or confirm that she had been ousted from the role.

However, Chapman said someone from the university telephoned him that the girl was no longer in the cast.

The Austin Statesman today said Miss Smith had been assigned to a minor role.

Miss Smith was to have alternated with Martha Ann Kelly of Austin for the two presentations, Friday and Saturday. Miss Kelly will sing the lead both nights.

For the first time, the university admitted about 50 Negro undergraduate students this year. Graduate students have been admitted in previous years.

Negro Co-Ed Accepts Loss Of Opera Role

Herald Tribune New York Fri. 5-10-57

AUSTIN, Tex., May 9 (AP).—A nineteen-year-old co-ed removed from the lead in a University of Texas student opera because she is a Negro says the action may have been best to insure harmonious integration at the school.

The co-ed, Barbara Louise Smith of Pittsburg, Tex., said Dean E. W. Doty of the College of Fine Arts told her she would not appear in the opera because complaints had been made about her having the role.

She was ousted from the production "Dido and Aeneas." State Rep. Joe Chapman, of Sulphur Springs, said he had asked she be removed for the betterment of the university.

Two powerful campus groups—the Young Democrats and the Young Republicans—announced they were considering asking for an investigation.

REMOVE NEGRO FROM ROLE IN SCHOOL OPERA

Daily Tribune Wed. 5-8-57 Chicago Ill.

Houston, Tex., May 7 (AP)—The Houston Post said today that Barbara Smith, 19, a Negro student of the University of Texas, had been removed from the leading role in a school opera because of objections from legislators.

At Austin, Dr. C. P. Boner, university vice president, refused to confirm or deny the story. Dr. Logan Wilson, president, was reported out of town.

The newspaper said the girl was taken from the cast after Rep. Joe Chapman, a leader of the house segregation bloc, warned that the university might forfeit good public relations or get its appropriations trimmed.

Legislator Tells of Call

Miss Smith, a dramatic soprano, was to have played opposite a young white student who had the male lead. The opera, "Dido and Aenaes," had been in rehearsal since last October and is scheduled to be produced May 10 and 11.

Chapman said he called Dr. Wilson and discussed the opera casting. Chapman told the Post that he thought it "probably wouldn't be good public relations to have a Negro star with a white person."

Chapman said he told Wilson that he wanted to keep the university out of any controversy and that Wilson "assured me that had always been the policy and that they would not do anything to start a controversy."

Associated Press wirephoto

Barbara Louise Smith, University of Texas co-ed, who has been dropped from student opera production.

Delicate Situation

"I think he [Dr. Wilson] is handling a delicate situation in an excellent way," Chapman said. "They've still got a bunch of left wingers in the university but they are doing a pretty good job of holding them down."

Miss Smith refused to discuss the incident.

"We don't want an Autherine Lucy here, she told the Post, referring to campus racial riots at the University of Alabama after a Negro student was admitted to classes.

Texas College Drops Negro in Top Opera Role

Inquirer P. 12 Wed. 5-8-57 Philadelphia

AUSTIN, Tex., May 7 (AP).—A University of Texas coed was ousted from the lead of a school opera because she is a Negro, a State legislator revealed today.

Rep. Joe Chapman said Barbara Smith, 19, of Pittsburgh, Tex., was taken out of the lead of "Dido and Aeneas" after he protested to university officials.

"I think that from a point of public relations that it is probably not smort to create controversy of this type by putting a Negro in a role as a heroine where the script for the opera calls for a white person," Chapman said.

Chapman said someone from the university telephoned him that the girl was no longer in the cast. He said Miss Smith had been assigned to a minor role.

ALTERNATE LEADS

Miss Smith was to have alternated with Martha Ann Kelly of Austin for the two presentations, Friday and Saturday. Miss Kelly will sing the lead both nights. She will portray Dido, a Tyrian princess and founder and Queen of Carthage, where she entertained Aeneas, prominent in the defense of Troy. The setting is in the ancient Grecian era.

For the first time, the university admitted about 50 Negro undergraduate students this year. Graduate students have been admitted in previous years.

AUTHOR OF BILLS

Chapman is co-author of a group of bills designed to strengthen State segregation laws. All have passed the Texas House.

Dr. Logan Wilson, university president, could not be reached for comment.

Chapman said he told Wilson that he wanted to keep the university out of any controversy and that Wilson "assured me that had always been the policy and that they would not do anything to start a controversy."

"I think he (Dr. Wilson) is handling a delicate situation in an excellent way," Chapman said. "They've still got a bunch of left-wingers in the university but they are doing a pretty good job of holding them down."

Barred Negro Singer To See College Opera

World-Telegram & Sun New York

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 8.—A University of Texas music major plans to see an undergraduate opera even though she was removed from a leading role because she is a Negro.

"Of course I'm going to see it," said Barbara Louise Smith, 19, of Pittsburg, Tex. "We support these things."

State Rep. Joe Chapman, a segregation leader, said he asked that Miss Smith be removed from the opera because "the people of Texas don't want mixing of Negroes and whites publicly."

University officials refused to comment.

Miss Smith was reluctant to say specifically why she was taken out. She only said it was not because of her singing ability.

Poise, Talent Charm, Intelligence Portray Girl Ousted From UT Opera

Informer Sat 6-8-57 P.14

Houston Texas

By CARTER WESLEY

Wednesday morning I visited for nearly as hour with Miss Barbara Louise Smith, and came away feeling so exhilarated I walked on high for the rest of the day. Here was a young woman whose name had been catapulted to the top beam of radio, television, and news wire, so that it reached every crevice of the world, practically, but her head was not in the clouds.

Yes, Barbara Louise Smith talked sense-- and I mean common sense-- not only about her experience at the University of Texas, but about life itself and her aims and her purposes.

Barbara is a healthy, well-built young woman, and she is attractive from any angle one wants to look. I am talking about the young lady whom I roused up from sleep, and who had not had a chance to put on makeup. So I am describing the foundation physique that the gigolos see in the evening with all of the powder and other trimmings.

But it was not the looks that stimulated me, it was Barbara's mind. It was her feeling for selflessness that makes for immortality and greatness. One thing that she said would illustrate what I'm trying to put down here:

At one time we talked of the many advisors who had come forth to tell her what to do, how to do it, and when to do it. She said, very quietly, that many had wanted her to quit school now and cash in on the publicity that she had gotten. Even more quietly, but positively, she said that she originally went to UT for education and training, and that's what she was going to stay for.

She put it that she didn't like the false position of trying to cash in on the publicity that came from the incident of her being put out of the role of "Dido." This is not only correct thinking, but this is the correct attitude toward life which makes a young girl her age able to see the substance through the rosy colors of fantasy.

HER GREETING

Let's go back to my first look at Barbara. I had found a note on my desk when I came into the office Wednesday morning from Mrs G P A Forde, saying Miss Barbara Smith of UT was in town, and her aunt, Mrs A Atkins of 2206 Arbor wanted her to meet me, and that Miss Smith wanted to thank me for some of the things the paper had said about her As soon as I could get out, I got in my car and drove to Arbor, without calling up to make an appointment.

When I got there I pressed the button and waited, but nothing happened. I pressed it again and waited some more, and nothing happened. By that time I began to fear that I had come while aunty and niece were gone out As a last resort I knocked noisily on the front door screen.

Soon after my knocking, a sleepy-eyed, tall, brownskin young lady opened the door. I gave my name and apologized for knocking. She opened the door and invited me in with a pleasant smile over her sleepiness.

By the time we sat down on the divan, we were both talking at ease, and we continued to talk without letup, until Rev John D Moore came to take her picture.

When she had come to the door with a normal house dress on to let me in, she had not bothered to apologize about it and we had gone on talking But when Rev Moore came in with the camera, she excused herself and went back and put on a pretty doodad, and I noticed when she got back she had put lipstick on and all the things that go with it, although she didn't take long

She and Rev Moore did the talking about where she was to sit, and what she was to do. But it is only fair to say that Rev Moore stopped in the midst of sighting and jiggling with his camera to look right at Miss Smith and say, "You are a good-looking young woman!"

She took this very nicely, not accepting it as if it were true, but saying, very gracefully and easily, that one of the things a photographer has to learn soon is flattery.

When Rev Moore was through with the pictures and had gone, we started up again, and I asked her if she didn't have some letters that I was to see, since I had noticed something about letters on the message that I had found in my office.

Then she went back and got a whole armful of letters that she had received from various people, writing to express dislike of the thing that had been done, or to commend her for the manner in which she had conducted herself.

ALL KINDS WROTE

Of course, I couldn't read all the letters. She picked out some that were interesting, and I noticed postmarks on some that I asked about, then she told me the contents of some that I did not even look at.

I noticed one from France that had come air mail, according to the French legend in the left-hand corner. There was one from a lawyer in Austin, who said a thing that impressed me very much: He said his favorite preacher had said once that people are always trying to judge somebody by his actions, but they'd find out more about a person by his reactions than they would ever glean from his actions. Then he wound up on the reaction of people in the Smith incident very cleverly.

There was a letter from a professor, formerly of UT- he said in the days when Dr Doby was there-- who is now living in California. He said that many times he had been ashamed of things that happened at the University, and he was ashamed of the thing that had happened to Miss Smith, but he had gotten out of that incident pride in the way the students, many of the faculty, and a great portion of the alumni had reacted against the wrong.

She had the original of the letter from the eight legislators, which I practically knew by heart and didn't read. I read some others, but I got the thought that it was almost worth the thing that happened to Miss Smith to have all of the good will poured out in those letters by people who had never seen her, many of whom had never really given thought to their racial attitude, until this thing struck them.

BARBARA SMITH

IT'S HER SCHOOL

I had heard several people say they wondered why she she elected to stay on, when she could have had her tuition paid at another school. I intended to ask her about that, but in the course of talk she answered the question without my asking.

She said at one point that the students at UT do all that they can and then she told of being on a student organization which tries to plan and work out things to be done, As she told of the general activities and her associations, it became clear that she belonged to the students and the group at UT, and felt as one who belongs.

In that sense Representatives Sadler and Chapman don't belong in their circle, they are aliens with wicked intent, so far as the students-- and that includes her-- are concerned.

She doesn't hate any of the students or faculty at UT, she likes them as a part of her community and their just isn't thought of her going some place else.

I complimented her on her attitude and suggested to her that she was probably better known at UT than sh'd ever get to be known on any other campus that she could go on ,whether it was white or black. People at UT not only know her as a physical person, they know her mentally, and they know spiritually now better than they know many others on their campus.

To most of the people at UT here is a young girl who walks with her hand in God's, and trusts Him sufficiently to be simple in her approach to big problems and to refrain from fear [illegible]ntred in the midst of storms [illegible]ension.

. I liked Barbara Smith. I came away feeling that she was a fine young woman. It wasn't just because she looked nice and talked nice, but it was because she thought straight and talked straight.

An empty-head would have quit school and gone out to capitalize on the notoriety for a little while, then she would have gone into eclipse and been a cheap thing in discard and oblivion.

The Barbara Smith that I met will be substantial and honest, giving good return to any audience that she appears before, and earning respect which will grow over the years.

Federal Judge Bars Pool Integration

World-Telegram
Sun P.9
Thurs. 8-1-57

By ED ROGERS.
United Press Staff Writer.

A Federal judge has refused to order immediate integration of a swimming pool at Marshall, Tex., despite U. S. Supreme Court rulings, because of a threat of racial violence.

U. S. District Judge Lamar Cecil in a decision at Jefferson, Tex., yesterday said he would as soon be hurt or killed himself as to sign an order which might result in death or injury to others.

Judge Cecil thereupon refused a temporary injunction sought by Titus Edwards, a Negro living in Marshall, but commented that ultimately he will have to follow the Supreme Court and order the pool integrated.

In another development of the South's segregation conflicts, John Kasper, twice convicted for meddling with court-order school integration, set up shop at Nashville, Tenn., where schools are to be integrated at the first-grade level this fall.

Kasper called for a mass meeting Sunday for all persons who oppose the "degraded move" of the Nashville school board, which is taking the step in compliance with a Federal court decree.

In South Carolina a legislative segregation study committee turned down a request that a special legislative session be called to revamp the state's defenses against school integration.

Three state legislators felt South Carolina's pupil placement law should be repealed because Virginia's similar law has ben ruled unconstitutional by a U. S. court of appeals.

In Charlotte, N. C., 23 Negroes who were denied admission to white schools under that state's pupil placement law anounced yesterday they will appeal the school board's decisions.

Quits Hospital Job Rather Than Separate Races

Call
By

HOUSTON, Texas.-- (INS) — A Houston welfare director resigned Sunday when he was ordered by a county judge to segregate white and Negro patients at the Jefferson Davis hospital.

Herald Tribune
Sun. 10-4-57

Wilfrid N. Calnan, 39, head of the hospital since January said he gave up his position after he was told by Harris County Judge Bobm Casey to separate the two races on the fourth floor of his hospital.

There are 38 white and six Negro patients in the ward. The white patients have been supervised by white physicians while both white and Negro physicians attended the Negroes.

Judge Casey called Calnan into his chambers and told him he had to separate the patients.

The Judge said he had complaints last Thursday from organizations visiting the hospital.

Calnan told Casey that he could not "in good conscience follow orders that are against my ethics and practices."

Marshall May Sell Pool Rather Than Desegregate

Houston Post
Sat. 8-10-57

MARSHALL — The City Commission here Wednesday ordered a special election for August 27 to authorize the sale of the city-owned swimming pool, which is an object of pending desegregation suit, as well as all city park property.

The action was recommended by the city attorney who explained that it would place the city in a stronger position when Federal District Judge Lamar Cecil hears an injunction suit seeking to permit Negroes to use the pool.

The attorney said the city would plead that the suit was a moot issue if the property was sold before the hearing.

The injunction was filed on behalf of Titus Edwards, a service veteran of this city. Marshall has one main park, in which the pool is located, and two smaller parks.

It was not learned whether the park, pool, playgrounds, recreation facilities, buildings and equipment would be sold to individuals or a group, or whether the property would continue to be used as park grounds.

Marshall has a population of about 27,000 persons. It has an estimated Negro population of about 40 per cent.

Texas U. Ousts Negro Girl From Lead in School Opera

Herald Tribune Wed. 5-8-57 p. 1

New York

Legislators Reportedly Threatened to Cut Funds

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON, Tex., May 7.—"The Houston Post" said today that Barbara Smith, nineteen-year-old Negro student of the University of Texas, had been ejected from the lead of a school opera because of objections from state legislators.

At Austin, Dr. C. P. Boner, university vice-president, refused to confirm or deny the story. Dr. Logan Wilson, university president, was reported out of town.

"The Post" said the girl was taken from the cast after Rep. Joe Chapman, a leader of the House segregation bloc, warned that the university might forfeit good public relations or get its appropriations trimmed.

Miss Smith, a dramatic soprano, was to have played opposite a young white student who had the male lead. The opera, "Dido and Aeneas," had been in rehearsal since October and is scheduled to be produced May 10 and 11.

Rep. Chapman said he called Dr. Wilson and discussed the opera casting. Rep. Chapman told "The Post" that he thought it "probably wouldn't be good public relations to have a Negro star with a white person."

He said he told Dr. Wilson that he wanted to keep the university out of any controversy and that Dr. Wilson "assured me that had always been the policy and that they would not do anything to start a controversy."

"I think he (Dr. Wilson) is handling a delicate situation in an excellent way," Rep. Chapman said. "They've still got a bunch of Left-wingers in the university but they are doing a pretty good job of holding them down."

Miss Smith refused to discuss the incident.

No Comment

Bladel Quadrolch p. 6

When President Logan Wilson, of the University of Texas, arbitrarily decided to deny Barbara Louise Smith, Negro enrollee, and a soprano in the Fine Arts department of the University, the right to take the leading part in "Dido," in Purcell's Dido and Aeneas, following her selection for this place by Dean F. W. Doty, he got the shock of his life.

Oklahoma City Okla.

Miss Smith is without question the best soprano on the Austin campus. She has grace and charm, and won the place quite naturally because of her many values that fit into such a position of this character. When told of her denial of the right to sing, she demurely said she felt "the program of integration was far more important than that she sing on this occasion."

Tr. 5-24-57

But despite Miss Smith's willingness to stand aside, the student body took a stand on this question that shows that people generally have gotten farther along than the stupid legislators who are right now in session and threatened to hold up the appropriation for the university if authorities allowed a Negro girl to sing and play a romantic part opposite a white youth.

It can be readily seen that the angry legislators hit a soft spot in the anatomy of President Wilson. No president of a state college feels free to stop the general improvement of his plant and allow his student body to crusade. This is the very place into which Representative Sadler had maneuvered Wilson when he said "Get Barbara Wilson out of the cast or I will slash your biennial budget."

But while the solons could make and carry out that threat, they could not close the lips of the student body. The student assembly met to "reaffirm its belief in the right of all bona fide students on the campus to participate in campus activities, and the "Cowboys" and the "Silver Spurs," two leading service organizations, suggested that the student body boycott the play. Down in Sam Rayburn's country it was immediately discovered that the Solid South is no longer solid on a certain subject, and the minority was not silent about their views.

The controversial matter lopped over into the political arena where the Young Republicans and the Young Democrats passed resolutions condemning the University's action as a "Flagrant violation of the principle of an equal chance for everyone." The action of these boys gives a slight glimpse of what the Texas legislature will be like, and how it will act ten years from now on questions of this character.

"The eyes of Texas" were really focused upon the faculty at Austin. What Representative Sadler should have discovered is, that while he had been busy winning support of Texas solons behind his proposal to withdraw financial support from the University, the Negro students with dignity and high purpose have during the same period been winning the sons and daughters of Texas to the cause of integration and fair play. Intolerance and democracy could not be overcome by the threat to a biennial appropriation. It showed completely that the laity in the Lone Star state is closely joined with the youth across Red river in Oklahoma that the decision of the United States Supreme Court will be observed and upheld.

One alumnus of the institution wrote a letter that was made public, which read in part: "I am ashamed . . . this makes my stomach sick." It was this type of support that made life worth living for Barbara Smith. She was made to realize and know that the students were with her and to them she was still "Dido." The University has been in a storm, with the student body staging demonstrations which give force and weight to their indignation.

The matter even exploded in the legislature itself. Eight of the members wrote Miss Smith regretting that some of their colleagues have "lost their sense of values and are more interested in personal advancement and the applause of the folk back home than they are in the Christian principles of right and wrong."

When newsmen approached President Logan at the incipiency of this affair and asked him questions, Logan said "No comment." On the evening of the play, with a cast all lily-white, President Logan was startled and shocked when he discovered a smattering of a small crowd present, with a sign hanging in an appropriate place which read, "No comment."

Students usually do their job well. They leave nothing undone. An effigy was observed hanging on the campus the day of the play to allow the entire administration at the University know that the indignation of white students endured to the end, in opposition to the concept that Barbara Louise Smith is not still "Dido."

The sum total of this incident should sink deep in the Alamo down in Sam Houston's country. The legislature was given ample opportunity to see Texas of the future. It will be a land that accepts human values, not on a basis of color, but for its intrinsic worth.

Texas Solons Send Apology To Negro Coed

Advocate Sat. 6-1-57

Baton Rouge, Miss.

Austin, Tex., May 28—A letter of apology, bearing the signatures of 12 members of the Texas House of Representatives, was written last week to Miss Barbara Smith, 19-year-old University of Texas Negro coed who was ousted from participating in a student opera at the school because of her race.

Miss Smith's removal from the lead role in the student Opera "Dido and Aeneas" was caused by the pressure of a Texas state representative, who allegedly threatened to cut funds to the school if Miss Smith was allowed to sing in the opera. The student newspaper at the school also criticized the Negro soprano playing the lead role.

Advocate

In a letter to Miss Smith, Rep. Pipkin of Brownsville, Tex., stated: "We want her to know that the person who caused her difficulties did not speak for the entire Legislature . . . that he represented only his on peculiar thinking."

Reference was made to Rep. Chapman of Sulphur Springs, who demanded that the talented Negro singer be removed from the play. The letter offered the wholehearted apology of the legislators, congratulated Miss Smith on her personal conduct during the nationwide publicity and cited her for keeping her head "while others are losing theirs."

Texas School Ousts Negro From Opera

Post + Times Herald Washington, D.C. Wed. 5-8-57

HOUSTON, Tex., May 7 (AP) The Houston Post said today that Barbara Smith, 19-year-old Negro student of the University of Texas, had been ejected from the lead of a school opera because of objections from legislators.

At Austin, Dr. C. P. Boner, university vice president, refused to confirm or deny the story. Dr. Logan Wilson, university president, was reported out of town.

The Post said the girl was taken from the cast after Rep. Joe Chapman, a leader of the House segregation bloc, warned that the university might forfeit good public relations or get its appropriations trimmed.

Miss Smith, a dramatic soprano, was to have played opposite a young white student who had the male lead. The opera, "Dido and Aenaes," had been in rehearsal since last October and is scheduled to be produced May 10 and 11.

Chapman said he called Wilson and discussed the opera casting. Chapman told the Post that he thought it "probably wouldn't be good public relations to have a Negro star with a white person."

Chapman said he told Wilson that he wanted to keep the university out of any controversy and that Wilson "assured me that had always been the policy and that they would not do anything to start a controversy."

Miss Smith refused to discuss the incident.

"We don't want an Autherine Lucy here," she told the Post, referring to campus racial riots at the University of Alabama after a Negro co-ed was admitted to classes.

Racial Bills Clear Texas Senate Unit

Star Thurs. 4-25-57

AUSTIN, Tex., April 25 (AP).— Five segregation bills, including one that would require a local option election for integration of a school district, were approved by the Senate State Affairs Committee last night.

The bills already have passed the Texas House of Representatives.

The other bills approved after a three-hour hearing include measures requiring school districts not yet integrated to operate dual systems if the people vote for segregated schools.

Others would:

Prohibit the State or any political subdivision from hiring a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Allow transfer of students for a variety of reasons.

Allow school boards to exempt students from compulsorq attendance in integrated schools and require school boards to assign Negro and white students to separate schools at the start of the year, providing for transfer within five days if a student request it.

Two State Senators have pledged to fight the bills even if it requires a filibuster.

Texan Refuses To Sell Land, Doesn't Want Group In Lake

World Telegram Birm, Ala. Sat. 6-15-57

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A House investigating committee hinted this week that a wealthy Texas oilman was reluctant to sell his property to the Government because he resented Negroes using a lake that was to be constructed.

In a hearing, Wednesday, before the House Government Operations subcommittee headed by Rep. Earl Chudoff (D.-Pa.), it was revealed that the squabble between the landowner and the engineers became so heated that it was carried to the White House for settlement.

The fight was about 1,200 acres of land near Ft. Worth, Texas, owned by Sid Richardson, which engineers wanted to acquire for the construction of Benbrook Reservoir.

'AN EASEMENT, NO SALE'

According to testimony by Maj. Gen. Bernard L. Robinson, then deputy chief of the Engineers Corps, Richardson was willing to give the Government an easement on the land rather than sell it outright. An easement would allow the land to be used only for a specific purpose.

Rep. Victor A. Knox (R.-Mich.) brought out that Richardson would have received $150,000 for the property if he had sold it. But he was willing to sell easement rights for a token fee of $1. This proved that Richardson was not interested in the dollars, said Knox, he was interested in his property.

This brought the comment from Cong. Chudoff that Richardson was opposed to selling the land because he would lose control over it. There are a lot of Negroes in Texas, added Chudoff, and they would have access to this lake and he didn't want any Negroes on his property.

Texan To Keep Land For Spite

Call P. 7 Fri. 6-14-57 Kansas City, Mo.

Property Near Fort Worth In Question

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON.— (ANP) — A House investigating committee hinted this week that a wealthy Texas oilman was reluctant to sell his property to the government because he resented Negroes using a lake that was to be constructed.

In a hearing, Wednesday, before the House Government Operations subcommittee headed by Rep. Earl Chudoff (D-Pa.), it was revealed that the squabble between the landowner and the engineers became so heated that it was carried to the White House for settlement.

The fight was about 1,200 acres of land near Ft. Worth, Texas, owned by Sid Richardson, which engineers wanted to acquire for the construction of Benbrook Reservoir.

'An Eeasement, No Sale'

According to testimony by Maj. Gen. Bernard L. Robinson, then deputy chief of the Engineers Corps, Richardson was willing to give the government an easement on the land rather than sell it outright. An easement would allow the land to be used only for a specific purpose.

Rep. Victor A. Knox (R.-Mich.) brought out that Richardson would have received $150,000 for the property if he had sold it. But he was willing to sell easement right for a token fee of $1. This proved that Richardson was not interested in the dollars, said Knox, he was interested in his property.

"No Negroes on Property"

This brought the comment from Cong. Chudoff that Richardson was opposed to selling the land because he would lose control over it. There are a lot of Negroes in Texas, added Chudoff, and they would have access to this lake and he didn't want any Negroes on his property. Call

Uu until 1953 the engineers had followed a policy of getting "full and unrestricted" title to land around reservoirs, stated Robinson. But the policy was revised that year and more emphasis was placed on just getting easements. The policy change was ordered by Robert T. Stevens, then secretary of the army.

In 1954, Gen. Robinson said he and the then Deputy Secretary of Defense, Robert B. Anderson, carried their problem directly to President Eisenhower. Anderson, a Texan whom President Eisenhower has recently appointed Secretary of the Treasury, felt that the engineers were acquiring too much land by purchase when they built reservoirs, stated Robinson.

President Receives "Personal Complaint"

At the White House "briefing", continued the witness, the President said he had received a personal complaint from Richardson. He then proceeded to document engineer policy. The policy was afterwards reviewed by the engineers, but the acquisition of the Richardson property is still tied up in the courts.

Chairman Chudoff said the purpose of the hearing was to determine whether policies were shaped to benefit taxpayers, or with the aim of "taking care of one man in Texas who wanted to have a private lake".

The Chudoff committee is a subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee chaired by Congressman William L. Dawson of Ill.

Racial Tension Mounts After Texas Bombing

Evening Star Wed. 1-30-57 Washington, D.C.

BEAUMONT, Tex., Jan. 30 (AP).—Tension mounted in this racially conscious city today after warnings of possible violence over integration were issued following a series of bombings.

Three bombs exploded in separate sections of Beaumont Monday night, one damaging St. Michael's Orthodox Church, but there were no injuries.

The Rev. Eugene Dickey, pastor of the Highland Avenue Baptist Church, said the bombings are "just a little preview of things to come if the racial question gets any worse."

Mr. Dickey, who declined to disclose his own views on integration, yesterday urged the city council to take a stand.

Beaumont was the scene of anti-integration picketing last September when Lamar State College of Technology opened its doors to Negroes after a Federal judge ordered the school integrated. All other schools in the city are segregated.

Picketing Was Quiet

Pickets marched on the campus at Lamar more than a week, but there was no major violence.

Since then, however, bombs have been tossed in the yards of Negroes on at least two occasions.

Police said they had no clues in the latest series of bombings and declined to speculate whether they could be traced to racial tension.

But C. R. Smith, a retired used car dealer whose home was the target of one bomb Monday night, said he believes it was because he had taken "a middle of the road" stand on integration

Legislator's Truck Hit

Mr. Smith said he believed the church was bombed by segregationists in the mistaken belief that it was the place of worship of Mayor Jimmie P. Cokinos, who ordered the picketing halted at Lamar State College.

The third bomb exploded under a truck owned by State Representative Rufus Kilpatrick, who last week voted to send to a committee a resolution backed by the integration bloc in the Texas Legislature.

The pastor of St. Michael's, the Rev. Daniel Montgomery, said he received an anonymous phone call yesterday from a woman who told him:

"I wanted to warn you. This is no amateur run. I'm sorry we missed on Magnolia (an apparent reference to the Smith home). We wanted to get the foreigners."

The pastor has taken no public stand on integration.

During World War II, Beaumont was the scene of race rioting and the State Guard had to be called.

No Solutions To Bombings In Beaumont

Courier P.2 Sat. 2-9-57 Pittsburgh, Pa.

BEAUMONT, Tex. — Texas Rangers and Beaumont policemen are at a loss as to who is responsible for the latest series of bombings, since none of the bomb victims are active in the desegregation fight here.

A white residence was bombed out but its owners are not active in the integration movement.

■

A GREEK Orthodox Church also was blasted but it is believed this was done because Maj. Jimmie Cokinos is a member of the congregation. Major Cokinos has been under fire since he ordered the arrest of Citizens Council pickets who were molesting white and Negro students at recently integrated Lamar Junior College.

A truck belonging to State Representative Rufus Kilpatrick was bombed, supposedly, in reprisal for his voting to send back to committee a resolution backed by the Citizens Council.

High court asked to rule on courthouse cafeteria lease

Afro American Sat. 2-23-57 P.12 Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—The United States Supreme Court is asked to pass on the question of whether Harris County (Houston), Texas, may lease space in its county court house for a cafeteria in which colored people may be denied service.

The county and W. F. (Dee) Derrington, lessee-operator of the cafeteria in the Harris County Courthouse, are seeking a review of the judgment of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

The circuit court affirmed the judgment of the Federal District Court at Houston holding that Derrington's conduct in refusing service to colored persons was state action forbidden by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The suit was originally brought against the Harris County Commissioners' Court and Derrington by M. W. Plummer, George Nelson, James L. Roberts and Mrs. Lizzie M. Alonzo. They sought a declaratory judgment and an injunction restraining the petitioners from denying colored people service in the courthouse cafeteria.

Harris County on May 21, 1953, leased to Derrington space in the courthouse from June 10, 1953, to Dec. 31, 1954. The lease was extended from Jan. 1, 1955, to last Dec. 31.

* * *

DERRINGTON ran a restaurant in the leased space for the general public and about 1,000 employees of Harris County. The lease was extended after the suit was brought with knowledge on the part of both Harris County and Derrington that the action raised questions of possible civil rights violations.

The four plaintiffs sought service in the cafeteria on Aug. 27, 1953. Derrington informed them that the cafeteria did not and would not serve colored people.

The Federal District Court ruled that Harris County could not constitutionally deny colored persons the right to service in the courthouse cafeteria.

It also enjoined the county from renewing the old lease or executing a new one or otherwise divesting itself of the management and control of the premises without specific assurance that the facilities would be made available for the use of colored persons under circumstances and conditions substantially equal to those afforded white persons.

Harris County and Derrington are contending in their petition that if the decisions of the lower courts is permitted to stand, it will support the proposition that the Federal judiciary may require each state to compel every fraternal, church, social club and business corporation created by it or operated under its laws to act to insure that no racial discrimination be made between its members and other citizens.

Representing Harris County are Joseph Brewster, county attorney, and G. D. Minick, assistant county attorney. Sam R. Merrill is the attorney for Derrington.

Seek Ruling On Barring Of Negroes

Call P.1 Fri. 2-15-57 Kansas City, Mo.

Four Houston Citizens Fight For Equal Rights

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) — The United States Supreme Court is asked to pass on the question of whether Harris county (Houston), Texas may lease space in its county court house for a cafeteria in which colored people may be denied service.

The county and W. F. (Dee) Derrington, lessee-operator of the cafeteria in the Harris County courthouse, are seeking a review of the judgement of the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

The circuit court affirmed the judgement of the federal district court at Houston holding that Derrington's conduct in refusing service to colored persons was state action forbidden by the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution.

The suit was originally brought against the Harris County Commissioners' court and Derrington by M. W. Plummer, George Nelson, James L. Roberts and Mrs. Lizzie M. Alonzo. They sought a declaratory judgment and an injunction restraining the petitioners from denying colored people service in the courthouse cafeteria.

Harris County on May 21, 1953, leased to Derrington space in the courthouse from June 10, 1953, to Dec. 31, 1954. The lease was extended from Jan. 1, 1955, to last Dec. 31.

Derrington ran a restaurant in the leased space for the general public and about 1,000 employees of Harris county. The lease was extended after the suit was brought with knowledge on the part of both Harris County and Derrington that the action raised questions of possible civil rights violations.

The four plaintiffs sought service in the cafeteria on Aug. 27, 1953. Derrington informed them that the cafeteria did not and would not serve colored people.

The federal district court ruled that Harris county could not constitutionally deny colored persons the right to service in the courthouse cafeteria and enjoined the county from renewing the old lease or executing a new one or otherwise divesting itself of the management and control of the premises without specific assurance that the facilities would be made available for the use of colored persons under circumstances and conditions substantially equal to those afforded white persons.

Harris County and Derrington are contending in their petition that if the decisions of the lower courts is permitted to stand, it will support the proposition that the federal judiciary may require each state to compel every fraternal, church, social club and business corporation created by it or operated under its laws to act

BOMBINGS PROBED IN BEAUMONT, TEXAS BUT MOTIVE IS WITHHELD

World Sat. 2-2-57 Birm, Ala. P.1

CHURCH, HOME, BUSINESS ALL HIT BY BOMBS

BEAUMONT, Tex. — (INS) — Possibility of racial trouble loomed in Beaumont Tuesday as authorities pieced together possible explanations of three dynamite blasts which shook the city Monday night.

Police declined to express an opinion on motive of the blasts as they continued to check possible clues and suspects. They said no arrests have been made and none are imminent.

Officials of the National City Lines, which owns the local bus service as well as those in Montgomery and Mobile, Alabama, said they expect to confer next month in Beaumont with U. S. Attorneys on the question of integrating City Bus Lines.

Meanwhile a Baptist minister, Rev. Eugene Dickey, appeared Tuesday before the city council urging that the council take a stand on integration.

He said that the bombings of a church, a storage company and a private residence Monday night was "just a little preview of things to come if the race question gets any worse."

NOT FOR CHURCH

Dickey said he was speaking as an individual and not for the Baptist Church.

Two mysterious calls from a woman, one to the police and the second a short time later to the pastor of the damaged St. Michaels Greek Orthodox Church, warned that "this is no amateur. I'm sorry we missed on Magnolia (near the residence bombed). We wanted to get the foreigners."

C. R. Smith, owner of the blasted residence, expressed the opinion that the bomb was meant for him because he has taken "a middle of the road stand on the question of integration."

BOMBED BUILDING

The bombed Kilpatrick flash storage company is owned by State Rep. Rufus Kilpatrick of Beaumont who voted last week to send to a legislative committee a bill backed by anti-integration forces.

A group of citizens, members of the Beaumont Citizens Council, picketed the campus of Lamar Technological College last October protesting the attendance of Negro students. The disturbance ended when pickets were ordered away at the request of white students. Several Negroes still attend the college.

to insure that no racial discrimination be made between its members and other citizens.

Representing Harris county are Joseph Brewster, county attorney, and G. D. Minick, assistant county attorney. Sam R. Merrill is the attorney for Derrington.

Texans Filibuster On Segregation Bill

AUSTIN, Tex., May 2 (AP) Sen. Henry Gonzales of San Antonio went in to pinch-hit for Sen. Abraham Kazen Jr. today in their joint filibuster to block passage of a key segregation bill.

The filibuster has moved into its second day.

Kazen, of Laredo, was seeking to delay action on a bill that would allow school boards to assign pupils to any school in the board's jurisdiction, thus eliminating integration where it was not wanted by the board. The measure is a key part of a bloc of 11 segregation bills introduced by legislators from east Texas where there are heavy concentrations of Negroes.

Supreme Court Refuses To Review Ruling To Integrate Harris Courthouse Cafeteria

Informer Sat. 4-6-57 Houston Texas P.1

HOUSTON — The United States Supreme Court Monday refused to review the Harris County Courthouse Cafeteria case, thus knocking out the last ray of hope which has imbued Harris County segregationists' desire to maintain segregation in the eating place.

The plaintiffs in the case— M W Plummer, George Nelson, Mrs Lillie Mae Alonzo and James L Roberts- were notified of the high court's action in a telegram forwarded here by John T Sey, clerk of the U S Supreme Court. The message said:

"Petitions for certiorari, (County Judge Bob) Casey vs Plummer denied today."

The cafeteria, which is under lease to W F (Dee) Derrington, was opened to Negroes by Federal District Judge Ben C Connally on December 29, 1955. The judge ruled that the county could not again lease the cafeteria on a segregated basis.

However, last April 11- the day that Judge Connally's ruling became effective- a group of whites, led by J Mort Wren, independent oil operator, blocked the Negroes' entry to the place and Wren allegedly struck Mr Plummer.

Judge Connally suspended his ruling the following day when Operator Derrington appealed the decision to the U S Fifth Court of Appeals.

The justices of the appeals court upheld the decision of the district court last December 19. The order was suspended once more when Derrington, who said that he would close the place rather than serve Negroes on an equal basis with whites, asked the Supreme Court to rule on the earlier decisions.

Monday's refusal to review the case virtually became the "straw that broke the camel's back" as far as county segregationists are concerned.

County Judge Bob Casey has indicated that the county will close the cafeteria rather than order desegregation there. He said that he doesn't feel that Houston is ready for an integrated cafeteria.

Informer P.10

At quitting time at the courthouse Monday, it was rumored that the employees there were seeking a charter to form a private club and operate the cafeteria for themselves (club members) and their guests.

When told of the plan, Attorney Plummer said that he will attempt to counteract that type of operation. He said, however, that if the cafeteria is operated as a private club, there is nothing that he can do about it. However, he said that he would attack the plan if other persons other than bona fide county employees eat there and whether Negro employees of the county are admitted.

Condemned By Church Leaders

Call P.1 Fri. 4-5-57

Texas Measure Would Ban NAACP Members From Jobs

Kansas City, Mo.

DALLAS., Texas. — Archbishop Robert E. Lucey, of San Antonio Monday denounced some state legislators and accused them of "lack of patriotism, hypocrisy and stupidity."

The statement was made at a meeting of the Legion of Mary four days after the Texas House of Representatives passed a bill, 75 to 59, which would prohibit employment by any state or local government agency of any member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The bill, introduced by Rep. Reagan B. Huffman, of Marshall, includes all teaching jobs.

The Archbishop continued, "If any members of our legislature are so filled with hatred against colored citizens that they are incapable of doing them justice, they ought to resign."

Another church leader rebuking the legislators was Rev. R. F. Curl, Methodist district superintendent. Rev. Curl, in an open letter to five Bexar county representatives who favored the bill, branded the bill as one of several extremist race-baiting measures calculated to cause strife and agitation.

There was no immediate comment from legislators after the ministers blasted their bias attitudes. Later Rep. Ed Sheridan was quoted as saying that he had calls all week asking him to stand by his vote for the anti-NAACP bill. He said he had no intention of resigning.

Huffman, at an early reading of the bill in the house, blamed the NAACP with stirring up racial troubles in Texas. Of the seven Dallas representatives, Barefoot Sanders was the only one who opposed the stringent segregation measure. Voting for the bill were Reps. Robert Johnson, Joe Pool and R. K. Sutton. John Crosthwait was excused for illness and Rep. Ben Atwell was absent for unknown reasons.

Rep. Bob Muller, of Alice Texas, termed the bill, "unconstitutional." He added, "Many are voting for this bill because they expect it to be knocked out the first time it comes up in court." Mullen declared he could not vote to punish members of any organization for "pursuing what they think is right. If they were subversive, it would be covered by present law. Regardless of race or color a citizen should have his legal rights."

The South Texan predicted the NAACP supporters can reorganize under some other name. "This is just an invitation for the Federal government to move forward with its civil rights legislation," said Mullen.

Ten other pro-segregation bills, all aimed at preventing integration of public schools, await House action. More than 100 districts, mostly in West and South Texas, have started mixing the races since the Supreme Court held compulsory racial segregation in public schools to be unconstitutional.

Judge Termed 'Not Fit....'

Pro-American

NEW YORK — United States District Judge William H. Atwell of Dallas, Texas, is "not fit to sit on the bench," New York Supreme Court Judge Meier Steinbrink said here Fri-

Baltimore Md.

Judge Steinbrink served as chairman of a special committee of the Brooklyn Bar Association which censured Judge Atwell for prejudicial remarks made from the bench at the conclusion of a trial here in 1928.

Sat. 1-5-57

The New York jurist recalled the findings of that committee after Judge Atwell caustically criticized the U.S. Supreme Court, Dec. 19, when he handed down a ruling that the Dallas, Texas, school board could not be compelled "at the present time" to desegregate its schools.

P. 20

THE 86-YEAR-OLD Texan assailed the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling as based "on no law," but rather on what the court regarded as "more authoritative, modern psychological knowledge."

Judge Atwell "should have disqualified himself" in the Dallas case, Judge Steinbrink said, "because he showed himself to be anti-colored back in 1928.

"I don't believe he's ever changed his attitude and he now puts himself above the law as interpreted by a unanimous Supreme Court bench. He believes in a government of men, not of laws."

* * *

THE BROOKLYN censure of Judge Atwell stemmed from abusive remarks he made in court to an attorney representing a case before him and his gratuitous remark that "white and colored people cannot live together."

The Texan belittled the attorney in the presence of his client and threatened to jail him when he protested.

Because the attorney had questioned the validity of the testimony of the arresting officer, Judge Atwell berated him and cited what would happen down in Texas.

"Now, in my part of the country," he said, "had you made such an accusation against an officer of the law, he would have smashed your face before you got out of the courtroom.

"Or, if he had sufficient control over himself, he would have waited until he got outside and then suffered the consequences."

* * *

THE BAR Association committee condemned these remarks as "entirely unjustified and unwarranted and clearly in violation of every dictate of common courtesy and decency."

Further the committee's resolution charged, the remarks "were intemperate, vituperative and malicious, were deliberately made and were calculated and designed to humiliate the said F. R. Seri before his client."

The refusal of Judge Atwell to permit the attorney to reply "to his verbal assaults was cowardly in the extreme," the resolution asserted.

* * *

THE REPORT of the committee was sent to the U.S. Supreme Court with a request to Chief Justice William Howard Taft that Judge Atwell "may never again be assigned to sit in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

Serving with Judge Steinbrink on the committee were Robert H. Wilson, a former president of Brooklyn Bar Association, and Edward J. Connelly, a trustee of the association.

SAYS COUNTY CAFETERIA MUST SERVE NEGROES

Clarion Ledger Jackson, Miss.

Sat. 1-5-57

Houston, Texas, Dec. 31 — In a clearcut opinion Wednesday the Fifth Court of Circuit Appeals upheld Federal District Judge Ben C. Connally's ruling last April forboding W. F. (Dee) Farrington to exclude Negro customers from the cafeteria in the Harris County Courthouse.

The ruling forbade the county from renewing the present lease or make a new one under which Negroes would not be served.

Derrington's present lease expired Dec. 31. The Commissioners Court recently ordered a renewal prepared. Its terms contain no clause permitting cancellation if Negroes must be served.

That would indicate that the Commissioners Court expected the federal appeals court to uphold Connally's decision and that the members had reconciled themselves to letting Negroes be served in the cafeteria sooner or later or else letting the cafeteria be closed. Any formal announcement, of course can come only after the Commissioners Court has met.

District Judge Connally was out of town Wednesday night.

In a nutshell, the situation would seem to be something like this: Derrington plans to appeal the case to the U. S. Supreme Court. Connally suspended execution of his order some months ago and Negroes are not now being served in the cafeteria. Derrington hopes that Connally will extend the suspension of the order until the case is decided by the county's highest court.

The execution of orders is often suspended until an appeal is carried to the Supreme Court but the practice is not invariable. There would seem to be little doubt as to which way the Supreme Court will rule in this case.

Interposition Versus Integration

Informer Houston Tex.

P. 1

By MAR ON BUTTS

"Interposition vs Integration" was the lead editorial in our metropolitan daily newspaper, the Dallas Moining News, last Friday, January 25. We think the Dallas Morning News has fallen into error and we offer the following statements:

Wtth the first two sentences of the editorial in the Dallas Morning News of Friday, January 25, we do not quarrel: "Texas gets nowhere by any attempt to repeal the desegregation decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. The Legislature can't do that."

Sat. 2-2-57

The next sentence in the first paragraph, which says that the Supreme Court cannot compel the Legislature to appropriate money, we suggest is irrelevant.

It matters little whether the Supreme Court decision compels the Texas Legislature to appropriate money for schools, or whether the Constitution of Texas compels it to do it, the only important thing is it compelled?

Article VII, Section 1 of the Constitution of Texas provides . . . "It shall be the duty of the Legislature of the State to establish and make suitable provision for the support and maintenance of any efficient system of public free schools."

Section 2 of the said Article VII provides . . . "lands . . . and all sums of money that may come to the State from the sale of any portion of the same, shall constitute a perpetual public school fund."

Section 3 of the said Article VII provides: "One-fourth of the revenue derived from the State occupation taxes and poll tax of one dollar . . . shall be set apart annually for the benefit of the public free schools; . . . there shall be levied and collected an annual ad valorem State tax of such an amount not to exceed thirty-five cents on the one hundred dollars valuation, as with the available school fund arising from all other sources, will be sufficient to maintain and support the public schools of this state . . . and it shall be the duty of the State Board of Education to set aside a sufficient amount out of the said tax to provide free text books for the use of children . . . And the Legislature may authorize an additional ad valorem tax to be levied and collected within all school districts heretofore formed or hereafter formed . . ."

Informer

Section 7 of Article VII, as now amended by the Supreme Court of Texas decision, provides:

P. 10

"Separate schools shall be provided for the children, and impartial provision shall be made for both."

Houston, Tex

Now, is the Dallas Morning News suggesting that the Constitution of Texas, requiring provision for public schools, be revoked? Certainly as long as the provisions remain in the Constitution, the Legislature of Texas is compelled to provide public schools without discrimination. So the compelment is on the Legislature without any act from the Supreme Court or from the federal government or from the National Constitution.

Sat. 2-2-57

But we believe most readers will agree that the people of Texas would not tolerate repeal of the law requiring public schools in Texas at this late date in our history.

Now as to the question of interposition, the Texas Legislature can neither logically nor validly interpose anything between the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution and their desire to continue segregation. In the first place, they would have to interpose between the Texas Supreme Court's decision in the Big Spring case. So far as Texas is concerned, it is the Supreme Court of the state that has ruled segregation illegal and void, and the laws purporting to implement it as void.

Therefore, an act of interposition in Texas will not be worth the paper it is written on. The first sentence in the editorial, quoted above, commits the Dallas Morning News to a realization of that fact, when they say that the Legislature can't repeal the desegregation decision. What else is interposition except to repeal it, or to nullify it?

Now as to the Dallas Morning News' views on its pet project of Salt-and-Pepper schools, the Supreme Court of Texas has specifically ruled that so much of the Texas law as attempts to provide for separate schools is void. How, then, can the Dallas Morning News seriously contend that the Legislature can now not only provide for separate schools, but also provide for mixed schools, compulsorily administered?

The Salt-and-Pepper plan misapprehends the rationale of the Texas Supreme Court decision in the Big Spring case, as well as the Supreme Court's decision in the Brown vs. School Board case. The law, as interpreted both by the Texas Supreme Court and the United States Sureme Court, says schools cannot be set up on the basis of race.

Then for the Dallas Morning News to be advocating that the Legislature pass laws, providing for compulsory Negro school and compulsory white schools, is for the Dallas Morning News of fly in the face of the decisions of both the Texas Supreme Court in the Big Spring case and the United States Supreme Court decision in the Brown vs. School Board case.

Under the law of Texas and of the federal government now, a state can only set up public schools in districts or cities for children to attend. Whether the pupils in schools shall be white or colored must depend upon the sole test as to whether or not, by geographical arrangements of their homes, they are entitled to go to this or that school.

It's strange that the Dallas Morning News isn't aware of the fact that there has been a score of opinions by federal district courts, interpreting the Supreme Court's decision, all of which, with one possible exception, held that school attendance cannot be governed on the basis of race. The trouble with the Pepper-and-Salt idea is that the law will not permit the Dallas Morning News to ever get its "pepper" separate or its "salt" separate in school terminology.

No freedom is taken from the white parents of children. White parents can comply with the law that governs public schools, or they can send their children to private schools at their own election. The same rule applies to Negroes. But if either parent wants the benefit of public schools, then that parent must comply with the laws of the land.

The people of Texas have provided that there shall be public schools, and the courts have ruled that the public schools shall be without segregation. No individual parent, or collective number of parents, has a right to override the Constitution as provided by the people of Texas and interpreted by the Supreme Court of Texas as well as that of the United States. The privilege the Dallas Morning News seeks to place in the white parents—to use public schools for their convenience—just doesn't exist in American democracy. The Salt-and-Pepper plan just "ain't no good."

Asst Atty Gen Calls Proposed Bills 'Bad'

Informer Sat. 3-2-57 p.1

Houston, Texas

Tells Group, 'All's Well In Texas'

WASHINGTON, D C -Texas Assistant Attorney General Davis Grant struck violently at President Eisenhower's civil rights proposals Monday by telling the House Judiciary Committee that the proposed legislation is "bad" and that Texas invites any congressional committee to investigate civil rights in the Lone Star state, "because we have nothing to hide.

"All is well in Texas," he explained.

However, Grant was quick to prevent anyone from accepting his invitation by adding that he doesn't think it necessary for such a committee to conduct an investigation in the state.

Grant appeared here in behalf of Gov Price Daniel and Atty Gen Will Wilson in protest to passage of two civil rights bills pending before the committee. Committee Chairman Emmanuel Celler, Democrat of New York, had granted a two-day extension of the hearings to allow Southern opponents to testify, but he said testimony will positively close Tuesday. Celler's strategy is to work for House passage as soon as possible to defeat an expected Southern filibuster in the Senate.

Grant called both civil rights programs- the bill introduced by Rep Kenneth Keating, Republican of New York, and the Celler Bill-- "bad legislation."

The Keating Bill similar to one passed by the House last year, would permit the U S attorney general to seek civil remedies such as injunctions in federal courts to protect voting and other civil rights of citizens. The Celler Bill does this but goes further in including criminal penalties.

Grant said that if these laws are enacted it would have a corrosive effect upon the sovereignty of the states.

In a shy but sly manner, Grantt told the group that the establishment of a commission of civil rights was "totally unnecessary and the funds sent by it would be a shameful waste of public moneys."

Fearing that many skeletons would be exposed in the state's closet, Grant said that if the power of subpoena is given to a civil rights commission, " the group could indefinitely impound in Washington the entire records of the State of Texas."

He also attacked the provisions of proposed legislation for additional assistant attorneys general and a staff. This attack was an effort to keep the small force of U S investigators busy at all times across the nation so that "dirty work" could be done with comparative ease in the state.

Sat. 3-2-57 p.10

"If enacted, the attorney general will certainly need 100 assistants to take care of all who would seek free legal assistance...." he said.

Grant also claimed that by enabling federal district courts to file damage suits without first exhausting state remedies "you would further jam the already congested federal courts with suits that have no real basis in fact." However, it is generally known that Texas' governor, attorney general and some of the officials have any sincere concern about the situation in federal courts.

Irony in Texas

Courier Sat. 4-13-57 P.9

We are greatly intrigued by the irony of a Negro addressing the Texas Legislature at a time when that body was enacting legislation designed to put the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People out of business.

Pittsburgh Pa.

The Negro was George W. Westerman, Ambassador of the Republic of Panama to the United Nations. The time was March 28. Whether the Texas legislators knew beforehand that Ambassador Westerman was a Negro, we do not know.

Texas

An editor of the Negro-owned Panama Tribune of Panama City and a life-long champion of all that the NAACP stands for, it was rather piquant to find him addressing the largely Negrophobic Texas Legislature at the very time when this body was working with might and main to make what he was doing impossible for a black Texan.

JC cafe reopens as 'private club'

Apt-Appeal-Post Baltimore, Md.

HOUSTON, Texas — The lilywhite cafe in the county courthouse here, closed to avoid serving all customers under a Supreme Court ruling, was reopened last week as a "private club operation for county employees and their guests.

Sat. 4-20-57

The former operator, W. F. Dee Derrington, who surrendered his lease after the Supreme Court rejected his appeal, has been hired as manager of the "club" by the County Employees Association.

p.5

DERRINGTON will get 90 per cent of the net profits, the association 10 per cent. Operation expenses and $500 a month rent to the county will be deducted before the division of profits. The county formerly got $700 a month.

No dues will be paid by county employees, employees and their guests being admitted "on recognition" by Derrington, Luster Allen Jr., chairman of the employees club board, said.

Integration Order Brings Cafe Closing

Post-Times Herald Sat. 4-6-57 Washington, D.C.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 5 (AP) The cafeteria in the basement of the the Harris County Court House, ordered integrated by the United States Supreme Court, will be closed to the public after today. p.10C

The country commissioners court has approved a request from W. F. Derrington, the operator, that his two-year lease be terminated.

Meanwhile, Luster Allen Jr., board president of the county employes union, said county workers would hold a mass meeting Monday to form an organization for operation of the cafeteria as an eating place for the employes and their guests.

Allen said three county workers had applied for a charter to form an employe club and the cafeteria probably would reopen Tuesday on a club basis. This would allow employes to set up rules on its use.

M. W. Plummer, Negro attorney who filed the suit to end segregation, has said he would oppose any "subterfuge" to reopen the cafeteria on a segregated basis. He said he would not object to operation of the facilities for county employes only, but would regard serving of other persons as an attempted evasion of the court ruling.

INTEGRATED, EATING PLACE CLOSES DOORS

Houston, Tex., April 5 (AP)— The cafeteria in the basement of the Harris county courthouse, ordered integrated by the United States Supreme court, will be closed to the public after today.

The county commissioners court has approved a request from W. F. Derrington, the operator, that his two year lease be terminated.

The Supreme court issued a ruling Monday offirming a lower court order that the cafeteria be opened to Negroes.

Meanwhile Luster Allen Jr., board president of the County Employes union, said county workers will hold a mass meeting Monday to form an organization for operation of the cafeteria as an eating place for the employes and their guests. Allen said three county workers have applied for a charter to form an employe club. This would allow employes to set up rules on who could use the cafeteria.

Courier
Sat. 5-11-57
Pittsburgh, Pa.
P. 12

Sat. 5-11-57

Seek Action—Shortly after his arrival in Chicago, Vice President Nixon, at the extreme right, conferred with Dr. J. H. Jackson, to his left, and other leaders regarding the "Urge Congress Movement" which seeks action on civil rights legislation now. Participating in the conference were, left to right, newspaperman Louis Martin and Maxwell Rabb, secretary to the cabinet. Dr. Jackson, who launched the "Urge Congress Movement,' is president of the National Baptist Convention, USA, Inc., and pastor of Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago.

38b

Afro American
Sat. 5-11-57
Baltimore, Md.
P5

IN THE WINDY CITY —Shortly after his arrival in Chicago recently, Vice President Richard Nixon, right, conferred with Dr. Joseph H. Jackson regarding the "Urge Congress Movement" which seeks action on civil rights legislation now. Dr. Jackson, who launched the Movement, is president of the National Baptist Convention and pastor of Olivet Baptist Church in Chicago.

38c

38a 1957

They Wear Blinkers

David Lawrence's U.S. News and World Report can be fairly objective in its reporting until it comes to one phase of the news — racial integration.

Then, along with its editor, it dons blinkers and refuses to see that democratic public schools work in 40 states so busy is it weeping over the situation in the Supreme Court-hating eight.

A story out of San Antonio, Texas forms a good case in point.

There 14-year old Robert Samuel Hassan presides as class president of Longfellow Junior High School where he was elected by an overwhelming majority.

He also served as chairman of the graduating exercises and delivered the welcoming address. The son of a minister he is one of four colored students in a school of 810.

A fellow white student explained why Robert was chosen president "I voted for him because I thought he was better than the others. That's all," he said.

U.S. News and World Report readers were gleefully told how Barbara Louise Smith was forced to withdraw from the stellar role of an opera at the University of Texas.

They were given a dramatic blow-by-blow description of segregation disturbances at Mansfield and Texarkana.

But they still don't know about the Robert Samuel Hassans of San Antonio or any other school district which has wisely decided to comply with the law.

U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT
MR. DAVID LAWRENCE

Negro Bares Race Hurdle In Vermont

Advertiser Montgomery Ala Wed 2-27-57

BURLINGTON, Vt., Feb. 26 (AP) — Leroy Williams Jr., 21, Negro captain of the University of Vermont's 1956 football team, says a South Burlington motel refused to provide a room for his girl friend because she is a Negro.

Williams said his date for the university's "Kake Walk" weekend, Joyce Austion of Montclair, N.J., was refused a room which had been reserved a week in advance.

He said yesterday a friend made reservations Feb. 15 for four girls and room charges were paid a week later.

The Montclair, N.J. senior said Miss Austin arrived last Friday and when he took her to the motel the proprietor said it was not his policy to "accept colored people." He said the proprietor told him there was "an arrangement on Williston Road" that motel operators would take no Negroes.

He said the other three university students also took their money back and found other rooms for their dates.

Williams quoted the motel operator as saying a policy against taking Nefroes was adopted because "white customers complain and will not stay at places occupied by Negroes."

Advertiser

Williams, one of seven Negro students at the univc ity, said he had not encountered racial "scrimination in Burlington before.

Wed. 2-27-57

Atty Gen. Robert T. Stafford ruled in 1955 that refusal to accommodate persons in inns because of race, creed or color is in violation of Vermont law.

Negro Bares Race Hurdle In Vermont

Advertiser Wed. 2-27-57 Montgomery

BURLINGTON, Vt., Feb. 26 (AP) — Leroy Williams Jr., 21, Negro captain of the University of Vermont's 1956 football team, says a South Burlington motel refused to provide a room for his girl friend because she is a Negro.

Williams said his date for the university's "Kake Walk" weekend, Joyce Austion of Montclair, N.J., was refused a room which had been reserved a week in advance.

He said yesterday a friend made reservations Feb. 15 for four girls and room charges were paid a week later.

The Montclair, N.J. senior said Miss Austin arrived last Friday and when he took her to the motel the proprietor said it was not his policy to "accept colored people." He said the proprietor told him there was "an arrangement on Williston Road" that motel operators would take no Negroes.

He said the other three university students also took their money back and found other rooms for their dates.

Williams quoted the motel operator as saying a policy against taking Nefroes was adopted because "white customers complain and will not stay at places occupied by Negroes."

Advertiser P.2-a

Williams, one of seven Negro students at the univc ity, said he had not encountered racial "scrimination in Burlington before.

Atty Gen. Robert T. Stafford ruled in 1955 that refusal to accommodate persons in inns because of race, creed or color is in violation of Vermont law.

Grid star says hotel barred girl

Afro-American Baltimore, Md Sat. 3-9-57

BURLINGTON, Vermont (ANP) — A South Burlington, Vt., hotel was accused of racial discrimination last week by the captain of the University of Vermont's 1956 football team, Leroy Williams Jr., 21.

P. 3

He charged that the hotel refused to provide a room for his friend because she is colored.

The girl, Miss Joyce Austin of Montclair, N.J., was Williams' date for the university's "Kaje Walk" weekend. He stated that she was refused a room that had been reserved a week in advance.

* * *

WHEN SHE appeared the proprietor was quoted as saying it was not his policy to "accept colored people."

Instead, he was reported to have steered them to the Williston Road Hotel, which he said had a policy to "accept colored people."

The action of the hotel was termed a violation of Vermont law by Attorney General Robert T. Stafford, if found to be substantiated.

took their money back and found other rooms for their dates.

Mr. Williams, one of seven Negro students at the university, said he had not encountered racial discrimination in Burlington before.

Attorney General Robert T. Stafford ruled in 1955 that refusal to accommodate persons in inns because of race, creed or color is in violation of Vermont law.

Heads Football Team

Herald Tribune

Vermont U. Negro Says Hotel Barred Girl Friend

Wed. 2-27-57 New York N.Y.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Feb. 26 (AP).—Leroy Williams jr., twenty-one, Negro captain of the University of Vermont's 1956 football team, says a South Burlington hotel refused to provide a room for his girl friend because she is a Negro.

P. 11

Mr. Williams said his date for the university's "kake walk" week end, Joyce Austin, of Montclair, N. J., was refused a room which had been reserved a week in advance.

He said yesterday a friend made reservations Feb. 15 for four girls and room charges were paid a week later. The Montclair, N. J., senior said Miss Austin arrived on Friday and when he took her to the hotel the proprietor said it was not his policy to "accept colored people."

Mr. Williams said the proprietor told him there was "an arrangement on Williston Road" that hotel operators would take no Negroes. He quoted the hotel operator as saying a policy against taking Negroes was adopted because "white customers complain and will not stay at places occupied by Negroes."

Mr. Williams said the other three university students also

Senator Byrd's Illusion

Afro-American p.4

In common with other rabid segregationists, Virginia's Senator Harry Flood Byrd appears to have deluded himself with the idea that, given time, he can persuade the United States Supreme Court to reverse itself.

Baltimore, Md.

In a speech before the Richmond Kiwanis Club last week, he said, among other things:

Sat 3-30-57

"If we show the proper fortitude then there is always the possibility that if the court reverses itself once it will reverse itself again."

It is this wishful thinking that goads Senator Byrd to continue the course he describes as "massive resistance."

* * *

WILL THIS defiance formula of the Byrds, the Eastlands, the Talmadges and the White Citizens Councils work?

We hardly think so.

They tried resistance even more massive than anything Senator Byrd now proposes in 1861 and it brought them only bitter anguish, needless bloodshed and bankruptcy.

There is not the slightest indication that 100 years later the results of such a campaign would be any different.

Senator Byrd performs a cruel disservice to his fellow Virginians in leading them to believe otherwise.

Virginia Asks Negro to a Dinner, Then Cancels Bid as a 'Mistake'

Times New York p.33

Thurs 4-11-57

An invitation to a prominent New York Negro to attend a dinner in Richmond for "distinguished Virginians" was withdrawn yesterday as "a mistake." Dr. Clilan B. Powell, publisher of The Amsterdam News in Harlem, had accepted the invitation. The dinner is to be held in the John Marshall Hotel on May 17.

A physician, business man and life member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Dr. Powell was born in Newport News, Va., in 1894.

He was unavailable yesterday for comment on the dinner. His secretary, Miss E. M. Holden, said, however, that the invitation had been received and accepted a week ago. A telegram requesting that the invitation be returned was sent Tuesday.

The invitation more the names of Gov. Thomas Bahnson Stanley and Frank Arthur Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commorce. It requested "the pleasure of your company at a homecoming reception and dinner for distinguished Virginians."

The affair was described as part of a celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown Island in Virginia.

Addressed to Dr. Powell at 2340 Eighth Avenue, at 126th Street, the invitation was received in the office of his weekly newspaper.

In Richmond, the executive director of the State Chamber of Commerce, Vernon Kemp, said last night: "There was a mistake."

Mr. Kemp explained that upon checking acceptances on Monday he found "there had been an error" in issuing the invitation.

Abou t600 invitations had been sent out. Mr. Kemp said the names of those invited had been "compiled variously." By this he intimated that some names had been taken from "Who's Who in America.

Dr. Powell is listed in that reference book as a graduate of Virgnia Normal College and Howard University, both Negro institutions.

Negro Plans Dinner Date With Whites

Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Fri 4-12-57

NEW YORK, April 11 (AP)—A Negro newspaper publisher said today he still considers himself invited to a dinner for "distinguished Virginians" even though it was withdrawn as "a mistake."

The invitation was sent to Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in New York's Harlem section. He is a native of Newport News, Va.

He received a telegram Tuesday requesting that the invitation be returned. Last night in Richmond, Va., Vernon Kemp, executive director of the State Chamber of Commerce, said the reason was that "there was a mistake" in issuance of the invitation.

Today Dr. Powell made public a statement saying:

"I was invited by the governor of Virginia under the official seal of the state of Virginia and I wired my acceptance.

"Until I receive a withdrawal from those who extended me the invitation I cannot consider the invitation as having been canceled."

The dinner is to be held at Richmond May 17 as part of a celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown. About 600 persons were invited.

Invitation Mixup Upsets Officials

Defender Sat. 4-20-57

Chicago, Ill. P.1

RICHMOND, Va. — The Virginia Chamber of Commerce has withdrawn invitations to two Negroes to attend a dinner next month for "distinguished Virginians."

The two are Dr. C. B. Powell, publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, and Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart, of Toledo, Ohio, a registered pharmacist.

Powell refused to "disregard" the invitation for the May 17 affair as "inadvertently issued."

The invitation bore the name of Gov. Thomas B. Stanley, with the dinner scheduled for Richmond.

Both, however, have since received telegrams from Richard S. Gillis, director of activities of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, withdrawing the invitation.

Dr. Powell said he "was invited by the Governor of Virginia under the official seal of the state of Virginia," and added he "cannot accept a withdrawal. . .until I receive a withdrawal from those who extended me the invitation."

NAACP MEMBER

Dr. Powell, who was born in Newport News, Va., in 1894, is a physician, business man and a life member of the NAACP.

The original invitation requested "the pleasure of your company at a homecoming reception and dinner for distinguished Virginians."

Mrs. Stewart, who was born in Berryville, Va., is a member of the League of Women Voters.

Frank A. Ernst, the president, said clerical errors were responsible for the inclusion of the two names in a list of approximately 600 invitations, but Powell said he plans to attend the dinner unless the governor personally withdraws the invitation.

NO COMMENT

Stanley refused to comment on the matter and directed all questions to the Chamber of Commerce.

Discussing Powell's invitation, Ernst said:

"I sincerely regret any embarrassment or attendant inconvenience to Dr. Powell. He and others must remember that the concept for the dinner from the very first was that this occasion definitely was to be a social event.

"I am sure that he, as a Virginia-born Negro, can appreciate this distinction."

Defender p.2

A spokesman for the chamber said, that in selecting the guests, a number of "distinguished Virginians," both white and Negro, had been left off the list for political views, race and other causes.

No one could explain how Powell's and Mrs. Stewart's name got through.

White Editor Will Not Attend

Journal + Guide Sat. 4-27-57

Norfolk, Va.

Attacks Governor's "Laughing Stock" Racial Policies

P.3

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. — There may be more empty chairs than bargained for at the controversial Virginia

State Chamber of Commerce dinner May 17.

And at least one white "distinguished Virginian" can already be counted in that number who has refused a bid to the supposedly lily-white affair.

Virginia State Chamber of Commerce officals had all but recuperated from headache that resulted from knowing that three Negroes had been sent invitations to attend the May 17 dinner, when another distinguished Virginian, Judge Edward R. Dudley of New York, member of the NAACP legal staff, announced that he had received a bid to the dinner.

Dudley, a native of South Boston, and former ambassador to Liberia, said he might attend the dinner.

* * *

LAMBERT DAVIS, director of the University of North Carolina Press, and former managing editor of the Virginia Quarterly Review, last week, showed little regard for his would-be hosts in rejecting Gov. Thomas B. Stanley's invitation to the dinner and severely attacking the governor's stand on racial issues.

In a strongly critical letter to the governor, Davis, accused Gov. Stanley of "making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the nation."

* * *

HITTING AT the governor for his part in reneging on invitations sent to four Negroes, Davis, one of the 600 native Virginians from "Who's Who" In America" invited to attend the dinner, said:

"I assume that I have received the invitation because I, like Dr. Clilan B. Powell of New York City, (one of the four Negroes who had invitations cancelled) am listed in "Who's Who In America" as having been born in Virginia."

* * *

"I ALSO assume that if, as happened in the case of Dr. Powell, it transpired that I was an American of Negro ancestry, you would delegate Mr. Verbon Kemp of the Chamber of Commerce to inform me that the invitation was a mistake. It is therefore not a true invitation, but an offer contingent upon my being able to prove Caucasian ancestry."

The four Virginia-born Negroes, Mrs. Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, St. Clair Drake of Chicago, Ill., Dr. Powell, and Judge Edward R. Dudley of New York also listed in "Who's Who," received invitations to the dinner.

* * *

THE CHAMBER later said this was a mistake and the invitations were withdrawn. In the latest development last Wednesday, a Chamber spokesman said if any of the Negroes showed up, he felt sure they would be treated courteously and seated.

Continuing in his letter, Davis said he watched "with increasing alarm, despair and anger" the course the governor has chosen for Virginia in meeting the desegregation problem.

* * *

DAVIS SAID that while sober minds all over the South have looked to Virginia for leadership, "you have offered only the barren slogan of massive resistance, the tyrannical suppression of all local freedom, and a mass of witless obtrusive legislation that is rightly doomed to the judicial scrapheap."

"And now, Davis added, you find yourself on a great and solemn occasion in the history of the Commonwealth, in the ridiculous position of asserting, in effect, that being distinguished is an accomplishment possible only for people of Caucasian ancestry.

* * *

IN CLOSING, Davis said, "I believe that I can best show my loyalty to the great traditions of Virginia by declining your invitation.

It is not definitely known whether or not any of the four Negroes still plan to attend the affair, although Mrs. Stewart has indicated that she will not attend. Both Dr. Powell and Drake, a sociology teacher have said they might still come to the dinner.

Attack On Court House Segregation Came As Surprise To Norfolk Lawyer

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. Oct. 4-20-57

p. 14

Norfolk's Negro lawyers were taken by complete surprise when one of their number filed suit in the Federal Court here Wednesday to have the "colored" and "white" signs removed from the Courthouse building at City Hall avenue and Bank street.

The attorney, E. A. Dawley Jr., petitioned the United States District Court for an order restraining city officials from maintaining segregated toilet facilities within the Court House Building.

* * *

ALTHOUGH MR. Dawley filed the suit "for himself and on behalf of others similarly situated" no other local attorney contacted by the Guide had any prior knowledge that the suit would be filed.

All said that they were not parties to it and that Mr. Dawley's suing "on behalf of others similarly situated," meaning other Negro lawyers practicing in Norfolk, was done without their knowledge or consent.

* * *

APPARENTLY one other lawyer, however, knew about the plan early. Leonard Holt, a 1956 graduate of the Howard Law School who passed the Virginia bar examination last December, telephoned the Guide on Wednesday morning to say that the suit had been filed.

In March Mr. Dawley and Mr. Holt wrote letters to city officials and judges of local courts complaining about segregation in the jail and court buildings.

* * *

ALTHOUGH Mr. Dawley was recently elected president, and Mr. Holt secretary of the Twin City Bar Association, an organization of colored lawyers practicing in Norfolk and Portsmouth, the letter was written and signed by them as individuals and not as officers of the lawyers' organization.

The Bar Association had rejected a recommendation of Mr. Dawley and Mr. Holt that such letters be sent from the organization. Shortly afterwards, the two attorneys nevertheless sent such letters in their individual capacities.

OLDER LAWYERS said that there has been no segregation of Negro attorneys in any of the city courts in the last 50 years.

They further pointed out that in only one of the two Police Courts is any effort now made to segregate the spectators. Spectators are not segregated in any of the courts of record, that is, the two Corporation Courts, the Circuit Court, and the Court of Law and Chancery.

* * *

THE SPECIFIC target of Mr. Dawley's action is the toilets for white and colored men, and for white and colored women in the Court House.

The petition alleges that the maintaining of such segregated facilities "reasonably tends to suggest to jurors, the public, court officials, the clients and potential clients" that Negro attorneys are considered "to be inferior, both as persons and as attorneys at law."

* * *

IT FURTHER alleges that presence of these jimcrow signs "tends to embarrass, humiliats, harass, and injure Negro attorneys practicing in said courts." Mr. Dawley in his petition also said that these signs have a "detrimental and adverse effect on the personality, confidence, morale, physical health, mental health, efficiency and effectiveness of Negro attorneys."

The complainant says that all of this is in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution in that it deprives him and other Negro attorneys of due process of law and of equal protection of the law.

* * *

THE SUIT asks for a permanent injunction restraining the City of Norfolk and its officials responsible for providing and maintaining court buildings from displaying such signs and segregating persons on account of race or color in the use of public court facilities.

Named as defendants were the City of Norfolk, by Mayor Fred Duckworth; Thomas F. Maxwell, City Manager; Calvin H. Dalby, Director of Public Safety and S. C. Morrisette, Director of Public Works.

* * *

ASKED BY the Guide why he filed his suit as a "class action"—for himself and "other Negro attorneys similarly situated" — Mr. Dawley said one reason was to keep the action alive in case anything happened to him before it was finally adjudicated.

He explained that as long as any of the other persons similarly affected by the conditions complained of remained alive, the action would not be thrown out of court for want of a plaintiff.

* * *

HE ALSO said that in the event a restraining order was issued, a large number of people—those "similarly situated" — rather than himself alone, could complain of violations and institute contempt proceedings.

Mr. Dawley said that he filed suit independently of lawyers or organizations. He specifically stated that it was not endorsed or backed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

R. S. V. P.

Journal & Guide

(Since this editorial was written, Vernon E. Kemp, executive director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, has said: "I feel sure they (the colored invitees) will be received courteously and seated for dinner).

Sat. 4-27-57

THERE IS both comedy and tragedy in the little drama staged by the committee to give a dinner as a part of the Jamestown celebration to 600 "distinguished" Virginians who live and labor outside of the Old Dominion.

Norfolk Va. p.8

The comedy resides in the haste and heat with which certain "distinguished" colored Virginians who were "erroneously" invited had their invitations withdrawn. As of Tuesday, when this article was written, three of the colored invitees had been discovered. There are probably some others. No list of 600 distinguished Virginians living outside of the state could be assembled, which did not run about 25 percent colored.

Another part of the comedy lies in the psychology which entrapped the committee from the State Chambers of Commerce. The list was evidently made up from directories containing the names and a brief biographical sketch of people who have achieved distinction in one or more fields.

No state Chamber of Commerce screening committee would assume that there were no Negroes in such directories. Therefore, they picked Virginians whom they thought were all white.

Then came the tragedy. A Roosevelt College professor of Anthropology and Sociology was on the list. He lives and works in Chicago, where the College is located. A medical doctor and newspaper publisher, insurance executive and member of the New York State Boxing Commission. A woman druggist and civic leader in Toledo, Ohio.

How could these people be colored? No thought that they were occurred to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. But they are, and the committee had to do something about canceling these invitations.

So rude telegrams were sent out as fast as the colored invitees were uncovered, demanding that the invitations be returned. These telegrams were released to the press services and the hyena-like boys who gather and disseminate bad news about colored people, turned on the heat. "The invitation sent in error to the Negro had been withdrawn." The committee was mortified. The State was humiliated. The Negro was invited by mistake. Then it turned out that there were three Negroes; Holy smoke!

Probably in jest, two of the invitees stated they would come anyhow, unless GOVERNOR STANLEY himself withdrew the invitation. They bore the seal of the State of Virginia and the Governor's name.

We hope that Roentgenologist POWELL and Sociologist DRAKE will not come to Richmond for the dinner. They do not know our Governor. He will not personally and officially do anything about the invitations. But he would personally and officially arrange for a squadron of his palace guards to meet the unexpected guests at the door and throw them in the Richmond jailhouse. They would then be tried on charges of disorderly conduct and probably sentenced to a year each on the Elko real estate site, breaking ground for the new owners.

That would be more in line with the out-house atmosphere that has characterized the STANLEY administration for the past three years

DR. POWELL and PROF. DRAKE and MRS. STEWART didn't need the stupid explanation given by FRANK ERNST, Chamber of Commerce head: ". . . the concept for the dinner was to be a social event." He ended by saying that he was sure that as Virginia Negroes they (the invitees) can appreciate this distinction." They are aware of it but do not appreciate it.

At the outset of the planning for the Jamestown affair, a "Colored Advisory Committee" was named. It has not been called upon for advice. Any member of the committee would have been glad to advise the promoters of the observance that offending the sensibilities of colored people is a good way to keep them away from Jamestown, and also from Virginia.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 4-20-57 p.1

38a VS

DR. CLILIAN B. POWELL
He accepts Virginia governor's invitation

Va. 'guest' keeps bid

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

BULLETIN

TOLEDO, Ohio — Mrs. Ella P. Stewart, nationally known clubwoman, a native of Berryville, Va., revealed Saturday that she had also received an invitation from Virginia's governor. She told the AFRO she had no intention of accepting as she did not care for the company of such "distinguished Virginians" as the governor was assembling.

Sat. 4-20-57

NEW YORK—Dr. C. B. Powell, physician and publisher, last week said he intended to attend the dinner for "distinguished Virginians" in Richmond, although the return of the invitation has been requested.

"I was invited by the Governor of Virginia under the official seal of the State of Virginia and I wired my acceptance," he said, adding:

"Until I receive a withdrawl from those who extended me the invitation I cannot consider the invitation as having been cancelled."

* * *

THE NATIVE OF Newport News, Va., now editor and publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, was among 600 persons invited to attend the homecoming and dinner.

His invitation, like all others, was signed by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and Frank A. Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring organization.

The affair, part of the 350th anniversary of the First Permanent English Settlement in America at Jamestown Island, will be held at Hotel John Marshall on May 17.

Afro-American

When asked to comment on Dr. Powell's statement, Governor Stanley "passed the buck" to the chamber without making a statement. Ernst described the incident as "regrettable."

Sat. 4-20-57

VERNON E. KEMP, executive director of the Chamber, indicated that the error wasn't discovered until Dr. Powell wired acceptance.

Powell received the invitation via telegram last Tuesday and wired his acceptance. He also said he had reserved a suite of rooms for himself and his wife at the hotel.

p.2

Kemp said that the publisher observed in accepting the invitation: "I wonder if you know I'm colored."

He said he immediately notified the hotel and called a conference among members of his staff and consulted with an aide of the Governor.

* * *

THEY THEN, he added, wired Dr. Powell asking him to return the invitation. He said the wire was signed by a member of the chamber in charge of arranging details.

Powell, upon receiving the request for withdrawal, then made public his statement and intentions to attend the dinner unless Governor Stanley and Ernst withdrew the invitation.

"I sincerely regret any embarrassment or attendant inconvience to Dr. Powell," said Ernst. "He and others must remember that the concept for the dinner . . . was to be a social event.

38a

"I am sure that he, as a Virginia-born colored man, can appreciate this distinction."

* * *

KEMP ALSO added that the list had been well screened to eliminate persons because of race, political views or various other reasons.

"We had screened the list purposely to eliminate colored people, and some white people as well," Kemp said, adding:

"This was just an unfortunate error. We don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, but our annual banquet has always been for white people, and it's a private affair."

Lee F. Paschal, president of Richmond Hotels, Inc., said, that's his statement" when asked to comment on whether or not Dr. Powell had hotel reservations.

He declined to elaborate on hotel policies toward colored persons seeking accommodations.

"The Big Dinner"

Journal + Guide

By Richard E. Moore

Sat. 4-27-57

There is going to be a dinner
Up in Richmond, so they say;
And it's given by the governor
For his friends who've been away.

Norfolk, Va. p9

They've been making preparations
For this "party of the year."
It's been keeping everyone busy,
Just deciding what to wear;

They've been sending invitations
To the state's "distinguished" guests;
To native sons of the Commonwealth
With whom her laurels rest.

Who's invited to the party,
Surely everyone can come;
Yes, as long as he is lily white,
And a "distinguished" gentleman.

If he calls his home Virginia,
And he's listed in "Who's Who,"
And he's registered Caucasion,
Surely, he's invited too.

When they're seated 'round the table
There'll be many smiling faces,
And red ones too, who can't explain
About those empty places.

But I'm sure if someone asked him:
Governor, where are all the rest?
He'd be very quick to answer,
They are not "distinguished" guests.

Oh! I'd surely love to be there,
Up in Richmond, come this May
When the governor gives his party
For his friends who've been away.

The Real Errors

Journal + Guide p8

From the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

We have noted with interest the information recorded in Who's Who in America about Dr. Clilan Bethany Powell of New York, Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, and St. Clair Drake of Chicago.

Sat. 4-27-57

These are three Virginia-born Negroes who have moved to other states and attained enough distinction to be included in the list of 600 or 700 "distinguished Virginians" invited in the name of the Commonwealth and of the State Chamber of Commerce—with the names of Governor Stanley and of Frank A. Ernst of Hopewell, president of the chamber, on the engraved invitations—to a dinner in Richmond in May. The dinner was designed to bring "distinguished Virginians" home this year because of the Jamestown Festival.

Norfolk, Va.

After the formal invitations had been issued, and in two of these three instances accepted, the State Chamber of Commerce woke up to the fact that these three are Negroes. The State Chamber of Commerce thereupon began notifying the three recipients that the invitations were withdrawn. Mr. Ernst said that "the concept for the dinner from the very first was that this occasion definitely was to be a social event." He added, with respect to Dr. Powell, that "I am sure that he, as a Virginia-born Negro, can appreciate this distinction."

Governor Stanley, who invited the "distinguished Virginias" to return to their state for this occasion, has said nothing.

In the light of this remarkable series of events, some things need to be said.

1. The .'clerical error" is, on its face, a super-duper. If Governor Stanley and the State Chamber of Commerce wished to invite "distinguished" white Virginians but not "distinguished" Negro Virginians, and set somebody to work on "Who's Who in America to draw up the list, as reported, then the job was inexplicably botched.

2. Mr. Ernst's contention that "the concept for the dinner" was "a social event" is debatable. Obviously this was not to be a gathering of friends. It was a dinner with a heavy official connotation. Governor Stanley invited the 600 in his official, not his personal, capacity. The State Chamber of Commerce did likewise.

3. The basic ideas of this occasion, we suggest, were three. The persons invited must be Virginians. They must be living in other states. They must be "distinguished." Those who had these three ideas in their minds should ask themselves now why they did not think that Negroes meet all three qualifications.

4. The exhibition of rudeness which has now gone around the country and probably to every continent in the world is regrettable. In many parts of the United States people know that Virginia has had a regard for the decencies, public and private, and in its history has stood for something fine in this respect. Now they must be puzzled. As for other continents, everyone knows that formidable enemies are lying in wait for every American gaucherie of this kind to exploit among black and yellow races who are watching American leadership in the contemporary world. This a blow to the United States of America as well as to good taste and good manners.

---

5. The invitations to Dr. Powell, Mrs. Stewart, and Professor Drake should be allowed to stand. This is 1957, not the Reconstruction Era. The probabilities are that many of the 600 "distinguished Virginians" invited to this official dinner have broken bread with Negroes at other official gatherings without feeling that they endangered their immortal souls. The probabilities, indeed, are that many of theirs hosts in Virginia have done so. The tribute is to Virginians who have made good in other states. If Negro Virginians have risen above the hardships and difficulties which most members of their race have to struggle with, and have attained distinction, what is wrong with official Virginia's recognizing the achievement and hailing it with pride? Is the public spectacle the state government is making of itself worth any imaginable gain it can hope for in this measuring of distinction by race and doing so in a shockingly rude manner?

Fifth Negro Reveals Bid To Dinner

Star p18-a

Sun. 4-28-57

Washington D.C.

RICHMOND, Va., April 23 (AP).—The lid remained open today on the "Pandora's box" of headaches opened by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce when it inadvertently invited Negroes to a dinner here next month honoring "distinguished Virginians."

The fifth Virginia-born Negro to acknowledge an invitation to the widely publicized repast is the Rev. William H. Gray, jr., a native of Richmond and now a prominent Philadelphia clergyman and educator.

Mr. Gray, pastor of the Bright Hope Baptist Church in Philadelphia and vice president of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, revealed last night he has written an acceptance to Gov. Stanley, expressing the hope that "you will indicate your further interest and desire in having Mrs. Gray and me as your guests on this occasion."

The invitation to Mr. Gray, presumably, will be withdrawn as were those sent by "clerical error" according to chamber officials to four other Virginia-born Negroes.

Chamber spokesmen have nade it clear, however, that any Negro choosing to ignore the vithdrawal will be seated at the linner and treated "courteously."

At least one white recipient of an invitation to the May 17 dinner has announced a decision not to attend in protest to the withdrawal of the invitations to the Negroes.

The dinner is being sponsored by the State Chamber as an adjunct to the 1957 Jamestown celebration.

Virginia Incident

Post - Herald

Virginia's leading business and political figures are still red-faced over the "mistake" made in issuing invitations to six of 600 "distinguished Virginians" for a dinner party in Richmond on May 17.

Baltimore, Md.

The affair, sposored jointly by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, is designed to spotlight the 350th anniversary of the founding of the Jamestown settlement.

Five of the invites, Justice Edward R. Dudley and Dr. C. B. Powell both of New York; Mrs. Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Dean Lewis Downing of Howard University School of Engineering, and Prof. St. Clair Drake of Chicago have indicated they would not attend.

But the sixth, Dr. William H. Gray, educator, clergyman and politican of Philadelphia, insists he will be present.

At first there was considerable consternation over the prospect of Virginia's 'massive resisters' breaking bread with Americans of color, no matter how distinguished, but common sense ultimately prevailed, and a shamed-faced announcement went out that all guests would be welcomed.

Nevertheless, we find the incident did serve one useful purpose.

It holds up for the whole world to see just how thin is the veneer of courtesy, gentility, breeding and good manners about which some segments in the Old Dominion state are wont to boast.

Editor Boycotts Jim Crow Dinner

Defender Sat. 4-27-57

Chicago Ill. P.1

WASHINGTON — A white Virginian, expressing "anger and alarm" over the racist policies of Virginia's governor, has declined an invitation to attend a dinner to which three Negroes were unwittingly invited, only to have their invitations withdrawn.

The white invitee is Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, N. C., who told Gov. Thomas B. Stanley in an open letter:

"You have succeeded in making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the nation."

STAND FIRM

Two of the three prominent Negroes who received bids to the dinner marking the 350th anniversity of the founding of the Jamestown, Va., colony plan to attend despite the fact the sponsors have said they made a mistake in inviting Negroes.

They are Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a physician and publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, and Dr. St. Clair Drake, Roosevelt University professor of sociology and anthropology.

Also invited is Mrs. Etta Phillips Stewart, pharmacist of Toledo, Ohio, who does not plan to attend.

UP TO GOVERNOR

A native of Newport News, Va., Dr. Powell said:

"I was invited by the governor of Virginia under the official seal of the state and I wired my acceptance. Until I receive a withdrawal from those who extended me the invitation, I cannot consider the invitation as having been canceled."

He earlier had been told by telegram that the invitation was a "mistake" and was asked to return it.

Dr. Drake, a native of Suffolk, Va., says he believes the invitation was extended by both the Chamber of Commerce and the Commonwealth of Virginia and he will not return his unless the governor asks him to do so.

The three who received the invitations are listed in "Who's Who in America" which is the fact that qualified them for consideration to the event.

'ERROR' DISCOVERED

In the meantime, officials of the Chamber of Commerce in Richmond, Va., have said that they asked all three to return the invitations, when the "error" was discovered.

Dr. Drake who lives at 5411 S. Dorchester, Chicago, last year returned to Chicago after a 15-month study trip in West Africa on a Ford Foundation grant. He is co-author of the book, "Black Metropolis."

The Virginia dinner which is scheduled for May 17 is in honor of "distinguished Virginians."

Mrs. Stewart served as president of the NACW from 1948 to 1952. In 1951 she represented the organization at the International Council of Women which met in Athens, Greece.

U. S. ENVOY

In 1954-55, she represented the U. S. State Department on a lecture tour in Pakistan, India, Ceylon and Indonesia, ironically explaining the American way of life.

Mrs. Stewart also was a delegate to the Pan Paciffic Women's Conference in Manila and has been vice chairman oftthe Pan Pacific Women's Association.

She also is a member of the National Council of Women, USA, the national Community Chests and councils, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, a member of the executive committee of the Toledo Municipal League and the Toledo League of Women Voters.

A retired pharmicist, she is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh.

Davis told the governor that "I have watched with alarm, despair and anger" the course Stanley has pursued in meeting the state's racial problems.

He added:

Defender P.2

"When — as well I know — sober minds all over the South have looked to the Old Dominion for leadership, you have offered only the barren slogan of massive resistance, the tyrannical suppression of all local freedom, and a mass of witless obstructive legislation."

Editor, Bias Foe, Rejects Bid to Virginia Dinner

Evening Star Fri. 4-19-57 P.14a

Washington D.C.

RICHMOND, Va., April 19 (AP).—An invitation to a homecoming dinner here May 17 for distinguished Virginians has been rejected by a white editor because of racial restrictions on the dinner.

Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, N. C., and former editor of the Virginia Quarterly Review, said yesterday in an open letter to Gov. Stanley "I believe that I can best show my loyalty to the great traditions of Virginia by declining your invitation."

Invitations to the dinner, which was arranged by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in behalf of the State government and the chamber, went out to some 600 native Virginians over the names of Gov. Stanley and Frank A. Ernst, chamber president. The dinner was planned as a feature of the Jamestown 350th anniversary celebration.

Would Be Admitted

At least three of the invitations went to Negroes, through what was termed clerical error. Mr. Ernst withdrew the invitations and offered apologies to the three.

A chamber spokesman said, however, that if any of the invited Negroes showed up for the dinner they would be received courteously and admitted, even though their invitations had been withdrawn.

Two of the Negroes, Mrs. Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, and Dr. Clilan B. Powell of New York, have announced they would not attend. The third Negro, St. Clair Drake, professor of sociology at Roosevelt University, Chicago, said that although he has received Mr. Ernst's withdrawal, he would still consider himself invited unless Gov. Stanley says he is not.

In his letter, copies of which were sent to newspapers here and elsewhere, Mr. Davis noted the invitations asked for replies to be sent to the Governor's office.

Graduate of Virginia U.

He said he assumed that if he were a Negro "you would delegate Mr. Verbon Kemp of the Chamber of Commerce to inform me that the invitation was a mistake. . . . It is therefore not a true invitation, but an offer contingent upon my being able to prove Caucasian ancestry."

A Lynchburg native and University of Virginia graduate, Mr. Davis, 51, told Gov. Stanley he deplored "the course taken by the political leadership of Virginia, with you as titular head, in the face of one of the most momentous and complex issues of our time," the segregation issue.

"When—as I well know—sober minds all over the South have looked to the Old Dominion for leadership, you have offered only the barren slogan of massive resistance, the tyrannical suppression of all local freedom, and a mass of witless obstructive legislation that is rightly doomed to the judicial scrapheap," Mr. Davis said.

"And now you find yourself," he added, "on a great and solemn occasion in the history of the Commonwealth, in the ridiculous position of asserting, in effect, that being distinguished is an accomplishment possible only for people of Caucasian ancestry. You have succeeded in making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the Nation."

Virginia Briefs

Post & Times Herald Washington, D.C. Thurs. 4-25-57 P.2-B

Tuck Soothed on Issue Of Segregation in Motels

Associated Press

Plans to allow motels along the Blue Ridge Parkway—which would involve the question of mixing the races—were reported uncertain yesterday.

Director Conrad L. Wirth of the National Park Service wrote Rep. William Tuck (D-Va.) that, "there has been some question as to whether any overnight accommodations should be invited on the Parkway."

The letter was in answer to a recent protest by Tuck against any plans to provide "motor courts where integration would be practiced."

"The people of Virginia," Tuck wrote, "will not stand for integration in motels and I hope that the National Park Service will not persist in any such program or practice."

Wirth wrote Tuck that, "Nothing will be done in letting any such concession contract on the Parkway until after we have had an opportunity to consider it further with you and other members of Congress."

"There has been some question," he added, "as to whether any overnight accommodations should be invited on the Parkway. We have always felt that only the bare necessities should be provided and that a great majority of the people will always be taken care of off the Parkway."

Wirth pointed out that all Government contracts are required by law to carry "a nondiscriminatory clause."

Tuck wrote in protest after Parkway Superintendent Sam P. Weems was quoted as saying the proposed motor court near the Peaks of Otter would be operated in line with the nonsegregation clause.

tr for folos.

system construction in Virginia —a by-pass of Emporia on U. S. 301.

Talbott-Marks Co., Inc., submitted a low bid of $1,601,009 to the State Highway Department for the four-lane interstate project. The construction is the first in the state to be financed under provisions of the 1956 Federal Highway Act.

The Talbott-Marks bid was included in a total of $4,673,210 in low bids for 22 road and bridge projects opened by the highway department today.

The Emporia project is one of 19 given priority by the State Highway Commission for the 1012-mile interstate network in Virginia. Today's bids are subject to review by the Commission.

Virginia Banquet To Be All-White As Negro Declines

Evening Star Sat. 4-20-57 P.3

RICHMOND, April 20 (AP).—Unless another "inadvertent invitation" is discovered or the principals thus far involved change their minds, Virginia's well-publicized dinner next month will be an all-white affair.

Washington, D.C.

The affair appeared ended today after 10 days of controversy that followed the discovery that three persons invited to the State Chamber of Commerce's "Distinguished Virginians" dinner party are Negroes.

Dr. St. Clair Drake, a professor at Roosevelt University in Chicago, announced yesterday he would not attend.

He received an invitation to the dinner along with Dr. Clilan B. Powell, New York publisher, and Mrs. Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Ohio. All three are native Virginians and Negroes.

When it came to light the dinner might become an integrated affair chamber officials withdrew the three invitations and extended apologies for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused. A "clerical error" was blamed for the invitations.

Mrs. Stewart readily acceded to the withdrawal. Dr. Powell and Dr. Drake, however, maintained they would honor the invitations and appear at the dinner unles sthe invitations were withdrawn personally by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley.

Dr. Powell reversed himself Wednesday night and said he would not be present.

Dr. Drake, however, said at that time he still planned to attend the May 17 dinner, scheduled as part of the Jamestown Festival honoring the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America. But he also withdrew yesterday.

Distinguished Virginians' Dinner Stirs up hot 'Tempest in a teapot'

Call Phila 4-26-57 p.13

Kansas City, Mo.

BY ALVIN E. WHITE
FOR ANP

NEW YORK — When it comes to stupidity, jimcrow takes the cake. And if an Oscar or an Emmy were awarded for the most stupid act of 1957—thus far—it would be a toss up as to whether the good governor of Virginia or his slick young president of the Chamber of Commerce, would get the honor. Right now, mention "distinguished Virginians" and red faces in Richmond, the old Confederate capital, get even redder. And meanwhile, colored Americans are enjoying the discomfort of the smart alecks who pulled the prize boner of the year.

"It's this way you see. Virginia is celebrating the 350th anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown, oldest English settlement in the new world. By way of a "kick-off" the Chamber of Commerece has invited 600 distinguished Virginans to a whopping dinner celebration on May 17. And many of those "distinguished Virginians" live outside the beloved Old Dominion.

So it was a pleasant surprise to Dr. Cliland B. Powell, publisher of the Amsterdam News of this city, to receive a handsomely engraved invitation, in the name of the Governor Thomas B. Stanley and Chamber of Commerce presiden Frank A. Ernst.

Of course Dr. Powell was aware of the fact that things in his native state had changed—slightly that is—since his boyhood days in Newport News where he was born 62 years ago. Yet, a mistake could have been made in his calculations—for a comic Red Buttons says, "Strange things are happening."

'Sorry' For Mistake

But not that strange. For as soon as Ernst discovered that Dr. Powell was not a white Virginian, he immediately expressed his "regrets" and a lot of other baloney about Dr. Powell should know etc, etc. etc. All to cover up his dam-phool blunder—any idiot reading the biography of the successful doctor would immediately see that he was not of the white race.

Funny thing. Dr. Powell says he is going to attend, or appear in Richmond unless he gets a withdrawal of the invitation from the Governor himself—who, poor soul, is fighting to keep out of this mess.

Strangely enough, a second invitation was mis-sent—to a colored woman, Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart, of Toledo, Ohio, a registered pharmacist, who toured Asia for the State Department in 1954-56 to explain the American way of life. This one hadn't come up for explanation then, but Mrs. Stewart would have a jim-dandy time sloughing this one off—although she says she does not plan at this time to attend, or appear at the dinner.

When the Jamestown celebration was in the planning stages, the Governor with all good intent, had said he would call in leaders of both racial groups to work out some praticipation for the colored Virginians, within the framework of the tentative plan.

Word to this effect reached the ears of the "boss" of Virginia, sitting in the U. S. Senate and the Governor's good intentions just made another block in the pavement of that famous place which is said to be paved with good intentions. Colored Virginians have heard nothing more until the Powell letter gave them a change to guffaw.

Act Hard To Explain

Fifty years ago, when the 300th anniversary of settlement of Jamestown was celebrated, a famous Virginian of colored extraction, Colonel Giles B. Jackson, wangled $200,000 from the Federal government to erect a building and display the progress of Virginia's colored inhabitants. At that time, this huge sum placed in the hands of the colored director, caused a nine-day sensation. The building was erected—not too close to the main buildings of the exposition—and attracted thousands of visitors of both races, yet, the final outcome of the separate participation left a bad taste.

Why the sponsors did not include colored Virginians in this celebration has not been explained, meanwhile like a worm in hot ashes, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, has a ticklish job getting both himself and the governor off the hook. Won't Russia like this one?

Here's the question. . .Is Dr. Powell a successful Virginian or not? He's been a successful medical practitioner; a successful X-ray laboratory operator; publisher of a newspaper, director of a thriving insurance company, co-proprietor of a prosperous liquor store among many other business enterprises and a former member of the New York State Athletic Commission. Just how much more is demanded —except that he change the color of his skin?

White Editor Lambasts Va. Governor; Refuses Invitation to Celebration

By Lancaster

Des Moines, Iowa

Thurs. 4-25-57

Richmond, Va., (CNS) With three invitations "misdirected" to prominent Virginia Negroes, one correctly directed invitation to white editor Lambert Davis was refused bluntly and the dinner which will commemorate the 350th anniversary of Jamestown with 600 native Virginians in attendance, lambasted.

Not True

Dr. Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, N. C. wrote his answer in an open letter to Governor Stanley. He said: "I believe that I can best show my loyalty to the great traditions of Virginia by declining your invitation."

He went on to say that if he were a Negro, "you would delegate Mr. Verbon Kemp of the Chamber of Commerce to inform me that the invitation was a mistake. It is therefore not a true invitation but an offer contingent upon my being able to prove Caucasian ancestry."

Lashing out at Governor Stanley, Mr. Davis wrote: "When sober minds all over the South have looked to the Old Dominion for leadership, you have offered only the barren slogan of massive resistance, the tyrannical suppression of all local freedom, and a mass of witless obstructive legislation that is rightly doomed to the judicial scrapheap.

Ridiculous Position

"And now you find yourself on a great and solemn occasion in the history of the Commonwealth, in the ridiculous position of asserting in effect that being distinguished is an accomplishment possible only for people of Caucasian ancestry.

"You have succeeded in making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the Nation."

"He must know that without his support these men will have no choice but to take the cowardly way out of a ludicrous situation."

* * *

ANOTHER WHITE woman commend the T-D editor for his editorial criticizing the governor and Chamber of Commerce for the withdrawal of invitations to three colored persons. She said in part:

"...As a matter of fact, I am very sorry that some of our white people say the things that are said about the colored race as a whole. I thought that this nation and state of ours was supposed to be a democracy, founded on the principle of 'freedom for all.'

"It makes one wonder if our country is so democratic when there is so much written in the papers about the place that the colored people is supposed to occupy. . . . The colored people

Stanley's racial segregation stand draws sharp criticism

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. p.12

Sat. 5-4-57

RICHMOND (ANP) —Gov. Thomas B. Stanley is under a barrage of criticism by white Virginians for his attitude on the race issue.

The latest faux pas was the effort of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce with Stanley's approval, to withdraw the invitation to three colored persons to attend a dinner for distinguished Virginians now residing outside the state.

The dinner, to be held May 17, is a feature of the Jamestown Festival commemorating the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America.

* * *

ELIZABETH S. MINIGIOLI Mrs. Frances G. Brown of Richmond, wrote last week to the Richmond Times-Dispatch last week severely criticizing Gov. Stanley. After commending the editor for his editorial on the matter, she said:

"...However, there is one aspect of the situation which also deserves editorial comment. That is the sorry spectacle of the governor of a great state abdicating his position of leadership by refusing to state publicly his opinions on the subject and passing the buck to the Chamber of Commerce.

fought side by side with his white brother (fellowman) in both our World Wars."

Governor Stanley Rejects Cultured Negroes As 'Distinguished Virginians'

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. Sat. 4-20-57

RICHMOND — The governor's highly-publicized dinner for "distinguished Virginians" has been brought down front in the public spotlight for what it really is—a jim crow affair that has become tinted with racial overtones typical of the present administration.

The dinner, scheduled for May 17 as a feature of the Jamestown anniversary celebration, has received far more publicity than was bargained for because Gov. Stanley has recalled invitations which were sent to two distinguished Virginians who are colored. They are:

Dr. C. B. Powell, prominent New York physician, publisher and businessman, who had already accepted the invitation and told reporters that he planned to attend the dinner.

Mrs. Ella Phillis Stewart, of Toledo, Ohio, a registered pharmacist actively affiliated with the league of Women Voters, who stated this week that she does not plan to attend the affair.

* * *

IRONICALLY enough, the dinner is scheduled to be held on the third anniversary (May 17) of the historic decision of the U. S. Supreme Court outlawing racial segregation in public schools.

Both invitations were signed by Governor Stanley and Frank A. Ernst, president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce and were recalled when it was discovered that two colored prominent Virginians were on the invited list by error."

* * *

DR. POWELL, publisher of the Amsterdam News, an insurance executive, member of the New York State Boxing Commission, and owner of several business establishments, was born in Newport News in 1894. He is listed in "Who's Who In America" and by "Dunn and Bradstreet."

Mrs. Stewart, who is a native of Berryville, Va., told reporters at Toledo that I feel the state of Virginia is embarrassed by its attitude and I would not want to go (to the dinner) and be embarrassed as an individual."

* * *

DR. POWELL stated that he would attend the dinner, unless his invitation is personally withdrawn by Gov. Stanley.

The governor, whose attitude on racial matters is well known, declined to comment on Dr. Powell's assertion that he would attend the dinner, referring all questions to the Chamber of Commerce.

* * *

MR. ERNST had this to say: "He (Dr. Powell) and others must remember that the concept for the dinner from the very first was that this occasion definitely was to be a social event. I am sure that he, as a Virginia-born Negro, can appreciate this distinction."

* * *

HE WENT ON to explain that a number of Virginia-born notables, both white and colored, had been excluded because of race, political views or otherwise.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ernst expressed his "regrets" that the distinguished colored Virginians had received invitations. They were sent out by error—naturally.

NEGRO DECLINES VIRGINIA DINNER

Times-Picayune Mon. 4-15-57

RICHMOND, Va., April 14 (AP)—The second of two prominent Negroes inadvertently invited to a dinner here "for distinguished Virginians" said that she would not attend.

New York

"I feel the state of Virginia is embarrassed by its attitude and I would not want to go and be embarrassed as an individual," said Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart, a retired pharmacist, at her home in Toledo, Ohio.

P. 28

The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the Richmond dinner May 17 as part of the celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement at Jamestown, said it regretted the mistakes in the invitation list. It withdrew the invitations to the Negroes.

The names of Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a New York physician who publishes the Negro Amsterdam News in Harlem, slipped through what the state chamber tried to make a careful screening of names. Powell is a native of Newport News, Va. Mrs. Stewart was born in Berryville.

Dr. Powell said earlier he would be in Richmond for the dinner unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley personally cancelled the invitation. Stanley, thus far, has declined comment. The invitations went out over the names of the governor and Frank A. Ernst, president of the state chamber. Ernst wrote to Powell withdrawing the invitation and a member of the chamber's staff phoned Mrs. Stewart.

Governor's name and the seal of the Commonwealth of Virginia," Dr. Powell explained. "The invitation was embossed also with the name of Frank Arthur Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, but it was issued from the Governor's office, the Capitol.

"He extended me the invitation as an official of the Commonwealth. He is the only one who can withdraw it. So, unless I receive a notice from him withdrawing the invitation, I shall attend with my wife."

Dr. Powell deprecated a telegram that arrived Tuesday signed by Richard S. Gillis, director of activities of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

It informed Dr. Powell that the invitation had been issued from a "limited list supplied to Governor by this office."

"Inadvertently," the telegram continued, "invitation was issued you. Please disregard and return invitation. Deeply regret if any inconvenience has been caused."

The 62-year-old publisher said he had telegraphed acceptance of the invitation to Governor Stanley last Friday. He also reserved a suite of rooms in the John Marshall Hotel, where the affair will be held on May 17.

The dinner is part of a celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown. About 600 Virginians have been invited to participate. Dr. Powell was born in Newport News, Va.

Negro Plans to Attend Dinner Unless Virginia Governor Balks

Times New York Fri. 4-12-57 P. 27-C

Dr. Clilan B. Powell said yesterday he was preparing to attend a dinner for "distinguished Virginians" in Richmond next month. The New York Negro physician, business man and publisher of The Amsterdam News in Harlem said he planned to go unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley himself withdrew the invitation.

"My position is that I received the invitation under the

Ashley Raps Withdrawal Of Invitations to Negroes

Post & Times Herald P. 11-B Washington D.C.

Wed. 4-17-57 Associat

Withdrawal of invitations to two Negroes invited to a dinner for distinguished Virginians was protested by Rep. Thomas L. Ashley (D-Ohio) yesterday.

Ashley wrote Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia "to protest Virginia's shocking treatment of two of her distinguished citizens, Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, and Dr. Clilian B. Powell of New York City."

(Reports from Richmond said yesterday a third Virginia-born Negro, St. Clair Drake, a professor at Roosevelt University, Chicago, has received an invitation. He said he would attend unless the invitation is withdrawn by the Governor.)

"Their original invitation to attend the 'distinguished Virginians' dinner on May 17, issued over your official signature," Ashley wrote Stanley, "was an earned tribute to Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Powell.

"The preemptory withdrawal of these invitations can only be considered a direct and deliberate assault upon the dignity of two outstanding Americans," he added.

"For no other reason than their color, they have been singled out, discriminated against, and held up to the Nation as unworthy of recognition by their native state."

Ashley recalled that Mrs. Stewart is a native of Berryville, Va., and a past president of the National Association of Colored Women. She was the first Negro to be graduated in pharmacy from the University of Pittsburgh. In 1954, she was sent by the State Department on a tour of the Orient to explain the American way of life.

Dr. Powell is a physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in Harlem, New York City.

Virginia Withdraws Invitation to Negro

Post & Times Herald P. 6L

Fri. 4-12-57

NEW YORK, April 11 (AP)—An invitation to a prominent New York Negro to attend a dinner in Richmond for "distinguished Virginians" has been withdrawn as "a mistake."

He is Dr. Cullan B. Powell, a physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in Harlem, who was born in Newport News, Va., in 1894.

Powell's secretary, Miss E. M. Holden, said yesterday that the invitation had been received and accepted a week ago. Last Tuesday, she said, a telegram came requesting that the invitation be returned.

Powell said today he would attend the dinner unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley withdraws his invitation, the United Press reported.

Powell said the invitation was signed by the Virginia Governor.

A telegram that arrived Tuesday was signed by Richard F. Gillif, director of activities of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, Powell said. He added that he would not consider disregarding the invitation until notified by Stanley to do so.

The invitation, for a dinner May 17, was described as part of a celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown.

In Richmond, Vernon Kemp, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said an invitation list of some 600 persons had been compiled from information supplied by local chambers of commerce.

a telegram he received from Richard S. Gillis stating that the invitation had been withdrawn.

"My position is that I received the invitation from the Governor, under the State seal, and I intend to be there," said Dr. Powell. "Until I receive a withdrawal from the person who sent the invitation, I certainly cannot accept a withdrawal from someone I don't even know."

Mr. Gillis is director of activities for the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, which helped arrange the dinner.

Dr. Powell, a native Virginian and graduate of Virginia State College at Petersburg and Howard University, said the invitation from Gov. Stanley asked him to attend a dinner May 17 at the John Marshall Hotel in Richmond, and also to tour Williamsburg and Jamestown the following day in connection with the current Jamestown celebration.

He said he wired his acceptance last Thursday. Yesterday he received the telegram from Mr. Gillis advising him he "inadvertently" had been invited. The telegram asked him to return the bid.

"I am not sending it back, and I will be right there unless the Governor tells me not to come," he declared.

AFRO finds Jamestown Festival open; all citizens welcomed and staffed by both races.

One water fountain serves everybody.

* * *

THE PAVILION with umbrellaed tables for lunchers, bears no signs designating sections by race.

The picnic tables are grouped together in a grove that is as free of segregation now as it was back in 1607 when the first settlers landed here.

Strolling through the reconstructed fort, the glass house and reproductions of the three ships, festival-goers would find it almost impossible to either avoid or interfere with persons of another group.

Adjacent to the state-supported festival park is Jamestown Island, a unit of the National Park Service of the U.S. Department of Interior.

* * *

IN THE information center [illegible], the rest rooms are not [illegible]cially segregated. There is equal access to all facilities for everyone who visits here.

The observer, looking for a difference, cannot detect any attitude, tone of voice or manner of address on the part of the staff of either the state or national areas to indicate any racial feeling.

The lone reminder of Senator Byrd's "massive resistance" policy are small signs indicating 'white' and 'colored' restroom facilities on the festival grounds.

* * *

MEANWHILE AFTER Governor Stanley had reversed himself and said all invited guests, including the four colored persons sent bids by "mistake," would be welcomed, it appeared none of them would appear.

Mrs. Ella P. Stewart, Toledo clubwoman, and Judge Edward Dudley of New York, had both declined, saying they "did not care for the company of distinguished Virginians" which were to gather in Richmond.

Dr. C. B. Powell, New York publisher, who had at first said he would go, Tuesday changed his mind and decided to stay away.

* * *

ST. CLAIR DRAKE, a Chicago professor, the fourth guest, also announced his intention of going to the dinner, but Saturday, he, too, backed down.

Dr. Powell, in his letter to Governor Stanley and Frank A. Ernst, president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, said:

"It is definitely clear to all conderned that your recession of my invitation is because of my race.

"The embarrassment caused me by your action is quite insignificant. However, I think it is of paramount importance that you embarrassed the United States before the whole

PROFESSOR DRAKE, in announcing Saturday that he would be "too busy" to attend the affair, said:

"Since the governor has taken the attitude that colored guests may attend I feel my victory has been won. I have now decided that pressing business will keep me in Chicago."

The governor's decision to welcome all "distinguished" Virginians without regard to race came only after he had been made the target of blistering criticism.

* * *

ONE OF THE white guests, Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N.C., wrote Stanley:

"You have succeeded in making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the nation."

Davis, a graduate of the University of Virginia, said he watched "with increasing alarm, despair and anger," the path his native state was taking on the desegregation problem.

"When — as well I know— sober minds all over the South have looked to the Old Dominion for leadership, you have offered only the barren slogan of massive resistance, the tyrannical suppression of all local freedom, and a mass of witless obstructive legislation that is rightly doomed to the judicial scrap heap.

"And now you find yourself on a great and solemn occasion in the history of the Commonwealth, in the ridiculous position of asserting, in effect, that being distinguished is an accomplishment possible only for people of Caucasian ancestry."

* * *

REP. THOMAS L. ASHLEY (D., Ohio), who represents the district in which Mrs. Stewart resides, also lambasted the governor.

"The pre-emptory withdrawal of these invitations can only be considered a direct and deliberate assault upon the dignity of outstanding Americans," Ashley wrote.

"For no other reason than their color, they have been singled out, discriminated against, and held up to the nation as unworthy of recognition by their native state."

Declaring he was shocked "by this shameful course of action," Ashley asserted it "can only discredit us before the bar of world opinion."

* * *

"IT IS DIFFICULT to imagine a more grotesque distortion of the democratic ideals which were fostered and fought for by so many great Virginians of the past."

The dinner, jointly sponsored by Governor Stanley and the State Chamber of Commerce, was designed to launch the 350th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown.

Pastor Olert Quits Church At Richmond

Post & Times Herald P. 6-L

Tues. 4-30-57

RICHMOND, April 29 (AP) The president of the Virginia Council of Churches, the Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Olert, has resigned his pastorate here.

Dr. Olert made the surprise announcement yesterday at the close of the morning worship service at Second Presbyterian Church. He gave no reason for his decision and, when asked last night what his plans were, Dr. Olert had no comment.

"The announcement came as a complete surprise to everyone in the congregation," said Roy E. Cabell, chairman of the Session, governing unit of the church.

Dr. Olert is immediate past president of the Richmond Ministers Association which, during his term as president, formulated and adopted "the Statement of Conviction on Race" last January. The statement took issue with the State's no-integration program of school legislation and with the Legislature's and the Governor's handling of certain aspects of racial problems.

The Session, which meets Thursday, will be the first group to act on Dr. Olert's resignation.

Jim Crow Denied Roost

By CHESTER HAMPTON
AFRO Staff Correspondent

JAMESTOWN, Va. —While the governor and Chamber of Commerce officials were wrestling with the embarrassing problem of whether Virginians of color could ever be "distinguished," thousands of others, of all races, mingled, marveled, ate and rested together on the grounds of the celebrated Jamestown Festival here.

Though maintained by the Commonwealth of Virginia, integration has quietly become the accepted way of life here. Jim Crow has had a difficult time finding a roosting place.

The snack bar is patronized

Negro Refuses to Yield Place at Virginia's Table

Evening Star Fri. 4-12-57

Washington, D. C.

A Negro publisher who "inadvertently" was invited to a dinner for "distinguished Virginians" in Richmond next month plans to be right there when the soup is served unless Gov. Stanley personally tells him not to come.

The publisher, Dr. Cullan B. Powell, who is head of the Amsterdam news in Harlem, yesterday said he entended to ignore

Va. guest No. 6

Afro-American

WASHINGTON — Dean Lewis Downing of Howard's school of engineering, was Virginia guest No. 6, who received an invitation by "mistake" to that May 17 dinner of "distinguished Virginians." 5-4-57

Dean Downing has announced he would not attend. But guest No. 5, Dr. W. H. Gray of Philadelphia, says he will be there. Others who have declined are Dr. C. B. Powell, Justice Edward Dudley, NYC, Mrs. Ella Stewart, Toledo and Dr. St. Clair Drake, Chicago.

4 Decline 'Goofed' Bids To Va. Dinner; 2 Will Go

Defender Sat. 5-11-57 P.6 Chicago Ill.

PHILLADELPHIA — (ANP) — The Virginia Chamber of Commerce recalled its invitation to the Rev. William H. Gray, Jr., pastor of the Bright Hope Baptist church here, to attend a dinner honoring "distinguished Virginians." The reply came from the Chamber of Commerce President, Frank Ernst.

Dr. Gray was one of six Negroes who received invitations "by mistake." Four of the six said they would not attend, but Dr. Gray and Domestic Judge Edward R. Dudley of New York announced they would.

Ernst's letter to Gray read: "Among the invitations to the homecoming dinner meeting in Richmond, May 17, issued by me and bearing the name of the Governor embossed thereon by permission given me by the governor there was one addressed to you in error.

REGRET LETTER

"This letter is regrettable. The dinner meeting in question is the final event of the annual meeting of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce being held that day. As you may well understand, a host must control his guest list to the exigencies of the occasion.

"Accordingly I hereby rescind this invitation sent to you in error and extend my apologies to you for any inconvenience, embarrassment or concern that you may have suffered. Your letter of acceptance is returned herewith."

The reply followed Gray's letter addressed to Governor Stanley and Ernst, in which he stated: "It is my fervent hope that you share the feeling of pride which I entertain for principles upon which my state and nation have grown and that you will indicate your further interest and desire in having Mrs. Gray and me as your guests on this occasion."

Dr. Gray had also stated in his letter of acceptance, and also asking clarification, that he was happy to be "born a Negro" and "proud that I was born in Virginia."

The church office said Dr. Gray was in Florida filling a speaking engagement at Florida Normal and Industrial College, St. Augustine, where he was once president.

Va. Wife Wages Anti-Bias War

Defender Sat. 5-11-57 Chicago, Ill.

By ETHEL PAYNE

WASHINGTON — A Virginia woman stood by the dictates of her conscience last week despite threats of taking her children away from her because she refused to obey the new state pupil placement law. P.6

Mrs. Theo Defebio is waging a one-woman crusade against what she terms the attempt to circumvent the Supreme Court decision.

Last year, Virginia passed a bill requiring parents to sign forms issued by pupil placement boards, that would place a child in a school selected by the board.

Although the form does not state that colored and white children shall be separated, it is purposely designed to do just that. The act is compulsory, giving parents 15 days in which to comply.

REFUSES TO SIGN

Mrs. Defebio, a Washington cab driver, refused to sign the forms, and her children, Micky, 9, and Teddy, 14, were expelled from the Fairfae County school they were attending.

When the case began attracting widespread attention, school authorities sought a way out by urging Mrs. Defebio to sign forms "under protest," telling her that none of her constitutional or legal rights would be waived.

After a conference with her two lawyers, Albert Kassabian and Douglas Adams, jr., Mrs. Defebio issued a statement saying: "No letter of protest can encompass the breadth and depth of my conscience."

The lawyers say they will file suit for Mrs. Defebio testing the legality of the placement law and compelling the school board to readmit the children.

LIVED IN N. C.

Mrs. Defebio formerly lived in North Carolina where her children were taken from her for a period of two years because she and her husband refused to send them to public school.

Defebio is still in North Carolina working as a lighthouse keeper.

While the children are out of school, they are being tutored by private instructors and Mrs. Defebio in her spare time.

Invitation to Negro Error, Virginia Says

World-Telegram & Sun New York

An invitation to a prominent New York Negro to attend a dinner in Richmond, Va., for "distinguished Virginians," has been withdrawn as "a mistake."

He is Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in Harlem, who was born in Newport News, Va., in 1894. 4-11-57

Dr. Powell's secretary, Miss E. M. Holden, said yesterday that the invitation had been received and accepted a week ago. Last Tuesday, she said, a telegram came requesting that the invitation be returned.

The invitation, for a dinner Mary 17, was described as part of a celebration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown. It was signed by Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia and Frank A. Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

In Richmond last night Vernon Kemp, executive director of the chamber, said "there was a mistake" and there "had been an error" in issuing the invitation.

Virginia Sorry For Error in Bid to Negro

World-Telegram & Sun New York Fri. 4-12-57

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., April 12.— An invitation sent to a New York Negro newspaper publisher to attend a Richmond dinner for "distinguished Virginians" is being withdrawn, the president of the sponsoring group said today. He said the invitation was sent in error and that he regretted the incident. P.17

Frank A. Ernst, president of the Virginia state chamber of commerce, made the comment after Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a Virginia-born physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in Harlem, said in New York he planned to attend the May 17 dinner unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley personally withdrew the invitation.

A clerical error resulted in Dr. Powell's name being included in a large list of invitations that went out over the names of Gov. Stanley and Mr. Ernst.

Gov. Stanley declined comment and referred all questions to the chamber of commerce.

Mr. Ernst, manager of a Hopewell, Va., chemical plant, said:

"I sincerely regret any embarrassment or attendant inconvenience to Dr. Powell. He and others must remember that the concept for the dinner from the very first was that this occasion definitely was to be an event. I am sure that he, as a Virginia-born Negro, can appreciate this distinction."

Congressman Hits Negro Bid Recall

World-Telegram & Sun Tues. 4-16-57 P.5

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16.— Withdrawal of invitations to two Negroes to attend a dinner for distinguished Virginians was protested today by Rep. Thomas L. Ashley (D., Ohio).

Rep. Ashley wrote Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia "to protest Virginia's shocking treatment of two of her distinguished citizens, Mrs. Ella P. Stewart, Toledo, Ohio, and Dr. Clilan B. Powell, of New York City."

(Reports from Richmond, Va., said today a third Virginia-born Negro, Prof. St. Clair Drake of Roosevelt University, Chicago, has received an invitation and says he will attend the dinner unless the invitation is withdrawn by the governor.)

"Their original invitation to attend the 'Distinguished Virginians' dinner on May 17, issued over your official signature," Rep. Ashley wrote Gov. Stanley, "was an earned tribute to Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Powell.

"The peremptory withdrawal of these invitations can only be considered a direct and deliberate assault upon the dignity of two outstanding Americans.

"For no other reason than their color, they have been singled out, discriminated against, and held up to the nation as unworthy of recognition by their native state."

No Negroes At Virginia Banquet

World P.5 Birmingham, Ala.

RICHMOND, Va., — The homecoming banquet, sponsored by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, was held Friday night in the flag-decked Virginia Room of the John Marshall Hotel.

The banquet, originally planned to honor distinguished sons and daughters of the Old Dominion who have moved to other states, was for whites only, but seven Negroes had been invited inadvertently to the dinner. The invitations were later withdrawn. World 5-22-57

One hundred and twenty-seven distinguished Virginians were present together with Governor Thomas B. Stanley, local leaders and more than 300 members of the chamber, but none of the Negroes appeared. But until the last there was some doubt about one who had failed to let the chamber know formally that he would not attend.

Early last month the Negroes received invitations bearing the names of Governor Stanley and Frank Arthur Ernest, president of the State Chamber of Commerce.

The bids later were withdrawn. The incident became national and international news and there was pressure on the chamber to cancel the dinner.

Governor Stanley, an arch-foe of integration, was among those resisting this pressure. The chamber made no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the original error.

As one spokesman put it, the mix-up resulted from "gross ineptitude of staff work." This meant that an agency entrusted with compiling a list of "distinguished Virginians' had failed to call to the sponsors' attention the fact that some of those listed in Who's Who in America might be Negroes.

The spokesman added that this possibility simply had "never occurred' to the sponsors.

The names of only six of the Negroes have become known. They are: Dr. Cilian B. Powell, of The Amsterdam News; Prof. St. Clair Drake, of Roosevelt University; Domestic Relations Justice Edward R. Dudley, of New York; Mrs. Ella P. Stewart, past president of the National Association of Colored Women of Toledo; Lewis K. Downing, dean of Engineering at Howard University; and the Rev. William Herbert Gray, Jr., vice president of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches.

They Didn't Come to Dinner

Courier Sat. 6-1-57 P.9

We are rather sorry that the seven distinguished Virginians (colored), who were "inadvertently" invited to the Richmond dinner held by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, did not show up among the 300-odd white guests at the Hotel John Marshall.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The sponsors expected some of these distinguished dark Virginians to show up and had set aside a table for six, with an official downstairs to greet them and escort them up the 29 steps to the place prepared for them.

The sponsors, still smarting from the adverse international publicity, were relieved when none of the colored brethren appeared, but apparently had expected to be embarrassd some more.

NEGRO NOW DECLINES BID TO ATTEND VIRGINIA DINNER

Dr. Clilan B. Powell, Negro publisher of The Amsterdam News, yesterday declined an invitation he had once accepted to attend a dinner in Richmond next month honoring "distinguished Virginians."

He wrote to Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and Frank Arthur Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, that it was "definitely clear to all concerned that your recission of my invitation is because of my race."

The invitation had been labeled "a mistake" by chamber officials. The publisher, a native of Newport News, Va., then insisted that he would attend the dinner unless Governor Stanley personally withdrew the invitation.

White Guest Rejects Virginia Dinner Bid

World-Telegram Tues P. 8

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—A white Virginian has rejected Gov. Thomas B. Stanley's invitation to a dinner for distinguished Virginians with a condemnation of the governor's stand on racial issues.

Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, N. C., said in an open letter to Gov. Stanley: "You have succeeded in making the leadership of the commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the nation."

Mr. Davis is among 1200 native Virginians listed in Who's Who in America and invited by Gov. Stanley to the State Chamber of Commerce dinner on May 17. The dinner is part of the Jamestown Festival.

Integration Delay Asked By Arlington

Times Herald P. 1-6 Tues 1-15-57

Charlottesville, State Join Appeals Plea To Stall Court Order

Washington, D.C.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 14 (AP) Virginia has asked the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals to stay the execution of its order upholding lower court decrees directing Arlington and Charlottesville to desegregate public schools.

Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond said today the motion asking the delay was mailed over the week-end to the Appeals Court, sitting now at Charlotte, N. C. The motion asked the order, which affirmed decisions of Federal District Judges John Paul and Albert V. Bryan, be stayed.

If the motion is granted, attorneys for the state and the two localities must then file notice of appeal pending preparation of requests for appeal to the Supreme Court.

Paul had ordered Charlottesville's schools desegregated as of last September but the order was postponed to permit appeal to the circuit court. Bryan ordered Arlington's elementary schools desegregated Jan. 31 and high schools next September. Both orders were upheld by the circuit court.

Local man gets invite to 350th Va. anniversary

Tribune Wed. 5-29-57

Los Angeles Calif.

Los Angeles man, Dr. Reginald Fisher, 4215 Montclair, was among a couple of dozen Negroes over the country enjoying the discomfiture of officials of the state of Virginia who inadvertently included a number of distinguished Negro natives of Virginia among the 700 persons sent invitations to the 350th anniversary celebration of the first permanent English settlement.

P. 5

Dr. Fisher disclosed this week that his father, the late Dr. Robert Farley Fisher, who died suddenly four years ago, was invited to the celebration.

The late Dr. Fisher, a distinguished East Coast AME Zion minister, has been listed in the last four editions of Who's Who in America, and undoubtedly this was where state officials responsible for the invitations, got their names, the Los Angeles man said.

Also invited was Dr. C. B. Powell, publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, and a number of other distinguished native Virginians.

An effort was made by the state to rescind the invitations to the Negroes when the 'mistake' was discovered. However, many of the Negroes invited, including Dr. Powell, insisted they would attend.

An invitation to Lady Nancy Astor, of England, who was a celebrated Virginia belle, was refused by the British peeress when she learned of the snub to the Negroes.

She told the press she preferred to stay in "democratic England" rather than go back to "antebellum Virginia."

Dr. Fisher said the invitation was sent to his late father in care of his sister, Miss Gwendolyn Mae Fisher, of Washington, D. C. His father was born in Norfolk, but left it at an early age, and studied law at Temple university and theology at Lincoln university, Pa. He pastored throughout the East and represented America at two Methodist Ecumenical conferences in Toronto and London.

The invitation invited the distinguished Virginians to attend a banquet at the John Marshall hotel in Richmond last weekend, and the Jamestown celebration at Jamestown Festival Park.

Following the furore created by the state's repudiation of the invitations to the Negro Virginians, state officials announced they would admit the Negroes if they came.

Virginia's jim-crow law

afro American Sat. 5-11-57

After the stupid demonstration of intolerance displayed by the leadership of Virginia in attempting to cancel the invitations sent "by mistake" to a number of distinguished colored citizens to attend the Jamestown celebration dinner we can expect almost anything from our benighted neighboring state.

This, however, was an isolated incident, which rankled fair-minded whites as well as the colored leaders they sought to humiliate.

Baltimore, Md. P. 12

But there is something a-foot in the Old Dominion which strikes closer home to the man in the street than this sorry affair.

This is the stepped-up campaign to enforce the old discredited "separation of the races" law in communities which are practically within the environs of the nation's capital.

Last week the AFRO reported how the Virginia police forced the Drug Fair in nearby Arlington to separate the white and colored employees who previously had eaten their meals peacefully at one of the counters. The management was forced to feed colored employees in the rear. This was pure nonsense and accomplished no other purpose other than to harass and antagonize the workers.

This week, police issued a summons to the owner of a tavern in Fairfax County for serving a beer to a white customer in an establishment normally catering to colored patronage.

This stepped up vigilance is no accident, but part of a design.

Many Washingtonians live and work in nearby Virginia. They have learned to accept the desegregation policies practiced in most public places in the capital.

It is natural that they would follow this procedure after crossing the bridges leading to their homes and none of either race would entertain the slightest inhibitions about it.

It is to discourage the spread of democracy and plain every-day decency across the Potomac that has stimulated the excessive pressures being exerted by the Virginia police.

It seems that the law enforcement agencies could find much better use for their time than hounding decent citizens whose only crime is trying to be good Americans.

No Segregation On New Parkway

Journal and Guide Norfolk Va. 4-13-57

Special to Journal and Guide

ROANOKE—There will be no racial segregation at the lodge or motor court to be built on the Blue Ridge Parkway at Peaks of Otter, in Bedford county.

In announcing that the new facility will be operated on a non-segregated basis, Parkway Superintendent Sam P. Weems said: "Every contract the U. S. Government makes has a non-segregation clause in it."

Red Faces In Virginia!

Courier Sat. 4-20-57

Pittsburgh, Pa. P.4

Negro Editor Invited to Lily-white Banquet by Mistake; Says He'll Go

38a Va

NEW YORK—Red-faced members of the "Old Dominion" state's Chamber of Commerce are squirming over the "mistake" they made in issuing an invitation to a Negro publisher to attend a dinner for "distinguished Virginians" in Richmond.

• Dr. C. B. Powell, publisher of the New York Amsterdam News, has taken the opportunity to put Virginia's Governor on the spot by indicating that he will be present for the affair unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley, himself, withdraws the invitation.

Dr. Powell announced his decision despite a telegram from Richard S. Gillis, director of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce activities, which read, "Inadvertently, invitation was issued to you. Please disregard and return invitation. Deeply regret if any inconvenience has been caused."

■

DR. POWELL commented, "My position is that I received the invitation under the Governor's name and the seal of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

"The invitation was embossed also with the name of Frank Arthur Ernst, president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, but it was issued from the Governor's office, the capitol. He extended me the invitaion as an official of the commonwealth. He is the only one who can withdraw it. So, unless I receive a notice from him withdrawing the invitation, I shall attend with my wife."

Dr. Powell's intentions were further buttressed by the revelation that he had reserved a suite of rooms in the John Marshall Hotel where the affair is to be held . . . ironically, on May 17, the anniversary of the Supreme Court's anti-segregation decisions.

■

THE DINNER is being held for 600 top Virginians in commemoration of the 350th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in America at Jamestown. Dr. Powell is a native son of Newport News, Va., a Tidewater municipality.

In addition to being a publisher, Dr. Powell is a physician and a life member of the NAACP. His invitation requested "the pleasure of your company at a homecoming reception and dinner for distinguished Virginians." It was addressed to Dr. Powell at 2340 Eighth Ave at 126th St.

Vernon Kemp, executive director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, commented, "There was a mistake."

that the Commonwealth of Virginie which also invited me does not share these sentiments."

When it was discovered last week that two previous invitations had been sent to Negroes, the chamber president, Frank A. Ernst, said their names had been included by mistake and that their invitations were being withdrawn. He said yesterday Mr. Drake's invitation would also be withdrawn.

Dr. Powell to Attend

One of these invited was Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News in Harlem. He had accepted the invitation, and said he planned to attend unless the invitation was personally withdrawn by Gov. Stanley.

The other invitation went to Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, who said last Saturday she does not plan to attend.

The May 17 affair is to be held in connection with the 350th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown. A potential invitation list of some 700 names of Virginians who now live elsewhere was pared down to some 600. The chamber said names of more than 100 white and Negro Virginia natives were stricken for various reasons, including race and political beliefs.

Stresses Tradition

Mr. Drake, educated at Booker T. Washington High School in Staunton and at Hampton Institute, in his letter of acceptance said the invitation to him "expresses the continuity of the great liberal tradition of our own Thomas Jefferson."

He said he always remembers

Another Negro Says He'll Attend Virginia Dinner

Evening Star Tues. 4-16-57

Washington D.C.

RICHMOND, Va., April 16 (AP).—A third Virginia-born Negro has received an invitation to a dinner party at a hotel here May 17 and says he will attend unless his invitation is withdrawn by Governor Stanley.

P.2-B

St. Clair Drake, professor of sociology and anthropology at Roosevelt University, Chicago, sent a copy of his acceptance to the Richmond Times-Dispatch. "with pride that I am a Virginian, and that Negroes played a significant part in the making of" the first permanent English settlement at Jamestown.

It said that he assumed "despite published statements by the president of the Chamber of Commerce that invitations to Negroes are being withdrawn,

Virginia Attitude Eased On Negroes at Dinner

Star Wed. 4-17-57 P.3-B

Washington D.C.

RICHMOND, Va., April 17 (AP).—The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce took the view today it is not going to get upset if Virginia-born Negroes show up at its big dinner party May 17.

"I feel sure they will be received courteously and seated for dinner," said Verbon E. Kemp, the chamber's executive director.

Mr. Kemp made that observation in an interview about the dinner the chamber is giving for distinguished Virginians to promote the 350th anniversary of the first English settlement at Jamestown Island.

P.3-B

Mr. Kemp added that as far as his authority extends he feels sure the treatment accorded Negroes on the invitation list will be courteous if any choose to show up at the dinner which was planned as an all-white party. The ultimate decision as to precedure, he added, lies with the chamber directors.

Three Received Bids

At the latest count invitations were extended to three native Virginia Negroes—Dr. Clilan B. Powell, New York physician and publisher; St. Clair Drake, a professor at Roosevelt University in Chricago, and Mrs. Ella P. Stewart of Toledo, Ohio.

Chamber officials, noting that the invitations had slipped through a careful screening process, hastily notified all three that their invitations had been withdrawn. Apologies were extended for any inconveniences or embarrassment caused by the incident.

Mrs. Stewart readily acceded to the withdrawal and said she felt "Virginia has already been embarrassed enough by its attitude." She added she didn't want to attend and be embarrassed personally.

At the outset of the incident Dr. Powell and Mr. Drake said they expected to attend the dinner unless Gov. Stanley rescinded the invitations personally. Gov. Stanley, who gave the chamber permission to use his name as co-host of the dinner, was shunted all inquiries back to the chamber.

Dr. Powell Won't Attend

Last night Dr. Powell, publisher of the Amsterdam News in New York's Harlem, reversed himself and said he would not attend the dinner.

In notifying Gov. Stanley and the State chamber of his decision, Dr. Powell said it is "definitely clear to all concerned that your recision of my invitation is because of my race."

There was no indication that Mr. Drake would alter his plans to attend the dinner.

A Congressman from Ohio wrote a letter of protest to the Governor apparently before he learned an invitation had been sent also to Prof. Drake. Representative Ashley, Democrat of Ohio, said the invitations over Mr. Stanley's name was an earned tribute to Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Powell.

"The permptory withdrawal of these invitations can only be considered a direct and deliberate assault upon the dignity of two outstanding Americans," he wrote.

Chamber officials, it was learned, had considered making no mention of the errors in the list when they were first discovered and to go ahead as though it had been planned that way.

The Governor also was represented as considering for a while that this might be the best course. Then the decision was reached to have the chamber recall the invitations.

NAACP legal staff, confirmed the report that he was the fourth Negro to receive an invitation to the May 17 dinner party.

Three others whose invitations were rescinded said they would not attend although the State Chamber finally indicated that if any non-whites did show up they would be treated courteously and seated.

The 46-year-old judge is a native of South Boston, Va.

In New York, Judge Dudley said he had received the invitation and had accepted. He said he may attend the dinner, but his going would depend on his work schedule here and a number of other factors.

State Chamber officials viewed the latest development unhappily and commented only that the policy remained the same. The invitation will be recalled, they said, since, like the three others, it was issued by mistake.

in the death of his wife, was postponed today in Ferndale Police Court. Magistrate Louis J. DeAlba granted the postponement at the request of Fidazzo's attorney.

Heads Jay-cees

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 20 (Spl.).—Julian L. Lingle has been named president of the Charlottesville-Albemarle Junior Chamber of Commerce, succeeding Bernard L. Haggerty.

Other officers include Harry N. Lewis, first vice president; Joseph E. Gibson, second vice president; John B. Hemmings, third vice president; J. C. Laramore Jr., secretary; Wesley Clegg, treasurer, and J. F. Johnson, state director.

Maryland, Virginia Briefs

Fourth Negro Invited To Dinner by Virginia

Post Times Herald Washington D.C.

Sun. 4-21-57

RICHMOND, Va., April 20 (AP) Another "inadvertent invitation" to a distinguished Negro cropped up today just as the State Chamber of Commerce thought it had emerged from 10 anxious days of trying to correct a guest list to its well-publicized dinner next month.

Edward R. Dudley, a Domestic Relations Court judge in New York, former Ambassador to Liberia and a member of the Negro Now Declines Bid To Attend Virginia Fete

Times P.2-C Wed. 4-17-57

Dr. Clilan B. Powell, Negro publisher of The Amsterdam News, yesterday declined an invitation he had once accepted to attend a dinner in Richmond next month honoring "distinguished Virginians."

He wrote to Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and Frank Arthur Ernst, president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, that it was "definitely clear to all concerned that our clear to all concerned that your rescission of my invitation is because of my race."

The invitation had been labeled "a mistake" by chamber officials. The publisher, a native of Newport News, Va., then insisted that he would attend the dinner unless Governor Stanley personally withdrew the invitation.

White Snubs Segregated Virginia Fete

Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 4-19-57

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP)—A white Virginian has rejected Gov. Thomas B. Stanley's invitation to a dinner for distinguished Virginians with a condemnation of the governor's stand on racial issues.

Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, N.C., said in an open letter to Stanley:

"You have succeeded in making the leadership of the commonwealth both a stench and a laughing stock in the nation."

A copy of the letter was sent to the Washington Post and Times-Herald here. P. 6

Davis is among 1,200 native Virginians listed in Who's Who in America and invited by Stanley to the state Chamber of Commerce dinner on May 17. The dinner is part of the Jamestown festival.

Three Virginia-born Negroes listed in Who's Who also received invitations, but the Chamber said this was a mistake and the invitations had been withdrawn. A Chamber spokesman said yesterday, however, that if any of the Negroes showed up he felt sure they would be treated courteously and seated.

Davis, 51, a native of Lynchburg and a graduate of the University of Virginia, was managing editor and editor of the Virginia Quarterly for 10 years.

VIRGINIA BID REJECTED

Times P. 28-C

Last of 3 Negroes Invited to Dinner Decides Not to Go

Sat. 4-20-57

CHICAGO, April 19 (UP)—A Negro professor changed his mind today about attending a dinner for distinguished Virginians. New York

Prof. St. Clair Drake of Roosevelt University noted that Gov. Thomas B. Stanley of Virginia and Virginia Chamber of Commerce offficials had said that Negroes would be treated like any other guests.

"Since the Governor has taken the attitude that Negroes may attend I feel my victory has been won," Professor Drake declared. "I have now decided that pressing business will keep me in Chicago."

Professor Drake had announced his plans to attend when he and two other Negroes listed in Who's Who in America were invited to a dinner May 17 honoring "distinguished natives of Virginia."

Sponsors of the dinner said that they had not known the men were Negroes when the invitations were sent. The other two Negroes declined the invitations.

Virginia Having Dinner Dithers, 4th Negro Bid

Journal + Constitution Sun. 4-21-57 Atlanta, Ga.

RICHMOND, Va., April 20 (AP)—Another "inadvertent invitation" to a distinguished Negro cropped up today just as the state Chamber of Commerce thought it had emerged from 10 anxious days of trying to correct a guest list to its well-publicized dinner next month. P. 6-A

Edward R. Dudley, a domestic relations court judge in New York, former ambassador to Liberia and a member of the NAACP legal staff, confirmed the report that he was the fourth Negro to receive an invitation to the dinner party.

* * *

THREE OTHERS whose invitations were rescinded said they would not attend, although the state chamber finally indicated that if any non-whites did show up they would be treated courteously and seated.

But Judge Dudley told the Richmond News Leader by telephone he might come down to the May 17 affair, but had not reached a final decision. The 46-year-old judge is a native of South Boston, Va.

State chamber officials viewed the latest development unhappily and commented only that the policy remained the same. The invitation will be recalled, they said, since, like the three others, it was issued by mistake.

Virginia Invitation To Be Declined By Negro Woman

Sunday Star Washington, D.C. Sun. 4-14-57

RICHMOND, Va., April 13 (AP).—The second of two prominent Negroes inadvertantly invited to a dinner here "for distinguished Virginians" today said she would not attend.

"I feel the State of Virginia is embarrassed by its attitude and I would not want to go and be embarrassed as an individual," said Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart, a retired pharmacist, at her home in Toledo, Ohio.

The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the Richmond dinner May 17 as part of the celebration of the 350th anniversary of the settlement at Jamestown, withdrew the invitations to the Negroes.

The names of Mrs. Stewart and Dr. Clilan B. Powell, who publishes the Negro Amsterdam News in Harlem, slipped through what the State chamber tried to make a careful screening of names. Dr. Powell is a native of Newport News, Va. Mrs. Stewart was born in Berryville.

Dr. Powell said earlier he would attend the dinner unless Gov. Thomas B. Stanley personally cancelled the invitation. Gov. Stanley has declined comment.

Sues To Stop Bias Courthouse Signs

Wanted Bs Birm. Ala.

NORFOLK, Va. — (ANP) — Atty. E. A. Hawley Jr., petitioned U. S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman last week for an order restraining the city of Norfolk from posting signs calling for racial segregation in public facilities in the city's courthouse.

Sat. 4-20-57

Hawley contended the signs humiliated Negroes and are unconstitutional. The courthouse houses the circuit court, court of law and chancery, and two portions of the cooporation court.

'Distinguished (White) Virginians'

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Sat. 4-20-57 P. 9

While the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe undoubtedly will not broadcast to the world the cancellation of the dinner invitation extended to New York's publisher, Dr. C. B. Powell, by the Richmond, Va., director of that state's Chamber of Commerce, there is no doubt that the Communist press and radio will do so with gusto.

Dr. Powell was invited to the dinner to be given at Richmond's John Marshall Hotel on May 17, as one of 600 "distinguished Virginians" in connection with the 350th anniversary of the first permanent white settlement in America at Jamestown; but it seems "there was a mistake" and the return of the invitation was requested.

Dr. Powell is Virginia-born and certainly distinguished as physician, publisher and politician, but the dinner's promoters discovered too late that he was not white, and thus could not be regarded as a "distinguished Virginian" except by non-white Virginians.

Just to be scientific, however, let us point out that the first permanent white settlers mixed freely with the native Indians and their leader, Capt. John Smith, set an example by marrying dark-skinned Pocahontas.

Following the arrival of the storied black servants in a Dutch ship in 1619, they mixed with the white settlers and the Indians, until rising white racial chauvinism outlawed the practice a half century later, although miscegenation continued.

Until 1927, "white" Virginians of the old stock (F.F.V.'s) boasted of their descent from Pocahontas, but then, during the debates preceding passage of the state's Racial Integrity Law, researchers from John Hopkins University discovered that there had not been an Indian without Negro ancestry on the whole Atlantic seaboard for over a century or more.

Since the ancestry of all the old white stock was thus probably "tainted" with the blood of Africa, the new law was administered accordingly, at least 50 white children were immediately removed from the white schools of Richmond, and there was no more boasting about descent from Pocahontas.

The $64,000 question now is: how many of the "distinguished Virginians" who will dine in the John Marshall Hotel on May 17, have Africanized Indians in their family trees?

We suggest that the Fund for the Republic or some other equally well-heeled agency set aside a few millions for a study to determine once and for all how many of these 600 invitations should be withdrawn like Dr. Powell's.

A Summary Of Virginia's New Laws Designed To Abolish Bill Of Rights

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. Sat. 2-16-57

(Editor's Note:—Published below is a summary of laws affecting individual liberties enacted at the special session of the Virginia General Assembly, with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, admittedly, as the main target. These laws would, however, deny equal justice and effectiveness to any non-political organization seeking compliance with the United States Constitution.

Although no specific intention was stated, these laws would work with the same effect against such organizations as the Chamber of Commerce, the Virginia Manufacturers Association, labor organizations and even religious bodies having social action programs.

Ironically, the first committee created by this special legislation is called the "Committee on Offense Against the Administration of Justice."

The purpose of the second committee, among other things, is to "make a thorough investigation of the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in the state."

According to announced purpose and aims, these laws are depriving citizens of their natural and constitutional rights.)

SUMMARY OF LAWS AFFECTING INDIVIDUAL LIBERTIES

CHAPTER 31 (HB 59)

PURPOSE—Registration of those who solicit funds for continuing litigation.

WHO—Individual, partnership, Corporation, Association, whether formally or informally organized.

PROHIBITED FROM—Solicitation of funds for or the expending of funds from whatever source for commencing or prosecuting further any original proceeding unless a party to the action or having a pecuniary right or liability.

UNLESS—The following information is filed annually or within 60 days after engaging in activities subject to this act, information to be filed with the State Corporation Commission:

A. If partnership, corporation, or association
1. Charter, by-laws, etc.
2. Names and addresses of officers, directors, stockholders, members, employees, agents
3. Source of each and every contribution, membership fee, dues payment, or other item of income or revenue and if required, the name and address of each and every person or corp. or assn. making any donation or contribution
4. A detailed statement of each expenditure, objects for which made
5. Locations of each branch office, etc.
6. Any other information requested

B. If an individual
1. Home and business address
2. Name and address of any partnership, corporation or association for whom acting or association for whom acting
3. Name and addresses of all officers and directors
4. Certified statement showing source of each and every contribution, dues payment or membership fee collected during the preceding calendar year
5. Certified statement showing in detail by each transaction expenditures made during preceding calendar year for purpose of financing or maintaining litigation.

HOW VIOLATIONS DETERMINED—1. Any citizen may file complaint with Attorney General
2. Attorney General, after investigation, institutes proceedings in Circuit Court of Richmond
3. Court or judge has power to enjoin violator

PENALTIES—1. Failure to comply
A. If individual—misdemeanor (imprisonment up to 12 months, fine up to $1,000)
B. If partnership, corp., assn.—fine not more than $10,000—a foreign corp., denied admission to do business in Va., or if admitted authority revoked.
2. Falsified statements constitute a felony

CHAPTER 32 (HB 60)—EFFECTIVE JAN. 1, 1957

PURPOSE—Registration of person, firm, partnership, corporation or association WHO OR WHICH "engages as one of its principal functions or activities in the promoting or opposing in any manner the passage of legislation by the General Assembly in behalf of any race or color, or who or which has as one of its principal functions or activities the advocating of racial integration or segregation or whose activities cause or tend to cause racial conflicts or violence, or who or which is engaged or engages in raising or expending funds for the employment of counsel or payment of costs in connection with litigation in behalf of any race or color"

EXCEPT—1. "An individual freely speaking or publishing on his own behalf in the expression of his opinion and engaging in no other activity subject to the provisions hereof and not acting in concert with other persons"
2 Newspapers, periodicals, radio, television
3. Political candidates or organizations working in a political campaign

MUST—Register within 60 days and annually thereafter or if not previously subject to registration, must register within 60 days following the day on which he or it engages in activity making registration applicable, with the State Corporation Commission and file information for the preceding 12 months

A. If firm, partnership, corp., assn., or organization
1. Charter, by-laws, etc.
2. Names and addresses of branch offices, principal officers, members, etc.
3. Financial statement of assets and liabilities
4. Source of all funds received itemized in detail and by sources
5. List of expenditures in detail for same period

B. If individual, firm or partnership
1. Business and home addresses of each individual member
2. Sources of all funds used as outlined above including names and addresses of any individual or group making contribution
3. Itemized statement of expenditures

HOW VIOLATIONS DETERMINED—
1. Any citizen may file complaint with Attorney General
2. Attorney General, after investigation, institutes proceedings in Circuit Court of Richmond
3. Court or judge has power to enjoin violator

PENALTIES—1. Failure to comply
A. Individual or partnership—misd[illegible] or [illegible] and/or jail sentence
B. Corporation, association, organization—fine not exceeding $10,000
C. Each days failure to register is a separate offense
2. Falsified statements constitute a felony

CHAPTER 33 (HB 61)

WHO—Any individual, corporation, partnership or association serving as a "runner" or a "capper" or any attorney accepting employment from any individual, corporation, partnership or association guilty of "running" or "capping"

WHAT—"Running" and "capping" is defined as the offense of soliciting business for an attorney as his agent or soliciting business for an attorney as an agent of the organization which employs the attorney

PENALTIES—Attorney involved may be disbarred or suspended. "Runners" and "cappers"—offense declared "unlawful"—no penalties given

CHAPTER 34 (HB 62)

PURPOSE—Sets up a Joint Committee of the General Assembly "Committee on Offenses Against the Administration of Justice" charged with the duty of investigating "administration and enforcement of those laws relating to champerty, maintenance, barratry, running and capping and other offenses of any other nature relating to the promotion or support of litigation by persons who are not parties thereto."

POWERS—1. Employ counsel (funds out of contingency fund)
2. Incur expenses (as above)
3. Must meet at least every 3 months
4. Through court order can compel attendance of witnesses and production of documents
5. "Plenary power to oversee the administration and manner of enforcement of the several statutes relative to barratry, etc.

Must report by November 1, 1957. Personnel:—Senators Earl A. Fitzpatrick, Roanoke; E. Almer Ames Jr., Onancock. Delegates Joseph J. Williams Jr., Henrico; John B. Boatwright, Buckingham, William F. Stone, Martinsville

CHAPTER 35 (HB 63)

WHO—"A person who aids and abets a barrator by giving money or rendering services to or for the use or benefit of the barrator for committing barratry shall be guilty of barratry and punished."

WHAT—Barratry—the offense of stirring up litigation
Barrator—an individual, partnership, association or corporation who or which stirs up litigation
Stirring up litigation—instigating or attempting to instigate a person or persons to institute a suit at law or equity
Instigating—bringing it about that all or part of the expenses of litigation are paid by the barrator or by a person or persons (other than the plaintiffs) acting in concert with the barrator, unless the instigation is justified
Justified—instigator is related by blood or marriage to the plaintiff or has a money interest

EXCEPT—Matters relating to annexation, zoning, bond issues, possession of or title to real or personal property, assessment of taxes, criminal prosecutions, elections or referenda, common carriers, public utilities, payment of attorneys by legal aid societies approved by Va. State Bar, abatement of nuisances

PENALTIES—Courts of Record may enjoin

1. Individuals—misdemeanor (except for persons holding license from the State, see below)
2. Corporation—fined not more than $10,000—foreign corporations may be outlawed
3. "Attorney at law or any person holding a license from the State to engage in a profession"—unprofessional conduct and license "to practice law or any other profession shall be revoked for such period as provided by law"

CHAPTER 36 (HB 64)

WHO—Any person, firm, partnership, corp, assn. or organization not having a "direct interest" (personal right or pecuniary right or liability)

PROHIBITED FROM—Promise, give, offer, or receive any money or service of any kind as an inducement to commence or prosecute further any legal action against any board or administrative agency within the state, or to advise, counsel or otherwise instigate such action

Every person involved in such legal proceedings must file an affidavit as a condition precedent to the proceedings, that no violation of this act has occurred.

EXCEPT—Similar to Chapter 35, see above

PENALTIES—1. For violation of act—fined not more than $1,000 or jailed not more than one year or both

2. For filing false affidavit—perjury and punishable as such—attorneys may be disbarred
3. For refusal to testify or produce documents—fine $100 to $1,000 and/or jail for 180 days

CHAPTER 37 (HB 65)—EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1, 1957

PURPOSE—Sets up a legislative committee of 10, to be appointed by Jan. 1, 1957 to:

1. "Make a thorough investigation of the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in this State"
2. Collect evidence and information necessary or useful in determining
   - A. Need or lack of need of legislation assisting in the investigation of organizations, corporations and associations relative to State income tax laws
   - B. Need or lack of need of legislation relative to taxable status of corporations, associations, organizations, etc.
   - C. Effect of "integration or the threat of integration" on public schools or "the general welfare of the State" and whether the laws of barratry, champerty and maintenance are being violated

POWERS—1. Hold hearings anywhere in the State

2. Employ counsel, investigators, clerical forces and other personnel $25,000 appropriated)
3. Issue subpoenas requiring attendance of witnesses and production of papers, records and documents

Must report by November 1, 1957

GENERAL COMMENTS

1. It appears that these bills apply only to civil (not criminal) actions.
2. It appears that data required by law under Chapter 31 can be used to convict of barratry under Chapter 35.

In Purcellville, Va.

Library Threatened With Legal Action For Denying Service to Negro Reader

Post + Times Herald Washington, D.C. P. 1
Sat. 2-23-57

The attorney for a citizen of Loudoun County has threatened the trustees of the Purcellville, Va., public library with legal action for refusing service to his Negro client on Jan. 10.

In a letter to the trustees, the lawyer, Oliver E. Stone, whose office is in Washington, advised the library officials that he would bring suit unless his client was given his full rights under Virginia law.

Stone said yesterday:

"There is no doubt about the Virginia state law. It provides that libraries be free to all inhabitants."

The letter was presented to the library board on Thursday night by Chairman O. L. Emerick, who presided at the monthly meeting of the trustees.

Emerick said yesterday the library group had decided to delay a decision until after consultation with the County Board of Supervisors on March 4 and the Town Council, which will meet on March 12.

It was Emerick who refused to allow Samuel C. Murray, a 42-year-old Purcellville upholsterer, to borrow a book from the town library on the grounds that it would be contrary to "practice."

"I went to the library to get a book on French drapes to use in my business," Murray said. "The librarian, Miss Graham, told me I'd have to get permission from Mr. Emerick."

When Emerick refused, Murray said he told the library officials that he would get a lawyer if necessary.

Two Loudoun County attorneys turned him down, the Purcellville man related. He then approached Stone, who agreed to take his case.

"If I didn't pay my taxes, they would sell my home," Murray asserted. "Since I do pay my taxes, I felt I should have the use of the book from the library which is paid for by my taxes."

Emerick admitted Murray's taxes helped to support the library, but said the trustees felt that to allow Negroes to borrow books from the library would not be in the spirit of the citizens who organized the facility in 1937.

Upholsterer acts to wipe out discrimination in Va. library

Afro-American Sat. 3-16-57 P. 3
Baltimore, Md.

PURCELLVILLE, Va. — O. L. Emerick, chairman of the public library board of trustees, said this week the trustees won't reach a definite conclusion on admitting colored persons to the library until after a meeting with the town council and a board meeting March 21.

The Purcellville Library, the last completely segregated library service in the state, faces court action by Samuel C. Murray, who has complained to the Loudoun County board of Supervisors that he cannot borrow books from the tax-supported faculty.

Only the library's board of trustees has the authority to grant the right to borrow books, although the county pays two thirds of the library's $9,000 yearly budget.

* * *

THE ISSUE of segregation came to a head after Murray's attorney, Oliver E. Stone of Washington, threatened legal action in February if his client was denied access to the library in the future.

Murray, an upholsterer, said he wanted to take out a book about French drapes — necessary to his business — but was turned down on Jan. 10 by Mr. Emerick, board chairman. Murray noted that his own taxes help pay for the library.

Stone's letter to the board set a Feb. 25 deadline for an answer, but he extended it to give the officials a "chance to work things out."

* * *

VIRGINIA'S LAWS, he said, provide that all state supported libraries shall be available to all citizens. State aid to the Purcellville Library this year is $1,400.

Emeric says he knows about the law and feels Murray probably qualifies as a staxpayer, but to allow him to borrow books would be contrary to "practice."

Purcellville's library, he pointed out, does not have any arrangements for colored people to borrow books. It is the only library in Virginia which does not have such an arrangement, he admitted.

* * *

THE BOARD, he added, has a feeling that the "wishes of the founders should be considered."

"It can even be a question of closing the library," Douglas Myers, a trustee for about three years, said. Other board members report the dispute is being taken calmly by community residents.

Is Virginia Coming?

Courier Sat. 2-2-57

A popular song of the 1920's was "I'm Coming, Virginia," and one wonders how Virginia is coming on desegregation, now that it has heard the "bad" news from Federal District Judge Walter E. Hoffman that all those recent laws passed to by-pass the Supreme Court's desegregation decree are unconstitutional.

Pittsburgh, Pa. P. 9

Is the august white ruling class of the Old Dominion going to throw in the sponge and stop its opposition and evasion, or is it going to continue its subversive activities aimed at keeping the Negro "in his place"?

There is the Virginia dilemma, and we shall watch with mounting interest to see how it will be resolved, for or against the law of the land, noting that none of its black refugees is singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

Byrd Urges Va. 'Resist Mixing'

Courier P. 22
Pittsburgh, Pa.

RICHMOND, Va. — Senator Harry Byrd, Virginia's "elder statesman," told a Richmond audience to continue its "massive resistance" against integration.

Byrd claimed that Virginia has been picked by integration forces as their prime target.

Sowing Seeds Of Future Trouble For Virginia

Journal + Guide Sat. 8-24-57 P. 8

Norfolk, Va.

THERE IS ONE thing that the THOMSON Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities should remember. It cannot strip 700,000 members of this Commonwealth of their rights at law without doing violence to the liberties of the other members of the Commonwealth, who number nearly three million.

When a press photographer made a picture showing a white man and a Negro woman being denied admission to the witness room by a strong-arm guard, it was a demonstration of a denial of freedom of the press on the one hand and personal liberty on the other.

The woman, who had testified, wanted to re-enter the room to get some personal effects which she had left there. The newspaper reporter was within his rights.

The guard refused to identify himself and CHAIRMAN THOMSON refused to identify him.

* * *

Without Limitation Or Authority

A COMMITTEE appointed by the legislature usually has some limitations on its authority. This committee assumed more than it had.

When such a committee goes into a political sub-division of the State and rides roughshod over individual rights, as well as legal practices and precedents, it is a dangerous committee to be throwing its weight around in the name of the State.

When our State law-making body authorizes German gestapo procedures, secret investigators who without identification catch people off-guard, and throw legal tricks in a secret hearing such as suddenly directing attorneys for witnesses who had not been heard to answer questions as witnesses; then denying them counsel, the State of Virginia has descended to a low level of political skullduggery in some of its operations.

* * *

Aimed To Destroy Human Rights

IN THE FIRST place, it was a piece of legislative nonsense for the General Assembly to set up two inquisitorial committees whose sole purpose was to punish and put out of business the NAACP and practicing attorneys who, at the instance of the NAACP, conducted litigation in the courts.

If the litigation was subversive, or irregular, or in any way not in accordance with law, the courts would have thrown it out. But everything was legal, and in line with America's best traditions. This was confirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

* * *

Basis For Discrimination Against A Legal Body

THE FINDINGS OF THESE committees are to be used in passing new laws on "the administration of justice," and "on law reform and racial activities."

What kind of laws will the General Assembly enact on "racial activities"?

What are "racial activities" and when do they enter the zone of lawlessness

For the answer to that question we are sure the General Assembly will have to go much further than a year's probing by its committees in secret sessions and through secret police of one legal, duly chartered association of people working in legal ways for their common good.

If it wants to be fair and consistent, the General Assembly will necessarily have to investigate the racial activities of at least three all-white organizations operating in the state for the announced purpose of causing the white people to defy the courts which protect colored people as well as white people.

And at least one officer of one of these organizations has been called upon to assist these committees.

* * *

Racial Laws Versus Racial Activity

ANOTHER WORD concerning the Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activity is apropos: In practically every session of the General Assembly of Virginia since the Constitutional Convention of 1901-1902 laws have been enacted which had no other purpose than to affect adversely the Negro race.

The first effect of these laws was to disfranchise the colored race. Following was a chain of laws which were intended to establish one low pattern of education for Negroes and another and higher pattern of education for white people.

Next in line was a long chain of oppressive discriminatory laws based upon separation of the races on all kinds of common carriers, in state and city parks and places of recreation, in public assemblies, in theatres, in all places of public accommodations, in all forms of public, and in some private employment, until there was no category of human activity which had not been made by laws to conform to a system officially labeled segregation.

* * *

Massive Structure Of Proscription

FINALLY, IN 1929 all public places and institutions having been covered, there was a special act of the Virginia General Assembly which reached onto the campus of a large Negro private college (the largest private college in the State) and said that all college assemblies and public meetings held in the auditorium of this private college must be segregated according to this special act of the legislature.

All of these proscriptions implemented by racial legislation had their impact upon the health, education social advancement and economic worth of the colored people of the State.

It is this massive structure of racial proscription, reprisal and punitive action and economic repression which the last session of the Virginia General Assembly, created the Boatwright and the Thomson Commissions to protect from correction. It is this medieval sadism which the last General Assembly unloosed upon the people of the Commonwealth.

It holds potentialities for great harm to the people of the State, and grave consequences for the Commonwealth in the years ahead.

Bias Charged Here Against Va. Hotel

N. Y. Weighs Action as Jewish Couple Accuses the Homestead

By Judith Crist

The State Commission Against Discrimination will decide this week what further action to take, if any, against The Homestead, resort hotel in Hot Springs, Va., which closed its New York booking office after the commission received a complaint that it discriminated against Jewish would-be patrons.

Commissioner Elmer A. Carter, in charge of the case, said yesterday he would issue a decision this week. The New York attorney for the hotel has argued that since the Homestead is no longer transacting business in this state the charge against it is moot and beyond the commission's jurisdiction. The Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith, on behalf of the complainant, rebutted this ragument in a memorandum received by Mr. Carter yesterday and urged the commission to act against the hotel.

Queens Woman Files

The complaint, filed by Mrs. David Kaplan, of 32-32 88th St., Jackson eights, Queens, on April 12, 1956, alleges Mrs. Kaplan went to the Homestead's New York office at 111 E. 48th St. and sought $34-a-day accommodations for herself and her husband for July 22d to Aug. 4, 1956. She was told she would be notified by mail. A half hour later, Mrs. Valerie Griffith, of 175 Beach 130th St., Belle Harbor, L. I., according to Mrs. Kaplan's complaint, went to the same office and sought the same reservations for the same date, using her maiden name, as Mrs. Valerie Courtenay. She was told she would be notified by telephone.

On April 17, 1956, Mrs. Kaplan received a letter from The Homestead in Hot Springs signed by Fay Ingalls, president advising her that "We have a very large clientele which returns year after year, and as our bookings stand today we have no space available for the summer." That same morning, Mrs Griffith, who had never previously patronized the hotel, was notified by telephone that she would be accommodated.

Mrs. Kaplan filed a complaint with the State Commission Against Discrimination on June 19, 1956.

Last April 8 the Anti-Defamation League submitted a memorandum of law in support of Mrs. Kaplan's complaint, citing fourteen other cases, dating from 1942 to 1956, in which The Homestead allegedly rejected the patronage of Jewish persons. These included alleged instances in which a Jewish and non-Jewish person seeking similar accommodations for the same dates resulted in one being rejected and the other accepted and in which inquirers were told in letters that "Our clientele is overwhelmingly Gentile and they do no twelcome Jewish additions," or "occasionally we take conventions which have some Jewish members but for other business we take none that we can possibly help . . ." or "we have a restricted clientele."

On Aug. 14, Williamson Pell jr., of the firm of Jackson, Nash, Brophy, Barringer & Brooks, 40 Wall St., attorneys for the hotel, informed the commission that the hotel had closed its New York office on July 12 and is "no longer transacting business in this state." Further, he said in a brief, since the alleged discriminatory act had taken place in Virginia, where the letter of rejection was written to Mrs. Kaplan, it did not come under the commission's jurisdiction.

In urging prosecution of the complaint, the Anti-Defamation League contended that the closing of the hotel's New York office does no change the legal issue and that, unless there is a ruling, the hotel could re-open its New York office at a later date or conduct its business here through agents and advertisements.

Reached by telephone in Hot Springs, Va., Thomas J. Lennon, general manager of The Homestead, said, "We cater to a discriminating clientele. The people who come here want to associate with the kind of people they associate with at home. We do not feel that we discimnae against any particular group. We will not take just any one who wants to come. We have to be selective."

Negro Eating Ban Is Checked

By Jean Jones
Staff Reporter

Eating places in suburban Montgomery County are being visited by teams from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to find out which refuse service to Negroes.

In an initial survey of 18 cafes in Bethesda and Silver Spring, two parties of three Negroes each were turned away from six restaurants, five in Bethesda and one in Silver Spring. Three provided carry-out service.

Maryland law makes no provision for segregation in public eating places, and the State Attorney General's Office has held it "a matter of private contract between the proprietor of an eating establishment and his own customers."

Many Montgomery County restaurants long have refused entry to Negroes or have seated them in separate dining areas.

NAACP Lists Cafes

Florence S. Orbach, 34, chairman of the Human Rights Committee of the Montgomery County branch of the NAACP, is director of the surveys.

She listed the restaurants as: Little Tavern, 8230 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, and in Bethesda, Toddle House, 8017 Wisconsin ave.; Hot Shoppe, Wisconsin ave. and East-West highway; tea room of the Woodward & Lothrop, Bethesda-Chevy Chase store, at Wisconsin and Western aves.; Little Tavern, 7317 Wisconsin ave., and Drug Fair, 7100 Arlington rd.

For the present, Mrs. Orbach said inquiries will be limited to those eating places having branches or main offices in the District. Here the Supreme Court in 1953 ruled segregation in restaurants illegal under provisions of a "forgotten" 1873 law.

The NAACP will launch a double barrelled attack on attack on places refusing service to Negroes. First will come friendly persuasion, Mrs. Orbach said, followed up economic pressure, perhaps a boycott, which, said Mrs. Orbach "I hope won't happen."

"Each restaurant which does not serve Negroes seems to be afraid to be a pioneer in changing policy," reported Msr. Orbach, who already has talked with officials of restaurants found in this first survey.

It may help when "they are told there are many other restaurants which don't go along with the policy." It may also help when they become aware their attitude is "outmoded," she ventured.

Surveys began at 11 a. m. Saturday, July 20, with a four-member team assigned to visit nine restaurants in Bethesda, and another team to look in on nine in Silver Spring. By 1 o'clock the survey was complete and the surveyors stopped.

Not so Many Refusals

"Frankly we are rather pleased with the results. We expected to be refused in many more places," Mrs. Orbach reported.

Each team had three Negro members and one white, who did not appear to be with the rest, but who sat nearby to observe. If his companions were refused service, the white person would speak to those in charge and start the persuasion campaign.

A minister and a building supply contractor and his wife made up the Bethesda group and in Silver Spring, the group comprised a Government biologist, a professional man and County NAACP president, Alphonso Lee.

Restaurants Queried

Queries by a reporter to officers of the six restaurants produced the following replies:

The Little Tavern, Inc., where the surveyors were refused all but carry-out service in both Silver Spring and Bethesda. It is not an over-all company policy, according to vice president and treasurer Robert F. McFadden. With facilities to serve only six or eight at a time "we are too small to pioneer," he said. "We watch the neighborhoods and follow the trends."

Woodward and Lothrop, where surveyors were told they could be served in a dining room set aside for employes. The Public Relations Office downtown commented, "We do not serve Negroes at the Chevy Chase store. No explanation is necessary."

Howard Johnson's, across the street at Wisconsin and Western aves., served them without question, the team said. The Silver Spring group was served in the Hecht Co. restaurant.

Hot Shoppe, which served NAACP members at two Silver Spring branches but refused them in Bethesda. A spokesman said, "Naturally we do not wish to embarrass our guests. Our policies are dictated by customs in the area."

Various Explanations

In the recently opened Drug Fair, where surveyors said they were turned away. Milton Elsberg, President of the Community Drug Co. Inc., said because the branch was new, area practices were followed. He said this permitted carry-out service for Negroes.

Toddle House, where surveyors said they were asked to carry the food out. "We're trying to please both sides," District Manager C. C. Maxey said. "We won't refuse service to anyone but we have very few Negro customers and the majority of our white customers complain if we serve them."

The County branch of the NAACP is seeking support from civic groups, Mrs. Orbach said. The Coordinating Committee for the enforcement of the D. C. anti-discrimination law is reactivating to help, she said.

"Now many places in Rockville, Bethesda and Silver Spring are not patronized because they discriminate," said Mrs. Orbach, explaining that the NAACP Newsletter lists such places for members.

Va. court fails to rule on Bissell case

RICHMOND

The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals Monday reversed a decision of the Arlington Circuit Court and threw out its conviction of Miss Faith Bissell of Arlington.

Last winter, Miss Bissell of 3007 Third St. was arrested for sitting beside a colored person at a political meeting at Jefferson Junior High School. She was fined $15.

The case, aimed as a test of Virginia's segregated seating law, fell short of its goal when the court elected to bypass the constitutionality of the law.

MISS BISSELL, a 43 - year-old librarian, said she had no immediate plans to test the law feel the "same person" should test the case twice.

"You become a crank," she pointed out, "and the cause might lose some public sympathy. If I were to do it again, it certainly won't be any time soon. I'm tired."

The warrant sworn out against Miss Bissell stated that she failed to take a seat assigned to her by an usher and she failed to change her seat when ordered by police.

Norfolk White Woman Favors Integration But Fears Loss of Prestige

Courier, p.12 - Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 11-23-57

NORFOLK, Va. (ANP) — A Norfolk white woman expressed the view that "a great many people" favor integration in the white race "but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife in the church, and the loss of friendship and prestige" if they let it be known publicly that they favor integration.

The woman who identified herself as Mrs. Shirley S. Nesbit, expressed distress in a letter to the Norfolk morning paper which carried her letter under the caption, "The Silence of Christians." Mrs. Nesbit said in part:

"I am writing on a subject which distresses me deeply—silence of the Christian churches in the matter of integration. I know that the policy-making assemblies of various denominations have taken stands against segregation, but far too many of the individual church leaders and laymen are turning their heads away from this moral issue as if it would cease to exist if not confronted. It is almost too late for the church to meet the challenge of proving to those outside its doctrine, both at home and abroad, that it stands up for and practices all that it expounds.

"I cannot but believe that a great many people feel the way I do, but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife within the church and the loss of friendship and prestige . . ."

She adds:

"I am white, with centuries of Virginian ancestry behind me and have lived in Norfolk my entire life. All of this makes me aware of the vital need now for every thinking, feeling Southerner to concentrate not on time and emotion—wasting resistance to the inevitable — but on how the change can best be made without strife and heartache—and without depriving anyone, Negro or white, of his right for health, education and individual human dignity and freedom . . ."

Scull to Appeal To High Court

Post Times Herald

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 16 (Special)—The U. S. Supreme Court will be asked to stay an Arlington County Circuit Court order directing David H. Scull of Annandale to appear before the Thomson Committee Oct. 23 to answer questioned about his racial activities.

An identical appeal was refused by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today. 10-17-57

Scull's attorney, John Silard of Washington, told a reporter he would carry the request to the U. S. Supreme Court as quickly as possible, relying on the same grounds he had cited before the Virginia court.

Scull, an Annandale printer, is vice president of the Fairfax County Council on Human Relations. The Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities, headed by Alexandria delegate James M. Thomson, sought vainly to question him Sept. 20 on whether he had allowed the NAACP and other organizations to use his post office box.

Pt. B5

'No Real Authority'

In his argument before the Virginia Supreme Court today, Silard told the justices that the Thomson Committee has no real authority to compel Scull to answer its questions.

He said the committee failed to show why the information sought from Scull "was necessary in furtherance of its inquiry."

Silard also charged that the committee's insistence on Scull's testimony violates the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution by seeking to "harrass, vilify and publicy embarrass members of the NAACP and others who are attempting to secure integrated public schooling in Virginia."

Leslie J. Hall of Alexandria, counsel for the Thomson Committee, opposed the motion. He insisted that the committee has a right under the legislation creating it to question Scull at length on his association with the NAACP and other organizations engaged in racial activities.

Time Limited

Hall also made the point that the committee's authority expires Nov. 1 and said that if Scull's testimony cannot be obtained prior to that time, it cannot be obtained at all.

In Alexandria, meanwhile, Thomson hinted that he might ask for a continuation of his committee's activities from the 1958 session of the General Assembly.

The order Scull's attorneys sought to have stayed was issued Tuesday by Arlington Judge Emery H. Hosmer.

Silard told the State Supreme Court that, if it denies the stay it should at least permit an expedited appeal from Judge Hosmer's order so that Scull's right will be adjudicated prior to the Oct. 23 deadline.

The brief court order denying the stay made no reference to the request for an expedited appeal.

Old Tells of Interposition Effect

Post & Times Herald

TALLAHASSE, Fla., April 15 (AP)—A Virginia Circuit Judge, considered the father of the present-day interposition movement, said today that Virginia's interposition resolution had discouraged lawsuits to force integration in the schools of his State.

Judge William Old made the remarks in a talk prepared for delivery before a committee of the Florida Senate, which is considering such a resolution.

Old said that prior to adoption of the resolution by the Virginia legislature Feb. 1, 1956, five suits had been filed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to force compliance with the United States Supreme Court's integration decree.

"Since an interposition resolution was adopted there hasn't been a single suit filed," he said. "Interposition stopped them dead in their tracks."

Some of the suits filed prior to adoption of the resolution are still pending, he said, but "I think we have them outflanked."

Va. Dinner 'Open to All'

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier p. 3

RICHMOND, Va.—A fourth Negro, invited by "mistake" to attend a dinner next month for "distinguished whites" said he would decline despite the fact that Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and Virginia Chamber of Commerce members said Negroes would be treated the same as any other guests.

St. Clair Drake, professor of sociology and anthropology at Roosevelt College, Chicago, said he would not attend the dinner.

Previously Dr. Clilan B. Powell of New York, physician and publisher of the Amsterdam News; Mrs. Ella Phillips Stewart of Toledo, Ohio, and Domestic Relations Justice Edward R. Dudley, had received the invitations because the Virginia organization thought they were white.

38a VA

Daily Herald Atlanta, Ga. Wed 5-1-57

TO DARE BIGOTS—In Philadelphia last week, Rev. William H. Gray, Jr., Virginia-born clergyman, announced that he has accepted an invite to the May 17th dinner in Richmond, Va., honoring "distinguished Virginians." He is one of four prominent Negroes living in the North who received invitations that were subsequently withdrawn, with the explanation that they were sent in "clerical error." (Newspress Photo).

5th Negro, Judge Dudley, To Miss Virginia Dinner

Post & Times Herald P. 3-B Fri. 5-3-57 Washington D.C.

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP)—A fifth Virginia-born Negro, mistakenly invited to a dinner party in Richmond, says he will not attend the affair on May 17.

Justice Edward R. Dudley of the Domestic Relations Court decided yesterday to withdraw from the party.

The Rev. William H. Gray of Philadelphia, another Negro who was mailed a formal invitation by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, has yet to say whether he will attend. Four others besides Dudley have decided not to go.

The invitations to the Negroes were termed a "mistake" by the Chamber.

Dudley, former American Ambassador to Liberia, told Gov. Thomas B. Stanley in a letter:

"While I regret my inability to join with other Virginians during your celebration in view of my invitation having been canceled because of my race, I am nevertheless heartened since I feel sure that the manner in which this affair has been handled will inevitably hasten the day when Virginia will not be ashamed of some of its citizens solely because of their race and will accord them the same opportunities and privileges afforded others."

'Jim Crow' Issue Edited By Virginia U. Magazine

Post & Times Herald Washington D.C. p. 1-B Sat. 5-11-57

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., May 10 (Spl.)—A special "Jim Crow" issue of the University of Virginia student magazine contains five articles on the integration controversy, including one by segregationist John Kasper.

The magazine, called the Spectator, was scheduled to be released today. The University's Student Council has announced it will investigate the issue, but has taken no steps to prevent its distribution.

The other four articles are by Floyd Fleming, vice president of the Seaboard White Citizens Council; Sarah Patton Boyle, wife of a University of Virginia drama professor; Edwin B. Henderson, of Falls Church, president of the Virginia State Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Novelist William Faulkner, now writer-in-residence at the University, who gave permission for reprinting of his "Letter to the North" Life magazine article.

Kasper's article, written while in jail in Tennessee, is called "Segregation or Death." In it he castigates the Supreme Court and most of the Federal judiciary, saying they should be tried for treason. He called his opponents "Marxist, usurer, race mixer, degenerate politicians" and pledged a struggle with them, "even death."

Henderson says opposition to integration was similar to that of opposition in the Colonial period to public education. He quotes Thomas Jefferson in his argument that Negroes, given the same opportunities, will achieve as much as whites.

Mrs. Boyle terms racial integration "the next rung up the ladder of man's liberation from captivity within his tiny self."

Fleming cites crime reports and the House subcommittee investigation of D. C. schools to back his contention of the inferiority of Negroes.

Faulkner's article takes the position of moderation for both sides in the controversy.

The monthly magazine is normally devoted to humorous topics.

from the bench" in school integration cases.

"Cases heard and decided by a district judge are always reviewable by an appellate court," Judge Hoffman said today. "Every word spoken is in the record. I have no comment."

Byrd launched his attack on Judge Hoffman during a talk on school integration and pending civil rights legislation at the 37th annual banquet of the Hampton Roads Maritime Association here Thursday night.

Byrd declared, in reference to Hoffman:

"I am reliably informed that a federal judge stated from the bench before hearing evidence or argument on an integration case, that he was inclined 'to throw the whole case out of the window.' This the federal judge did by reading a decision prepared before the hearing."

(Federal Court records here sho wthat on Nov. 17, after hearing five hours of argument on the pupil placement plan enacted by the General Assembly, Judge Hoffman said:

("And I again say to you I have grave doubts about the constitutionality of what the General Assembly of Virginia did. And if I had to rule on it today I can tell you definitely I would throw it out the window." He added the case had "been ably argued on both sides.")

Byrd continued:

"This federal judge further said from the bench: 'The integration problem will never be resolved in Virginia until we have a different political leadership.

"This remark evidently had reference to the coming campaign when an effort will be made to elect a Republican governor of Virginia.

"Had Judge Hoffman rendered his decision in an orderl yand judicial fashion I would have no word of criticism, but to decide before hearing arguments and to make bombastic and political statements from the bench is not the way to conduct judicial procedure."

Ruling Allows Use of Taxes To Segregate

Post & Times Herald Washington D.C. Sat. 5-11-57 p. 1-B

RICHMOND, May 10 (AP)—Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond said today Virginia localities may use public funds to build separate white and Negro schools.

Almond said nothing in the United States Supreme Court's school desegregation decision could be construed to invalidate the localities' right to use public funds to build separate schools.

The Attorney General issued his opinion in response to questions raised by Richmond County Commonwealth's Attorney William A. Jones.

He told Almond that supervisors in his County planned to borrow $100,000 from the State

Literary Fund, add $150,000 in state constructions fronts from the Battle Fund, and build a consolidated Negro grade school adjacent to the Richmond County Negro High School.

"It is my conviction," Jones wrote, "that the use of the taxpayers' money for this purpose is, under the law as now construed—an illegal act."

Jones said he interpreted the Supreme Court decision to mean that "the operation of racially segregated schools is now unconstitutional and illegal." He added:

"Regardless of what may be our personal opinions as to the constitutionality of the Supreme Court's action, it is now the law in Virginia.

Almond today told Jones:

"I am of the opinion that expenditure of public funds for this purpose would be a valid expenditure and would not constitute an . . . illegal act.

"I feel that a ruling of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia . . . supports my opinion on this matter, and, as of this time, the United States Supreme Court decision has no place in the determination of the validity of the expenditure of public funds for school construction."

Associated Press

Post & Times Herald, 5-12-57

Gets Virginia Bid

Washington, D. C.

The Rev. William H. Gray, native Virginian who is now a Philadelphia minister, has accepted an invitation to attend a dinner in Richmond honoring "distinguished Virginians." Three other Negroes said their bids were withdrawn because of "clerical errors."

Governor Says He'll End Classes If Integrated

Post & Times Herald P. 1 Thurs. 5-9-57

Washington, D. C.

Local Authorities Expected to Resist With 'Persuasion' All Racial Mixing

RICHMOND, May 8 (Spl.) Gov. Thomas B. Stanley said today his administration is willing to see public schools closed in Arlington County and Charlottesville if such action becomes necessary to prevent integration.

Stanley told a press conference he would expect school boards and division superintendents in both localities "to use every power of persuasion they have against integration."

"If this fails," he said, "we will have to use the other legislation enacted by the General Assembly."

This includes measures to cut off state appropriations to integrated schools, as well as authorization for the Governor to take control of any integrated school, close it down, and try to reorganize it on a segregated basis.

"If nothing can be worked out with these measures," the Governor said, "we would have to go to the tuition grant bill."

Under the tuition grant program, $2 million already has been appropriated for the Governor to use to pay private secular school tuition to parents of both white and Negro children who find themselves in either of these two situations:

- Public schools have been closed.
- The parents object to sending their children to racially mixed schools.

Stanley's comments were prompted by reminders that school officials in both Arlington and Charlottesville are under Federal Court orders for desegregation of their school systems.

Richmond Parents Protest Placement

RICHMOND, May 8 (Spl.) Theo T. DeFebio of Fairfax County has been joined in her protest against the pupil placement plan by parents of some 300 Richmond public school students.

Students' names were forwarded to the State Pupil Placement Board, which next meets on May 21. City school officials said they plan no action against the students. Mrs. DeFebio's two sons were expelled because of her refusal to sign the forms.

The Afro-American is conducting an editorial campaign in Richmond urging readers not to sign forms. All but six of the 300 students were identified as Negroes.

VIRGINIA

Segregated Anniversary

Hospitality was the word for Old Virginia, and in honor of this year's celebration of the 350th anniversary of the settlement of Jamestown, the Old Dominion decided to put out the welcome mat for Old Virginians living outside the state. Down the lists of distinguished ex-Virginians went the official hosts; out to some 600 notables went engraved invitations to a reception May 17, arranged by the State Chamber of Commerce.

Then the hospitality suddenly turned cold. Among the first to accept the invitation was Dr. Clilan B. Powell, a New York physician and publisher (Amsterdam News), born and raised in Newport News and only recently returned from the independence ceremonies in Ghana (TIME, March 18), where he was entertained by, among others, the Duchess of Kent. In rechecking the list a chamber official discovered that Dr. Powell is a Negro.

The Chamber of Commerce wired a withdrawal of the invitation, and Dr. Powell, who at first insisted that he would attend, finally bowed out. In Toledo, Negro Civic Leader Ella Phillips Stewart heard about the ruckus and decided that she would not accept her invitation. In Chicago, Roosevelt University Sociology Professor St. Clair Drake also received an invitation, but the word from Richmond was that his invitation—as well as any others that had slipped through the racial screen—would be withdrawn.

Also withdrawn—in the sense that he privately approved of these actions and passed the buck to the Chamber of Commerce—was Virginia's weak-kneed Governor Thomas B. Stanley, who had cosigned the engraved invitations with a flourish. But many another white Southerner was highly offended at the breach of good manners. In an open letter to Governor Stanley, Virginia-born Lambert Davis, director of the University of North Carolina Press, wrote: "[You] have taken the ridiculous position of asserting, in effect, that being distinguished is an accomplishment possible only for people of Caucasian ancestry. You have succeeded in making the leadership of the Commonwealth both a stench and a laughingstock in the nation. I believe that I can best show my loyalty to the great traditions of Virginia by declining your invitation."

Wrote Editor Virginius Dabney of the segregationist Richmond Times-Dispatch: "If any of these invited colored citizens come to the dinner . . . and admission is refused, Virginia and Virginia hospitality will get a black eye from which they may never recover." With all this said and done, the Chamber of Commerce mended its anniversary manners, announced that any invited Negro who showed up at the reception would be "courteously seated."

A Regrettable Lapse From Old Dominion Good Manners

Saturday Evening Post p. 10

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Virginia Chamber of Commerce held a banquet recently in honor of that state's native sons who distinguished themselves while living elsewhere. It was a kindly promotional idea. There was a long list of invited guests. Subsequently, there was a short list of "disinvited" ones. They received letters canceling their invitations, with apologies, and explaining: "A host must control his guest list to the exigencies of the occasion."

The exigency or social crisis arose from the discovery that some former Virginians of national standing—clergymen, doctors, publishers and the like—are Negroes. Ole Virginny's distinguished sons (white) could not, under ole Virginny tradition, break bread at the same table with ole Virginny's distinguished sons (Negro). "Pure bungling," a Richmond newspaper termed the inviting of Negroes.

If the Virginia Chamber of Commerce had been groping for a social precedent instead of an exit, several could have been found. One is a story about a great Virginian. When a Negro slave woman curtsied to him, he bowed in response. Someone, surprised, asked him why. "I would not have it thought," he replied, "that she has better manners than mine." Like other stories about George Washington, that one may be apocryphal. Most Americans would like to believe it.

There also is a South Carolina precedent. Wade Hampton, former plantation owner and ex-Confederate general, was campaigning for governor during the Reconstruction Period. At Orangeburg, invited to dinner, he found himself confronted by prominent Negroes as his fellow guests. What did this ex-slaveholder and ex-Confederate leader do? He greeted the Negroes politely, as he always did, and ate a hearty meal, as he always did. If it cost him some white votes, it could not have cost him too many, for he was elected governor. It certainly did not cost him his dignity. One could wish the same could be said for the Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

Racial Climate Is Improving For Negroes, Expert Says

TAPPAHANNOCK, Va.—(ANP)—Despite the tensions of the times the racial climate is changing in favor of the Negroes, Dr. Samuel Dr. Proctor president of Virginia Union University declared here last Sunday.

Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 12-16-57 P. 1

Speaking at the 7th Annual Virginia Union University Day sponsored by the Southside Rappahannock Baptist Association, Dr. Proctor said Russian scientific advances are "working in our behalf by helping to change the climate from despair to hope."

He described other bright points on the horizons as the change htat is taking place among Christian white people of Virginia and the "Bright, young leadership" being produced by the Negro colleges.

"We cannot fail, because God and one man constitute a mighty majority," Dr. Proctor told the audience.

Negro Invitees Fail To Show Up For Virginia Dinner

Richmond, Va., May 19 — No Negroes showed up for a "dinner for distinguished Virginians" to which six Negroes were inadvertently invited through a "clerical error" was held without a hitch Friday night. No Negroes showed up.

More than 450 whites listened to U. S. Chamber of Commerce President Phillip M. Talbot blast federal aid to education as "your money returned to you, less the cost of collecting it and less the cost disbursing it."

Three of the six Negroes whose invitations to the State Chamber of Commerce dinner for "distinguished" Virginia-born men and women in other states were honor guests, instead, at the "Prayer Pilgrimage for Freedom" ceremony held at the same time in Washington. The other three had said they would stay away from the Virginia dinner.

Talbott told the dinner audience he could "see no reason why one state should subsidize the school system of another state, any more than I can see why one state should help to pay the light and power bills of another state with a federalized power authority."

The dinner apparently ended the hassle between the chamber, Virginia Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and six Negroes. The invitations, sent to the Negroes because their names appeared in "Who's Who," went out over Stanley's name. The chamber later rescinded the invitations, but several of the Negroes asked that Stanley, himself, ask them not to attend.

Stanley remained silent on the issue for nearly six weeks and then said that, as far as he was concerned, the invitations were still valid.

Leasing of Golf Course to Others Found "Evasive"

RICHMOND, Va. — The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals Friday held that an injunction against racial discrimination in the use of a municipal golf course cannot be evaded by the mere leasing of the course to private individuals.

The court upheld a lower court order directing Greensboro, N. C., to stop barring colored golfers from its leased golf course.

"It is perfectly clear that the injunction was properly granted," the court said in reviewing the order issued by Federal District Judge Johnson H. Hayes of Greensboro.

The city has leased the course, owned in part by the Greensboro board of education, to the Gillespie Park Golf Club.

The court said that the right of a citizen to use public property without discrimination on the ground of race may not be abridged by the mere leasing of the property.

Integrationist Defeated By Virginia Democrats

Richmond, Va., July 10 (UP)— Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., won a whopping 3-to-1 victory over intergrationist Howard Carwile yesterday in Virginia's Democratic primary for governor.

However, the primary victory is no longer tantamount to election in Virginia, and Almond started today preparing for a campaign against Republican State Senator Ted Dalton that shapes up as a bitter fight over the State's segregationist policy.

Claim Courthouse Racial Segregation Up To Judges

Norfolk, Va.

Attorneys representing the city administration advanced a specious argument Wednesday that it is up to judges whether sanitary facilities in the Norfolk Courthouse buildings shall continue to operate on a racially segregated basis.

City Attorney Leonard Davis and Assistant City Attorney Virgil S. Gore Jr., made this claim in a motion to dismiss a suit brought against the city and four top officials in U. S. District Court.

LEGAL OBSERVERS this week were quick to point out that city attorneys are advancing a specious argument, citing that if every judge had the legal right to enforce his personal laws on public property, there would be little need for legislatures.

In their argument to dismiss the suit, the city attorneys admit that there are no penalties provided in law for those who do not obey the segregation signs in court buildings. Some southern judges, however have found ways, legal or not, to punish those who have not followed segregation signs.

* * *

WHILE IT IS true that some judges in the South try to enforce certain "laws" that are not on the books when dealing with colored citizens, the result has been a sad decadence in race relations with the affected courts being reduced in stature to mere "kangaroo courts."

Some judges use husky court "attendants" or "deputies" to enforce personal views on citizens with the misfortune to be hauled into their courts. There have been numerous instances in which citizens, brought into court on questionable charges, have been mercilessly beaten up by "deputies" seeking to enforce mythical segregation rules in their courts of "justice."

* * *

THE ARGUMENT advanced by lawyers representing the city, if accepted, would perpetuate and strengthen an outmoded system which substitutes personal whims and racial prejudice for just laws, according to observers.

When a judge is elected to administer justice according to statutes enacted by the state legislature, he is not commissioned to become a judicial arbiter of what is legal and what is not without reference to statutory law, it was stressed.

* * *

THE SUIT aimed at abolishing segregation in sanitary facilities in local courts was filed by E. A. Dawley, Norfolk attorney. Mr. Dawley set forth that racial segregation in the courthouse was both humiliating and in violation of constitutional rights. He asked that racial signs be removed.

Defendants in the suit are the city, through Mayor W. Fred Duckworth; City Manager Thomas F. Maxwell, Public Safety Director Calvin H. Dalby, and Public Works Director S. C. Morrisette.

"Threats Don't Scare Me" Says Suffolk Leader

Journal + Guide Lft. 7-27-57

Norfolk Va. P. 13

By A Staff Writer

SUFFOLK, Va.—"Let them threaten. That will only make us wage a more vigorous battle for principle", Moses Riddick, local leader who was told in a letter that he was marked for murder, told the Guide this week.

The "principle" Mr. Riddick was referring to was the intent of local citizens not to see a colored man die for a crime that no white man has ever died for in the Nansemond-Suffolk area.

* * *

MR. RIDDICK received "an invitation" to keep his mouth shut on the Raymond Palmer defense action early this week. The "Palmer Defense Committee" of which Mr. Riddick is co-chairman, is composed of leaders of various local civic, fraternal and church groups and was formed to raise funds to support the appeal of a local man who was recently found guilty and sentenced to death in the electric chair in a criminal case.

The committee was organized because local citizens object to the fact that evidence used in prosecution in the case was all circumstantial. A man told police officers that Palmer had boasted to him that he had robbed and assaulted a local white woman. It was on the basis of this—and little else — that Palmer was convicted.

* * *

MR. RIDDICK, who — as executive secretary of the powerful Independent Voters League here—has long been in the spotlight, received a threat this week saying—in—part—"If you don't keep quiet. . . you will be killed before Palmer is."

The threat in a letter postmarked at Suffolk and addressed to "Moses Riddick, Suffolk, Va.", came shortly before Mr. Riddick went to the Union Hall here Monday night to take part in the third of a series of mass meetings being held by the Palmer Defense Group.

* * *

AT THE MEETING, 600 people heard the youthful leader declare "This won't scare me. I'm fighting for principle and principle will be upheld."

Mr. Riddick, along with James W. Lawrence, co-chairman of the Palmer Defense group, issued a statement that meetings, etc., in behalf of Palmer would go on until circumstances made such gatherings unnecessary. In the three meetings that have already been held 1300 people have been in attendance, and $1800 toward a goal of $2000 has been realized.

MOSES RIDDICK
Ignores Threat

ALSO SPEARHEADING the drive to support Palmer's appeal from the death sentence handed him is the Rev. T. O. Mills, gifted orator and pastor of First Baptist Church, Mahan street. Rev. Mr. Mills, a student of the "Martin Luther King" school of approach to racial matters, has been dubbed "The Colored Billy Graham" here because of his profound oratory.

He concurs with Messrs Riddick and Lawrence that the efforts in Palmer's behalf will continue. Mr. Lawrence, incidentally, in the local area He is no stranger to intrigue" was told—through mail and by phone that his home would be bombed some two years ago when he was seeking an elective post here.

* * *

THE PENCILED threat to Mr. Riddick said:

"Moses Riddick. Sir. The very idea of you taking any part in the prosecution of that damn Negro that acknowledged he raped that. white woman has caused a lot of animosity among the whites. If you don't keep quiet in the future and let the law take its course you will be killed before Palmer is. This is true advice from a friend."

Mr. Riddick said "In a fight for principle such as this, one does not expect to find too many friends until the motive of the effort is realized.'

* * *

HE ADDED: "Records will support the contention that never in the history of Nansemond county has a white man been convicted and sentenced to pay the extreme penalty in an assault case..and never has one been convicted on such evidence as was presented in the Palmer case. It is the general belief here that Palmer is not guilty of the charge. brought against him and local citizens are rallying to his defense in an effort to see that he does not pay a debt to society that he does not owe. We are against a duall system of justice.

The letter Mr. Riddick received was turned over to Police Chief L. B. Butler. Sheriff J. Frank Culpepper is also working on the case. Postmaster S. S. Stallings has pointed out that federal investigation of the matter is possible.

In the meantime, plans were being formulated here for another mass meeting in behalf of the Palmer Defense group. At the first meeting, some 150 persons were present, at the scond 550 and at the third fully 650 persons were in attendance.

Report Asks Park Change In Virginia

RICHMOND, Nov. 21 (AP)—A seven-man study committee today urged curtailment of "developed areas" and a new emphasis upon "the natural qualities" of Virginia's eight state parks.

The committee's report to the State Board of Conservation and Development made no mention of race. However, some observers saw the proposals as apparently an effort to find a way for the state to keep the parks and keep them open should courts order more integration.

One park, Seashore near Cape Henry, has been closed the past two seasons in the face of a Federal court order banning racial discrimination.

In the report, made public today, the study group said there should be "an orderly and gradual de-emphasis of the so-called 'developed areas' within these parks, and a new emphasis upon their public value as forest and wilderness tracts.

"Accordingly, cabin, swimming and refreshment facilities should eventually be curtailed, and public use redirected to the magnificent natural qualities of the parks."

The committee proposed that use of the parks henceforth would "embrace such elemental pleasures as hiking and camping, picnicking and nature study, hunting, fishing, etc."

Since all such activities might not be feasible in any one park, the committee said appropriate regulations would be required to indicate the uses to be made of each park.

Insofar as possible, the report added, private organizations should "be encouraged to assume the responsibility for providing the public with those cabin and swimming facilities which are required throughout Virginia, but which we do not believe to be an essential service of the state government."

Paul D. Sanders, editor of the Southern Planter, chairman, summed up the committee's report this way:

"The feeling was that Virginia's population was growing rapidly and urbanizing at a terrific clip. With short work weeks, good roads and transportation there is a tremendous pressure for city people to get out of doors. We wanted to emphasize that phase of our parks and de-emphasize the idea of running boardinghouses."

Sanders said the committee wanted the state to hold onto the parks and develop them along different lines.

White Woman Says Many Afraid To Favor Integration

NORFOLK, Va. (ANP)—A Norfolk white woman expressed the view that "a great many people favor integration in the white race "but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife in the church, and the loss of frendship and prestige" if they let it be known publicly that they favor integration.

Hhe Woman identified her self as "Mrs. Shirley S. Nesbit. She expressed distress in a letter to the Norfolk morning paper which carried her letter under the caption "The Silence of Christians." Mrs. Nesbit said in part:

"I am writing on a subject which distresses me deeply the silence of the Christian churches in the matter of integration. I know that the great many people feel the way I do but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife within the church, and the loss of friendship and prestige."

She adds:

"I am white, with centuries of ancestry behind me and my entire life, have lived in Norfolk all of this makes me aware of the vital need now for every thinking, feeling southern to concentrate not on time and emotion-wasting resistance to the inevitable but on how the change can best be made without depriving anyone of his right for health, education and individual human dignity and freedom."

P. A. 25 Jet 11-22-57

"Threats Don't Scare Me" Says Suffolk Leader

Journal + Guide Sat. 7-27-57

Norfolk Va. P. 13

By A Staff Writer

SUFFOLK, Va.—"Let them threaten. That will only make us wage a more vigorous battle for principle", Moses Riddick, local leader who was told in a letter that he was marked for murder, told the Guide this week.

The "principle" Mr. Riddick was referring to was the intent of local citizens not to see a colored man die for a crime that no white man has ever died for in the Nansemond-Suffolk area.

* * *

MR. RIDDICK received "an invitation" to keep his mouth shut on the Raymond Palmer defense action early this week. The "Palmer Defense Committee" of which Mr. Riddick is co-chairman, is composed of leaders of various local civic, fraternal and church groups and was formed to raise funds to support the appeal of a local man who was recently found guilty and sentenced to death in the electric chair in a criminal case.

The committee was organized because local citizens object to the fact that evidence used in prosecution in the case was all circumstantial. A man told police officers that Palmer had boasted to him that he had robbed and assaulted a local white woman. It was on the basis of this—and little else — that Palmer was convicted.

* * *

MR. RIDDICK, who — as executive secretary of the powerful Independent Voters League here—has long been in the spotlight, received a threat this week saying—in—part—"If you don't keep quiet. . . you will be killed before Palmer is."

The threat in a letter postmarked at Suffolk and addressed to "Moses Riddick, Suffolk, Va.", came shortly before Mr. Riddick went to the Union Hall here Monday night to take part in the third of a series of mass meetings being held by the Palmer Defense Group.

* * *

AT THE MEETING, 600 people heard the youthful leader declare "This won't scare me. I'm fighting for principle and principle will be upheld."

Mr. Riddick, along with James W. Lawrence, co-chairman of the Palmer Defense group, issued a statement that meetings, etc., in behalf of Palmer would go on until circumstances made such gatherings unnecessary. In the three meetings that have already been held 1300 people have been in attendance, and $1800 toward a goal of $2000 has been realized.

MOSES RIDDICK
Ignores Threat

ALSO SPEARHEADING the drive to support Palmer's appeal from the death sentence handed him is the Rev. T. O. Mills, gifted orator and pastor of First Baptist Church, Mahan street. Rev. Mr. Mills, a student of the "Martin Luther King" school of approach to racial matters, has been dubbed "The Colored Billy Graham" here because of his profound oratory.

He concurs with Messrs Riddick and Lawrence that the efforts in Palmer's behalf will continue. Mr. Lawrence, incidentally, in the local area He is no stranger to intrigue" was told—through mail and by phone that his home would be bombed some two years ago when he was seeking an elective post here.

* * *

THE PENCILED threat to Mr. Riddick said:

"Moses Riddick. Sir. The very idea of you taking any part in the prosecution of that damn Negro that acknowledged he raped that. white woman has caused a lot of animosity among the whites. If you don't keep quiet in the future and let the law take its course you will be killed before Palmer is. This is true advice from a friend."

Mr. Riddick said "In a fight for principle such as this, one does not expect to find too many friends until the motive of the effort is realized.'

* * *

HE ADDED: "Records will support the contention that never in the history of Nansemond county has a white man been convicted and sentenced to pay the extreme penalty in an assault case..and never has one been convicted on such evidence as was presented in the Palmer case. It is the general belief here that Palmer is not guilty of the charge. brought against him and local citizens are rallying to his defense in an effort to see that he does not pay a debt to society that he does not owe. We are against a dual system of justice.

The letter Mr. Riddick received was turned over to Police Chief L. B. Butler. Sheriff J. Frank Culpepper is also working on the case. Postmaster S. S. Stallings has pointed out that federal investigation of the matter is possible.

In the meantime, plans were being formulated here for another mass meeting in behalf of the Palmer Defense group. At the first meeting, some 150 persons were present, at the scond 550 and at the third fully 650 persons were in attendance.

Report Asks Park Change In Virginia

RICHMOND, Nov. 21 (AP)—A seven-man study committee today urged curtailment of "developed areas" and a new emphasis upon "the natural qualities" of Virginia's eight state parks.

The committee's report to the State Board of Conservation and Development made no mention of race. However, some observers saw the proposals as apparently an effort to find a way for the state to keep the parks and keep them open should courts order more integration.

One park, Seashore near Cape Henry, has been closed the past two seasons in the face of a Federal court order banning racial discrimination.

In the report, made public today, the study group said there should be "an orderly and gradual de-emphasis of the so-called 'developed areas' within these parks, and a new emphasis upon their public value as forest and wilderness tracts.

"Accordingly, cabin, swimming, and refreshment facilities would eventually be curtailed, and public use redirected to the magnificent natural qualities of the parks."

The committee proposed that use of the parks henceforth would "embrace such elemental pleasures as hiking and camping, picnicking and nature study, hunting, fishing, etc."

Pil 11-22-57

Since all such activities might not be feasible in any one park, the committee said appropriate regulations would be required to indicate the uses to be made of each park.

Insofar as possible, the report added, private organizations should "be encouraged to assume the responsibility for providing the public with those cabin and swimming facilities which are required throughout Virginia, but which we do not believe to be an essential service of the state government."

Paul D. Sanders, editor of the Southern Planter, chairman, summed up the committee's report this way:

"The feeling was that Virginia's population was growing rapidly and urbanizing at a terrific clip. With short work weeks, good roads and transportation there is a tremendous pressure for city people to get out of doors. We wanted to emphasize that phase of our parks and de-emphasize the idea of running boardinghouses."

Sanders said the committee wanted the state to hold onto the parks and develop them along different lines.

White Woman Says Many Afraid To Favor Integration

NORFOLK, Va. (ANP)—A Norfolk white woman expressed the view that "a great many people favor integration in the white race "but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife in the church, and the loss of frendship and prestige" if they let it be known publicly that they favor integration.

Daily World

Hhe Woman identified her self as "Mrs. Shirley S. Nesbit. She expressed distress in a letter to the Norfolk morning paper which carried her letter under the caption "The Silence of Christians." Mrs. Nesbit said in part:

Atlanta Ga.

"I am writing on a subject which distresses me deeply the silence of the Christian churches in the matter of integration. I know that the great many people feel the way I do but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife within the church, and the loss of friendship and prestige." She adds:

"I am white, with centuries of Virginian ancestry behind me and if not confronted. It is almost too late for the church to meet the challenge of proving to those outside its doctrine, both at home and abroad, that it stands up for and practices all that it expounds.

"I cannot but believe that a great many people feel the way I do but are afraid of outside pressures in their daily lives, open strife within the church, and the loss of friendship and prestige. All of this makes me aware of the vital need now for every thinking, feeling southern to concentrate not on time and emotion-wasting resistance to the inevitable but on how the change can best be made with dignity and freedom."

Pittsburgh Courier 11-23-57

Virginia's "Black Laws"

LIEUT. GOVERNOR STEPHENS has appointed the ten-man legislative committee authorized by the last special session of the General Assembly "to investigate groups which try to influence or promote racial litigation in Virginia.

This inquisitorial body recalls to mind the Virginia Black Laws in effect prior to emancipation and for five years thereafter. Under these laws Negroes were deprived of all legal rights.

The committee is empowered "to investigate the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation related to racial activities in this state."

We suggest that this committee start with the members of the Virginia General Assembly, for they "influenced, encouraged and promoted more litigation relating to racial activities in the state" during its last special session than any similar legislative body in the memory of man.

A Starting Point

Its first start perhaps should be on the Gray Commission which labored for 14 months to find ways and means of encouraging, promoting and compelling litigation in the areas of race. The committee's chief target is admittedly the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its Virginia branches. Be that as it may, we feel that the NAACP can take care of itself.

But there would be no reason for an NAACP in the field of constitutional rights had it not been for the Virginia Constitutional Convention of 1901-1902.

Most of the members of that convention are dead or superannuated but most of their work is very much alive.

This Virginia Constitutional Convention and state constitutional amendments, and laws subsequently based on these amendments, made possible and inevitable a struggle in the courts to restore to Virginia's minority group the legal rights of which it was stripped.

A Shameful Era

After adjournment of the Constitutional Convention of 1901-1902, the following developments followed in quick succession.

An end was put to higher education for Negroes by any supporting appropriation from the State for a period of more than 20 years. Virginia Normal and Collegiate Institute was reduced to the status of an industrial high school, and its name changed to Virginia Normal and Industrial Institute.

The maximum of Negro public school education in the rural areas particularly was held to the elementary grades for more than three decades.

Provisions for no more than one room, one teacher, primary schools in the rural counties of the state remained for more than 25 years.

After that the Rosenwald Foundation entered the picture and under a three-pronged arrangement providing financial support from the Foundation, one-third of the cost of each school from the Negroes themselves from their own private funds and the balance from the locality, the building of some two- and four-classroom school houses took place in the 381 rural spots in Virginia. Most of these were in Southside Virginia.

A majority of rural counties in the state took funds allocated to Negro schools under the plan of the per-teacher unit rule and diverted them to the total use of white schools.

Sixty-four counties not only did not use any of their own funds for Negro schools, but applied a part of the per teacher unit State funds they received for Negro schools to increase the amount they spent on white schools.

When a member of the state detice, most of the counties on the Southside formed other ways to get around using the state money for Negro schools.

Election laws were enacted and illegal devices employed for completely disfranchising Negroes.

Laws were enacted establishing the white Democratic primary which was so maneuvered as to constitute the real election for state officials and in which white Republicans were free to participate but no Negroes could enter.

Succeeding legislatures enacted dozens of Jim Crow laws designed first to deny Negroes human dignity. Secondly, to deprive Negroes of equal accommodations in any public place, on any public carrier, in any public park and in any public health or sanitary system.

Virginia never did one thing to change these conditions and laws over a period of 50 years, except when compelled to do so by the pressure of legal action.

When this pressure for lifting the impact of segregation in every phase of Negro life began to touch the schools, then the General Assembly of the state conceived the idea of making it unlawful for Negroes to go into court and ask for equal protection of the laws.

Illegal To Protest

It is illegal now under Virginia laws, implemented by a McCarthy type of investigating committee for Negroes to test the constitutionality of laws passed by the last special session of the General Assembly. Any Negro, or group of Negroes, or organization of Negroes which undertakes to make such tests is subject to fines and imprisonment because they are "promoting racial litigation" contrary to the whims of the Virginia General Assembly.

There are a few questions which should be put to the committee.

Will it tell the people of Virginia what GOVERNOR STANLEY and the present General Assembly were doing during the last special session, except promoting racial litigation?

Does it think that 700,000 Negroes in Virginia are going to surrender all of their legal rights or the right to have their grievances reviewed in a court of law without resistance?

Committee's Big Task

If the committee is to do an objective and thorough job under its mandate it has certainly assumed a herculean task. For it will have to investigate practically every Negro society, organization, corporation, church, civic body, and adult in the State of Virginia.

Besides it will have to inquire into the records and actions of the Defenders of Sovereign States Rights and Individual Liberties, for that organization was formed with the announced purpose explained by authorized spokesmen of "preserving segregation." The specific intention, of course, was to preserve segregated schools. Totally segregated schools cannot be preserved by this organization by legal means because segregation itself has been declared unconstitutional, null and void as it relates to the operation of schools with public funds.

By way of further information for the committee, if every NAACP official in Virginia and in other states was beheaded tomorrow, the fight for equal rights, equal protection of the laws, and full-fledged citizenship on the part of Negroes would not cease. Nothing under God's sun can stop a social revolution which has the moral force of untold millions behind it.

10 Appointed To Probe Virginia Racial Litigation

Star P.2-B
Fri. 1-4-57
Washington D.C.

Delegates Frank P. Moncure of Stafford and James M. Thomson of Alexandria have been appointed to a 10-man legislative committee to investigate organizations which promote racial litigation in Virginia.

The committee, named yesterday, is expected to hold its first meeting within a week or 10 days. It was authorized at a special session of the General Assembly last September under legislation aimed at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which has instigated a number of school segregation suits.

The committee, however, is authorized to investigate any group attempting to influence legislation or litigation on racial matters.

Strong Integration Foe

Mr. Moncure, a strong advocate of maintaining segregated schools in Virginia, was the author of legislation that repealed Arlington's right to elect its school board after the board announced tentative plans last January to mix the races in a few classrooms.

Mr. Thomson is the chief patron of the so-called "NAACP bill" that resulted in formation of the commission.

Lt. Gov. A. E. S. Stephens, presiding officer of the State Senate, and Speaker E. Blackburn Moore of the House of Delegates appointed the members.

The committee is empowered to investigate "the activities of corporations, organizations, associations and other like groups which seek to influence, encourage or promote litigation relating to racial activities in this State."

Can Subpoena Witnesses

It is armed with a $25,000 appropriation and will have powers to subpoena any witness or records of any person, firm, corporation, association or organization of any type. Those who fail to hed subpoenas may be subjected to court action.

The committee is to report its findings and recommendations by next November 1 as the basis for possible legislation at the 1958 General Assembly.

Other committee members are: State Senators Earl A. Fitzpatrick of Roanoke, Landon R. Wyatt of Danville, Mills E. Godwin, jr., of Suffolk and George S. Aldhizer II of Rockingham County, and Delegates Harold H. Purcell of Louisa, W. Roy Smith of Petersburg, Joseph E. Blackburn of Lynchburg and Charles B. Cross, jr., of Norfolk County.

All but Mr. Smith, a drug manufacturer, and Mr. Wyatt, an automobile dealer, are attorneys.

Symbols of archaic age still hanging in many Dixie states

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 1-5-57

By VICTOR CALVERTON

RICHMOND, Va. (ANP) —"The old order dieth slowly." This is what is happening in the South and Virginia in a classical example of this truth.

First of all, segregation signs are not all down in Virginia or other states of the South. Anyone traveling in Virginia, North Carolina and other southern states will occasionally see these symbols of an archaic age still present.

The Greyhound Bus Statiion here has signs designating the colored restaurant and white restaurant. This is not a fault of the company, however, because another corporation in most cities operates the dining room.

THERE ARE no racial signs for the rest rooms, but it is clear that the company's two rest rooms for men and two for women were intended to encourage whites and colored persons to be separated.

The arrangement works nicely for the Greyhound Bus because almost invariably colored people use one rest room and whites use the other even though the white men's rest room is closer to the waiting room.

There are signs also designating one section of the waiting room for colored and another section marked for whites.

That the company is actively and consciously promoting the segregation is evidenced by the fact that the waiting rooms and bus station currently in use is temporary and was set up long after the desegregation decision of the Federal courts.

* * *

SOUTHERN opponents of the desegregation decision of the U.S. Supreme Court are relying heavily on "voluntary" segregation to maintain racial segregation in Virginia and other southern states.

Traveling in Virginia and other southern states, one finds that the people generally, white and colored, get along all right and react sensible and wisely on the whole to the desegregation decision.

On the other hand, state officials of Virginia, local officials and self appointed white leaders and in some instances self-appointed colored leaders who favor segregation, set themselves up as spokesmen for the white and colored people.

Segregation Case Judge Is Foe of Byrd Machine

Post & Times Herald
Sun. 1-6-57
Washington D.C.
P.16-K

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

The first hole in Virginia's anti-integration defense was opened by a former University of Pennsylvania football lineman.

Federal Judge Walter Edward Hoffman of Norfolk still carries the hefty build at 49 that he carried as a guard for Penn's Quakers back in the "Roaring Twenties."

He earned the nickname "Beef" and he still is "Beef" Hoffman to acquaintances—outside the courtroom. He is a squarely built, six-foot, 230 pounder, and still an athlete, holding his own in weekly rounds of golf. Until 1950, he was an umpire for major Southern football games.

Last Jan. 11, Hoffman ruled that the State Pupil Placement Act was unconstitutional. This law is Virginia's first line of defense in its attempt to hold off implementation of the Supreme Court's school desegregation decree.

On Feb. 11, Hoffman ordered Newport News to begin desegregation by Aug. 15 and, the next day, directed Norfolk to do likewise. Some of the State's legal advisers believe the former football player was "offside" on this play because his ruling did not give the Pupil Placement Board an opportunity to assign the Negro pupils involved in the two cases. The Supreme Court must decide.

A native of Jersey City, Hoffman was attending the University of Pennsylvania when his family moved to Norfolk in 1926. He was graduated from Penn two years later with a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics.

Young Hoffman financed his way through law school at the College of William and Mary and at Washington and Lee University by serving as assistant football coach. He graduated from W&L's Law School in 1931.

He returned to Norfolk, became an assistant law professor at William and Mary and formed a 20-year law partnership with State Sen. Edward L. Breeden Jr. Hoffman, holding high office both in local and State Bar associations, became as active in Republican politics as Breeden was active in Democratic politics.

He developed into a consistent critic of the Byrd organization, Virginia's dominant Democratic political faction.

In 1953 Hoffman lost a bid for Attorney General to J. Lindsay Almond Jr., the Byrd organization standard bearer, who faced Judge Hoffman recently in defending the State's anti-integration program.

One month after the Supreme Court's 1954 school decision, President Eisenhower nominated Hoffman to the Federal bench.

In the Newport News and Norfolk desegregation cases, Hoffman leveled criticism at the General Assembly and Gov. Thomas B. Stanley for their handling of the segregation problem. He invited the School Boards to submit their own gradual desegregation programs and promised protection against the Assembly and Governor.

Hoffman is married to the former Evelyn Watkins of Norfolk, once a school teacher. They live in Norfolk's Lakewood section and their two children, Carole Lee, 16, and Walter, 12, attend public schools.

JUDGE HOFFMAN
. . . Hits Color Line

Richmond Pastors Speak Out on Race

Post Sun. 2-3-57 P.3E

Washington, D.C.

The following "Statement of Conviction of Race" was adopted Monday by the Richmond Ministers Association and published as a four-column advertisement in the Richmond Times-Dispatch the following day. The statement was adopted unanimously at a meeting attended by about 60 Richmond ministers and was signed by the Rev. O. D. Brown, Association secretary. An Association official said that the group's executive committee spent three months preparing the resolution and that it would be distributed to other Virginia religious and educational groups.

I. The Morale Nature of the World

THIS IS God's world. It operates under God's laws. Men either learn these laws, live in obedience to them and prosper, or they ignore their stern reality, follow selfish devices and suffer. Men may not change these laws.

God's laws, under which men must live, invariably support what is morally good. From history and human experience, nothing should be more clear than that underlying all of life is the assumption that men will be upright, deal fairly, speak truthfully and dwell in goodwill. Whenever men have for long done otherwise, they have reaped a harvest of tears. Often they and their finest achievements have been destroyed and always, sooner or later, righteousness, justice, truth, honesty and brotherly love have come into their own. We must live in God's world, in God's way, or we perish.

II. The Nature of our Virginia Heritage

IN VIRGINIA, political philosophy and religious conviction have seldom been divorced. Democracy here, in the finest sense, has been the political expression of Judaeo-Christian faith. Its roots run deep into the soil of Judaeo-Christian conviction. Consequently, Virginia democracy has had a distinct flavor and made a unique contribution to national life.

Its greatness has stemmed from its repeated enunciation of such basic ideas as the reality of man's dependence upon Divine Providence; the inherent worth and dignity of the individual citizen as a child of God, and the consequent rights of men as individuals in society. Virginia democracy at its best has traditionally been a bulwark against every form of tyranny over the mind and soul of man; a champion of individual freedom, equality of opportunity, justice before the law and many other ideals precious to mankind. The historic Virginia Bill of Rights stands as a monument to our dedication to these ideals.

No one familiar with the glorious history of America, or with the generations which brought her to birth, will question the decisive influence Virginians had in defining the ideals, and in determining the moral and spiritual climate, of this Nation. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Marshall and Monroe were not only Virginians; they were Americans. Each in his own way brought to national leadership the convictions of gentlemen bred in the milieu of Virginia democratic culture. Each insisted that the religious faith of that culture from which he had come find embodiment in the important legislative acts of the Nation.

We Virginians have a great heritage, politically, which we have gratefully accepted and proudly shared with the world. It is a heritage which must ever be protected and enriched or we shall lose it.

speed" and in such way as to strengthen the total life in every community.

FIFTH, we believe that until a final satisfactory solution is achieved, every effort should be made to make available to both white and colored people the finest in educational and cultural advantages; that wherever possible, and as rapidly as possible, social custom violating the dignity of the Negro should be eradicated. The passing away of these irritating customs does not involve intermarriage or amalgamation of the races; it declares a wholesome respect for all people and evidences common courtesy.

IN ADOPTING this statement, we avow our intention to continue to teach, preach and otherwise encourage race relations which are morally and religiously sound; to do all we can to create the climate in which right solutions to racial issues may be found; to solicit continually the support of other Virginia citizens in commitment to the positions we have herein enunciated. At the proper time and in the right place, we commit ourselves to make the weight of our convictions felt and to help restore our state to the stature among states from which, in our opinion, she has recently fallen.

III. Present Peril

NOT IN THE lifetime of most of us has this gift from the past seemed so imperiled. The fine fabric of tradition is being slowly rent apart by disagreement concerning integration in Virginia, and institutions long and laboriously builded to serve all the people are threatened. We are suddenly the heirs of a spate of legislation in Virginia which is neither democratic nor Christian, and part of which clearly impinges upon civil and religious liberty which is the jealously guarded right of every citizen.

It is not our wish to deprecate, as individuals, those in public office who have brought our state to this tragic situation. We know some of these men to be men of high integrity, intelligence and moral courage. We acknowledge some of them to be humble, honest servants of the people. However, the point of our concern is that the present Governor and a majority of the Legislature have, in our opinion, seriously impaired the sacred and historic traditions of Virginia democracy and lowered the prestige of the state in the eyes of thoughtful people all across the Nation, if not the world, by what we regard as their exceedingly inept handling of the current racial situation.

These men have taken a grave problem having significant moral and religious overtones and coerced their own solution without due consideration of either moral or religious teaching. They have taken an educational problem and coerced a solution without serious consultation with independent educators, available at their very fingertips. They have taken an interracial problem and coerced a solution without even the courtesy of including in their study group members of both races. They have taken a problem relating to the youth of Virginia and coerced a solution without seeking the mind of the maturer youth involved. They have passed this legislation in open defiance of the Supreme Court's interpretation regarding what is the right of an American citizen.

With strange persistence compounded of pride, prejudice, personal bitterness toward persons of opposite opinions and the wide distortion of the truth by some members, the Legislature has taken long strides toward a vindictive, dictatorial way of government, foreign to our traditions and guaranteeing years of tension if not tragedy among the citizens of Virginia. It has offered on the altar of its prejudice a public school system which citizens of the Old Dominion have slowly built and improved over many years—a system of education which, while far from model, nevertheless has served our children with growing effectiveness.

To cap the whole, the special session of our Legislature has sought to restrict the open, free criticism of its coerced solutions by forbidding unhampered freedom to discuss the matter or to enter litigation over it. Adding insult to injury, it has, furthermore, exempted politicians and political groups from these restrictions.*

See House Bill No. 60, passed 1956.*

IV. Personal Convictions

THE PROBLEMS now confronting our state in the area of race relations will find permanent, happy solutions only within the framework of Judaeo-Christian faith and our traditional democratic heritage. They must be arrived at by free and open discussion by Virginians everywhere and in an environment of mutual respect between races. We must be individually as zealous to safeguard the proper rights and privileges of others as we are to safeguard our own. Necessarily, the prevailing climate must first be changed.

The tragic tensions which we have foolishly created between the races must be relieved. Confidence must be strengthened in the honorable and unselfish intentions of each race by the other. Earnest of unceasing efforts to find mutually satisfactory solutions to race problems must be forthcoming from both sides. To the end that we may rightly and honorably solve the racial problems of our day, we make the following proposals:

FIRST, we believe that within the context of American freedom, the attempt by the Governor and the Legislature to restrict discussion or orderly agitation by persons interested in current race problems is contrary to our traditional concepts of civil and religious liberty, and that Public Law No. 60 passed by the Special Session of the Legislature in 1956 should be promptly rescinded.

SECOND, we believe that as Americans, we citizens of Virginia have a responsibility to respect all duly established legislative, executive and judicial authority, whether at local, state or Federal levels. Obedience to this authority, where it violates no moral or religious principle, enjoins upon public officials as well as other citizenry and is not contingent upon the apparent wisdom of the authority. To defy openly the Supreme Court and to encourage others to do so, in our judgment, is not only poor strategy; it is poor citizenship. Therefore, we urge our state government to act with loyalty and with maturity as regards cooperation with all established agencies of American government, and to lead us in a statesmanlike rather than an anarchistic manner.

THIRD, we believe that local community rights are as vital as states rights, and that the right to govern its own school system should be returned promptly to the local and county governments.

FOURTH, we believe in time that it will be possible to establish a school system satisfactory to thoughtful people of both races, and to the Supreme Court of the United States, if education is properly returned to the educators for administration, and if they are given the support of the state government and of the newspapers and other information agencies. An approved schools system will not come about quickly, but we believe it can come about with "deliberate

"I am not a Virginian; I am an American," Patrick Henry told the First Continental Congress in 1774. To quote the Richmond Ministers Association: "Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Marshall and Monroe were not only Virginians; they were Americans."

Virginia Affairs

Post & Times Herald

Virginia's No Match for These Times

Washington, D.C.

By Benjamin Muse

Mar. 2-11-57

VIRGINIA CONTINUED ITS FIGHT last week against the Twentieth Century.

It lost two engagements, as it will lose the next, and the next. It is fairly safe to say that, for all its expanded and expensive law department and the booming rhetoric of its Attorney General, the state is not going to win any legal battles on the segregation question. It is not going to gain any prestige or national sympathy out of further repetition of threadbare arguments in Federal courts.

Muse

In the long process of adjustment, it is not even gaining time. Precious time which might be devoted to preparation is being spent in aggravating the situation and increasing the difficulties which ultimately must be faced.

A long series of Federal court decisions now support the belief that, were there an intention in good faith to comply with the law, a considerable time would be allowed in which to effect the transition in difficult areas. But where there is only blunt defiance, and outspoken contempt, the courts have little choice but to order race discrimination to cease.

IT WAS EMPHATICALLY the latter situation which confronted Judge Walter E. Hoffman in the Newport News and Norfolk desegration cases last week. The defiance here was chiefly on the part of the Governor and the General Assembly of the Commonwealth, who have undertaken to suppress any good intentions on the part of local school authorities. Nevertheless, in fixing next Aug. 15 as the deadline for desegregation, Judge Hoffman indicated that "a plan for gradual solution," if submitted at that time, would have his approval.

Virginia, which has taken the lead in the Southern movement of resistance and evasion, is now faced with two of the most ambitious projects of compliance with the Supreme Court decision which have yet been undertaken. Desegregation has been accomplished in Kansas City, Baltimore, St. Louis and Louisville, but, with the exception of Washington, it has not been undertaken thus far in any large city with as great a percentage of Negro pupils as in these two Virginia cities.

Newport News has a public school enrollment of only 5207 white pupils and 10,551 Negro pupils. Although practically nothing has been done in Newport News by way of preparation for the change, that city is not without its element of forward-looking citizens who are seeking to turn thoughts in the direction of that inescapable eventuality. Spearheaded by Virginia Council on Human Relations members, a 60-member Council for Community Cooperation has been launched there with considerable enthusiasm and success.

IN NORFOLK, strong sentiment for compliance has been noted ever since the Supreme Court decision was handed down, and it has been strengthened by the constructive attitude of the Norfolk press. The Norfolk school board announced in July, 1954:

"We intend, without reservation, to uphold and abide by the laws of the land."

Some quiet preparation for integration has been going on in Norfolk for several years in the form of integrated teacher workshops and other efforts to create "a climate of acceptance." Only pressure from Richmond has prevented that city from taking more positive steps.

Judge Hoffman's deadline is likely to be extended beyond Aug. 15—as much as a year—by appeal procedures. But these two cities are faced with a stupendous challenge, made greater by the obstructionism of state authorities, and the planning to meet it should begin without loss of time.

With the experience and techniques before them of other cities which have cleared the hurdle, a united effort on the part of the school authorities, the clergy, civic organizations, the press and leaders in every walk of life in those two cities may yet accomplish a desegregation feat which will honor Virginia and set an example to the rest of the unhappy South.

Asks 'Statesmanlike Restraint'

Post & Times Herald

Don't Press Integration in South, Dabney Cautions Negro Leaders

Wed. 2-27-57 Washington, D.C.

P. 1-B

By Grace Bassett
Staff Reporter

Virginius Dabney called on Negro leaders yesterday to show "statesmanlike restraint" in pressing school integration.

The National Association for Advancement of Colored People should see the "folly of forcing the issue" in the deep south, Dabney, editor of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, told the National Association of Secondary School Principals at the Sheraton-Park Hotel.

"The deep south, it must be said in all frankness, has no present intention of integrating its public schools," said Dabney. "Several of those states have a fixed determination to close their schools entirely, rather than mingle the races in them."

The editor, author of "Liberalism in the South" and a Pulitzer Prize winner noted that courts agreed closing schools would be legal, "however deplorable from an educational and social standpoint."

He coupled his counsel to the NAACP with a criticism of the President's civil rights program as "extremist legislation."

This civil rights program "frightens and dismays the South," he said, because:

- It would allow persons "about to engage in" segregationist activities to be arrested. Dabney said the amazing language amounted to thought control.
- It appeared to negate the right of such persons to trial by jury.
- It would let the Attorney General file, at public expense, suits for persons who contend their civil rights had been violated.
- It would empower a proposed commission to summon a citizen from any part of the country to defend himself against charges, the nature of which would be unknown to him.

Dabney stressed he could not predict the future of integrated classrooms. But he said he was deeply troubled by the growing intensity of the struggle over integration in some nine states — Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

"Except for the much-disputed entry of a dozen Negroes into the Clinton, Tenn., high school, there has been absolutely no integration in public schools of these nine states," he pointed out.

He saw hope in Baltimore's plan letting pupils of both races attend schools of their choice.

Integration in the District was labeled "dubious" by Dabney, who said mixed schools were put into effect here with too much haste and too little preparation, "according to the best information I can get."

He branded New York's system as "folly and absurdity." There, children were transported across town away from schools they had reached on foot to mixed classrooms, he said.

Segregated Seating Law Is Upheld

Post & Times Herald
Washington, D.C.
Wed. 1-16-57

The test of the Virginia segregated seating law appeared headed for Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday, after an Arlington Circuit Court judge upheld the state law.

Judge Emery N. Hosmer let stand a trial court's $15 fine levied against Faith Bissell, 43, of 3007 N. 3d st., Arlington.

"It seems clear that the power to require such segregation is reserved to the states or to the people under the 10th amendment unless otherwise prohibited by the Constitution of the United States," declared Judge Hosmer.

Miss Bissell, who is white, was arrested last Nov. 1 at Jefferson Junior High School when she sat in the Negro section of the auditorium at a political meeting. She said she did it to test validity of segregation at political meetings.

Miss Bissell's lawyer, Edmund D. Campbell, said earlier that if the circuit court ruled against his client he would appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court, and then, if necessary, to the U. S. Supreme Court. He was in New York yesterday and could not be reached for further comment.

Judge Hosmer noted that although the doctrine of "separate but equal" has been repudiated in the field of public education, there have been no decisions from the Supreme Court indicating that separation of races at a public meeting is unconstitutional, if accommodations are equal.

"A trial court is neither designed nor equipped to perform the function of repudiating the old and putting on the new," he said. "In this case the Supreme Court will follow the law as stated by the Supreme Court in Plessy vs. Ferguson, supra, and leave any repudiation, if and when it is to be made, to the Supreme Court."

In the case of Plessy vs. Ferguson the Supreme Court held that a Louisiana statute requiring railway companies to provide equal but separate accommodations for white and colored persons "was not in conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment," the judge pointed out.

38a 1957

JUDGE J. WAITES WARING

Where Are They Now?

Newsweek 7.27

NEW YORK CITY—Judge J. Waties Waring, who handed down the landmark decisions in the South that opened primaries to Negro voters in 1947-48, now lives on Fifth Avenue here. A tenth-generation South Carolina aristocrat, his old Colonial house in Charleston was stoned and he himself shunned for attacking white supremacy. Old friends blamed his Yankee second wife; he was called "the loneliest man in town." His last year on the bench, 1951, Waring dissented in the Clarendon County school case and had the satisfaction of seeing his stand sustained when the Supreme Court outlawed school segregation in 1954. The Warings have visited Charleston only once since they retired here—for an NAACP dinner in 1954 when they stayed with Negro friends. Active in civil-rights groups, the judge says: "I'm not a young man any more [76], but I've been extremely fortunate to be in a great social movement. We're finally beginning to appreciate the Declaration of Independence."

38b 1957

ALABAMA

First Fist Fight Occurs On Integrated Bus Line

Call Fri. 4-26-57 P.1

Kansas City, Mo.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Three Negroes and a white man who spent the night in a Montgomery jail for starting the first mixed fist fight on the recently integrated buses were released on bail Wednesday morning.

Police said the incident was fostered when James Grice took offense to the Negroes sitting towards the front of the bus and asked three women, Josephine Boldin, Annie Burch, and Johnnie Mae Eaves, to move.

Grice said the trio was sitting three seats from the bus driver and when he asked that they move to the rear, Josephine Boldin slapped him.

Then the swing-fest began and the bus driver who tried to break things up, succeeded in throwing all four participants off his bus.

The ruffled four went to the police station and swore out warrants against each other. Police listened to their conflicting stories and placed them all in jail.

The battle was the first violence reported in the buses during the past three months.

The buses have been integregated since the end of last year when the U. S. Supreme court's ruling to outlaw segregation was put into effect. Montgomery Negroes had carried on a year-long bus boycott before the integration order.

Defender Sat. 5-11-57 Chicago Ill P. 2

Tribute To Boycott Leaders

MRS. ROSA PARKS (center) and Rev. Robert Graetz (left) are presented citations by the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity for their leadership in the successful bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala. Citations were awarded as a highlight of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity Southern regional meet in Montgomery. Representing the fraternity is Robert L. Williams (right) the organization's national director of social action.

Challenge Accepted

Afro American

We think Mr. and Mrs. Carl Baldwin of Birmingham were wise in accepting the challenge of U.S. Judge Seybourn H. Lynn by appealing their nailhead station seating case. Sat. 5-11-57

The Baldwins, en route to Milwaukee, had been arrested in the Birmingham railroad terminal for refusing to be segegated. Baltimore, Md

They sought relief from this abuse of police power by asking the Federal court to declare unconstitutional a section of the Alabama constitution requiring segregated waiting rooms in railroad stations. P. 4

Before the case could come up in Federal court, the City of Birmingham hastily dismissed the police court charges against the couple.

Then in Federal court, the city's argument that the Baldwins now had no case, was accepted as valid by Judge Lynn.

Judge Lynn, in his ruling, warned the city it lacked authority to compel segregation of interstate railroad passengers, but he went further.

He chastized the plaintiffs for "cluttering up" his court with "needless and baseless" litigation, advised them that an appeal of his decision would be "useless" and then assessed them with the cost of the suit.

The Baldwins might well have let the matter rest there, since they had succeeded in firmly establishing the principle that no policeman has the right to molest colored interstate passengers seated in waiting rooms previously reserved for white persons.

That was all they had been crusading for and they won.

But to have a Federal judge impugn their motives and label a legitimate action to secure enjoyment of constitutional rights as "baseless" was too much for any real American to take.

We not only think that the Baldwin appeal is right and proper, but are equally confident the 5th circuit Court of Appeals will give Judge Lynn a badly needed lesson on just what is "useless" litigation.

Couple files $505,00 suit in bus fight

Afro-American Baltimore Md. Sat. 5-18-57

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A $505,000 suit against the Tamiami Trail Tours, Inc., here, was filed last week in Federal Court on behalf of two colored persons allegedly injured in a bus when a fight erupted following their refusal to move from the "front seat."

Principals in the suit are residents of the British West Indies and the Tamiami bus company. The Bullocks are asking 250,000 each for alleged injuries received during a fight that broke out after they refused to move from their seats on the bus.

* * *

THE BULLOCKS say they rode "in a front seat" on the bus from Tampa to Perry, Fla. Upon reaching Perry, they stated that T. H. Poppell got on the vehicle and ordered them to move from their seats. They refused to move, the petition asserts, and a fight followed. They were then ordered off the bus by the driver, Carl C. Cunningham of Tampa, according to the suit.

The court action was originally filed in New York, but transferred here under protests of the Bullocks, who felt that prejudice would enter into the suit if heard in this state.

Birmingham Still Ignoring Interstate Ruling

Bishop Ordered Out of Waiting Room!

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Bishop R. R. Wright, president of the Bishops' Council of the AME Church, felt the sting of Birmingham's court-tested waiting room jim-crow practices.

He was en route from Philadelphia to New Orleans and had a two-hour lay-over between trains. So he made it to the general waiting room.

A smiling, kindly speaking police officer, approached him, and asked him to move over to the "colored" waiting room, the Bishop said.

Bishop Wright told the Courier he reminded the policeman that he was interstate passenger, but would leave if ordered to do so.

He said the officer related to him that in Birmingham there were separate waiting rooms for Negro and white passengers.

Birmingham Chief of Police Jamie Moore, when questioned about waiting room seating at the Terminal Station, confirmed the report that dual waiting room practices were being enforced as city law.

Jan. 25, Carl L. Baldwin and his wife filed a suit in federal court challenging the constitutionality of Birmingham's dual waiting room practices. They had been arrested Dec. 22, 1956 for sitting in the general waiting room. U. S. Judge Seybourn H. Lynne dismissed the case March 29. April 12 the dismissal was appealed to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. It is still pending.

Judge Lynne in dismissing the case said: "There is no ordinance of the city of Birmingham or of the State of Alabama which purports to compel interstate Negro passengers to occupy waiting rooms designated 'Colored'."

Bishop Wright Ousted From Waiting Room

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(ANP)—Bishop R. R. Wright, president of the powerful AME Church Bishops Council and presiding bishop of the Eighth AME Episcopal District, stated last week that he was ousted from a general waiting room in this city's railroad terminal while enroute from Philadelphia to New Orleans.

The bishop made known his experience in his remarks at the noon retreat of the Summer Short Course of the Ninth Episcopal Church in session at Daniel Payne college here.

The bishop said the incident occurred as he was waiting in a terminal here during a two-hour layover. He said he seated himself in the general waiting room as he had done before when a policeman approached him and demanded that he leave the terminal because he might start a riot.

Chief of Police Jamie Moore confirmed the observation with the statement this city's dual waiting room practice was being enforced as city law.

Bishop Wright said he immediately returned his ticket and made plane reservations to New Orleans.

Magic City Ruling Asked By Negroes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 10 (AP)—A group of Negroes seeking an end to city bus segregation laws today asked U.S. District Court to enter a summary judgement in their favor.

Attorney Arthur Shores filed the motion for the 21 Neogres' each of whom was fined $50 and costs March 21 for violating the city's racial segregation laws.

They were convicted of riding in front sections of city buses reserved for white persons, as prescribed by city ordinance.

No date has been set for hearing the motion.

Bus Boycott Lawyer Arrested

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Atty. Fred D. Gray Jr., lawyer in the Montgomery bus boycott and Tuskegee crusade cases, was arrested here Friday for sitting in the "white" waiting room at the local [illegible]. Mr. Gray was headed for a speaking engagement in Boston, Mass. He was released under $2000 bond on a charge of "disorderly conduct." Trial date was not set.

Negro Fined In Bus Case

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 19 (AP)—A Chicago Negro woman was fined $25 and costs in police court today in a case arising from her refusal to leave a "wrong bus" here.

Bertha Jackson, about 50, was convicted of disorderly conduct.

Patrolman W. W. Self said he was called to the Greyhound Terminal by an unidentified man who said there was trouble aboard a bus. He said the woman was sitting in a bus and a ticket check revealed it was the wrong one.

The woman's ticket called for her to board a bus for Tallahassee, Fla.; in Birmingham. The bus she boarded was bound for Atlanta, Ga.

Birmingham RR Waiting Room Case Due

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The celebrated "Waiting Room Case" is scheduled to be heard at 10 A. M., Oct. 16, before the U. S. Court of Appeals in Montgomery, Ala.

On March 4, 1956, Federal Judge Seybourn H. Lynne dismissed a complaint filed by Carl L. Baldwin and his wife, Alexinia, challenging the dual waiting rooms at the Birmingham Terminal Station.

The Baldwins, who had purchased tickets in Birmingham for Milwaukee, Wis., were arrested by Birmingham police on Dec. 22 as they sat in the waiting room marked "For White." Police charged them with "disorderly conduct."

In Recorder's Court, Feb. 12, on motion of the city attorney, the disorderly charges were nol prossed. The complaint was filed in Federal Court on Jan. 25.

One More Shaky Prop

Montgomery officials, whose inept handling of the recent bus unpleasantness gave the former Confederate capital an international black eye, have learned no better.

Last week a young couple carried two children to see animals in the zoo at city operated Oak Park.

They were promptly seized by police, thrown in jail and charged with violating an ordinance passed by Montgomery's city commission on June 4, 1957.

The ordinance made any colored person liable to a $100 fine or six months in jail or both if he entered or used any public park, public place, swimming pool or beach, excepting those assigned to his race.

The joker in this legal sleight-of-hand is that there are no public parks with zoos, swimming pools, beaches or anything else "assigned" to colored citizens in Montgomery.

The framers of the 1957 ordinance therefore not only ignored the 1955 Supreme Court's Nov. 7 decision outlawing segregated public parks, they didn't even bother to comply with the 1896 court's discredited "separate but equal" illusion.

As lawyers, they knew that the law was clearly unconstitutional and would fall of its own weight if tested in the courts.

But defiantly they passed it anyway.

Not daring to have the ordinance challenged, a police judge hastily dismissed the charges against the couple.

But Montgomery's 50,000 citizens, now sure of their power under the calm leadership of the Rev. Martin Luther King, must not allow the matter to drop there.

As we see it, they have no choice but to take a test case to the U.S. District Court and thus knock one more shaky prop from beneath the wobbly structure of enforced segregation.

Alabama Minister Arrested For Moving Jim-crow Sign

Birmingham, Ala. (ANP) — The Rev. Theodore N. Nelson, 51-year-old Baptist minister, was arrested recently and charged with disorderly conduct in connection with moving a racial sign on a Birmingham Transit Company bus. Trial was set for September 6.

The minister was one of the 22 open-seat bus riders December 26, whose arrest led to a suit filed in Federal Court February 14, attacking Birmingham's bus seat segregation laws. The case is expected to be heard on a motion for summary judgment during the fall temr.

Rev. Nelson indicated that he recent arrest came after the sign was moved up a seat, with his sitting behind it, and the operator carrying it back to its original location, leaving him in front of it in the section reserved for "white".

He said there were no white passengers aboard the bus at the time and that all the seats in the "colored" section had been taken. He said he was arrested when he refused to "move back.' 'He is represented by Atty. Orzell Billingsley, Jr.

SEGREGATION DISPUTE

Advertiser

Flomaton Chief Reports Attack By 2 Negro Men

Montgomery, Ala.
Sat. 2-23-57

FLOMATON, Ala., Feb. 22 (AP)—The Flomaton police chief reported he was attacked by two Negro men today when he asked two Negro women to move from a white area at a crowded railroad station.

C. C. (Red) Hemby said he was hit on the back of his head with his blackjack during a scuffle. His injuries were reported as slight.

The two men were charged with assault and battery and assault with intent to murder. They were placed in the Escambia County Jail under $2,000 bond each.

Sheriff Otis Emmons said the two gave their names as Joe White, 29, and George Allen, 26, both of Pensacola, Fla.

Emmons said Hemby was called to the Louisville & Nashville station, a major switching point between Montgomery and Mobile, by railroad officials when the women were found sitting on a bench outside the area marked for Negroes.

Hemby gave this account:

He asked the women to move to the Negro area and the two men, standing nearby, asked him to whom he was talking.

The chief replied that he was talking to the women, and the men told him, "No, you're not. You're talking to us."

They then grabbed him and a scuffle started. A 75-year-old white man, Riley McCurdy, tried to help Hemby but was pushed aside by the fighting.

Hemby hit one of the Negroes four times on the head with the butt of his pistol. They took it away from him and laid it on a suitcase.

Advertiser

The pair then grabbed him and hit him with the billie.

He managed to get to his gun and held it on them until the sheriff and Highway Patrolman Johnny Baldwin arrived.

U.S. Judge Bars Negroes' Alabama Suit

Constitution
Tues. 3-5-57
Atlanta, Ga.

BIRMINGHAM, March 4 (AP)—U.S. District Judge Seybourn H. Lynne today threw out a Negro attack on Alabama's railroad waiting room segregation law as an attempt to use the federal courts for propaganda purposes.

His action, unless overruled, means that Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin will have to carry their case through the state courts, should they decide to press it further.

The Baldwins had asked Lynne to declare the waiting-room law unconstitutional, and to enjoin city police from enforcing segregation at the Birmingham Terminal Station.

GROWING LIST

"This is but another in the growing list of cases wherein both the tutored and untutored apparently entertain the mistaken notion that the proper function of the federal courts is propaganda rather than judicature," Lynne's opinion said.

Lynne was the dissenting judge n the two-to-one federal court ruling that Montgomery's bus segregation law was unconstitutional. The ruling was upheld by he U.S. Supreme Court.

The Baldwins were arrested on disorderly conduct charges at the station last December. The charges have since been dropped and city attorneys argued that there was no case to be brought before the federal judge.

FACTUAL CLAIM

"Stripped of excess of verbiage and argumentative innuendo," said Lynne, "the complaint's factual averments state only that the Negroes were arrested by police while sitting in interstate and white passengers' waiting room, while holding tickets entitling them to transportation as passengers in interstate commerce."

He said oral arguments of attorneys for the Baldwins failed to clarify the theory of the complaint.

Defendants were the city commission, Alabama Public Service Commission and Birmingham Terminal Co.

Waiting Room Race Ruling Likely Monday In U.S. Court

Advertiser Sun. 3-3-57
Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2 (AP)—United States Dist. Judge Seybourne H. Lynne may rule Monday on a motion to dismiss a suit attacking railroad waiting room segregation in Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin, a Negro couple, have asked for a Federal Court ruling that the state waiting room law is unconstitutional. They also asked Lynne to enjoin the city from enforcing segregation at the terminal station here.

Atty. Joe F. Johnston, representing the Birmingham Terminal Co. argued yesterday that there is no controversy before the court because disorderly conduct charges against the Baldwins have been dropped.

Johnston called the complaint nothing "but an academic attempt" to get the court to rule on constitutionality of the state law concerning waiting rooms.

"It is beyond the scope of the federal jurisdiction to render a decree on a fundamental abstraction." he declared.

The Baldwins were arrested when they refused to move from a waiting room designated for "interstate and white passengers." They had bought tickets to Milwaukee, Wis.

Legal moves also were made in another Birmngham racal case, the suit of 21 Negroes attacking the city's bus segregation law.

Atty. Arthur D. Shores filed an amended motion charging that Birmingham Transit Co., acting in concert with the City Commission, had continued an alleged conspiracy to deprive Negro bus riders of their constitutional rights.

The defendant, Birmingham Transit Co., has stopped its buses and called police officers of the city of Birmingham and for the purpose of arresting plaintiffs, has alloewd, caused and-or participated in the arrest of these plaintiffs, all in violaton of their constitutional rights," the amended complaint asserted.

The 21 Negroes are to be tried in Recorders Court March 18 for violation of the city's bus segregation ordinance.

NEGROES' SUIT STUDIED

Commercial Appeal
Memphis, Tenn.

Segregation Laws Are Being Challenged In Case

BIRMINGHAM, March 1. — (UP)—United States Dist. Judge Seybourn Lynne said Friday he would rule Monday on motions to dismiss a suit challenging the constitutionality of segregation laws in Birmingham terminal station waiting rooms.

Judge Lynne took under advisement motions filed by the City Commission, the State Public Service Commission and the Terminal Station Co. The suit was filed by Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin, Birmingham Negroes, who were arrested Dec. 22 for sitting in the white waiting room. Disorderly conduct charges against them were dropped by the city in Recorders Court Monday without explanation.

Defense attorney Joe Johnson argued any ruling would be "abstract" because no controversy was involved. He said the city's action in deciding not to prosecute had eliminated it.

Judge Decries 'Propaganda' Use Of Court

Post-Herald, Birmingham, Ala.
Tues. 3-5-57

Negro-Instigated Complaint Called Not Sufficient

BY JIM STRICKLAND

A Negro couple's complaint against Alabama waiting room segregation laws was thrown out of U. S. District Court here yesterday, and the judge called it 'baseless.'

Judge Seybourn H. Lynne observed in his memorandum opinion: "No good purpose would be served by prolonging this baseless litigation!"

The Negroes who filed the complaint—Carl L. and Alexinia Baldwin, 625 Second-st, w.—were given 20 days by Judge Lynne in which to file an amended complaint if they so desired.

"Stripped of excess verbiage and argumentative innuendo," the opinion said, "a summary of the factual averments in capsule form is as follows:

"On Dec. 22, 1956, plaintiffs, Negro citizens, holding tickets entitling them to transportation as passengers in interstate commerce, while seating in a waiting room of the Birmingham Terminal Station designated "Interstate and White Passengers," were placed under arrest and confined in jail by police officers of the City of Birmingham.

"Mere reference to the silance of the complaint as to the character of the charge on which plaintiffs were arrested is to demonstrate its insufficiency," he said.

Judge Lynne quoted from Milton's "Paradise Lost" in describing "forensic efforts" to defend the complaint:

"With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout,
"Confusion worse confounded."

Commenting on the 20 days allowed in which to amend the complaint, the opinion said: "It seems incredible that an effort will be made to amend . . ."

The opinion called the case "another in the growing list of cases wherein both the tutored and the untutored apparently entertain the mistaken motion that the proper function of the federal courts is propaganda rather than judicature."

'BASELESS LITIGATION' — Judge Seybourn Lynne.

Defendants in the case — Birmingham City Commissiners, Alabama Public Service Commission and Birmingham Terminal Co.—had argued Friday on their motions to dismiss the complaint.

Judge Lynne's action yesterday was to affirm the separate motions and dismiss the complaint.

The case was filed Jan. 25, about one month after the arrest of the Negro couple. They had asked in their complaint for a temporary injunction restraining the defendants from enforcing Section 186, Title 48 of the 1940 Code of Alabama, which pertains to railroad waiting rooms

Also requested was a final judgment defining the legal rights of all parties to the complaint, a declaration that the state law was unconstitutional and a permanent injunction against its enforcement.

Attys. Demetrius C. Newton and Oscar W. Adams Jr. represented the Baldwin couple.

In their motions to dismiss the defendants called the complaint "academic, frivolous and without definite averments." The City said the couple was "tilting against a windmill."

City charges against the couple—for sitting in the waiting room—were dropped Feb. 25, on recommendation of the city attorney's office.

Judge Lynne yesterday said the federal judicial power extends only to "cases" or "controversies" in the constitutional sense.

"No judge of a federal court has a right to adjudicate a difference or dispute of a hypothetical or abstract character," he said.

He concluded, "The long and the short of the matter i ha a mistake apparently was made in arresting these plaintiffs. Charges pending against them have been dismissed.

"No good purpose would be served by prolonging this baseless litigation."

The charges have been dropped and city attorneys argued that there was no case to be brought before the federal judge.

"Stripped of excess of verbiage and argumentative innuendo," said Lynne, "the complaint's factual averments state only that the Negroes were rrested by police while sitting in ainter-stte and white passengers' waiting room, while holding tickets entitling them to transportation as passengers in interstate commerce."

He said that oral arguments of attorneys for the Baldwins failed to clarify the theory of the complaint.

Defendants were City Commission, Alabama Public Service Commission, nd Birmingham Terminal Co.

Negro Suit Tossed Out As Propaganda Move

BIRMINGHAM, March 4 (AP)—U. S. Dist. Judge Seybourn H. Lynne today threw out a Negro attack on Alabama's railroad waiting room segregation law as an attempt to use the federal courts for propaganda purposes.

His action, unless overruled, means that Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin will have to carry their case through the state courts, should they decide to press it further.

The Baldwins had asked Lynne to declare the waiting room law unconstitutional, and to enjoin city police from enforcing segregation at Birmingham Terminal Station.

"This is but another in the growing list of cases wherein both the tutored and untutored apparently entertain the mistaken notion that the proper function of the federal courts is propagand rather than judicature," Lynne's opinion said.

Lynne was the disenting judge in the two-to-one federal court ruling that Montgomery's bus segregation law was unconstitutional. The ruling was upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Baldwins were arrested on disorderly conduct charges at the Terminal Station last December.

night to be held at one of the largest churches in the city.

The people started gathering at the church about 3 p.m., and by 7 p.m., when the meeting started, people had packed the auditorium.

Hundreds and thousands were out in the streets—more than 5,000 persons were assembled together that evening for that meeting.

It was in this meeting that these thousands of persons unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

* * *

FIRST, COLORED bus riders would not resume riding the buses until more courtesy had been extended by the bus operators;

Second, until the seating arrangement had been changed to a first come. first serve. basis, with colored passengers seating from the rear of the bus to the front and the white passengers seating from the front to rear, with no reserved seats for any passengers;

MRS. ROSA PARKS — Her arrest sparked the bus boycott.

The protest was to bring voluntarily adopt their own rules requiring segregation, the courts will be less likely to disturb the practice," Owen explained.

The resolution called on the commisisoners to "advise with the carriers in the respective states of their jurisdictions and suggest to them the propriety and, in fact, the necessity for the voluntary adoption by them of such reasonable rules, regulations and practices as in their opinion may carry out the purposes and spirit of this resolution and maintain the traditions, usages and way of life to which our people are accustomed by requiring the segregation of the races . . ."

BUS FIRMS ARE URGED TO ADOPT OWN LAWS

Action Proposed To Continue Segregation

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 12.—(UP)—C. C. 'Jack' Owen, president of the state Public Service Commission, Friday urged all bus companies to adopt voluntary Jim Crow laws to continue segregation on public transits.

Mr. Owen asked the transportation companies to enforce their own rules and regulations regarding separation of the race in an effort to get around the Supreme Court decision which declared segregation on buses unconstitutional.

Mr. Owen directed the carriers' attention to the resolution

THE MONTGOMERY STORY

Early Beginnings

Continuing the inner story of the Montgomery bus boycott as seen through the eyes of the boycott leaders.

By the Rev. Martin L. King, Jr.

Feeling the need for some organization to guide the bus protest in Montgomery, ministers from all denominations, along with various civic leaders, came together one afternoon—December 5, 1956, and organized what is now known as the "Montgomery Improvement Association."

It has been this association, under the leadership of some of the most dedicated ministers of the community, along with many laymen and civic leaders, that has guided and directed the protest from the beginning.

THESE MINISTERS, along with the civic leaders, called a mass meeting for that Monday

Third, until colored bus drivers were hired on predominantly colored lines.

These were the three basic proposals. They stood at the center of the movement.

* * *

I MIGHT say that by asking for a seating arrangement on a first come, first served basis, we were not compromising on the question of segregation.

We realized that this would only be a temporary alleviation of the problem, knowing full well that the ultimate solution would come through total integration on the buses.

We felt that we had a case which would go through the courts and we would change the law through the court case.

about better conditions within the present law. As you know, the City Commission was not even willing to grant that as an improved condition within the present law.

So the one-day protest moved out into an indefinite protest which lasted for many, many months.

Owen Urges Carriers To Fix Own Rules For Segregation

President C. C. (Jack) Owen of mission yesterday called on all transportation companies in the state to adopt voluntarily their own rules requiring racial segregation.

Owen said this strategy was agreed upon last week in Biloxi at a meeting of the Southeastern Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners.

"A resolution was adopted to the effect that members of the association feel that if the carriers adopted last week by the Southeastern Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners at its convention in Biloxi, Miss.

The resolution called on transportation companies in the South to voluntarily adopt rules of their own, requiring segregation so "the Federal courts will be less likely to disturb the practice."

Mr. Owen said voluntary adoption of rules by transportation companies would insure "that the journeys of passengers may be peaceful, quiet and comfortable and will not be disturbed by discomforts, unpleasantness, riots or breach of the peace."

Slippers In Heaven All Right But Shoes Needed On Earth, Says Dr. King

Journal & Guide 3-9
Sat. 3-9-57
Norfolk, Va.

RICHMOND, Va. — "Religion must be concerned, not only with silver slippers over yonder, but with people having shoes to wear over here," Dr. Martin Luther King, declared here Wednesday in a special message.

Speaking to 4,000 persons at Virginia Union University's annual Week of Prayer observance, Dr. King said a religion that concerns itself exclusively with symbols of the hereafter while ignoring the evils of society is a dead, dry, do nothing religion.

* * *

"I AM CONCERNED not only about milk and honey flowing in the streets of heaven, but about people on earth having to go to bed hungry; not only about the mansions of gold in heaven, but the hundreds of thousandds forced to live in slums here on earth... slums that damn, social and economic conditions that condemn. Any religion that ignores the material well-being of the people is unrealistic and opium."

* * *

DR. KING SPOKE on the topic: "Remember Who You Are.' He said the underlying question behind the conflict between totalitarian nations and democracies is based on the question: "What is man?"

The noted spiritual leader cited the widespread disagreements reached when experts sought to answer this question. The naturalists, he said, think man is simply an animal, others say man is a "cosmic accident."

* * *

DR. KING SAID man is an animal, injected with the spirit and that through misuse of freedom man has become a sinner and is "in need of God's grace."

Citing the parable of the prodigal son, he said nations of the western civilization have "gone into the far country of discrimination and segregation and has trampled 16 million fellow citizens, Dr. King said in his only reference to the race issue.

* * *

MODERN MAN has become so fascinated with his scientific genius that he has left God behind, Dr. King declared in his message on Thursday.

Dr. King said man must go back and rediscover certain moral principles or he will destroy himself with his own weapons.

Dr. King spoke from the topic: "Going Forward By Going Backward."

He said:

* * *

"WE HAVE adopted an attitude that right and wrong are relative, according to our appetites, our likes and dislikes—That there is nothing absolutely wrong or absolutely right."

"This attitude is destroying the foundations of our civilization and producing moral cowardice," he asserted, and added:

* * *

"IT IS WRONG to be unjust, to be dishonest, to hate. It is wrong now and was wrong 2,000 years ago—it is wrong in India, in New York City and in Richmond, Va."

He continued:

"Modern man has adopted a pragmatic test of right and wrong, based on whatever we can get away with. We have moved from the Darwinian theory of survival of the fittest to a theory of survival of the slickest. Everybody is busy obeying the 11th commandment—'do not get caught.' "

* * *

THE FAMED spiritual leader said the moral laws of the universe are jusst as basic and binding as the physical laws. He said civilization, in order to survive, must go back and rediscover these moral principles.

The Week of Prayer program, sponsored by the School of Religion of Virginia Union University, closed with a sermon by Dr. King at 1 a.m. Friday, in the Belgian Building.

The Week of Prayer opened Monday, Feb. 25, with a sermon by Dr. Mark C. Ebersole, associate professor of religion and chaplain at Bucknell University. The Rev. Allix B. James is dean of Union's School of Religion.

Rev. King's Vision

Pro-Segregation

The Rev. Martin Luther King told his congregation Sunday that he's heard Heavenly voices directing him to preach the gospel, stand up for truth, and stand up for righteousness.

Before his vision, he admitted going to bed many nights frightened to death.

Mobs bombed out his home, attempted to bomb his church, shattered his windows with buckshot and just last week threw on his porch a 12-stick bundle of dynamite which failed to go off.

Baltimore Md.

"Tell Montgomery they can keep shooting and I'm going to stand up to them; tell Montgomery they can keep bombing and I'm going to stand up to them," he told his congregation.

"If I had to die tomorrow morning I would die happy because I've been to the mountain top and I've seen the promised land and it's going to be here in Montgomery. The old Montgomery is passing away and segregation is dying."

Sat. 2-9-57

Montgomery's White Citizens Council made an awful mistake in attempting to destroy the Christian church and terrorize preachers.

All they have done is to arouse increased opposition which comes naturally, to prophets and clergymen of all ages, who believe they have talked with God and do His will.

Before the bombing Martin Luther King Jr. was a timid preacher.

Today's he's a St. Paul or a St. Stephen or a St. Peter ready to give his life without fear in his fight for freedom.

The Boycott Spreads

Pro-Segregation

If the colored people of South Africa knew anything about conducting a successful boycott, they didn't stage one until after the Rev. M. L. King and his 50,000 people of Montgomery showed them how.

Baltimore Md.
P. 4

Up to now the South African boycott is in two phases.

Africans are boycotting the city beer halls which take in $3 million in profits for Johannesburg each year. Before the boycott, a daily average of 35,000 patronized these halls and now none is being served.

Sat. 2-9-57

And secondly they have been refusing to ride the buses because of a 14 cents a week per passenger hike in the fares.

Beneath all this is the fact that the colored people were moved nine miles from the center of the city and for four weeks 60,000 of them have been walking nine miles to work and nine miles home each day.

Manifestly when a man walks that distance, he is not in the best of condition to do a full day's work.

Johannesburg industry is slowly grinding to a halt.

And what's more frightening to white masters, the once divided colored people of different tribes and colors are now finding a wonderful new solidarity.

South Africa which has compelled its despised citizens of color to do a lot of things is alarmed at the discovery that it cannot make them drink beer or ride a bus.

Once these Africans wake up to the value of concerted action they will be on their way to secure the right to vote, to work for a wage above their present $1 a day, and the right to enjoy freedom and human dignity.

Rev. King And Christianity

Editor, The Advertiser:

In answer to Helen L. Colston's letter appearing in your paper of Feb. 8.

Advertiser
Sun. 2-17-57
Montgomery, Ala.

We doubt Martin Luther King Jr. having heard either the voice of God or the devil. He is too busy reaping rich rewards. Any student of the Bible is aware that he is not teaching or preaching the Christian religion. God is the only ruler of this universe and he teacher love, which embraces humilitay, long-suffering, kindness, peace, and all the qualities that go to uplift the human race. King teaches qualities such as hate, fear, greed, self-will, dissatisfaction, and all that goes to break down peace and harmony.

When the Negro can become proud of his race and not ashamed that he is black, then he will stand up for complete separation of races where the good qualities of his race can be counted.

She said, "We work, pay all required taxes and just want to enjoy all of the benefits of these taxes." The white man pays 91% of the taxes, the Negro 9%. The Negro receives 86% of the welfare and the whites 14%. It seems the Negro race is getting more than its share. The Negro has forgotten to count his blessings.

MARTHA BLOCK.

Greenville, Ala.

'Don't sign your rights away' King's warning to followers

Pro-Segregation
Sat. 2-9-57
Birmingham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—"Don't sign your rights away," was the warning given by the Rev. Martin Luther King last week following reports that Montgomery residents had been approached by persons seeking to set up an all-colored bus line.

The Montgomery boycott leader's warning was made after several colored persons were approached on buses and asked to sign petitions carried by whites who professed interest in setting up an all-colored line.

Montgomery city authorities have already asked for a Federal court ruling on a petition of a group of whites to organize and operate private "club" bus lines in the city.

DR. KING SAYS HE MAY MEET WITH NIXON

Daily World Fri. 3-29-57

Atlanta Ga. P.1

By THADDEUS T. STOKES

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. of Montgomery, Ala. revealed Wednesday afternoon he expects to have an audience with Vice President Richard M. Nixon sometime in the near future. It is expected he will discuss racial conditions in the south with the vice president.

King made the statement during an interview while he was in Atlanta enroute to his home, from Ghana, Africa, where he attended the celebration of the recently obtained independence of that country.

Nixon invited King to "come see me" when they met at the celebration in Ghana.

Dr. King and his wife went to the celebration after receiving a personal invitation from Prime Minister Kwame Nkruman.

King explained how he "experienced the greatest moment of my life" when he witnessed the Union Jack (British Flag) being replaced by Ghana's flag. "To me that symbolized the end of an old way of life and the beginning of a new way."

The Union Jack represented colonialism and racial segregation. The new flag represents freedom and justice without regards to race, color of national origin. "I shall never forget the expressions on the faces nor the cry of freedom of those people," continued King.

King, the internationally famous Negro leader of the Montgomery Ala., bus boycott went on to say he felt the United States is determined to win the friendship and mutual goodwill of Africa, particularly Ghana, before it is infiltrated with Communism. "The United States will not make the mistake it did in Asia."

However, King said Prime Minister Nkrumah told him that his country would never be able to accept the American ideology of freedom and democracy fully until America settles its own internal racial strife and "treat our colored brothers as other citizens."

King explained that "racial upheavals and segregation in America is hurting our international relations."

Daily World P. 6

On comparing racial conditions in America with Africa, he declared that colonialism as expressed there is not basically different from racial segregation here. The theory of race superority is similar. In this sense our racial problem in America is akin to those in Africa and Asia.

Only the American Negro is more advanced in literacy, economics, culture and politics.

The dark people of Africa and Asia have been exploited with unsoudly injustices. He said Nigeria perhaps the next country to receive its independence, is much more poverty strickened than Ghana. "It is depressing and apalling. Natives have been exploited to a tragic point."

On giving his impression of Ghana and its leaders, King said he felt that the new nation had great possibilities. "I was impressed with the competence and dedication of the prime minister and his official family. Without such dedication corruption could easily beset the progress of any new nation. However, I feel that Prime Minister Nkrumah will keep it at a minimum."

King said that Ghana will not have it easy because literacy is at a low ebb, living standards are low and they will have difficulty with their economy because it is basically an agriculture one-crop country. "Their greatest income is derived from exportation of cocoa, about 60 percent of the world's supply."

"This country must stress free education, raise the living standard, and industrialize itself. America, particularly the American Negro can contribute to the growth of Ghana by sending professional technical, skilled and educational aid as imigrants, "said the Montgomery leader.

"We have a responsibility to see that Ghana survives as a free nation. If it fails then we must take some of the responsibility for its failure," he said.

King and his wife stopped in Rome, Geneva, Paris and London "to see the historical sights." In London, he talked with the prime minister and addressed a group. He and his wife were out of this country 25 days.

The minister said beside his trip to Washington, D. C. within a month, he will be engaged in keeping speaking dates throughout the country for the next several months.

The System

Afro American

Instalment three of the story behind the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott as told by one of its leaders. P. 7

By the Rev. Martin L. King, Jr.

There comes a time when people get tired of being trampled over by the iron feet of oppression.

There comes a time when people get tired to being plunged across the abyss of exploitation where they experience the bleakness of man in despair.

The story of Montgomery is a story of 50,000 colored people who were tired of injustice and exploitation, who were willing to substitute tired feet for tired souls and walk, and walk, and walk until the sagging walls of segregation are crushed by the battering rams of historical necessity.

* * *

ONE OF the first practical problems that the ex-bus riders confronted, was that of working out some way to get around the city.

The problem was met first by having the colored taxicabs to furnish transportation through cheap jitney rates.

They were transporting the people for the same dime that the buses had been transporting them for.

This was immediately stopped by the police commissioner, for he sent out a notice that there was a minimum of forty-five cents that all of the taxis were to follow.

All the taxi companies that refused to cooperate would be fined and the taxi drivers would be arrested.

* * *

THIS BROUGHT about an immediate reply through the organization of the volunteer car pool.

Almost overnight more than 300 private cars were out on the job carrying people to and from work, and it was this system that furnished the transportation for the many, many ex-bus riders of the Montgomery community.

Even the commissioner had to admit, at a White Citizens Council meeting, that the transportation system of the Mongomery Improvement Association worked with military precision.

* * *

THE SYSTEM continued to grow and develop.

Some 20 or more station wagons were added.

They were on the job all day carrying the people to their various avenues of work free of charge. This system was carried on through contributions from persons in the community, through mass meetings, from the hundreds and thousands of people of good will all over the nation and all over the world—people who have sent in contributions, organizations that sent in contributions.

The Car Pool, along with the running of the office, ran about $5,000 a week. Through people of good will, we were able to carry on in the midst of the struggle.

M. L. King Pays $500 Fine; Drops Ala. Suit

Baltimore Md. Sat. 3-23-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Rev. Martin Luther King has agreed to dismiss his appeal to the Alabama Supreme Court from a $500 fine imposed upon him for the part he played in the Montgomery bus boycott.

Two white men, who had been accused of bombing Negro homes during the bus disturbances, were cleared of all charges.

Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford, in a prepared statement, announced the decision to drop the cases against the 89 Negroes charged with violating a state law which prohibits boycotting "without just cause or legal excuse." Charges against two white men, James D. York and Henry Alexander, indicted but never tried on charges of bombing a Negro taxi-stand and also with bombing the home of the Rev. D. Abernathy, one of the bus boycott leaders, were also dropped.

Chicago Def. Sat. 3-23-57

■

THE REMAINING two white men's cases were postponed after two other white men, charged with bombing Negro churches and crime similar to the latter two, were acquitted.

However, the conviction of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., only Negro defendant tried on boycotting charges, was allowed to stand. Circuit Court Solicitor William F. Thetford, the prosecutor, said Mr. King had agreed to pay the $500 fine levied against him and to withdraw his appeal now pending before the State Supreme Court.

"In view of the sentiment of the people of this community, especially since the Government is now using Federal troops to enforce integration in the schools of Little Rock, Ark.," the statement explained, "I see absolutely no possibility of securing a conviction in any of the remaining so-called bombing cases.

"Further trials in these cases would be a useless waste of the state's money and would only serve to rekindle and keep alive the racial hatreds which are better forgotten."

Dr. King Agrees to Pay $500 Fine; Drops Bus Boycott Appeal

Pittsburgh Courier 3-23-57

Dec Moines Iowa

Montgomery, Ala., — According to the state prosecution the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., the only Negro leaders tried as a result of the boycott of segregated city buses, had agreed to pay his $500 fine and dismiss an appeal now pending in the state supreme court. Dr. King was convicted of violating Alabama's anti-boycotting law.

All remaining criminal charges involving 91 cases growing out of the Montgomery bus boycott and subsequent bombing of Negro Churches and homes of boycott leaders were dismissed by the state Nov. 26.

Phila. 3-23-57

Fred Gray Trial Reset For Oct. 11

Post Herald p. 6

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 2 (U.P.)—The trial of Fred Gray, a Negro attorney charged with disorderly conduct, was postponed until Oct. 11 in Recorder's Court here this morning.

Birmingham

Gray, an outspoken integrationist, was scheduled to be tried today. He is charged with refusing to leave a white waiting room at Montgomery Municipal Airport last Friday. He was arrested and later released on $100 bond after a special officer at the airport ordered him to leave the waiting room. Several white persons reportedly had complained of Gray's presence.

Thurs. 10-3-57

Gray has been a spokesman for his race on several integration matters in the state, including the successful bus boycott here last year.

He declined to say why he requested the postponement.

Gray was waiting to board a plane for Boston at the time of the incident last week.

Charge is denied—

Judge dismisses Fred Gray case

News, Birm., Ala. P. 3

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 11 — (AP) — A disorderly conduct charge against Fred D. Gray for refusing to leave a white waiting room at the city airport here was dismissed today in recorder's court after the Negro attorney said he "did not mean to create a disturbance or cause trouble."

Judge D. Eugene Loe announced he took the action after a conference with Gray before court convened today, when the attorney assured him he had no intention of "creating an incident."

"The defendant appeared before me in my chambers just before court," the judge said, "and stated he arrived at Dannelly Field at 1:55 p.m. to catch a 2:04 p.m. flight to Atlanta, that his flight was late and the ticket agent told him to wait while he tried to get him on another flight.

Fri. 10-11-57

"He stated that when he sat in the white waiting room he had no intention of creating an incident. He further stated he did not know there was a colored waiting room at the time he sat down.

"HE ASSURED ME he was sorry the incident took place and he did not intend to create a disturbance or cause trouble. Based on this statement together with investigation and recommendation of the city prosecutor, Dave Crosland, I am dismissing the case."

Gray made national headlines about a year ago in a draft board dispute and was legal spokesman for his race in the Negro boycott of Montgomery's segregated buses last year.

Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Hershey, National Selective Service director, intervened after the attorney's draft board called him up for induction Gray had requested an exemption on the grounds that he was a part-time minister.

The dispute caused several Alabama Selective Service officials to resign.

BILL MIGHT CLOSE STATE JAILS TO CIVIL RIGHTS PRISONERS

Advertiser Wed. 8-7-57 p. 1
Montgomery, Ala.

A bill to give sheriffs and jailers in Alabama the right to refuse to take prisoners in federal civil rights cases was introduced yesterday in the State Senate.

It would amend an existing law to provide that the sheriff or jailor "may at his discretion" take federal prisoners under their custody. The law now makes it mandatory.

Federal prisoners are housed in county jails, particularly while awaiting trial.

Sen. Albert Boutwell of Jefferson County, who introduced the bill, said it was aimed at possible civil rights prosecutions. It would give a sheriff the right to refuse to take a defendant sentenced to jail for example, for contempt of court.

Boutwell said he didn't know where federal authorities would house prisoners if the sheriffs and jailers refused to take them.

THEY TOIL, THEY SPIN . . . both yarns and history . . . Rosa Lee Parks, martyr of the Montgomery bus boycott, meets Detroit's battled Ethel Watkins, another seamstress who stood her ground against odds. Mrs. Watkins figured in the infamous Cherrylawn housing incident.—Johnson Photo.

Boycott Figure

Courier p. 7
Oct. 8-31-59
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Why Mrs. Parks Left Ala.

By CHESTER HIGGINS

HOW COME Rosa Lee Parks had to leave Alabama? A place where she had lived all her life — she was born there like her mother before her.

Did she leave by choice, this spunky little woman whose stubborn refusal to budge from her seat when demanded by prejudiced whites on a Montgomery bus, Dec. 1, 1955, sparked the organizing of the Montgomery Improvement Association, the bitter unrelenting battle against bigotry and mistreatment by the bus concern, and the rise of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to the prominence of a national leader for freedom?

■

WHAT COMPELLED HER to dig up roots in Alabama, to leave behind friends and acquaintances she has known for a lifetime, and come to Detroit to take up a life among virtual strangers?

She told The Courier why:

"I lost my job, Jan. 1, 1955, a few weeks after I was arrested for so-called violation of bus segregation laws," she said.

"I was working at a big downtown department store as a seamstress. After I was arrested on this charge, the white trade began to fall off. I simply didn't have enough work to keep me busy and I was politely laid off.

"The Negroes couldn't furnish me with enough work. My husband worked, it is true, but I have been working at my profession for years, I couldn't just sit and idle away."

■

THIS SEEMED, on the surface, to be the whole truth. Underneath may lie a certain bitterness of experiences which followed the historic event—bitterness that may have sprung from her becoming lost, so to speak, in the shuffle of events following her heroic effort.

Mrs. Parks was seldom mentioned as the real and true leader of this struggle. Others more learned — not to take a thing from Dr. King — were ushered into the leadership and hogged the show.

They basked in the glory of the battle and the eventual victory, thereof. Perhaps, as a proud and sensitive personality, she resented standing in the wings while others received the huzzahs.

She woudn't talk about this. She talked about their choice of Detroit as a place to live. "Their" refers to her husband, R. A. Parks, 54, a barber for 35 years, and her mother, Mrs. Leona Curlee, 69.

He will be unable to take the barber's exams for six months, leading to the securing of a license to practice his trade in the state, he has been informed.

■

"MEANTIME, he will look around for something to do," Mrs. Parks said. "I have some sewing to do but can't until my sewing machine arrives with the other furniture."

The three live in a roomy upstairs apartment at 449 E. Euclid. Mrs. Parks' brother, Sylvester McCauley, of 2672 S. Deacon, helped to shape their decision to move here. He is their only other family.

Meanwhile, the question of why Mrs. Parks left Montgomery following the historic victory over bigotry which she herself launched remains.

On Rosa Parks

World (From The St. Louis (Mo.) Argus) p. 6

News sources reveal that Rosa Parks—the modest, self-effacing woman whose refusal to move back on an Alabama bus sparked a bus boycott that had international ramifications — has shaken the dust of her hometown, Montgomery, from her feet. The shy seamstress found that the skilled work which had previously been much in demand by her white customers, had dribbled to less than nothing. Wed. 8-21-57

It's probably understandable that although she's a highly skilled seamstress the whites had no desire to do further business with a woman whose indominable spirit ignited the blaze of a world-acclaimed rebellion that spawned the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy and others equally as militant, though not as colorful. Birm, Ala.

And while deeply sympathetic, her Negro neighbors and friends could in no wise afford to hire Rosa Parks to do some fancy needle-pointing. Therefore her removal, this week, to the City of Detroit where job opportunities are better, accompanied by her mother and husband.

But we wonder whether Rosa Parks' move to Detroit was the proper and fitting answer to her problem. The Montgomery Improvement Association is an active, industrious and financially secure organization. Surely they could have found some way to aid a woman of Rosa Parks' stature to the payroll.

Mrs. Parks Of Montgomery Hostess At Hampton Inst.

Journal & Guide Norfolk Va. p. 5

Sat. 11-19-57

HAMPTON, Va. — Mrs. Rosa L. Parks, the catalytic agent in th ehistoric Montgomery bus boycott, began work last week as hostess at Holly Tree Inn guest house on the Hampton Institute campus.

It was the arrest of Mrs. Parks which precipitated the non-violent protest in Montgomery. When asked why she had refused to move to the rear of a bus, she said: "It was a matter of dignity; I could not have faced myself and my people if I had moved."

She came to Hampton from Detroit where she'd been ilving since moving from Montgomery. Her husband, a barber, hopes to join her here soon.

* * *

"AFTER SO MUCH turbulence, ill-will, heartache and uprooting, I am looking forward with great pleasure to my work on this serene, beautiful, college campus," she declared.

Unknowingly, Mrs. Parks prepared for her job here. During most of World War II she was employed at the guest house at Maxwell AFB in Alabama.

* * *

HER DUTIES AT Hampton include supervision of campus rooms for 34 faculty members and operation of Trustee House which provides accommodations for campus visitors. She replaces Mrs. Alice Leedham, who recently retired after 22 years service.

Despite her experience of being held by authorities in Alabama, the court trial and the boycott of her husband when he tried to get work, there was not a trace of bitterness in Mrs. Park's manner.

* * *

"I WAS BORN in Tuskegee, graduated from Alabama State High School, Alabama is my native home. I am looking forward to going back some day to visit my many friends there," she stated.

MRS. ROSA L. PARKS
At Hampton

Appeals Court Upholds Fine In Parks Case

Advertiser Wed. 2-13-57 Montgomery, Ala.

The conviction of a Negro seamstress whose arrest touched off a long mass Negro boycott of Montgomery city buses was upheld yesterday by the Alabama Court of Appeals. P.1

But the court didn't go into the issue of constitutionality of the city bus segregation ordinance Mrs. Rosa Parks was convicted of violating and which has since been held invalid by the U.S. Supreme Court. 38b

Instead, Mrs. Parks' fine and costs totaling $41.35 were upheld on technical grounds—because her attorneys failed to spell out any errors made by the lower court.

ARRESTED IN 1955

The seamstress was arrested Dec. 1, 1955 for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus in violation of a city ordinance requiring separate seating of white and Negro passengers.

She was fined $10 and costs in city court four days later, and on that day Montgomery Negroes started a boycott of the segregated buses. It lasted for more than a year until the segregation laws were knocked out by the Supreme Court.

The boycott ended last Dec. 21, the day the integration order went into effect. The federal court suit which led to the Supreme Court decision was filed on outgrowth of the Negroes' refusal to ride the buses.

Mrs. Parks appealed her city court conviction to circuit court and Judge Eugene Carter upheld it. The appeal brought the fine costs to $41.35.

Presiding Judge Robert X. Harwood, speaking for the court of appeals, said the failure of defense attorneys to file an assignment of errors made it mandatory on the court to uphold the conviction.

Advertiser P.1

"Where no errors are assigned in appeals from convictions for violations of municipal ordinances," he wrote, "the judgment appealed from must be affirmed."

Mrs. Parks can appeal the decision to the state supreme court.

Negro Atty. Fred Gray said last night he had not yet seen a copy of the court's ruling, and until he did he would not comment on the possibility of an appeal to the higher court.

Negro's Conviction Upheld in Alabama Bus Dispute

Star Wed. 2-13-57 Washington, D.C.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 13 (AP).—The Alabama Court of Appeals has upheld on a technicality the conviction of a Negro seamstress of violating a city bus segregation ordinance. P.30-A

The ordinance has since been declared unconstitutional.

The woman, Mrs. Rosa Parks, was arrested December 1, 1955, for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus. She was fined $10 and costs in City Court.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter upheld an appeal with the fine and costs rising to $41.35.

The case touched off a 381-day bus boycott by Montgomery Negroes that ended with a Federal Court injunction against segregation laws for city buses.

The Appeals Court said failure of defense attorneys to spell out any errors made it mandatory for the court to uphold the conviction.

"Where no errors are assigned in appeals from convictions for violations of municipal ordinances," presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood wrote, "the judgement appealed from must be affirmed."

Fred D. Gray, Negro attorney who has represented Mrs. Parks, said he didn't know immediately whether the case would be appealed.

Mrs. Rosa Parks Of Bus Boycott Fame To Speak

Call Fri. 5-24-57 P.1 Kansas City, Mo.

Mrs. Rosa Parks, a principal figure in the Montgomery bus boycott, will speak in several Kansas and Missouri towns during the coming week.

She will speak in Arkansas City, Kas., on Sunday, May 26, in Coffeyville, Kas., on Tuesday, May 28, and and in St. Joseph, Mo., on Wednesday, May 29.

She opened her tour in this section with a speech in St. Louis on Monday night, May 20. She spoke in Jefferson City on Tuesday, May 21, and in Kansas City, Mo., on Wednesday, May 22. She will speak at the Eighth Street Baptist church in Kansas City, Kas., Friday night, May 24.

Mrs. Parks who is touring the mid-west during the latter part of May, appeared here under the auspices of the Kansas City branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Commenting upon the proposed visit of the Southern leader, Judge Carl R. Johnson, president of the local NAACP branch, said, 'We are always happy to welcome in our midst the courageous men and women of the South who are daily writing glorious chapters in America's continuing struggle for human freedom and dignity. Mrs. Parks is certainly such a person and we believe that Kansas Citians will come out in large numbers to hear her inspiring message."

It was the arrest of Mrs. Parks in Montgomery in December, 1955, for refusal to relinquish her seat on a bus that sparked the organization by Negroes there of the year-long bus boycott. The leader of the boycott brought suit against the local transit company which resulted in the outlawing of segregation in intrastate transportation.

Mrs. Parks, like other Montgomery leaders, has continued to work and to make addresses for the NAACP in spite of violence and threats of violence by anti-integrationists in her community.

Mrs. Parks was born in Tuskegee, Ala., and has been a member of the NAACP since 1943. She is a graduate of the Alabama State college high school; a member of the St. Paul AME church and is on the Stewardess board.

She has been secretary of the Montgomery branch of the NAACP for the past several years and Youth Council Advisor of the Montgomery NAACP Youth Council. Further, she is a member of the executive board of the Montgomery Improvement association.

TO SPEAK IN AREA.—Mrs. Rosa Parks, the woman around whom the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott started, will speak in several Kansas and Missouri towns during the coming week. She spoke in Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday night, May 22, and will speak at the Eighth Street Baptist church in Kansas City, Kas., on Friday night, May 24. She spoke in St. Louis on May 20, in Jefferson City on Tuesday, May 21 and will appear in Arkansas City, Kas., May 26; Coffeyville, Kas., May 28 and in St. Joseph, Mo., on May 29.

To maintain order—

News P.56

Montgomery to add 20 police officers

Jus. 1-1-57

B'ham Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 1—(AP)—In an effort to halt armed attacks on racially integrated city buses, Montgomery's police commissioner said last night 20 more policemen will be added to 1400 men now on duty.

The decision came after a bus was shot at for the fifth time within less than five days. No one was injured yesterday in the only daylight attack of the series, but last Friday night a young Negro woman was shot in both legs.

385

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said, "We feel that with the addition of new officers, we'll be able to maintain order."

No plans for utilization of the extra men had been made yet, Police Chief Goodwyn J. Ruppenthal said last night. Applications for police positions will be accepted beginning tomorrow, Sellers said.

SHORTLY BEFORE city buses were integrated with Federal Court backing, Ruppenthal told a group of Negro leaders that he did not have enough patrolmen to watch each city bus. Negroes began riding buses again Dec. 21 after a year-long boycott protesting segregation which was eliminated the day before by a federal injunction.

Alabama Gov. James E. Folsom said Sunday the State Highway Patrol stands "ready to swing into action" if needed to maintain "good order" in race-tense areas. He said he had discussed the situation with Mayor W. A. Gayle of Montgomery but "so far" no local officials in the state had asked for help.

Last Wednesday night two buses were struck by gunfire, one by rifle fire and the other a shotgun blast. After two attacks on the same bus last Friday night, the City Commission suspended night bus operations through tomorrow.

No clues in any of the shootings have been reported by police.

There was no indication today whether night operations would be resumed Wednesday. A City Commission meeting was scheduled for tomorrow morning.

W. H. FULLILOVE was the bus driver in both Friday attacks and yesterday's. He said he was unable to describe the passing car from which a pistol shot was fired yesterday, or tell whether its occupants were white or Negro. There were three white passengers on the bus.

Mrs. Rosa Jordan, 22-year-old Negro laundry worker, is still in a hospital with a bullet in her right leg. Hospital attendants said removal of the bullet is not expected until after the birth of her baby, expected in about a month.

Woman Shot On Ala. Bus

Leader

Sat. 1-5-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala. 1 (INS)—Montgomery buses were rolling again Saturday morning on schedule as the city commission went into emergency session following a Friday night shooting of a Negro woman.

The buses had been taken off the streets in Montgomery Friday night by police commissioner Clyde Sellers "in the interest of public safety" after a pregnant Negro woman was shot in both legs, through the side of a bus.

Rosa Jordan, 22, mother of three children, was "doing fairly well" according to hospital officials. The bullet, believed by police to be a .32 or .38 caliber slug was scheduled to be removed from her leg Saturday.

Bus Driver W. H. Fullilove was unaware that anything had happened until some passengers shouted the woman had been hit.

Fullilove said that on his next round of the route another shot was fired at the bus near the spot where the first shooting took place.

The two shootings raised the total number of attacks on buses to four, including two Thursday night shootings.

2 Federal Judges Say—

All-White Busline Would Violate Ban

Post-Herald
Birm, Ala.
Thurs 2-28-57

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 27 (AP)—Two federal judges joined today in an informal warning that a proposed new all-white busline in Montgomery would violate the Supreme Court ban on racial segregation.

Six white men, as charter members of the Rebel Club asked the City Commission last month for permission to operate a "private" busline for members only as a means of combatting the recent integration order.

The city, unwilling to act in the face of an injunction against continued enforce- of segregation laws on public buses, petitioned a three-judge federal court panel for instructions.

The panel refused today to hand down an advisory ruling, but two members wrote into the order their "personal" opinion that the new busline would, in effect, be a "public" transportation system.

And as such, they said, it would be subject to the same restrictions against segregation now in effect on Montgomery City Lines buses.

Judge Richard T. Rives of the Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., of Montgomery said use of the word "private" to describe the proposed all-white busline would be "inappropriate."

They said the city could grant a franchise for the Rebel line but that it would have to see that "the holder of the franchise does not discriminate between white and colored passengers."

Since the court made no formal ruling, the statements by the two judges aren't binding. But they indicate how Rives and Johnson would rule if the busline does operate and is challenged. Negro leaders have indicated they would contest it.

Mayor W. A. Gayle declined to say what the city's next step might be. So did State Rep. Joe Goodwyn, an attorney speaking for the officers of the Rebel Club.

The charter of the Rebel Club makes no mention of race or color but says only members of the club would be permitted to ride the buses and that

Thurs 2-28-57

Memberships would have to be approved by directors of the club, all pro-segregationists.

The court refused to make a formal ruling because, it said, the Constitution prohibits federal judges from handing down advisory opinions or acting on "abstract, hypothetical or contingent questions."

A decision can be rendered only on "actual cases or controversies," the brief order said.

Nevertheless, Rives and Johnson did express their personal beliefs as a guide to city authorities. The third judge, Seybourn H. Lynne of Birmingham, declined to give an opinion.

Ala. grand jury gets cases of bombing suspects

Atlanta Ga. Jan 2-16-57
Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Seven men, held on charges growing out of a wave of bombings, were held for the Montgomery County Grand Jury Friday.

City Judge Eugene Loe, before whom they were arraigned, announced that he would dismiss charges any of the seven men, if the grand jury failed to indict them.

The grand jury is expected to consider the charges on Wednesday or Thursday.

White Man Fined In Bus Seat Row

Post-Herald
Birm, Ala.
Tues 2-23-57

Hit Negro Woman In Montgomery

MONTGOMERY, April 22 (AP)—A 31-year-old white man with a past "record for violence" was fined $50 and costs today for hitting a Negro woman in a fight over a seat on a racially integrated city bus.

City Judge Eugene Loe told James E. Grice Jr., of Montgomery in pronouncing the sentence that "your past record for violence is known to the court." Loe said Grice has been convicted previously of fighting and resisting arrest.

Loe dismissed charges against one of three Negro women also arrested after the scuffle last Tuesday and acquitted the other two after hearing the evidence. Grice and the Negroes were charged with assault and battery.

The fight, which developed after Grice ordered Josephine Boldin, 19, to give him her seat and move to the rear of the bus, was the first reported incident of violence since shortly after city buses were ordered integrated last Dec. 21.

Loe acquitted Miss Boldin and Mrs. Annie Burch, 37, who said she went to the other woman's assistance when Grice started beating her with a wrench. Mrs. Burch said the man also struck her.

Before the hearing was concluded, City Prosecutor David Crossland asked the court to dismiss the charges against another defendant, Mrs. Johnnie Mae Eaves. He said the evidence indicated she wasn't involved in the disturbance.

All three Negro women testified Grice started beating Miss Boldin after ordering her to move. The white man didn't take the stand himself, but Detective Capt. E. P. Brown had quoted him earlier as saying Miss Boldin slapped him first.

At one point in the hearing, Grice interrupted to tell a witness she didn't have to answer questions from Negro Atty. Fred Gray. Later Grice apologized to the court.

Loe said the evidence convinced him that Grice was the "aggressor" and that he "provoked" the fight.

Grice said he will appeal the $50 fine.

Watch On The Potomac

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Montgomery's "Mad Bombers"

WASHINGTON — Some of the Dixie demagogues wish that Montgomery, Ala., bombing case hadn't come to trial just yet. The men charged with bombing the home of the Rev. Martin Luther King and other anti-segregationists were just acquitted after a jury trial. Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, sees the results as proof that no one accused of injuring Negroes will be convicted if brought before most Southern white juries.

SPIVACK

Wilkins has used the Montgomery case quite effectively in trying to persuade congressmen to oppose the so-called "trial by jury" amendment to the civil rights bill. President Eisenhower, incidentally, thinks the jury amendment would produce "anarchy" in contempt of court proceedings.

GUNFIRE, NEW RULING MARK RACIAL STRIFE

Commercial Appeal
Memphis

Montgomery Driver's Bus Target Third Time

p. 20

VIRGINIA LEFT LOOPHOLE

By GLENN ANTHONY
United Press Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 31—Gunfire ripped a Montgomery driver's bus for the thrd time Monday while in Virginia the integration struggle was marked by a court decision that could indirectly shut down schools in two big centers.

W. H. Fullilove reported a shot was fired into his bus as he drove through a Negro section about 6 a.m. He said he saw a flash from a passing automobile. When he examined the bus he found a hole, apparently from a 38-caliber weapon, just blow the driver's seat.

White Passengers Calm

Three white men aboard the bus "appeared calm through the whole thing," said Mr. Fullilove. "There realy wasn't much they could do."

This was the fifth firing on a bus since the Supreme Court ordered Montgomery's transit system desegreated 10 days ago, climaxinga bitter campaign by Negroes which included a year-long boycott. A Negro woman was wounded by a sniper who shot into Mr. Fullilove's bus Friday night and his vehicle was fired on again the same night.

The city commission has discontinued night bus runs for the New Year holiday period but Monday's assailant found concealment inthe predawn period.

The White Citizens Council sought to whet opposition to integration in Tallahassee, Fla., where dozens of Negro leaders rode in front seats again Monday. The bus line there has gone to court seeking the right to let down the color barrier.

Homer T. Barrs, secretary of the Tallahassee Citizens' Council, called a meeting Monday night, the first since the group was organized last June to "support States' Rights and maintain segregation."

In Richmond, Va., the fourth United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld lower court orders for immediate desegregation of schools in the City of Charlottesville and the County of Arlington, a part of the metropolitan Washington area.

New Law's Use Looms

The decision foreshadowed an early use of the state' new law which automatically shuts off funds for any schools that integrate the races. Virginia has one alternative, another new law that provides for pupil assignment to the schools.

Under this arrangement pupils could be sent on an individual basis to schools picked for them by a three-man statewide assignment board. This board could see to it that schools were filled with all-white and all-Negro students under a new kind of segregation, and local school boards which might feel differently on the issue would have no authority.

The unanimous decision upholds a lower court ruling ordering the Charlottesville school to end segregation last September. It backs up another ruling ordering Arlington County to integrate elementary schools by Jan. 31, 1957, and its higher public schools by next September.

Date for delivery of the opinion to the lower courts is Jan. 31, 1957, and the rulings will become effective on that date.

But the court specifically stated that its decision did not prevent Virginia from using the recently enacted pupil-assignment law as long as the state did not assign students to schools for reasons of race or color.

Alabama House Votes On Bias Bus Bill

Birmingham Post
Thurs. 7-4-57

Montgomery, Ala.—The Alabama house Tuesday passed and sent to the senate a bill aimed at relieving racial tension on integrated transportation facilities.

The measure would require a male passenger to obtain permission of a female passenger before he could sit next to her.

In effect, it gives white women the option of refusing to permit Negro men to sit beside them.

City Seeks Ruling On Plan To Start White Bus System

Advertiser Sat. 1-26-57 P. 1

Montgomery, Ala.

Court Asked For Opinion On Legality

By AL McCONAGHA

Reports of an all-white transportation system became official here yesterday as the Montgomery City Commission petitioned U.S. District Court to learn if a "club" bus line can operate legally.

City attorneys filed the petition asking U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. if the city can legally issue a franchise to a "private" bus system in the face of the Supreme Court's ban on racial bus segregation here.

The action yesterday followed the filing of a memorandum on the proposed bus system and articles of incorporation with the Montgomery City Clerk late Thursday.

'REBEL CLUB'

Incorporated as "The Rebel Club," the group asked for a franchise from the city to operate a non-profit bus line for transportation of members only.

No mention of race was made in the memorandum to City Commission, but informed sources said membership would be confined to whites only. Names of some Negroes might be associated with the project on the understanding they would not ride the buses.

The city's petitions for instructions, signed by the Montgomery Board of Commissioners, asked Judge Johnson for an advisory opinion on three legal points:

1. Can the city hold a hearing on the application for a franchise by The Rebel Club.

2. Can the City Commission, provided the bus system is needed, legally issue such a franchise?

3. Will the City Commission have to enforce racial integration on the buses if the proposal becomes a reality?

Judge Johnson and Judge Richard T. Rives of the U.S. District Court of Appeals entered a formal order which said no action on the request will be taken for at least three weeks.

The memorandum filed with the City Commission and included in the city petition to the federal court said, "This non-profit club does not propose to offer public transportation in the city of Montgomery. . .Its patrons shall be restricted to the membership of the corporation and no person shall be permitted transportation who is not a member in good standing."

Advertiser P. 1-A

Members of the club, the memorandum continued, would have to be approved by the board of directors.

The club proposes to operate five routes at the outset and already has "tentative" arrangements to purchase 10 buses to start the service.

It would begin operation with a minimum capitalization of $25,000 raised partly through donations, partly through loans and the rest from membership fees.

NEGROES REFUSED

During the long Negro bus boycott that preceded the end of segregation, Negro leaders asked the City Commission for authority to operate their own bus company but were turned down on grounds that the present bus service was adequate and there was no need for an additional bus line.

Should members of the City Commission be found in violation of the federal injunction ending racial segregation of buses here they are individually liable for a sentence of a year and a day in prison and a fine of $10,000.

The articles of incorporation name Hugh Hollon, sales manager of Motion Picture Advertising, president; W. P. Sanders, manager of the Nolin Restaurant Supply Co., first vice president; Frank Rowley, of Phillips 66 Oil Co. and Cloverdale Drug Store, second vice president; W. B. Wyatt, Wyatt Supply Co. and Wyatt Lumber Co., secretary; and Simeon McNeill, teller at the First National Bank, treasurer. (Occupations are those listed in the Montgomery City Directory.)

These five Montgomery were named with J. Jack Ingram, also of this city, to the group's board of directors.

INSURANCE PLAN

The Rebel Club promised the City Commission that it would use vehicles in good mechanical condtion, employ qualified drivers and provide a blanket insurance policy with a $300,000 minimum coverage.

The group proposed to charge each member $1 for a membership fee and 15 cents for each ride.

A non-profit organization, the group said its officers will not receive salary or other compensation for their efforts.

The 10 vehicles with which The Rebel Club proposed to begin its service are "mechanically sound but in used condition" and purchased by the club for about $1,000 each, the group said.

"Adequate garage and parking facilities will be furnished on a temporary basis by one of the incorporators. Permanent facilities are being sought," the memorandum said.

City Places 5:15 Curfew On Schedule

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 1-16-57

Montgomery buses will resume daytime operation here today with a police escort for some vehicles.

P. 1

The City Commission yesterday lifted a six-day ban on bus service. However, buses will be prohibited from running after 5:15 p.m.

Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers said squad cars will follow after dark bus runs and police will "spot check" other buses during the daylight hours.

Sellers said police precautions "have already been taken" to avoid recurrence of violence here.

HALTED LAST WEEK

The City Commission completely hatled buses Thursday after six buildings were bombed.

They had been stopped earlier in the evening when someone fired a shotgun at one returning from Washington Park. Mayor Gayle then ordered the bus ban "until further notice" immediately after the dynamite blasts ripped through the pre-dawn hours.

Thursday evening was the first time in 11 days that the buses had run past 5 p.m. A series of incidents, including one in which an expectant Negro woman was shot in both legs, led to the night operation ban.

HAPPY TO RETURN

Immediately after the commission meeting, in which the restoration of bus service was announced a small delegation of bus drivers conferred shortly with the City Commission.

"They are simply tickled to death to get back to work," Mayor W. A. Gayle said.

J. H. Bagley, manager of the bus company, told The Advertiser last night, "we're most happy to get back on the streets. You know, we normally carry about 2,200 school kids on the buses and it really created a problem for a lot of families."

He said the same service that existed before the ban will be in effect during the daylight hours only.

Hunt 5 youths in bus stop attack

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. Sat. 1-5-57

MONTGOMERY — Residents of Montgomery this week urged redoubled police efforts for the apprehension of five white youths involved in the beating of a 15-year-old girl, the first "incident" to mark the end of Montgomery's bus boycott.

The victim of the beating was Ollie Mae Collins, 519 High St., who was attacked as she stood at a corner bus stop on Christmas Eve. P. 20

Eyewitnesses reported that one youth drove up in a car and yelled at Miss Collins, "Don't ride the bus any more."

A bus passenger said that the youth then jumped from the car and struck Miss Collins, knocking her to her knees. A second youth from the same car and three from another vehicle joined in the attack at this point.

* * *

DET. CAPTAIN E. P. BROWN said that Miss Collins received minor head injuries, but said that she had not gone to a doctor for treatment because she "was afraid."

Captain Brown said that police began an investigation as soon as they learned about the incident, but that up to Wednesday afternoon the youths' identy had not been learned.

The attack upon Miss Collins was the first reported act of violence to mar the quiet and orderly transition from segregated to unsegregated bus use which has followed U.S. Supreme Court invalidation of the Montgomery bus segregation laws.

Colored passengers have been sitting where they choose in the vehicles since last Friday and although knots of men and youths had been observed at several bus stops, no acts of violence had occurred.

Montgomery police said that every effort would be made to avoiding similar incidents.

BUSES FIRED ON FOR FIFTH TIME

Times-Picayune

None Hurt in Latest Incident at Montgomery

Jus. 1-1-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 31 (AP)—Another racially integrated city bus was ambushed Monday by an assailant who, police said, apparently fired a pistol shot from a moving automobile. New Orleans, La.

Only three passengers, all white, and the driver were on the bus and no one was reported injured, although the large caliber bullet struck the bus just below driver W. H. Fullilove's seat. P. 11

It was the fifth bus shooting incident since segregation barriers were erased under federal court order in Montgomery 10 days ago. The same driver, Fullilove, has been involved in three of the five attacks.

He was operating a bus last Friday night when a sniper fired a bullet through the side of the vehicle, wounding a young Negro woman passenger, Mrs. Rosa Jordan, 22. Mrs. Jordan was struck in both legs.

The attack occurred on the same run and the same street where Mrs. Jordan was shot but several blocks farther north.

The management office said the busline will continue "normal operations unless some other decisions are made later." Service after 5 p. m. has been halted through New Year's Day, however, on city commission orders.

Integrated Bus Riding Reported at Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 31 (AP)—Some bus riding on an integrated pattern was reported in Tallahassee Monday but the number of riders appeared to be running less than usual for this holiday period.

Two teams of six Negroes rode the buses as part of a ride-the-bus campaign, and afterwards reported there were white riders on the same buses.

Dan Speed, campaign chairman, said that on one bus white and Negro riders sat opposite each other on lateral front seats back of the driver.

A spot check by newsmen showed that in most buses the Negroes were continuing to sit from the rear.

There were no reported incidents and Negro leaders said no mass demonstrations were planned.

Youths Are Charged with Bus Shooting

BIRMINGHAM, Dec. 31 (AP) — Six young Negro boys were charged Monday with peppering a trolley bus with air rifle pellets here Sunday night.

Police commissioner Robert E. Lindbergh said he was convinced that the incident had nothing to do with Negro efforts to end segregation on buses here.

The six youths, ranging in age from 8 to 13 years, were turned over to juvenile authorities. No one was hurt in the incident.

Shall Montgomery Surrender?

IS the night air of this genteel old city, the capital of a state and once the capital of a nation, to reverberate with dynamite explosions?

Is Montgomery to be a city in which dynamite sticks are tossed onto lawns like the morning paper?

Is Montgomery to be a city in which bullets fly between sundown and sunup? Advertiser

Is Montgomery to be a city in which a handful of terroists overawe the police power of city, county and state—squeezing a trigger and abolishing a bus fleet? Montgomery, Ala

Are the powers of government of the City of Montgomery to be surrendered to outlaws?

Tri. 1-1-57

MONTGOMERY will sow to the wind if it does not meet this challenge headon. P. 4-A

This city can become a badlands, or at worst, a bloody cockpit.

The soundest preventive action is a stern response to this challenge—right now.

The violence is probably manageable at this point.

It will be less so if it seems to the outlaws that they can put the government to rout with a few random bursts of gunfire and a bundles of dynamite.

Those buses should run on schedule if they run empty. They should run as a symbol that the police apparatus of our government has not abdicated.

Whatever it takes in special police details, sheriffs deputies and highway patrolmen should be assigned in such fashion that a bus driver can take a bus from one side of town to the other without ambush, empty though it may be.

The constabulary from more than one source is available. It needs only to be summoned and assigned.

The issue now is no longer segregation on city buses. Neither white people nor colored people need ride the buses during this time.

The issue now has passed beyond segregation. The issue now is whether it is safe to live in Montgomery, Ala.

★

THOSE buses should run with a police protection so obvious and so determined that outlaws will desist or be run down.

If not checkmated now, will the outlaws not become more bold and more numerous?

Will not continued violence poison this city just as you poison a well?

★

WE ARE already paying a grievous toll. The story of Thursday's dynamiting is already broadcast all over the world, blackening this city's name. Such events firm the hand of the South's enemies in Congress. Those who are at this moment seeking enactment of unbearable civil rights legislation welcome such events, for they serve their cause.

★

THE prospect is that this violence will continue and swell in volume and daring unless there is decisive action. Sooner or later a stand will have to be taken, and it will be easier now.

Otherwise we face the prospect of retaliatory violence between groups.

The issue is not segregation. No one need ride the buses. The issue is whether it is to be safe to live in Montgomery.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
22 NEGROES ARRESTED
TRIALS

State Law Not Used

Daily World

Birmingham Admits It Switched Bus Charges

Thurs. 1-3-57 Atlanta, Ga.

P. 1

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (INS) — Birmingham city officials Wednesday admitted switching charges against 22 Negroes arrested for riding buses in an integrated manner, as both sides of the segregation clash altered strategy throughout the south.

Authorities in Birmingham said that charges against 22 Negroes arrested last week have been changed from violating a segregated seating ordinance to disorderly conduct and breach of peace, and planned to ask for a trial delay.

City Attorney J. H. Willis said he would ask for a delay of the trial, which is set for Thursday, so he may interview witnesses.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, a Negro leader in Birmingham had urged his people to obey existing laws until the 22 had been tried. However, he recently said "if they change or drop the charges against the 22 Negroes, they may have to do the same for thousands."

Two Birmingham men, one white and one Negro report they have been threatened with bombing. The white man, Dave Campbell, a radio announced who frequently discusses the integration problem, said he was told his name was "next on the list."

Two Birmingham homes were dynamited during the holiday season.

In Montgomery, Ala. the City Commission extended its emergency cancellation of night bus service through Tuesday, Jan. 8.

IN TALLAHASSEE

In Baton Rouge, the Rev. T. J. Jemison, Negro preacher who led the boycott in the Louisiana capital, indicated a change in tactics. Earlier Jemison said he would seek a test case against city bus segregation ordinances by having a Negro board a bus in the presence of a law officer. Wednesday he said he may seek a declaratory judgment against the ordinances.

Jemison announced plans to confer with city officials Thursday, and Louisiana Att'y. Gen. Jack Gremillion Friday, to determine their attitudes toward state laws and city ordinances in light of the recent federal decisions.

Tallahassee buses were idle Wednesday after a New Year's day decision by Florida Gov. LeRoy Collins to shut down operation "in the public interest."

The Florida governor called on Tallahassee Negroes to move less quickly in breaking down traditional segregation. A federal court order banned city interference with bus operation on an integrated basis.

In New Orleans, meanwhile, a Negro boarded a crowded bus and ripped down a segregation sign. Moments later after the driver replaced the sign, the Negro, identified as Frank Johns, 25, allegedly tried to rob him, and was shot in the side by policemen riding the bus as he attempted to flee from the bus.

Daily world P. 5

IN MOBILE

In Mobile, several hundred Negroes attended a rally Tuesday night where Montgomery Attorney-preacher Fred Gray told them, "our purpose is to end segregation in the South any place we can find it."

Gray, who created a minor revolt in Alabama local draft boards when his draft appeal was upheld by U. S. Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey, told the gathering, "in no community where there is a sizeable Negro population can it be said the race problem has been solved."

Trials Delayed In Magic City

Advertiser P. 9-a

Fri. 1-4-57

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 3 (AP)—Trial of 22 Negroes charged with violating Birmingham's bus segregation ordinance were postponed today until Feb. 11, City Atty. J. H. Willis said.

Montgomery Ala.

Willis said both he and defense attorney Arthur D. Shores had other cases which they need to handle now.

Police Commissioner Robert Lindbergh said the city legal staff would prosecute the cases and handle any appeals which follow.

Willis said that present changes of violating the segregation ordinance would remain, and that any additional ones would be filed later if evidence warrants.

There has been speculation that disorderly conduct or breach of the peace charges may be substituted for the segregation law charges.

This would be an effort to avoid conviction on the segregation charges which would pave the way for federal court test.

Postpone Trials Of 22 Boycott Leaders

By S. F. YETTE
AFRO Staff Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM — Attorneys for both sides of a case in which 22 colored persons were to be tried for violation of Birmingham's bus and trolley segregation laws agreed Thursday upon a postponement of the trial until Feb. 11.

Baltimore Afro

The announced agreement was made here before Judge Ralph B. Parker in Recorders Court by City Attorney James H. Willis Thursday morning, the time originally set for the trials.

"I got back from my vacation yesterday and I need some time to interview witnesses and prepare the cases for trial," he said.

Sat. 1-12-57

"THROUGH ONE OF MY assistants, I took up the matter with Attorney (Arthur) Shores (Defense Counsel) and told him we would apply for continuance for approximately two weeks."

He said that Mr. Shores "had some cases set for that time, and suggested one week later. We agreed on Feb. 11 as convenient to both parties," he said.

Mr. Shores, counsel for the 22 arrested and charged with violation of two of the city's segregation ordinances, was not present at Thursday morning's court session in which the postponement was made public and official.

At his office a short time later, Mr. Shores told the AFRO that he had agreed to the postponement because "all of us were tied up in cases."

* * *

HE SAID THAT AT the time the trial was scheduled to be heard he was engaged in the defense of Mrs. Autherine Lucy Foster, the national body of the NAACP, Thurgood Marshall, and himself, each facing suits of $1,000,000 for their anti-segregation activities.

The suits, demanding indemnities totaling $4,000,000, are being tried in the Alabama Circuit Court, he said.

Peter H. Hall, legal partner to Mr. Shores, voiced the popular fear among colored people here regarding the trial of the 22 deliberate violators of Birmingham's bus segregation laws.

"We fear a switch of the charges of violation of a city ordinance to the catch-all — "disorderly conduct," he said.

* * *

HE EXPLAINED THAT Birmingham officials "traditionally try to avoid prosecutions involving the segregation ordinances."

It is commonly known here that the White Citizens Council and other informed segregationists oppose trial of the 22 on charges involving segregation laws themselves.

They concede indirectly that these laws, if put to legal test, would crumble, leaving their position in greater jeopardy than if the violators had not been tried at all.

It was this thinking that, a few days earlier, led to speculation that the charges against the 22 would be dropped altogether.

* * *

MR. SHORES TOLD the AFRO that "it's hard to say" whether the city will change the charges to the usual "disorderly conduct."

He did say, however, that "they are making statements to indicate that they might bring other charges (other than those already filed).

He said that, "to my knowledge, they have never prosecuted a case on a segregation ordinance in Birmingham."

City Attorney Willis told the AFRO that he had not had time to investigate the cases thoroughly, but that he would press other charges if others were found applicable.

He said, however, "We ought to win the cases" on the charges as they presently stand.

ANSWERING deliberately, the city attorney refused to reveal what course he would take if the 22 should win their case against the city in the original court.

"Well, we'll cross that bridge when we get to it," he answered finally. After a moment's hesitation, he added, "of course, I don't know what the result will be."

For the sake of "strategy," Mr. Shores was also slow to reveal any course of action planned by his forces.

He gave a "no comment" answer when asked whether he thought it advisable to ask the Federal District Court for a Declaratory Judgment outlawing segregation on buses in Birmingham.

The shooting of firearms has also been a part of the violence that currently shrouds Birmingham.

* * *

THE FIRST SHOOTING took place Saturday as a city transit bus made its way through a Birmingham "fringe" area composed of numerous residences of both races.

The driver of the bus said that just before a pellet cracked a window in the northbound bus, he noticed two white youths standing under an awning at an intersection.

After the shooting, he said, he saw the two boys flee from the scene. They were not apprehended.

Six colored boys whose ages range from 8-14 were arrested following the Sunday evening firing upon another bus in the same vicinity.

The boys, whose names are not revealed because of their ages, were turned over to Juvenile Court here for shooting what was found to be an air rifle.

POSTMASTERS DAY SET

WASHINGTON—Acting Postmaster General Maurice H. Stans has proclaimed Jan. 17, the anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth, as the second annual Postmasters' Day.

BUS LAW CHALLENGE FILED IN BIRMINGHAM

Commercial

21 Negroes Attack Validity Of Jim Crow Policy

Appeal P. 8

VIRGINIA IGNORES RULING

Tues. 1-15-57

By The United Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 14. —A group of 21 Negroes who face trial for defying city bus segregation ordinances asked a Federal court Monday to declare Birmingham Jim Crow laws unconstitutional.

Memphis Tenn.

The group's bill was filed by Arthur Shores, the Negro who won an order getting Autherine Lucy Foster admitted to the University of Alabama last winter. The city commission and the bus company were made defendants.

Would Block Arr

The suit asked for a temporary injunction blocking a scheduled city trial Feb. 11 and for a declaratory judgment and a permanent injunction forbidding further arrests of Negroes who ride unsegregated.

There were 22 Negroes arrested on Dec. 26 but one, a minor, was not included in Monday's action. The Negroes were charged with violating city segregation ordinances and disorderly conduct.

The mass riding came after a dynamite bomb demolished the home of Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, chairman of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. Rev. Shuttlesworth is spearheading the bus integration movement.

After the arrests, the group called off unsegregated riding on grounds the arrests had served the purpose of getting the matter into the courts. A similar suit resulted in a Federal court order knocking down Jim Crow laws in Montgomery.

Case Not Assigned

The case had not been assigned Monday nor had a hearing date been set but it could possibly become the responsibility of Judge Hobart Grooms, who issued the order directing the admission of the Negro coed to Alabama.

The Negro woman, now married to a Texas minister, was later expelled from the university on the basis of conspiracy charges she had brought but could not prove against school officials. A court hearing is set before Judge Grooms Friday to determine if the university was justified in expelling her.

In Tallahassee, Fla., buses rolled without incident under a new city ordinance making bus drivers responsible for assigning seats with regard to "weight, health and safety factors." While this was interpreted as an obvious effort to effect segregation without mentioning race, Negroes apparently were not yet ready to test it.

Virginia Defiant

In Richmond, the State of Virginia's three-man pupil placement board asserted that "unless and until lawfully prevented" it intended to carry out its assignments despite an adverse Federal court ruling.

Gov. Thomas B. Stanley approved the stand of the board, which was set up under a new act empowering it to assign every pupil in the state to a specific school. The board could make sure that white and Negro pupils did not wind up under the same roof.

Under the law, parents not satisfied with the assignments could appeal first to the board, then to the Governor and finally to the state courts.

Law Ruled Out

But United State District Judge Walter E. Hoffman ruled at Norfolk last week that the pupil-assignment act is "unconstitutional on its face." He threw out a motion for dismissal of integration suits against the Norfolk and Newport News school boards.

The board is due to make its first assignments after Jan. 31, the date which Federal courts have set for the beginning of integration in Charlottesville and Arlington County schools.

Trials Delayed In Magic City

Advertiser Tue. 1-4-57

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 3 (AP)—Trial of 22 Negroes charged with violating Birmingham's bus segregation ordinance were postponed today until Feb. 11, City Atty. J. H. Willis said.

Willis said both he and defense attorney Arthur D. Shores had other cases which they need to handle now. Montgomery

Police Commissioner Robert Lindbergh said the city legal staff would prosecute the cases and handle any appeals which follow.

Willis said that present changes of violating the segregation ordinance would remain, and that any additional ones would be filed later if evidence warrants.

There has been speculation that disorderly conduct or breach of the peace charges may be substituted for the segregation law charges.

This would be an effort to avoid conviction on the segregation charges which would pave the way for federal court test.

Birmingham Lawyer Asks Bus Law Veto

Constitution P. 29

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 4—An attorney for 21 Negroes arrested here last month on charges of violation of the city's segregation ordinance by riding in the white section of the city's public buses has asked the U.S. district court here to declare the ordinance unconstitutional. Atlanta

Arthur D. Shores, Birmingham Negro attorney frequently identified in successful litigation against segregation laws in Alabama, filed the petition in federal court here. He asked the court for a "speedy hearing." The court had taken no action on setting a hearing date by late today. Tues. 1-15-57

Named as defendants in the action were the three members of the Birmingham City Commission, and the Birmingham Transit Co. Robert E. Lindbergh, commissioner of public safety (police), said, "We intend to resist this with all legal power at our command."

The petition also seeks a temporary injunction against the city, restraining the defendants from enforcing the segregation ordinance which forbids, among other things, whites and Negroes to sit together on public conveyances.

The trial of the 21 Negroes arrested last Dec. 26 in a mass defiance of the city law has been postponed and is scheduled for city recorder's court Feb. 11. There have been repeated reports the city will seek to try the Negroes on a substitute charge, such as breach of the peace or disorderly conduct, to avoid an immediate legal test of the ordinance.

STOLEN IRON 'MONSTER' SHOCKS NEGRO LAWYER

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 3 (AP)—A stolen tin man startled Negro Atty. Arthur D. Shores last night. Tue. 1-4-57

Shores said he found the metal giant leaning against the side of his house last night.

"I didn't know whether it was a mechanical man with a dynamite bomb inside or what," said Shores. He called police.

Shores, who is representing 22 Negroes arrested for mass violations of Birmingham's bus segregation laws, said he has received several telephoned threats.

Officers traced the tin man to the Wilson Heating and Roofing Co., where he has occupied a perch on the roof for the past five years.

The tin man actually is made of corrugated iron, fashioned to resemble the metal man of the Land of Oz. The figure, in a sitting position, would be about seven feet tall if standing.

Police and Pete Wilson, operator of the firm, have no idea who stole the tin man but they know the thieves went to a lot of trouble.

They sawed through rivets binding him to the roof and then lowered the 160-pound man about 25 feet to the street.

Another puzzler: The operation was carried out during the early part of the night in full view of traffic on busy Warrior Road. But no one complained.

"We'll put him back up as soon as we bail him out from the police," said Wilson.

"Oh, yes," chimed in a secretary. "We've got to have him back. We know he's lonesome."

Birmingham's Faltering Bus Line

Advertiser Wed. 1-16-57 The Birmingham Post-Herald

With the Montgomery case as a precedent, the legal action filed in federal court here yesterday seeking an end to segregated seating in city buses was to be expected. Montgomery, Ala.

The petition asks also an injunction to prevent enforcement of th city's segregation ordinance. P. 4-A

The case doubtless will find its way to the Supreme Court and there result in the same decision as handed down in the Montgomery case.

Unfortunately another result could parallel what has happened in the state capital where today city buses no longer operate.

For years the Birmingham transit system has been losing patronage steadily. Even before the Montgomery segregation decision it faced the very real and ever present problem of solvency and survival.

In 1952 a total of 56,712,048 passengers were handled by the transit system.

Two years later, in 1954, the total passenger load was 46,706,000 — a loss of more than 10 million riders.

Last year (1956) the total number of passengers carried dropped to 39,672,000 which, over the five years since 1952, represents a loss in riders of 17,040,048.

So it is no idle threat when we are told that the end result of the demand for segregated seating could result in an empty victory.

Certainly that is what it would be if, as in Montgomery, it caused suspension of bus service and only increased racial tension

"14th Amendment Void"

Birmingham's City Judge Upholds Its Bus Bias

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

Defense To Appeal $50 Fine And Court Costs

Fri. 3-22-57 p. 1

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (INS) — The constitutionality of Birmingham's bus segregation laws was upheld in court Thursday.

Recorders Court Judge Joseph E. Parker found Negro Lila Baylor guilty of violation of the segregation suit and applied his decision to 20 other Negroes arrested on the same charge.

The defendants were fined $50 each, assessed $5 court costs apiece, and ordered a day in jail for each two dollars of the fine cost not paid.

"There would be a state of emergency in the state of Birmingham," the judge said, if bus segregation was voided.

The decision will be appealed, defense attorney Arthur Shores said.

The 2 Negroes were arrested Dec. 26, when more than 100 of them staged a mass unsegregated riding attempt. Their trial was completed in two hours Monday, with Parker taking the case under advisement.

Judge Parker in his ruling said: "Enmity hate or prejudice should not burst the bounds of restraint . we cannot have good will and domestic tranquility unless our segregation laws are respected and obeyed. They are vital and necessary to avoid friction and calamity."

The judge, referring to the defendant and those fighting for bus integration as a "small group who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands," said his decision was based on evidence and facts -- not race prejudice.

Judge Parker, anticipating his decision would be appealed, said the most important question facing the nation is the legality of the 14th amendment, and suggested the city present this question squarely to the U. S. Supreme Court."

The chief recorder said he was concerned over those "who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands, violating the laws of the city of Birmingham.„ He added:

"Defiance of the law will contribute nothing towards amicable race relations. Any such defiance in the future will certainly bring suffering, disapppointment and hardship to the colored people and our economic security will be jeopardized."

He said he firmly believe the city's segregation laws are constitutional, adding, "we cannot have good will and domestic tranquility unless our laws are obeyed."

The Negroes were fined by Recorders Court Judge Ralph E. Parker on charges stemming from their arrest last Dec. 26 when the group staged an intentional test of the city ordinances.

Judge Parker said to drop segregation on Birmingham buses would create a "state of emergency." And he declared the 14th or Civil Rights Amendment to the United States Constitution is "null and void" because it was never properly ratified by the Southern states.

Shores has based his integration case upon the Supreme Sourt's recent ruling outlawing bus segregation in Montgomery, the Alabama capital.

NEGROES TO PAY FINES IN BIRMINGHAM CASE

Commercial Appeal p. 16

Bus Riders Will Drop Appeal On Segregation Law

Memphis, Tenn.

BIRMINGHAM, March 23. — (UP) — Attorney Arthur Shores announced Saturday 22 Negroes convicted of violating city bus segregation laws will pay their $55 fines and not appeal to a higher state court.

Sun. 3-24-57

The action not to appeal was expected because of a suit now pending in Federal Court seeking to get the city ordinance declared unconstitutional.

22 Alabama Negroes Fined For Defying Bus Ordinance

Courier-Journal p. 2 Louisville, Ky.

Birmingham, March 27 (UP)— City Judge Ralph E. Parker fined 22 Negroes $55 each today for defying City bus-segregation laws and asserted the United States Supreme Court made a mistake in declaring bus segregation unconstitutional.

The Negroes, who jubilantly boarded the buses in a mass demonstration last December 26, listened glumly today while the judge read a lengthy ruling attacking the high court's action.

Parker said that to drop segregation on Birmingham buses would create a "state of emergency" and "I will not be responsible for such a calamity."

'Can't Compel Adjustment'

Parker criticized the Supreme Court's order which outlawed segregation on carriers in Montgomery, the Alabama capital, early this year. He said, "Judicial dictatorship cannot compel social adjustment." The court ruling in the Montgomery case, he said, "does not make the ruling correct either legally or morally."

"Certainly I am not required by the oath taken by me to uphold the decisions of any court which are destructive of the Constitution.

"I had rather wear a ball and chain around my ankle than to wear one around my conscience."

Would Challenge Amendment

Parker said the City of Birmingham should challenge the validity of the 14th (civil-rights) Amendment, which he said was forced upon the Southern states without due process of law.

"Knowing that ratification was coerced by military government (after the Civil War), certainly I am not alone in saying that the 14th Amendment is null and void," he declared.

Arthur Shores, Negro attorney who represented the defendants, had contended that all bus-segregation laws are dead as a result of the Supreme Court's Montgomery ruling.

21 Negro Bus Riders Convicted

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala.

Fri. 3-22-57

Judge Ralph E. Parker, in Recorder's Court yesterday, called unconstitutional the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

He took this action in fining 21 Negroes $50 and costs each for the deliberate mass violation of the Birmingham bus segregation ordinance.

p. 1

Atty. Arthur D. Shores, counsel for the Negroes, said a decision on whether they will appeal the verdict will be made by this afternoon. The ruling has no effect except in Parker's court.

Declaring that the segregation law is constitutional, Parker said in a nine-page decision, "nowhere in the United States Constitution is there one word that a state cannot make reasonable regulations for the carrying of passengers on public conveyances, wholly within the state . . . The Supreme Court has not interpreted the Constitution. It has amended it . . .

"There is certainly nothing in the Constitution that even mentions segregation. Equal facilities originated in the state of Massachusetts, and none of the most rabid politicians ever raised their voices against segregation after the 14th Amendment was ratified, the adoption of which in 1868 was forced upon the people at the point of the bayonet."

Charging that the 14th Amendment conflicts with the ninth and 19th, which provide that powers not vested in the federal government are delegated to the states and people, Parker warned:

"If the Supreme Court of the United States is able to ignore completely the 10th Amendment to the Constitution, then it will be able at some future date to completely ignore the First Amendment which guarantees the right of free speech, a free press, and freedom of religious worship."

Post-Herald

Parker suggested that if his verdict is appealed, city attorneys "present squarely to the Supreme Court perhaps the most important question in our country today, that of the legality of the 14th Amendment."

p. 2

The amendment guarantees equal protection under the law to all persons without regard to race, color or creed. It was adopted during the reconstruction era when military governments were in power in the former Confederate states.

The 21 Negro defendants already have filed a petition in U. S. District Court," asking an order declaring the bus segregation law unconstitutional, and restraining the city from enforcing it.

Parker criticized what he said was "the attitude of a conspiring small group of Negroes who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands . . . Defiance of the law will contribute nothing toward amicable race relations."

Fri. 3-22-57

He recalled that when four white men were tried in his court on charges growing out of a 1956 attack upon Negro Singer Nat (King) Cole, he imposed maximum sentences.

All were sentenced to six months in jail and fined $100 but when they appealed to Circuit Court received only fines.

"This court will not tolerate any violence on the part of either the white or Negro races," said Parker. He said he had tried all his life to maintain harmonious race relations and "it cannot be accomplished without segregation in both public and private places."

The 21 Negroes were led in the mass segregation law violation last Dec. 26 by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth.

Parker contended that the 14th Amendment was not ratified legally. He charged that Congress pulled a "fast one" in passing the reconstruction act of 1868 which denied the Southern states representation in Congress until they approved the amendment.

The U. S. Supreme Court has declared the similar bus segregation ordinance of Montgomery unconstitutional.

Birmingham resurrects JC bus seat law

Afro-American Baltimore Md. Sat. 3-23-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—"Segregated seating on buses for white and colored passengers is necessary for the avoidance of friction, enmity and violence between the races," the city commission declared last week in resurrecting bus segregation ordinance.

Openly defying the U.S. Supreme Court, the commission, in a surprise move, passed an ordinance to "reaffirm, reenact and continue in fullforce and effect" the bus segregation ordinance already on the books.

* * *

THE COMMISSION BASES its action on the contention that enforcement of the ordinance is necessary to "safeguard the property and persons of its (Birmingham's) inhabitants and of the public in general and to insure peace, good will and friendliness between the races."

It adds that "There existed until recently in this city and area a relationship of extraordinary good will and understanding between the races, free from incidents, tensions and disorder."

Colored people who disregard the "deepseated aversion" of white people "to sitting on public buses in unsegregated proximity to colored people" are engendering "bitter resentment against all colored people pushing themselves into places where they are not welcome."

22 NEGROES FINED IN BUS BIAS CASE

New York Times p. 14 Fri. 3-22-57

Birmingham Judge Attacks Court's Integration Ruling and 14th Amendment

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 21 (UP)—City Judge Ralph E. Parker fined twenty-two Negroes $55 each today for defying city bus segregation laws. He asserted the Supreme Court had made a mistake in declaring bus segregation unconstitutional.

The Negroes, who jubilantly boarded the buses in a mass demonstration Dec. 26, listened glumly today while the judge read a long ruling attacking the high court's action.

Judge Parker said that to drop segregation on Birmingham buses would create a "state of emergency."

"I will not be responsible for such a calamity," he said.

Arthur Shores, attorney for the Negroes, said whether to appeal had not been decided. But he had indicated earlier, that relief would be sought in the Federal courts rather than in the state courts.

Cites Montgomery Decision

Judge Parker criticized the Supreme Court's order that outlawed segregation on carriers in Montgomery, the state capital, early this year. He said "judicial dictatorship cannot compel social adjustment." The court ruling in the Montgomery case, he said, "does not make the ruling correct either legally or morally."

The judge declared:

"Certainly I am not required by the oath taken by me to uphold the decisions of any court which are destructive of the Constitution.

"I had rather wear a ball and chain around my ankle than to wear one around my conscience."

Judge Parker said the City of Birmingham should challenge the validity of the Fourteenth Amendment, which he said was forced upon the Southern states without due process of law.

The amendment provides, among other things, that no state shall abridge the privileges of citizens nor deny to any person the equal protection of the laws.

Calls Amendment Void

"Knowing that ratification was coerced by military government [after the Civil War], certainly I am not alone in saying that the Fourteenth Amendment is null and void," Judge Parker said.

"I cannot conceive how any right-thinking person who understands the conditions that exist in the South can advocate abandoning our segregation laws, when such a course will inevitably lead to racial amalgamation and mongrelization.

"This country cannot afford to scrap the fundamental principles of the Bill of Rights, nor can it let the judiciary assume the function of the legislative bodies of our land."

Mr. Shores in his argument had charged all bus segregation laws were dead as a result of the Supreme Court's Montgomery ruling.

But the City Attorney, James H. Willis, replied that any Federal court ruling is subservient to a local government's "police powers."

On this, Judge Parker declared:

"No one until recently ever dreamed that the Federal Government would attempt to take over the powers and particularly the police powers of our several states and municipalities.

"There is certainly nothing in the Constitution that even mentions segregation."

NEGROES IN BUS CASE ARE FINED $55 EACH

Commercial Appeal p. 33

14th Amendment Null And Void, Judge Declares

Memphis Tenn.

SAYS HIGH COURT ERRED

Fri. 3-22-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 21.—(UP)—Recorders Court Judge Ralph E. Parker fined 22 Negroes $55 each Thursday for flaunting city bus segregation laws and declared the United States Supreme Court made a mistake in declaring bus segregation unconstitutional.

The Negroes, who had boarded the buses in a mass demonstration in defiance last Dec. 26, listened glumly as the judge read a lengthy ruling flaying the high court's desegregation action.

Would Create 'Emergency'

Judge Parker said to drop segregation on Birmingham buses would create a "state of emergency," and added, "I will not be responsible for such a calamity."

Negro attorney Arthur Shores said he had not decided whether to appeal. He had indicated earlier relief would be sought in the Federal courts rather than in the state courts.

Judge Parker criticized the Supreme Court's order which outlawed segregation on carriers in Montgomery. He said "judicial dictatorship cannot compel social adjustment." And the declared the court ruling in the Montgomery case "does not make the ruling correct either legally or morally."

"Certainly I am not required by the oath taken by me to uphold the decisioins of any court which are restructive of the Constitution.

"I had rather wear a ball and chain around my ankle than to wear one around my conscience."

Judge Parker said the City of Birmingham should challenge the validity of the 14th Amendment, which he said was forced upon the Southern states without due process of law.

"Knowing that ratification was coerced by military government, certainly I am not alone in saying that the 14th Amendment is null and void.

Warns Of 'Mongrelization'

"I cannot conceive how any right-thinking person who understands the conditions that exist in the South can advocate abandoning our segregation laws, when such a course will inevitably lead to racial amalgamation and mongrelization," he declared.

"This country cannot afford to scrap the fudamental principles of the Bill of Rights, nor can it let the judiciary assume the function of the legislative bodies of our land."

Shores, in his argument, had claimed all bus segregation laws were dead as a result of the Supreme Court's Montgomery ruling.

But the city attorney, James H. Willis, replied that any Federal courtr uling is secondary to a local government's "police powers."

On this, Judge Parker declared, "No one until recently ever dreamed that the Federal Government would attempt to take over the powers and particularly the police powers of our several states and municipalities . . .

"There is certainly nothing in the Constitution that even mentions segregation."

Negroes to drop bus suit appeal

News p. 1 Sun. 3-24-57

Atty. Arthur D. Shores said today 21 Negroes convicted of violating Birmingham's bus segregation law have decided against appealing the case.

The defendants decided at a meeting with Shores that they will pay the fines of $50 and costs of $5 each. They were convicted Thursday.

The Negroes still have a petition in U. S. District Court asking a declaration that the segregation ordinance is unconstitutional. No action has been taken on this suit.

'Speedy hearing' urged—

U.S. court asked to end city's bus segregation

News P. 1
B'ham, Ala. Mon. 1-14-57

Petition filed for Negroes arrested here

BY PAUL HOGAN
News staff writer

An end to segregation on buses in the city of Birmingham was asked in a complaint filed in U. S. District Court here today.

Arthur D. Shores, attorney for the 21 Negroes arrested Dec. 26 during a mass bus riding program by Negroes, asked that city ordinances maintaining segregation be declared unconstitutional.

Named as defendants in the action are Mayor James W. Morgan, City Commissioners Robert E. Lindbergh and J. T. Waggoner, and the Birmingham Transit Co.

After city officials were served with copies of the petition, Commissioner Lindbergh said:

"We intend to resist this with all legal power at our command."

The petition specifically asks for a "speedy hearing" in the action.

It seeks temporary injunction restraining the defendants from enforcing the city code pertaining to segregation on buses until a hearing is held.

Shores' complaint also asks that upon a final hearing the court will enter a final judgment that will declare the legal rights of the parties in relation to segregation.

The complaint asserts the final judgment should declare Sections 1002 and 1413 of the General City Code of Alabama, setting out bus segregation, null and void in that they "deny and deprive the plaintiffs and other Negro citizens similarly situated equal protection of the laws secured by the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution."

News
Final request is that the final judgment enjoin the defendants from enforcing the ordinances on the grounds that they are unconstitutional.

P. 2

The suit is brought on behalf of all other Negro citizens similarly situated, the complaint said.

Mon. 1-14-57

It claims that city commissioners seek to enforce the bus segregation ordanances and "to compel and require . . . all Negro citizens of the city of Birmingham to comply with the provisions of the unconstitutional ordinances . . ."

It continues, "pursuant to their (the city commissioners) orders the plaintiffs and other Negro citizens who fail to observe these ordinances are subject to arrest and confinement in jail."

The complaint sets out that each of the 21 plantiffs was arrested Dec. 26, and was required to make bond and now await trial.

It further states that Lindbergh, as police commissioner, threatens to bring "other additional charges against your plaintiffs for having already exercised their constitutional rights."

Attached to the complaint is a copy of the General Code of Alabama sections pertaining to segregation on transportation vehicles.

The Negroes boarded Birmingham Transit Co. buses en mass Dec. 26 after a meeting of Negro leaders of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights here. The group was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, president of the movement, whose home had been bombed Christmas night.

Twenty-one persons were arrested on the afternoon of Dec. 26 and another Negro was arrested the following day on charges of violating the city's bus segregation ordinance.

The 21 Negroes have not yet been tried in Recorders Court here. Their cases are set for hearing Feb. 11. Violation of the laws in question is subject to a maximum of $100 fine and 180 days in City Jail.

In WABT, WAPI talk—

News P. 1
B'ham, Ala.

Race strife may halt state buses, Owen says

Mon. 1-14-57

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

Fears that continued violence from attempts to stop segregation on buses in Alabama would bring an end to this mode of transportation in Birmingham, Montgomery and other cities were voiced here by the head of the Public Service Commission.

Commission President Jack Owen declared, however, there would be a chance to maintain separate seating for whites and Negroes, if all bus line owners would cooperate.

OWEN, EXPRESSING his views on Sunday's "Alabama Press Conference," sponsored by The Birmingham News and Stations WABT and WAPI, took a poke at the Chicago company officials operating Montgomery city bus lines.

"They are more inclined to integration than bus owners here in Alabama," said Owen.

He warned that turmoil and violence over the question would seriously threaten continued operation of buses by the Birmingham Transit Co., which he emphasized showed a willingness to cooperate in maintaining segregation.

The PSC head outlined his proposal to push through legislation clothing bus drivers with law enforcement powers, plus judicial authority, such as that accorded a justice of peace. This would enable them to keep order on buses and protect them from suits, he said.

"I BELIEVE a bus driver should have the same authority in transporting passengers that the pilot of a plane has," he said.

Owen also wants legislation enacted to put all city bus lines under complete jurisdiction of the commission.

He blamed much of the violence on "outside agitators and rabble-rousers," adding the assertion that "there's a possibility that colored hoodlums" are responsible for widespread bombings.

"These bombings hurt the white persons cause," he said. "We'll have to accomplish segregation by peaceful means and law-and-order legislation."

OWEN DOES NOT feel that a so-called policy of "gradualism" can possibly bring about bus integration in Alabama "in the foreseeable future."

The commission head declared he does not believe President Eisenhower sincerely wants any mixing of the races. And he does not think any tour of the South by the president or Vice President Nixon, as suggested by Atlanta Negro leaders, would aid integration.

Owen asserted that "political ambitions" caused Vice President Nixon to urge an end to segregation.

As to politics, Owen, who ran for governor in 1954, said he was being encouraged to run again in 1958. He added that if he and his friends "feel that I can win, I will run."

REGARDING reports that Owen's fight for maintaining segregation on public transportation systems was "an attempt to make political hay" out of this issue, he said Alabama law makes it the duty of the commission president to wage such a fight.

News

"My actions have been taken in carrying out my duties as Public Service Commission president," he added. "In doing so, I have removed any possibility of getting the Negro vote. But I'll get the votes of the people who believe in segregation as I do."

P. 2

Concerning criticism by one gubernatorial aspirant that Owen's "batting average" on the segregation question was none too good, Owen declared:

"I have done everything legally in my power to maintain segregation. I defy anyone to say that I have not."

Owen emphasized that he is opposed to integration in any of Alabama's public schools, including colleges.

Mon. 1-14-57

HE ADDED that if he had been governor when Negro coed Arthurine Lucy Foster enrolled at University of Alabama, he would have used police to escort her away from the campus, instead of from class to class, for her protection "and to keep down violence."

Owen was questioned by Bob Ingram, Montgomery Advertiser political write; George Watson, editor and publisher of The East End News, and this reporter. The program was moderated by Charlie Davis, WABT-WAPI news editor.

State Agriculture Commissioner A. W. Todd will be questioned on "Alabama Press Conference" television program from 12:30 to 1 p.m. next Sunday.

Recorder is given chance to hear trial

News P. 1
B'ham, Ala.

BY PAUL HOGAN
News staff writer

Times 1-21-57

A federal judge today overruled a motion by city commissioners asking dismissal of a complaint that seeks an injunction against enforcement of Birmingham bus segregation ordinances.

Judge H. Hobart Grooms however did dismiss the Birmingham Transit Co. as defendants in the case because "there are no averments in the complaint showing that the Transit Co. conspired to enforce the laws."

38b

THE COMPLAINT was filed by 21 Negroes who were arrested during a mass violation of the questioned ordinances Dec. 26. They also asked that the ordinances be ruled unconstitutional.

Judge Grooms pointed out that the U. S. District Court would not be able to hear further action on the complaint until sometime in May. He said this would give city courts time to rule on the cases made by police charging the Negroes with bus segregation violation.

THE JUDGE explained that Recorders Court judges "are bound by the same oath I am" and have equal power to deciding constitutional questions.

The city was given 30 days to file a formal answer to the complaint. Atty. Arthur Shores, who represents the Negroes, was allowed 10 days to amend his complaint in the case dismissal of the Transit Co. as a defendant.

Judge Grooms said that after city courts have ruled on the cases, city attorneys "will have the liberty to come back here and ask for a stay in the case."

THE CITY had asked that the Federal Court dismiss the complaint since "general procedures" would direct the case from Recorder's Court through state courts and then to the U. S. Supreme Court.

He said jury trials that have already been docketed in Federal Court would prevent the case being brought up for hearing "this month and probably not even in April."

The cases are set before Judge

Ralph E. Parker in Recorder's Court March 18.

IN ALLOWING Shores to amend his complaint regarding the Transit Co., Judge Grooms commented, "I think you can get your relief from the other party."

City Attorney J. H. Willis asked that "the court not make up its mind until I have had a chance to argue it further."

Judge Grooms again pointed out that the hearing would start "afresh" when it comes up again.

"I have faith in the state courts that they will uphold their oath to defend the Constitution," Judge Grooms commented.

BEFORE JUDGE GROOMS ruled, Willis quoted several cases which he said showed that state courts had a priority in the matter.

The cases in Birmingham differ from those growing out of a similar situation in Montgomery, Willis said, in that "we have violence to show in this case that was not present in Montgomery."

He referred to bombings and other acts of violence that followed Federal Court ruling outlawing segregation on buses in Montgomery.

APSC requests Terminal racial suit be dismissed

News P. 25
Mon. 2-18-57

Birm., Ala.

Alabama Public Service Commission today asked dismissal of a U. S. District Court complaint which seeks to end segregation in the Birmingham Terminal Station.

A motion to dismiss the complaint was filed in behalf of the commission.

The APSC, along with the station and Birmingham City Commission, were named earlier as defendants in the action brought by Carl L. Baldwin, a Negro, and his wife, after they were arrested at Terminal Station.

Police said the Baldwins refused to move to a Negro waiting room and charged the couple with disorderly conduct.

City commissioners have already filed a motion asking dismissal of the suit, contending that the federal courts are without jurisdiction in the case.

The original complaint filed last month asks for a declaratory judgement and an injunction preventing enforcement of segregation at Terminal Station.

Birmingham Mayor Urges Delay In Transit Strike

Advertiser Sat. 3-30-57 P. 1

Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, March 29 (AP)—An appeal to union bus drivers to delay a threatened strike against the Birmingham Transit Co. was issued today by Mayor James W. Morgan.

A dispute over union wage demands is one of several reasons the company said it would be forced to abandon bus service in metropolitan Birmingham.

Morgan urged the bus drivers and other members of the operators union to meet with him Sunday morning.

The union is voting now on whether it will strike Sunday night.

Don James, president of the company, said labor troubles, segregation difficulties and declining revenue are the reasons the company has decided to cease operations.

The operators are members of the Amalgamated Assn. of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

James told an emergency session of the city commission yesterday that the union is demanding 46 cents an hour increase, while the company was prepared to pay 3 cents an hour, which he said would amount to approximately $45,000 a year.

"We are going down the road financially . . . and it's now a question of whether the city needs us more than we need the city," a company spokesman said today.

The transit company carried more than 30 million riders last year, James said.

Birmingham Sees 'No Alternative' To Halting Buses

"Constitution" Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 3-29-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 28 (AP)—The Birmingham Transit Co. today notified the city commission it had "no alternative" but to abandon bus service because of labor and segregation difficulties.

Reporting a "general decline in riding," Transit Co. President Don James told the commissioners, "It is very definite that service has been affected because of segregation problems. Negroes were scared to death. Some white people have told us they definitely weren't going to ride the buses."

James also said the company could not meet union demands for a wage increase of 46 cents per hour when the present contract expires at midnight Sunday.

Segregation Foe Quits Birmingham

World Telegram + Sun. P. 3

United Press Photo.

LAMAR WEAVER.

New York

By ED ROGERS.

United Press Staff Writer.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 7.—A frightened white integrationist, attacked here yesterday by a crowd of white men, fled from the city in the night, it was reported today.

Lamar Weaver, 29, said after his harrowing experience that he was "scared to death" and planned to move his family out of Alabama "for good."

Weaver's mother, Mrs. Ruth Rogers, said his wife and child already had "fled" and that Mr. Weaver packed his bags and left last night to join them at an undisclosed place. He had been employed as a clerk at a steel mill.

Aided by Reporter.

He said he did not "know where I'm going," but would try to "tell the world" about the racial situation in Birmingham.

Mr. Weaver credited his escape in the melee of rock throwing and fist swinging to a reporter who blocked several men who were trying to grab Mr. Weaver as he got in his car at a parking lot.

Mr. Weaver was fined $30 in court a short time afterward for rocketing into traffic with his convertible after the crowd had smashed the windows with paving blocks.

Asks Early Trial.

He had asked for an immediate trial so he could leave town.

The incident followed his visit to a railway terminal as a witness while the Rev. F. L. Shuttleworth, Negro integration leader in Birmingham, began his uneventful "integrated" railway trip to Atlanta.

Alabama Judge In 'Reversal'

Call P. 1
Fri. 3-29-57

Kansas City, Mo.

Rules Against Decision of U. S. Supreme Court

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(INS)—The constitutionality of Birmingham's segregation laws was upheld in court here March 21.

Recorders Court Judge Joseph E. Parker found —— Lila Baylor guilty of violation of the segregation suit and applied his decision to 20 other Negroes arrested on the same charge.

The defendants were fined $50 each, assessed $5 court costs apiece, and ordered a day in jail for each two dollars of the fine not paid.

"There would be a state of emergency in the state of Birmingham," the judge said, if bus segregation was voided.

The decision will be appealed, Defense Attorney Arthur Shores said.

The 21 Negroes were arrested Dec. 26, when more than 100 of them staged a mass unsegregated riding attempt. Their trial was completed in two hours Monday with Parker taking the case under advisement.

Judge Parker in his ruling said "Enmity, hate or prejudice should not burst the bounds of restraint . . . we cannot have good will and domestic tranquility unless our segregation laws are respected and obeyed. They are vital and necessary to avoid friction and calamity."

Call P. 4

The judge, referring to the defendant and those fighting for bus integration as a "small group who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands," said his decision was based on evidence and facts—not race prejudice.

Judge Parker, anticipating his decision would be appealed, said the most important question facing the nation is the legality of the 14th amendment, and suggested the city present this question "squarely to the U.S. Supreme Court."

The chief recorder said he was concerned over those "who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands, violating the laws of the city of Birmingham." he added:

"Defiance of the law will contribute nothing towards amicable race relations. Any such defiance in the future will certainly bring suffering, disappointment and hardship to the colored people and our economic security will be jeopardized."

He said he firmly believed the city's segregation laws are constitutional, adding, "we cannot have good will and domestic tranquility unless our laws are obeyed."

38b 1957

ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM

LIFE WAS SPARED—When the home of the Rev. F. L. Shuttleworth was bombed in Birmingham on Christmas night, the occupants of the home miraculously escaped serious injury, although two children were slightly injured by the dynamite blast. The Rev. Mr. Shuttleworth, one of the leaders of the integration fight in this city, said the bombing would not deter his fight against segregation. The holiday bombing was reminiscent of that in Mims, Fla., six years ago, which claimed the lives of Harry T. Moore, NAACP leader and his wife.

Ala. teacher, husband, await trial on violation of JC law

Afro-American p. 19

38b

BIRMINGHAM (Ala.) (ANP) —Hearing on the "disorderly conduct case" growing out of the use of the general waiting room at the Terminal Station by Carl Lambert Baldwin, 36, and his school-teacher wife, Mrs. Alexnia Young Baldwin, 31, was postponed Wednesday in Recorder's court to Wednesday, Jan. 16.

City Judge Ralph E. Parker granted the delay at the request of Demetrius C. Newton, counsel for the Baldwins. The city offered no opposition to the postponement.

The Baldwins purchased tickets and made reservations for Milwaukee, Wis. on the crack passenger train, the "City of Miami" on Saturday, Dec. 22. The train was late and they used the nearest waiting room.

A five-man police detail, according to the statement issued by the Baldwins through their lawyer, appeared at the waiting room, gave them 30 seconds to "get in the colored waiting room." When the Baldwins did not do so, they were arrested, charged with "disorderly conduct," carried to city jail and released on $100 bond each.

At the postponed hearing Wednesday, Atty. Newton asked the judge for an arrest warrant. Apparently through this procedure he was trying to nail down the specified charges.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago the Interstate Commerce Commission of Alabama ordered the segregation signs put back in sight and the segregated waiting rooms re-opened.

Since that time the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled the Alabama state segregation laws and Montgomery bus Jim Crow ordinances unconstitutional.

Bus End Predicted By Alabama Official

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 13.—(UP)—The president of the Alabama Public Service Commission said Sunday he believes there will be "so much violence" that Montgomery city buses will never be able to operate on an integrated basis.

City bus service in Montgomery was suspended indefinitely last week after four Negro churches and two homes were dynamited to climax nearly two weeks of violence that followed bus integration.

However, C. C. 'Jack' Owen, in a television appearance here, said he believes that recent bombings in Montgomery may have been the work of Negroes in an effort to raise sympathy funds from the North.

Mr. Owen, an outspoken segregationist, said he does not think that integration can be brought about gradually in Alabama and he blamed current violence on "Northern people and rabble-rousers."

The Public Service official said he does not think President Eisenhower wants any mixing of the races. "I certainly doubt his sincerity in wanting to bring about integration," he said.

However, he said, "political ambitions" prompted Vice President Nixon to speak out for the end of segregation.

Mr. Owen, who ran unsuccessfully for governor in 1954, said he may run again in 1958 "if me and my friends feel like I can run the race."

Judge Nixes Suit Against Jim Crow

Courier 1-25-57

BIRMINGHAM (ANP) — Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin's suit to break down Alabama's railroad waiting room segregation was thrown out of court here last week by U.S. District Judge Seybourn H. Lynne as an "attempt to use the Federal courts for propaganda purposes."

6 Birmingham Negro Boys Charged In Bus Shooting

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Tues. 1-1-57

BIRMINGHAM, Dec. 31 (AP) — Six Negro boys today were charged with malicious mischief after police said they admitted peppering a trolley bus with air rifle pellets.

P. 2-A

Police Commissioner Robert E. Lindbergh, who announced the action, said an earlier bus shooting case was now believed to have been vandalism, and not a racial incident. He said neither case had anything to do with efforts of Negroes to end segregation on buses here.

Shots struck buses here Saturday and Sunday with little damage. Bus driver Donald M. Faulkner told officers he saw two white youths run from the scene after the Saturday night incident.

Negroes staged mass violations last Wednesday of Birmingham laws requiring whites and Negroes to sit in separate sections of public vehicles. Since then there have been a few isolated reports of Negroes occupying seats reserved for white passengers.

NONE INJURED

No one was injured in either the Saturday or Sunday incident.

Seven pellets, all aimed at the white section, struck the Birmingham Transit Co. bus yesterday. Four windows were cracked and glass was splattered on a white woman passenger.

Police immediately began a check in the area for boys who had received air rifles for Christmas, and the arrests followed. The six boys, ranging from 8 to 13 years old, were turned over to juvenile authorities.

The Wednesday demonstration was led by officers of the pro-integration Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. They called for a halt of the mass violations the following day, indicating that they planned to take their attack on city segregation laws to the federal courts.

Fed. Court Help Asked By B'Ham Bus Defendants

Mobile Ala.
Tues. 1-15-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (INS) — A Federal court Monday was asked to halt proceedings against 22 Negroes arrested for violating segregation laws.

An attorney for the defendants, who were arrested for riding in the front seats of buses Dec. 26, asked that the Federal court decision which held segregation to be unlawful at Montgomery, Ala., be made applicable to Birmingham.

A similar petition in Miami, Fla., several weeks ago resulted in a Federal court ruling extending the applications of the Montgomery decision, which ended bus segregation in the Alabama capital.

Negroes in Birmingham gave up efforts to ride buses in an unsegregated fashion in the city after the arrests.

B'ham News Hits Terror In Editorial

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.
Sat. 1-12-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The Birmingham News has come out editorially against the wave of violence taking place in the Southern steel-producing center, calling it "the common enemy."

The News declared that "violence is a threat to the security of all" and "cannot bring solutions." The daily further stated that violence "can mean brutal, indefensible injustice for those against whom it is directed . . . good citizens are horrified and incensed by resort to violence such as has been directed at two Negro homes in Birmingham in recent days."

The News asked for all of Birmingham's citizens to be vigilant in guarding against further outrages.

"Surely all our good people must not be helplessly subject to the excesses of an irresponsible, dangerous few," said The News.

21 Fined, Bench Attacks U.S. Law in Bus Case

Post & Times Herald Washington P. 2
Fri. 3-22-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 21 (AP) — Municipal Judge Ralph E. Parker today fined 21 Negroes $50 and costs each for violating Birmingham's bus segregation law, and in his ruling charged that the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution is "null and void."

Parker struck out at what he called "the attitude of a conspiring small group of Negroes who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands."

"Defiance of the law will contribute nothing toward amicable race relations,' he said.

The 14th Amendment guarantees equal protection under the law. It is a keystone of many Negro legal attacks on racial segregation laws in the South. It was adopted during the Reconstruction Period following the Civil War, when Southern states were under military rule.

"Southern Senators and Representatives were denied their right to participate in the two-thirds vote necessary for submitting the amendment to the states for ratification," Parker charged. He asserted also that Congress "pulled a fast one" in adopting the Reconstruction Act in 1868.

Parker overruled defense arguments offered at the trial Monday that the segregation law is invalid. A similar Montgomery, Ala. ordinance was declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Negroes already have filed a petition in U. S. District Court, asking a ruling that the city law is unconstitutional, and an order restraining police from enforcing the measure.

The mass violation was staged Dec. 26. It was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, and most of the demonstrators were directors of the organization.

Since that time the City Commission has adopted a new ordinance reaffirming the bus segregation regulation, and calling it necessary for the safety of both white and Negro races.

GUARD NEGROES AWAITING TRAIN IN 'WHITE' AREA

Daily Tribune Chicago, Ill.
Thurs. 3-7-57

Police Stand By After Way Is Barred

P. 16-h

Birmingham, Ala., March 6 [Special]—City police today gave protection of a Negro minister and his wife who carried out a previously announced plan to sit in the white waiting room of a railroad station while awaiting their train.

This was an about-face from the police attitude a month ago when another Negro couple who took seats in the same waiting room were arrested for disorderly conduct, a charge subsequently dismissed in court.

A group of about 100 white men gathered at the station today but offered no violence against the Negro couple except for a minor shoving incident while police cleared a path to the door. However, several white men subsequently stoned the automobile of Lamar Weaver, a white man known as an integration sympathizer who sat with the Negroes in the station.

Car Windows Smashed

The stoning took place when Weaver tried to drive away from the station after the Negroes had boarded their train. The windshield and side windows of Weaver's car were smashed, and Weaver, who speeded his car to avoid the missile shower, was halted by police and charged with reckless driving.

The arrest of Weaver was the only formal action taken by police, altho officers earlier hustled a Ku Klux Klan observer out of the station. This was R. E. Chambless, a former city employe known as an ardent segregation proponent. Police said they removed him from the scene to avoid possible trouble after he told them he was there as a representative of the Klan.

The Negroes were the Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Shuttlesworth. He is pastor of the Bethel Baptist church here and president of the Albama Christian Movement fro Human Rights, a pro-integration organization formed after Alabama courts last year outlawed Alabama activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Telephones Newspapers

Shuttlesworth, 27, announced his intention of sitting in the white waiting room by telephoning newspapers.

"Negroes will sit where white men sit, and ride where white men ride, and act like men, and if we are molested for doing so that will mean the city has stooped to intimidation, harassing, and molesting Negroes," he said.

There were several police officers on hand when the Shuttlesworths arrived at Birmingham's Terminal station two hours in advance of train time.

The Shuttlesworths advanced on a door bearing a sign "white and interstate passengers." An unidentified white man blocked their passage, pointing to the sign. They turned toward another door to the same room, where another white man shoved them. Police then closed around them in a cordon, opened the door, and escorted them to seats.

Fred Gray Case Dropped At Capital

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 11 (AP)—A disorderly conduct charge against Fred D. Gray for refusing to leave a white waiting room at the city airport here was dismissed today in Recorder's Court after the Negro attorney said he "did not mean to create a disturbance or cause trouble."

Judge D. Eugene Loe announced he took the action after a conference with Gray before court convened, when the attorney assured him he had no intention "creating an incident."

"The defendant appeared before me in my chambers just before court," the judge said, "and stated he arrived at Dannelly Field at 1:55 p.m. to catch a 2:04 p.m. flight to Atlanta, that his flight was late and the ticket agent told him to wait while he tried to get him on another flight.

"He stated that when he sat in the white waiting room he had no intention of creating an incident. He further stated he did not know there was a colored waiting room at the time he sat down.

"He assured me he was sorry the incident took place and he did not intend to creat a disturbance or cause trouble. Based on this statement together with investigation and recommendation of the city prosecutor, Dave Crossland, I am dismissing the case."

Gray made national headlines about a year ago in a draft board dispute and was legal spokesman for his race in the Negro boycott of Montgomery's segregated buses last year.

morning.

Judge Loe said he dismissed the case on the basis of a statement by Gray and the investigation and recommendation of Dave Crosland, city prosecutor.

Gray's statement, given Judge Loe before court began yesterday, said that when he set in the white waiting room he had "no intention of creating an incident" and that he did not know there was a colored waiting room at the time he sat down.

The Negro attorney assured the judge that he was sorry the incident took place and that he did not intend "to create a disturbance or cause trouble."

Gray appeared before Judge Loe in the judge's chambers prior to the opening of Recorder's Court and was not present in the courtroom.

Court Ousts Gray's Case

The case against Negro attorney Fred Gray was dismissed yesterday morning by Recorder's Court Judge D. Eugene Loe.

Gray had been charged with disorderly conduct after refusing to move from the white waiting room at Dannelly Field Sept. 27. He was scheduled to appear before Recorder's Court yesterday

38b 1957

ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Birmingham Segregation Case Argued Before Appeals Court

By JO ANN FLIRT

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit yesterday heard oral arguments in a case in which a Negro couple seeks to invalidate segregated waiting rooms in the Birmingham Terminal Station.

Hearing the case were Presiding Judge Richard T. Rives, Montgomery; Judge John R. Brown, Houston, Tex., and Judge Warren L. Jones, Jacksonville, Fla.

The case reached the appellate court after U.S. District Judge Seybourn H. Lynne dismissed the Negroes' complaint on the grounds, among others, that no concrete case, but only a hypothetical question was presented.

Unspecified city charges against Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin were dropped after the couple was arrested in a Birmingham railroad terminal waiting room which bore a sign 'interstate and white passengers." The Baldwins has purchased tickets to Milwaukee, Wis., to visit relatives over the Christmas holidays, they stated.

After the arrest, the couple filed a suit in Birmingham federal court seeking a permanent injunction against the city commission, members of the Alabama Public Service Commission and the Birmingham Terminal Co. enjoining them from enforcing segregated waiting rooms.

Attorneys for the defendants in the case argued that there was no federal question involved and quoted a part of Judge Lynne's opinion in which the judge stated "a mistake apparently was made in arresting these plaintiffs."

Charged in the suit with issuing orders to uphold segregated facilities, the Alabama Public Service Commission argued that there were no state laws requiring the Birmingham station to operate on a segregated basis except a section of the Alabama code requiring that facilities be available "having regard to sex and race."

Since the Baldwins were interstate passengers they can not challenge the state statute which relates to intrastate passengers only, both the PSC and other attorneys argues.

An attorney for the terminal company in seeking a dismissal of the suit as to the company contended that it operated under no "color of law" and had upheld no statutes either constitutional or unconstitutional.

A similar argument was advanced by a city attorney who admitted the couple's arrest had been 'a mistake" but contended no class action could be the proper result of the incident especially since the charges had been dropped.

Attorneys for the Negroes contend that the sign—called by the terminal company "an invitation" to the passengers to sit in unsegregated waiting rooms—was in fact designed to discourage integration. They claim it was placed there at the orders of the PSC.

Birmingham Wins Round In Bus Case

Court Refuses Plea For Judgment Against City In Racial Suit

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 30 (AP) —Federal Judge Hobart Grooms today turned down a motion for a summary judgment against the City of Birmingham in the city's segregation dispute.

The hearing was on a petition of an attorney representing a group of Negroes arrested last Dec. 26, on a charge of violating the city's racial ordinances.

Grooms, however, said he would not rule immediately on whether the issue had been settled in City Recorder's Court, as claimed by the city attorneys.

RACE VIOLATIONS

Grooms heard about 20 minutes of argument from city attorneys and Atty. Arthur Shores, who represented 22 Negroes arrested last Dec. 26 on a charge of violating the racial ordinances.

The Negroes were arrested following their mass effort to break down the segregation barriers by riding in seats designated for white patrons on Birmingham Transit Co. buses.

City Atty. James H. Willis contended that the question of constitutionality of the segregation ordinances was settled last February, when Recorder's Court Judge Ralph E. Parker declared that the ordinances were constitutional.

COMPARISON MADE

Shores argued that the case in Recorder's Court was a criminal one and that a criminal case has nothing to do with a civil one.

The judge said that he would not rule on Birmingham Transit Co.'s part in the case because the company is a corporation.

Last February Grooms dismissed the transit company as a defendant, but the company was later reinstated when Shores amended a complaint naming the utility.

38b 1957 ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA (Railway Station)
Mr. Lamar Weaver
Rev.& Mrs. Shuttlesworth

AT BIRMINGHAM STATION

Advertiser

Mob Attacks White Man

Montgomery, Ala.

For Sitting By Negroes

Thurs. 3-7-57

BIRMINGHAM Ala., March 6—Angry white men, frustrated in efforts to bar a Negro minister and his wife from a white waiting room at a railroad station, attacked a white man who sat beside them today.

Lamar Weaver, a white steelworker who has made speeches advocating racial intergration, escaped in his car in a shower of heavy stones. Windows of his convertible were shattered and he was struck in the face with a suitcase.

Police Chief Jamie Moore said that Weaver later was charged with reckless driving following the stoning of his automobile as he left the station. Officers are investigating a complaint that his car struck a pedestrian.

Weaver later was charged with reckless driving.

"I left accelerating my speed because a mob of about 50 persons was attempting to either kill me or cause bodily harm," he testified at a Recorders Court trial. He was fined $25.

Weaver later told reporters he was leaving for Washington where he said he would appear before the House Civil Rights subcommittee. He said he had no further definite plans, but would not return to Birmingham.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife entered the Birmingham terminal station under police escort after they were twice blocked by members of the pro-segregation white group.

Virtually surrounded by police, the Shuttlesworths were in the waiting room for almost 1½ hours before boarding a New York-bound passenger train. They said they had bought tickets for Atlanta.

More than a score of uniformed officers swarmed into the station and guarded its approaches, preventing any disorder in the immediate vicinity.

After the Shuttlesworths were inside the station, police ordered away a crowd of white men, including R. E. Chambliss, ex-city employe who said he represented the Ku Klux Klan.

Advertiser

Police also orders Negroes who came to the ticket windows between the white and Negro sections back into the Negro waiting room unless they were there to buy tickets.

Thurs. 3-7-57

Shuttlesworth led mass violations of Birmingham's bus segregation laws by 21 Negroes Dec. 26. The Negroes have asked a federal court ruling that the ordinance is unconstitutional, and an injunction restraining police from enforcing segregation on the city buses.

P. 12-A

The Negro minister led the defiance of the bus segregation law a few hours after his church and adjoining home were damaged by a dynamite bomb. He is pastor of the Bethel Baptist church in an industrial section of North Birmingham.

Shuttlesworth also is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, a pro-integration organization formed shortly after activities of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama.

A Negro attack on segregation at the terminal station was thrown out of federal court here last Monday. In doing so, U.S. Dist. Judge Seybourne H. Lynne said there was no state or city law against racial segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

Shuttlesworth announced in advance that he planned to occupy a seat in the white waiting room, which is designated for "interstate and white passengers." Negroes had been barred in the past.

By the time he and his wife arrived shortly after noon both a number of police and the white men who attempted to block his way were ranged around the entrances.

First a white youth blocked the path of the Shuttlesworths outside an entrance and called his attention to the sign, ordering him to go to the Negro waiting room.

"I don't want any trouble with you," said Shuttlesworth. With his wife following he walked to another entrance. This time he was pushed back by a surge of white men jamming the entrance, and at this point police intervened.

Weaver didn't enter the scene until the Shuttlesworths had taken seats on a bench nearest the passageway leading to the Negro waiting room.

He talked with them for several minutes. Officers then approached, inquired if Weaver had a ticket, and ordered him outside when he said he did not.

A crowd of angry white men followed him to his car, cursing, striking and threatening Weaver as they crowded around him.

Police officer W. C. Wilhite said witnesses told him that in turning around Weaver's car backed into another automobile, then ran a red light and struck a pedestrian, who apparently was not injured.

AP Wirephoto

BIRMINGHAM MAN ATTACKED IN RACIAL INCIDENT
Lamar Weaver (seated, left), Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Shuttlesworth

Wednesday afternoon, March 6, at the hands of an unruly mob in Birmingham.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth sat, unmolested, in a section of a railroad waiting room traditionally reserved for white people. But a crowd of about 50 white men attacked his companion, Lamar Weaver, after police made Weaver leave the station.

The crowd, jeering, smashed windows in Weaver's car, and tried to turn the vehicle over. He sped away while the crowd stopped momentarily to remonstrate with a news photographer who had slammed shut the door of Weaver's car.

Weaver was not injured, but he

Mob Attacks White Man

Call Fri. 3-15-57 P.1

Who Sits With a Negro

Kansas City, Mo.

Minister In Station

BIRMINGHAM. — (INS) — A white man who shared a railroad waiting room seat with a Negro minister narrowly escaped injury claimed a short time later that he was struck a number of times as he made his way, surrounded by the mob, to his car. He also said police made no effort to protect him.

Shuttlesworth, accompanied by his wife, left the waiting room when the crowd — including a number of members of a White Citizens Council and a Ku Klux Klan organization — set upon Weaver.

The Rev. Shuttlesworth had announced earlier Wednesday that he would sit in a section of the waiting room reserved by custom for white patrons. The decision was based, he said, on a federal court ruling this week that there is no Alabama law calling for segregated waiting rooms. The federal court, in making this ruling, dismissed a suit by two Negroes protesting their arrest, holding this suit was filed for "propaganda purposes." Call P.4

The Rev. Shuttlesworth, president of the Alabama Movement for Human rights, bought a railroad ticket and sat in the white waiting room. Weaver sat beside him for about five miuntes while they talked.

Police forced Weaver to move because he held no railroad ticket. As he left the railroad station, and headed for his automobile, a crowd of white people hastily gathered. They jeered at Weaver, with shouts of "nigger lover."

When he got into his car, someone threw a stone. Others joined in, breaking windows in the car. Before Weaver drove off, a group of white men pushed and pulled on the car, attempting to overturn it.

The Rev. Shuttlesworth, who led a movement by Negroes to disregard Alabama segregation laws on Birmingham buses several weeks ago, had announced that he would disregard custom at the railroad station.

When he arrived at the station, newsmen and a crowd of people were waiting. As the minister started in the front door, he was stopped by Don Godwin, 24, who told Shuttlesworth not to go in. The minister brushed past him. Three more men pushed the Negro minister back from the door. One of them was identified by newsmen as R. E. Chamblis, a well known Birmingham member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Shuttlesworth turned around, and entered the station through another door.

Weaver was already there, the two shook hands and sat down together.

Police, in making Weaver move, did not take any action against the minister.

"They should ask all the mob in terminal station to leave," the Rev. Shuttlesworth said, referring to a group standing around watching.

Weaver escaped from his attackers when the aroused crowd turned to argue with a newspaper photographer who had slammed the door of Weaver's car.

Weaver said a number of the men in the crowd punched at him, and he was hit several times.

Weaver later charged that police made no effort to protect him.

"They didn't follow the crowd that followed me, and police saw men strike me and did nothing about it," he said.

Weaver had announced his candidacy for Public Improvements Commissioner in Birmingham, but withdrew from the race this week, claiming that his life had been threatened because of his stand for an end to segregation.

Later in the day, Weaver was fined for the "reckless driving" he did to get away from the mob.

A city judge told Weaver that he had brought the attack upon himself by his disregard for local "customs and traditions."

Judge Oliver B. Hall fined Weaver $25 for reckless driving because his car struck and dented another vehicle as he sped away from the Birmingham terminal station, where a crowd stoned his car, and tried to overturn it.

No one else was arrested as a result of the incident — an effort of foes of segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

"A man cannot fly into the face of traditions and customs and not expect to be burned," Judge Hall told Weaver, who contended he could not avoid running into the other car because he was "fleeing for my life."

Race Violence Rises as Hate-Mongers Stone White Man

Black Dispatch Art. 3-15-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (ANP)—Race tension among whites here came to a head last week and burst into open violence as irate white men attacked and stoned the automobile of a young white man who sat beside a Negro minister and wife in a railroad station.

The young white man, Lamar Weaver, had to flee for his life, after some 50 white racists converged upon him with hate-filled eyes, after their efforts to bar the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife from a white waiting room at Birmingham Terminal Railroad Station, failed. P.1

Weaver, a steelworker, who openly defied the dictums of segregation and advocated racial integration, had sat beside Rev. Shuttlesworth and his wife at the station and entered into conversation. Oklahoma City Okla.

Weaver was later arrested by police for speeding after he accelerated his car speed to escape a shower of stones thrown by the white mob. In Recorders Court, he was fined $25 and $5 costs of court for speeding, despite the fact that his life was endangered.

Weaver told newsmen he was leaving for Washington where he was to testify before the House Civil Rights Subcommittee on racial conditions in Alabama.

He stated that he had no definite plans for the future, but would not return to Birmingham.

The 29-year-old Weaver said he was threatened with loss of life, lost his wife and was losing his home because he campaigned for Negro rights. Weaver had tried to run for the City Commission here, but withdrew as a candidate because of the "bitterness" of the campaign.

He declared in a letter to Senator Hennings (D.-Mo.), "I would like to bring with me the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth whose church and home was bombed out from under him. Together we could give your committee facts about violence, discrimination and economic pressure brought about to Negroes." Ftc. 3-15-57

Weaver said the "Ku Klux Klan of the Confederacy rides the streets with hoods and robes and holds open meetings unmolested. This organization should be stamped out of existence, as they are a threat to our democracy. I would give information concerning these groups and their activities." P. 2

Weaver said he has been denounced and attacked as a "nigger lover" for advocating compliance with the U. S. Supreme Court decision on school integration. He said his wife left him because she feared for her life. He asserted that the real estate firm notified him they were terminating his lease and he would have to move.

Daylight Mob

World P. 6

The other day, Lamar Weaver, a controversial figure and an advocate of unpopular views, went to the Birmingham Terminal Station to bid off two of his friends. His two friends, a minister and his wife, were using a waiting room which has ugly racial signs hanging over its doors. He was victimized by a daylight mob.

B'ham, Ala.

Lamar Weaver is a white man. The couple were members of the Negro group. That too, was unpopular, mixed friendship, although the white South claims that it is "the Negro's best friend." The couple held tickets, Mr. Weaver held a hand of friendship.

Wed. 3-13-57

It now has come to light that the minister notified police, press and radio that he planned to make a trip by train, and would use the waiting room of his choice. It appears that in addition to the legitimate observers, that others of questionable purposes came on the scene. From the press agents, a certain mischevious group was on patrol.

Lamar Weaver, greeting and conversing with his friends, was reportedly ordered off the company property. Off the property, he encountered some persons identified as members of a hindering outfit. He was shaken up, stoned, and chased by a mob. He did not get the protection which it seemed the situation demanded.

Does Alabama have an anti-mob law? Is it lawful for vigilante groups to loiter around a public facility interfering with patrons? Is it against the law for one to see his friend off on train? Instead of removing the mob, a man who had what seems to have been a legitimate reason for being at the Terminal Station, was marched out and left to make it as best he could in the face of a hostile collection of men.

Whether one likes or disagrees with the views of Lamar Weaver has nothing to do with the question of protection. Whether the actions of Lamar Weaver were wise, planned, or put-up is irrevelant. Whether this couple went to Terminal Station to test the law, for a popularity stunt, or to provide an incident, the facts remain that they were orderly and held tickets which they had purchased.

They interfered with no one. They did not attempt to substitute themselves for the officers of the law. They did not attack anyone.

Law enforcement must not permit private groups to substitute for the true representatives of the law. Not even remotely must law enforcement show any relaxation which will give subversive groups the feeling that by default they will grab the power of law.

In our opinion loiters, if they violate the law, should be arrested. In our opinion, Terminal Station has a responsibility to see that no unauthorized patrol trespasses on its property.

The Lamar Weaver incident not only has given Birmingham another black eye, it has spotlighted the need for new civil rights laws. This need is evident in the face of the valiant effort made by local police. Still it is realized that local law enforcement has the primary responsibility for preserving order and peace.

BIRMINGHAM BUS LAW TEST

Advertiser Tues. 3-19-57 P.1

Segregation Necessary, Court Told

Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, March 18 (AP)—City attorneys defending Birmingham's bus segregation laws today argued that separation of the races is necessary for their protection and welfare.

Twenty-one Negroes who defied Birmingham's segregation laws last Dec. 26 were prosecuted before Recorders Court Judge Ralph E. Parker for sitting in the white sections of city buses.

Parker said he would rule on the case by next Monday.

Negro Atty. Arthur D. Shores offered no testimony for the accused violators, but argued that the city's bus segregation law is invalid. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that a similar Montgomery, Ala., statute is unconstitutional.

The Birmingham Negroes face maximum sentences of six months in jail and $100 fines if convicted. They also have launched a U.S. District Court action seeking to have the Birmingham ordinance declared unconstitutional.

City Atty. J. H. Willis in his arguments attacked what he called the "inconsistency" of the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The Supreme Court is overthrowing precedents so fast that they can't keep up with them," he declared.

Willis quoted one member of the high court as saying after the Supreme Court overthrew a ruling made nine years earlier that the decision reminded him of a train ticket—"good for this day and train only."

The city attorney argued that maintenance of segregation was within the police power of the city and was necessary for public tranquility.

He declared that recent federal court decisions "have gone so far afield as to confuse the issues and have gone so far astray it is difficult to know where to begin a case of this kind.

Willis said that the U. S. Supreme Court has ruled in several instances that a law which is unconstitutional at the time it is enacted may become constitutional because of circumstances and conditions that may exist in certain localities at certain times.

The City Commission adopted a new bus segregation ordinance only last Tuesday, reaffirming its intention to preserve segregation on public transportation. The ordinance states that the commission considers bus segregation necessary for "tranquility among the people.

Tues. 3-19-57

"It is the threat of desegregation that is causing the violence," Willis asserted, referring to bombings and shootings in Montgomery and Birmingham.

After bus segregation was ended in Montgomery last December, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham Negro minister, announced that Birmingham's racial law also would be tested.

His home and church were damaged by a dynamite bomb Christmas night and the following day he led a group of Negroes in mass violation of the Birmingham bus ordinance.

Shuttlesworth is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. After a meeting of the directors, most of them followed Shuttlesworth to nearby downtown bus stops where they boarded several buses.

21 Negro Bus Riders Convicted

Post-Herald Fri. 3-22-57

Birm. Ala.

Judge Ralph E. Parker, in Recorder's Court yesterday, called unconstitutional the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

He took this action in fining 21 Negroes $50 and costs each for the deliberate mass violation of the Birmingham bus segregation ordinance.

P.2

Atty. Arthur D. Shores, counsel for the Negroes, said a decision on whether they will appeal the verdict will be made by this afternoon. The ruling has no effect except in Parker's court.

Declaring that the segregation law is constitutional, Parker said in a nine-page decision, "nowhere in the United States Constitution is there one word that a state cannot make reasonable regulations for the carrying of passengers on public conveyances, wholly within the state . . . The Supreme Court has not interpreted the Constitution. It has amended it . . .

"There is certainly nothing in the Constitution that even mentions segregation. Equal facilities originated in the state of Massachusetts, and none of the most rabid politicians ever raised their voices against segregation after the 14th Amendment was ratified, the adoption of which in 1868 was forced upon the people at the point of the bayonet."

Charging that the 14th Amendment conflicts with the ninth and 19th, which provide that powers not vested in the federal government are delegated to the states and people, Parker warned:

"If the Supreme Court of the United States is able to ignore completely the 10th Amendment to the Constitution, then it will be able at some future date to completely ignore the First Amendment which guarantees the right of free speech, a free press, and freedom of religious worship."

Post-Herald

Parker suggested that if his verdict is appealed, city attorneys "present squarely to the Supreme Court perhaps the most important question in our country today, that of the legality of the 14th Amendment."

P.2

The amendment guarantees equal protection under the law to all persons without regard to race, color or creed. It was adopted during the reconstruction era when military governments were in power in the former Confederate states.

The 21 Negro defendants already have filed a petition in U. S. District Court," asking an order declaring the bus segregation law unconstitutional, and restraining the city from enforcing it.

Parker criticized what he said was "the attitude of a conspiring small group of Negroes who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands . . . Defiance of the law will contribute nothing toward amicable race relations."

All were sentenced to six months in jail and fined $100 but when they appealed to Circuit Court received only fines.

"This court will not tolerate any violence on the part of either the white or Negro races," said Parker. He said he had tried all his life to maintain harmonious race relations and "it cannot be accomplished without segregation in both public and private places."

The 21 Negroes were led in the mass segregation law violation last Dec. 26 by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth.

Parker contended that the 14th Amendment was not ratified legally. He charged that Congress pulled a "fast one" in passing the reconstruction act of 1868 which denied the Southern states representation in Congress until they approved the amendment.

The U. S. Supreme Court has declared the similar bus segregation ordinance of Montgomery unconstitutional.

NEGROES' TRIAL TODAY

Commercial Appeal

21 Acused Of Violating Bus Order At Birmingham

Mon. 3-18-57

BIRMINGHAM, March 17. — (AP) — Twenty-one Negroes who deliberately violated Birmingham's bus segregation law face trial in Recorder's Court Monday.

Memphis, Tenn.

P.11

The case is scheduled before Judge Ralph E. Parker.

The demonstration was led by Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth Dec. 26, a few hours after his home and church were wrecked by a dynamite bomb.

Rev. Shuttlesworth is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights and almost all his fellow demonstrators are directors of the organization. He was not arrested in the bus case.

The movement was formed after operations of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama last summer.

The Negroes have asked a United States District Court order declaring the ordinance requiring separate seating of the races on Birmingham buses unconstitutional. They also have asked an order restraining the city from enforcing segregation on buses.

21 NEGROES INVOLVED

Advertiser P.1

Racial Law Violation Cases In Birmingham Court Today

Mon. 3-18-57 Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, March 17 (AP)—Twenty-one Negroes who deliberately violated Birminham's bus segregation law face trial in recorder's court tomorrow.

The case is scheduled before Judge Ralph E. Parker at 9 a.m.

The demonstration was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth Dec. 26, a few hours after his home and church were wrecked by a dynamite bomb.

Shuttlesworth is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, and almost all of his fellow demonstrators are directors of the organization. Shuttlesworth was not arrested in the bus case.

The movement was formed after operations of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama last summer.

The Negroes have asked a U.S. district court order declaring the ordinance requiring separate seating of the races on Birmingham buses unconstitutional. They also have asked an order restraining the city from enforcing segregation on buses.

No action has been taken on the federal court petition.

The Birmingham city commission March 12 formally went on record that the bus segregation laws will be enforced. The commissioners adopted a new ordinance to "reaffirm, reenact, and continue in full force and effect" the challenged statute.

"Segregated seating on buses for whites and Negroes is necessary for the avoidance of friction, enmity and violence between the races," the commission said. Unsegregated seating, the commission stated, "is not necessary for equality of seating."

The U.S. Supreme Court declared that Montgomery's similar bus segregation ordinance is unconstitutional, and enforcement of the law ended there last December. Most Montgomery bus riders still follow the traditional pattern of whites sitting to the front and Negroes to the rear, however.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the Birmingham law is six months in jail and a $100 fine.

21 Negroes Fined in Bus Row

Herald P.20-a Fri. 3-22-57

Miami, Fla.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (AP) — Recorders Judge Ralph E. Parker Thursday fined 21 Negroes $50 each for violating Birmingham's bus segregation law, and in his ruling charged that the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution is "null and void."

The municipal judge struck out at what he called "the attitude of a conspiring small group of Negroes who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands."

"Defiance of the law will contribute nothing toward amicable race relations," he said.

The 14th Amendment to the Constitution guarantees equal protection under the law. It is a keystone of many Negro legal attacks on racial segregation laws in the South. It was adopted during the Reconstruction period following the Civil War when Southern states were under military rule.

Birmingham Terms Bus Segregation Vital to Order

Associated Press Wirephoto

Arthur Shores, attorney for Negroes charged with violation of Birmingham's bus segregation ordinances, questioning Detective C. C. Ray, left foreground, in court yesterday.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 18 (UP)—The City of Birmingham declared today that bus segregation was necessary for law and order. It insisted that the city had the right to enforce it with police powers despite any Federal rulings to the contrary.

Times

Ralph Parker, Recorders Court Judge, heard arguments for two hours and then took under advisement the city's case against twenty-two Negroes charged with violating bus segregation ordinances. They were taken to jail Dec. 26 after more than 100 Negroes had staged an attempt to ride unsegregated.

New York Times 3-19-57 p. 23-C

James J. Willis, city attorney, also asserted that the Federal courts had "so confused' 'the segregation picture that it was hard to determine "where we are." The United States Supreme Court has "constantly dodged" giving reasons why segregation ordinances affecting buses or public parks are in violation of the Constitution, he said.

Mr. Wilils argued that the city must continue to maintain law and order and that it was in the interest of btoh white and Negro that they remained segregated.

The twenty-two Negroes were represented by attorney Arthur Shores. He entered not guilty pleas but rested his case on the Supreme Court's order voiding Alabama bus segregation ordinances and those affecting the City of Montgomery.

Four policemen testified on details of the desegregation attempt. One officer, R. N. Higginbotham, said a white man had told him as he attempted to remove Douglas Jackson, a Negro, from a white seat: "Get him off the bus or we'll kill him."

Mr. Shores asked whether Mr. Higginbotham had arrested the white man for making the threat.

"No," the policeman answered. He also said he had filed no charges.

Mr. Shores argued that an arrest would have been exercise of police powers. He said Mr. Jackson had paid his fare and was not creating a disturbance.

Negro Bus Riders Face Trial Today

Courier Journal 3-18-57

Birmingham, March 17 (AP)—Twenty-one Negroes who deliberately violated Birmingham's bus-segregation law face trial in Recorder's Court tomorrow.

The demonstration was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth December 26, a few hours after his home and church were wrecked by a dynamite bomb.

Shuttlesworth is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, and almost all of his fellow demonstrators were directors of the organization. Shuttlesworth was not arrested in the bus case.

The movement was formed after operations of the National Association for The Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama last summer.

Louisville, Ky.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the Birmingham law is six months in jail and a $100 fine.

NOT BACKING DOWN—The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham's fighting Baptist preacher, whose home was wrecked by a dynamite bomb Wednesday. He says he has no intention of backing down.

Bombed pastor to keep fighting

Afro-American P. 1

Baltimore, Md.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The first stone, a mighty stone, was cast here Christmas as "peace on earth and goodwill toward men" shattered the quiet of the night.

Culprits set off a dynamite bomb that almost totally demolished the parsonage home of the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights.

Three persons were injured — Charles Robinson, 59, deacon at Bethel Baptist Church of which the minister is pastor; Fredericka 1, and Fred Shuttlesworth, 10, both children of the minister.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Shuttlesworth, the two children and Mr. Robinson were all in the front bedroom when the blast went off, leaving the room totally demolished.

* * *

"IT (THE BLAST) wasn't to warn me," the pastor said. "but to kill me!" He added that "I'm more determined than ever in my fight against segregation."

The minister is one of the leaders in the fight to integrate Birmingham city buses.

Neither the minister nor his wife were injured but the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said he received a "hard thump on the head" from falling debris.

The blast ripped off the front porch, demolished the front bedroom, caved in one side of the kitchen and tore a large hole in the children's bedroom.

Afro-American

MEANWHILE, on the integration front, the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth announced that the explosion would not interfere with efforts to break down segregation on the buses.

While the Birmingham police were expecting local citizens to attempt to ride the city buses on an integrated basis on Thursday, a switch was made and they rode on Wednesday.

"We crossed 'em up," the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth explained, "and the police commissioner had to be called before any of the policemen knew anything about it."

Shortly after the police commissioner was notified, policemen geban to patrol the buses at each stop. As a result, some 21 persons were arrested on charges of violating the segregation laws and disturbing the peace.

Baltimore Md.

Some 1,500 persons were in attendance at each of the mass meetings.

"ALL OF THOSE arrested were out on bond in time for the first of two mass meetings held Wednesday. The first was held at St. Pauls Church and the other at Metropolitan," the minister said.

The leader of the movement told the AFRO that he recevied a telegram from the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery while the second meting was in session.

"It stated that the Montgomerry Improvement Association (leaders of the year-long boycott in that city) would suppor all who signed a petition pledging non-violence."

SOME 15 MEMBERS of the executive board of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights held a meeting at a northside funeral home chapel Thursday following a crackdown by police.

"The meeting served a two-d purpose," the Rev. Mr. ttlesworth said.

eiterated the fact that col- citizens of Birmingham determined to ride side by a peaceful and orderly and have successfully ed the bus segregation the bombing, the fight against segregation on the city buses still goes on.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said "we intend to ride the buses. There is no one who can keep us from it, for God will protect us."

He explained that he knew if he could walk out of his house after the bombing, under his own power, Birmingham's citizens could win the desegregation fight.

* * *

AT PRESS TIME, police have found no witnesses to the bombing; no arrests have been made, nor have there been any suspects questioned.

The homemade bomb was made of 10 to 12 sticks of dynamite. "Police admitted it was at least six," the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth added.

He said it was planted about 18 inches from his bedroom. Describing his bombed home, he said:

"The explosion was around 9:30 p.m. while we were all in the front bedroom. Everyon says it's a wonder that no one was kiled.

"The house is a shamble . . . the ceiling torn down . . . plaster all over the floor . . . windows blown out . . .it's just a wreck . . ."

"It wasn't a warning, they tried to kill me!"

IN MOBILE, the bus situation was in a state of confusion but leading citizens, particularly the ministers, were attempting to straighten the situation ou within he bounds of he law.

On Wednesday morning, the manager of the Mobile City Lines, Inc., instructed its drivers not to enforce the city laws calling for colored persons to be seated from the rear of the bus and white persons fro mthe front.

* * *

HOWEVER, THE City Commission, in an mergency meeting, took exception to this move and advised the bus company that the city ordinance requiring separate seating on buses was still the city law.

The commission said in its opinion the Supreme Court decision on the bus seating did not apply to Mobile and the city laws were still enforceable.

This left the situation confused. Leading ministers of the city plan to discuss the matter at a meeting of the Mobile Interdenominational Alliance today (Friday).

* * *

NO INDICATION of what line the discussion will take was given, but one pastor, who has been among leaders in the bus movement, said that he would suggest that passengers return to the segregated pattern until such time as a citizens' group asks the court for a declaratory judgement on the Mobile bus law.

This, the Rev. J. E. Lowery pointed out, will make integrated bus seating legal and thereby put the city law enforcement officials "on our side" and prevent any possible disturbance by "hoodums."

Pittsburgh Courier

time to interview witnesses and familiarize himself with the case.

OBEY LAWS

In view of the numerous arrests, Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, leader of the Birmingham movement to integrate on the buses, has urged the Negroes to obey existing laws until after the trial.

Bal. 1-12-57

However, he also said, "if they change or drop the charges against the 22, they may have to do the same for thousands."

As the situation remains tense, two men, one colored and one white, have reprted to police that they have been threatened with bombing and two Birmingham homes were dynamited during the holidays.

The white person, Dave Campbell, a radio announcer who frequently discusses the integration problem, said he was told his name was "next on the list."

NO NIGHT SERVICE

Menwhile, in Montgomery, Ala., the city commission has extended its emergency cancellation of night bus service through Jan. 8 because of the numerous firings at the vehicles.

In Baton Rouge, Rev. T. J. Jemison, who led the boycott in the Louisiana capital, indicated a change in tactics.

Earlier Jemison said he would seek a test case against city bus segregation ordinances by having a Negro board a bus in the presence of a law officer.

Last week he said he may seek a declaratory judgement against the ordinances.

Jemison planned to confer with city officials and Louisiana Atty. General Jack Gremillion last week to determine their attitude toward state laws and city ordinances in light of the recent federal decisions.

Switch Charges In Bus Defiance

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Birmingham city officials last week admitted that they have switched charges against the 22 Negroes arrested for defying Jim Crow seating laws and have postponed the trial until Feb. 11.

The trial had been scheduled for last Thursday. Following the switch, the 22 suspects will be charged with disorderly conduct and breach of peace.

City Attorney J. H. Willis also asked for a continuance of the trial because he had just returned from a vacation and wanted more

A federal court order banned city interference with bus operation on an integrated basis.

In Mobile, several hundred Negroes, who attended a rally last week where Montgomery attorney-preacher Fred Gray told them "our purpose is to end segregation in South any place we find it," have scheduled another meeting.

NOT SOLVED

Gray also told the gathering, "in no community where there is a sizeable Negro population can it be said the race problem has been solved."

Meanwhile, the mail delivery in Baton Rouge Wednesday increased the number of branches of the NAACP reporting to the state, to four.

A Lake Charles branch sent in the names of 74 members, and a Shreveport branch named 45. The lists have been submitted to comply with a law under which the organization was dissolved in Louisiana last year.

KLUXERS QUIT

Also in the Louisiana capital, six ranking members of the Ku Klux Klan announced their resignation saying, "I no longer desire to participate in any capacity whatsoever in this organization."

Louisiana Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion is studying the NAACP lists to see if they are "legal."

In Tuscaloosa, Ala., scene of racial outbursts caused by the entrance of Autherine Lucy into the University of Alabama, a Baptist minister announced the formation of a Fellowship Association to "press for all rights and privileges" for Negroes.

W. B. Shealey, the organization's leader, said the group had not yet set any definite plan on their "equalization" move.

BUS INTEGRATION PIONEERS — Arrested in Birmingham, Ala., where colored citizens began riding the city buses without segregation last week on the heels of receipt of the Supreme Court's order banning such segregation in Montgomery, the state capital, were more than a score of colored persons. Those arrested were released in bond raised at mass meetings throughout the city.

38b 1957

ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DECISION TO COME IN BUS CASES

Daily World Tues. 3-19-57 Atlanta, Ga.

[redacted] (SNS) — [redacted] Parker has promised to give in one week a written decision in the 22 bus segregation violation cases heard by him Monday, March 18. P. 1

All defendants pleaded "not guilty." They gave no testimony.

Defense lawyer Arthur Shores argued that the laws under which the 22 defendants were arrested were unconstitutional and void. He based his position upon the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment and the Montgomery bus case decision.

City attorneys J. M. Breckenridge and J. H. Willis placed four policemen on the stand as prosecution witnesses. The officers testified that the defendants rode in the bus section reserved for whites.

Prosecution lawyers relied upon the doctrine of interposition, the theory of violence and the concept of police powers. In lengthy summarizing arguments they cited a long list of views in support of segregation laws which they contended supported their position.

The prosecution insisted that Judge Parker was bound by the Constitution but not by the Supreme Court "which no longer" respected legal precedents.

"The Supreme Court has confused the issue and gone so far astray it is difficult for me to know where to start," Chief City Attorney Willis argued.

Rapping the Supreme Court for allegedly basing its decisions in the field of desegregation on psychology, Atty. Willis declared that Judge Parker "knows more about psychology than the Supreme Court or the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The courtroom, divided about equally among Negro and white spectators, was crowded. Spectators who could not be seated were not admitted to the courtroom.

Judge Parker praised the conduct of the trial by the prosecution and the defense. Together with the conduct of the witnesses and spectators.

SEGREGATION CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT

Commercial Appeal Tues. 3-19-57

Police Powers Asserted By City Of Birmingham

U.S. RULINGS ATTACKED

Memphis, Tenn. P. 17

By The United Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 18.—The City of Birmingham declared Monday that bus segregation is necessary for law and order and the city has the right to enforce it with "police powers" despite any Federal rulings to the contrary.

Recorders Court Judge Ralph Parker heard arguments for two hours and then took under advisement the city's case against 22 Negroes charged with violating bus segregation ordinances. They were arrested last Dec. 26 after more than 100 Negroes staged a mass integrated riding attempt.

Picture 'Confused'

City Atty. James J. Willis also asserted that the Federal courts have "so confused" the segregation picture that it is hard to determine "where we are." The United States Supreme Court has "constantly dodged" giving reasons why segregation ordinances affecting buses or public parks are in violation of the civil rights amendment, he said.

Mr. Willis said the City of Birmingham has seen what happens when segregation is relaxed. He said it must continue to maintain law and order and it is in the interest of both white and Negro that they remain segregated.

The 22 Negroes were represented by attorney Arthur Shores. He entered not guilty pleas but rested his case on the Supreme Court's order voiding Alabama bus segregation ordinances and those affecting the City of Montgomery.

Shores said bus segregation is "void."

Police Testify

Four policemen testified on details of the mass bus riding. One officer, R. N. Higginbotham, said a white man told him as he attempted to remove Negro Douglas Jackson from a white section: "Get him off the bus or we'll kill him."

Shores asked if officer Higginbotham arrested the white man for making the threat.

"No," the policeman answered. He said he also filed no later charges.

Shores said an arrest would have been exercise of "police powers." He said Jackson had paid his fare and was not creating a disturbance.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge Hobart Grooms has not set a hearing date on a suit filed by 21 the Negroes seeking to get c ordinances declared unconstitional. Shores also is handl that action.

City Reaffirms Bus Segregation

Leslie Leonard Birmingham, Ala.

Says Seating Rules Vital To 'Peace'

Wed. 3-13-57

City Commission yesterday —declaring it wished to avert a "state of emergency"—voted unanimously to continue separation of Negroes and whites on buses and trolleys by law.

This for the first time the element of "crisis" will be introduced into any legal battle which may grow out of enforcement of the ordinance.

That battle is expected to begin with the total of 22 Negroes next Monday before Judge Ralph E. Parker on charges of having violating bus and trolley segregation laws. The defendants were arrested Dec. 26.

"A strict enforcement" of Section 1413 (the law involved), declared the commission, is "presently and for the foreseeable future necessary to preserve the peace and tranquility of the City of Birmingham and to safeguard the property and persons of its inhabitants and of the public in general and to insure peace, good will and friendliness between the races."

There is a "clear and present danger," the commission said, "that if Negroes are allowed to, and do, persist in invading and seating themselves in portions of buses set apart for the white public," . . . "the enmity thereby engendered in the white public of Birmingham will burst the bounds of restraint in many members of such white public and explode into anonymous and unpreventable acts of violent resentment such as to create an emergency. . . ."

"Such danger will not pass until time and restraint upon the part of Negroes shall so ameliorate the aforesaid sentiments of the generality of the white public of Birmingham as that desegration on buses may become tolerable."

This statement of policy — approved unanimously by the commission — was included in an "ordinance to reaffirm, re-nact and continue in full force nd effect Section 1413 of the eneral City Code of Birmingam."

The code section prescribes segregation on buses and trolleys.

Trials of 22 Negro defendants, who rode Birmingham buses in defiance of the ordinance Dec. 26, are scheduled next Monday morning before Judge Ralph E. Parker.

The defendants have appealed to Federal Court here for an injunction against the ordinance.

And the city has asked the Federal Court, in answering the Negros' petition, that the Federal Court grant the city the courtesy of trying the cases, if need be, through the state courts and ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Alabaman Flees Mob, Is Fined

Herald-Tribune New York Thurs. 3-7-57

Sat in Station With 2 Negroes

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Mar. 6 —Angry white men, frustrated in efforts to bar a Negro minister and his wife from a white waiting room at a railroad station, attacked a white man who sat beside them today.

Lamar Weaver, a white steel worker who has made speeches advocating racial integration, escaped in his car in a shower of heavy stones. Windows of his convertible were shattered and he was struck in the face with a suitcase.

Police Chief Jamie Moore said Mr. Weaver was charged with reckless driving following the stoning of his automobile as he left the station.

[He was convicted at a special hearing of running through a red light and reckless driving and fined $25 and $5 costs.]

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife entered the Birmingham terminal station under police escort after they were twice blocked by members of the pro-segregation white group.

Virtually surrounded by police, the Shuttlesworths were in the waiting room for almost an hour and a half before boarding a New York-bound passenger train. They said they had bought tickets for Atlanta. More than a score of uniformed officers swarmed into the station and guarded its approaches, preventing any disorder in the immediate vicinity.

After the Shuttlesworths were inside the station, police ordered away a crowd of white men, including R. E. Chambliss, ex-city employee who said he represented the Ku-Klux Klan.

Police also ordered Negroes who came to the ticket windows between the white and Negro sections back into the Negro waiting room unless they were there to buy tickets.

A Negro attack on segregation at the station was thrown out of Federal court here Monday. In doing so Federal Judge Seybourne H. Lynne said there was no state nor city law against racial segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

Mr. Shuttlesworth announced in advance that he planned to occupy a seat in the white waiting room, which is designated for "interstate and white passengers." Negroes had been barred in the past.

When he and his wife arrived both a number of police and the white men who attempted to block their way were ranged around the entrances. With his wife, he walked to another entrance. He was pushed back by a surge of white men jamming the entrance, and at this point police intervened.

The Shuttlesworths took seats on a bench nearest the passageway leading to the Negro waiting room. Mr. Weaver talked with them for several minutes. Officers then approached, inquired if he had a ticket, and ordered him outside when he said he did not. A crowd of angry white men followed him to his car, cursing, striking and threatening Mr. Weaver as they crowded around him.

Mr. Shuttlesworth led mass violations of Birmingham's bus segregation laws by twenty-one Negroes Dec. 26. The Negroes have asked a Federal court ruling that the ordinance is unconstitutional, and an injunction restraining police from enforcing segregation on city buses. The Negro minister led the defiance of the bus segregation law a few hours after his church and adjoining home were damaged by a dynamite bomb.

He also is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, a pro-integration organization formed shortly after activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama.

Integration Foes Stone White Man

Herald Tribune—United Press telephot

WHITE INTEGRATIONIST ATTACKED IN ALABAMA—Birmingham crowd yesterday rocking car of Lamar Weaver, who sat beside a Negro couple in a white waiting room of a railroad station. When he came out to his car he was attacked as he tried to pull it out of the station parking lot.

AP Wirepho

BIRMINGHAM MAN ATTACKED IN RACIAL INCIDENT
Lamar Weaver (seated, left), Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Shuttlesworth

Mob Attacks White Man For Sitting By Negroes

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala
Thurs 3-7-57

BIRMINGHAM Ala., March 6 (AP)—Angry white men, frustrated in efforts to bar a Negro minister and his wife from a white waiting room at a railroad station, attacked a white man who sat beside them today.

Lamar Weaver, a white steelworker who has made speeches advocating racial intergration, escaped in his car in a shower of heavy stones. Windows of his convertible were shattered and he was struck in the face with a suitcase.

Police Chief Jamie Moore said that Weaver later was charged with reckless driving following the stoning of his automobile as he left the station. Officers are investigating a complaint that his car struck a pedestrian.

Weaver later was charged with reckless driving.

"I left accelerating my speed because a mob of about 50 persons was attempting to either kill me or cause bodily harm," he testified at a Recorders Court trial. He was fined $25.

Weaver later told reporters he was leaving for Washington where he said he would appear before the House Civil Rights subcommittee. He said he had no further definite plans, but would not return to Birmingham.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife entered the Birmingham terminal station under police escort after they were twice blocked by members of the pro-segregation white group.

Virtually surrounded by police the Shuttlesworths were in the waiting room for almost 1½ hours before boarding a New York-bound passenger train. They said they had bought tickets for Allanta.

More than a score of uniformed officers swarmed into the station and guarded its approaches, preventing any disorder in the immediate vicinity.

After the Shuttlesworths were inside the station, police ordered away a crowd of white men, including R. E. Chambliss, ex-city employe who said he represented the Ku Klux Klan.

Police also orders Negroes who came to the ticket windows between the white and Negro sections back into the Negro waiting room unless they were there to buy tickets.

Shuttlesworth led mass violations of Birmingham's bus segregation laws by 21 Negroes Dec. 26. The Negroes have asked a federal court ruling that the ordinance is unconstitutional, and an injunction restraining police from enforcing segregation on the city buses.

P. 2

The Negro minister led the defiance of the bus segregation law a few hours after his church and adjoining home were damaged by a dynamite bomb. He is pastor of the Bethel Baptist church in an industrial section of North Birmingham.

Chr Wertiser

Shuttlesworth also is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, a pro-integration organization formed shortly after activities of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama.

A Negro attack on segregation at the terminal station was thrown out of federal court here last Monday. In doing so, U.S. Dist. Judge Seybourne H. Lynne said there was no state or city law against racial segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

Shuttlesworth announced in advance that he planned to occupy a seat in the white waiting room, which is designated for "interstate and white passengers." Negroes had been barred in the past.

By the time he and his wife arrived shortly after noon both a number of police and the white men who attempted to block his way were ranged around the entrances.

First a white youth blocked the path of the Shuttlesworths outside an entrance and called his attention to the sign, ordering him to go to the Negro waiting room.

"I don't want any trouble with you," said Shuttlesworth. With his wife following he walked to another entrance. This time he was pushed back by a surge of white men jamming the entrance, and at this point police intervened.

Weaver didn't enter the scene until the Shuttlesworths had taken seats on a bench nearest the passageway leading to the Negro waiting room.

He talked with them for several minutes. Officers then approached, inquired if Weaver had a ticket, and ordered him outside when he said he did not.

A crowd of angry white men followed him to his car, cursing, striking and threatening Weaver as they crowded around him.

Police officer W. C. Wilhite said witnesses told him that in turning around Weaver's car backed into another automobile, then ran a red light and struck a pedestrian, who apparently was not injured.

WHITE FOE OF BIAS ATTACKED BY MOB

Times P. 15-C

Sat With Negro in Alabama Station—Fined as Reckless Driver in Fleeing Crowd

Thurs. 3-7-57

BIRMINGHAM, March 6 (AP)—Angry white men, frustrated in efforts to bar a Negro minister and his wife from a white waiting room at a railroad station, attacked a white man who sat beside them today.

New York

Lamar Weaver, a white steel worker who has made speeches advocating racial integration, escaped in his car in a shower of heavy stones. Windows of his convertible were shattered and he was struck in the face with a suitcase.

Mr. Weaver later was charged with reckless driving.

"I left accelerating my speed because a mob of about fifty persons was attempting to either kill me or cause bodily harm," he testified at a recorder's Court trial. He was fined $25.

Mr. Weaver said he was leaving for Washington. He declared he would appear there before the House Civil Rights subcommittee. He said he had no further definite plans, but would not return to Birmingham.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife entered the Birmingham terminal station under police escort after they twice had been blocked by members of the pro-segregation white group.

Virtually surrounded by the police, the Shuttlesworths were in the waiting room for almost one and one-half hours before boarding a New York-bound passenger train. They said they had bought tickets for Atlanta.

Crowd Ordered Away

More than a score of uniformed officers guarded the station and its approaches, preventing any disorder in the immediate vicinity. After the Shuttlesworths were inside the station, the police ordered away a crowd of white men.

Mr. Shuttlesworth led mass violations of Birmingham's bus segregation laws by twenty-one Negroes Dec. 26. The Negroes have asked for a Federal court ruling that the ordinance is unconstitutional, and for an injunction restraining the police from enforcing segregation on the city buses.

The minister led the defiance of the bus law a few hours after his church and adjoining home had been damaged by a dynamite bomb. He is pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church in an industrial section of North Birmingham.

Mr. Shuttlesworth also is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, a pro-integration organization formed shortly after activities of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People had been outlawed in Alabama.

A Negro attack on segregation at the terminal station was thrown out of Federal Court here last Monday. In doing so United States District Judge Seybourne H. Lynne said there was no state nor city law against racial segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

Mr. Shuttlesworth had announced in advance that he planned to occupy a seat in the white waiting room, which is designated for "interstate and white passengers." Negroes had been barred in the past.

When he and his wife arrived a white youth blocked their path and called Mr. Shuttlesworth's attention to the sign, ordering him to go to the Negro waiting room.

"I don't want any trouble with you," Mr. Shuttlesworth said. With his wife following, he walked to another entrance. This time he was pushed back by a surge of white men. At this point the police intervened.

Mr. Weaver did not enter the scene until the Shuttlesworths had taken seats on a bench nearest the passageway leading to the Negro waiting room. He talked with them for several minutes. When he left, a crowd of white men followed him to his car, cursing, striking and threatening him.

Waiting Room Race Ruling Likely Monday In U.S. Court

Advertiser Montgomery Ala.
Sun. 3-3-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2 (AP)—United States Dist. Judge Seybourne H. Lynne may rule Monday on a motion to dismiss a suit attacking railroad waiting room segregation in Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin, a Negro couple, have asked for a Federal Court ruling that the state waiting room law is unconstitutional. They also asked Lynne to enjoin the city from enforcing segregation at the terminal station here.

Atty. Joe F. Johnston, representing the Birmingham Terminal Co. argued yesterday that there is no controversy before the court because disorderly conduct charges against the Baldwins have been dropped.

Johnston called the complaint nothing "but an academic attempt" to get the court to rule on constitutionality of the state law concerning waiting rooms.

"It is beyond the scope of the federal jurisdiction to render a decree on a fundamental abstraction." he declared.

The Baldwins were arrested when they refused to move from a waiting room designated for "interstate and white passengers." They had bought tickets to Milwaukee, Wis.

Legal moves also were made in another Birmngham racal case, the suit of 21 Negroes attacking the city's bus segregation law.

Atty. Arthur D. Shores filed an amended motion charging that Birmingham Transit Co., acting in concert with the City Commission, had continued an alleged conspiracy to deprive Negro bus riders of their constitutional rights.

"The defendant, Birmingham Transit Co., has stopped its buses and called police officers of the city of Birmingham and for the purpose of arresting plaintiffs, has alloewd caused and or participated in the arrest of these plaintiffs, all in violaton of their constitutional rights," the amended complaint asserted.

The 21 Negroes are to be tried in Recorders Court March 18 for violation of the city's bus segregation ordinance.

City Reaffirms Bus Segregation

Post-Herald
B'ham, Ala.

Says Seating Rules Vital To 'Peace'

Wed. 3-13-57

City Commission yesterday —declaring it wished to avert a "state of emergency"—voted unanimously to continue separation of Negroes and whites on buses and trolleys by law.

This for the first time the element of "crisis" will be introduced into any legal battle which may grow out of enforcement of the ordinance.

That battle is expected to begin with the total of 22 Negroes next Monday before Judge Ralph E. Parker on charges of having violating bus and trolley segregation laws. The defendants were arrested Dec. 26.

"A strict enforcement" of Section 1413 (the law involved), declared the commission, is "presently and for the foreseeable future necessary to preserve the peace and tranquility of the City of Birmingham and to safeguard the property and persons of its inhabitants and of the public in general and to insure peace, good will and friendliness between the races."

There is a "clear and present danger," the commission said, "that if Negroes are allowed to, and do, persist in invading and seating themselves in portions of buses set apart for the white public," . . . "the enmity thereby engendered in the white public of Birmingham will burst the bounds of restraint in many members of such white public and explode into anonymous and unpreventable acts of violent resentment such as to create an emergency. . . ."

"Such danger will not pass until time and restraint upon the part of Negroes shall so ameliorate the aforesaid sentiments of the generality of the white public of Birmingham as that desegration on buses may become tolerable."

This statement of policy — approved unanimously by the commission — was included in an "ordinance to reaffirm, reenact and continue in full force and effect Section 1413 of the General City Code of Birmingham."

The code section prescribes segregation on buses and trolleys.

Trials of 22 Negro defendants, who rode Birmingham buses in defiance of the ordinance Dec. 26, are scheduled next Monday morning before Judge Ralph E. Parker.

The defendants have appealed to Federal Court here for an injunction against the ordinance.

And the city has asked the Federal Court, in answering the Negros' petition, that the Federal Court grant the city the courtesy of trying the cases, if need be, through the state courts and ultimately to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Man, Who Fled Mob Fined For Reckless Driving

Daily World
Thurs. 3-7-57
Atlanta, Ga.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., — (INS) — A white man who narrowly escaped injury at the hands of a mob inflammed by his breaking with southern traditions, was fined Wednesday for the "reckless driving" he did to make his getaway.

A city court judge told Lamar Weaver - who shared a white railroad waiting room seat with a Negro minister -- that he had brought the attack upon himself by his disregard for local "customs and traditions."

Judge Oliver B Hall fined Weaver $25 for wreckless driving because his car struck and dented another vehicle as he sped away from the Birmingham terminal station where a crowd stoned his car, and tried to overturn it.

No one else was arrested as a result of Wednesday's incident - an effort of foes of segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

"A man cannot fly into the face of traditions and customs and not expect to be burned," judge Hall told Weaver, who contended he could not avoid running into the other car because he was "fleeing for my life."

Police did not disturb the Rev. F L Shuttlesworth as he sat with his wife in a section of the waiting room normally occupied by only white people. But officers forced Weaver to leave the tation, where a mob was waiting for him.

The Law Must Apply to All

Post-Herald
B'ham, Ala.
Fri. 3-8-57

The Birmingham police officers assigned to the Shuttleworth demonstration did a commendable job in preserving order at Terminal Station. It is too bad they were not foresighted and alert enough to prevent the angry and lawless attack on Lamar Weaver which took place just a block down the street.

Mr. Weaver not only invited trouble, he went out of his way to find it. But he was entittled to protection of the law and it seems to us the officer in charge of the police detail at the station should have sensed his danger when he was ordered away.

If we are to have an orderly society we must insist upon respect for its laws and their firm and even-handed enforcement. The trouble maker and the hoodlum must be made to understand they cannot take the law into their own hands and get away with it.

Responsibility rests upon the shoulders of Commissioner Lindbergh and every member of the Police Department. Their job is by no means easy and they need the support of every straight-thinking citizen of the community.

It might help if we let the commissioner, the officer on the beat and the policeman handling traffic on the corner know we stand squarely behind him.

DEFENDANTS TAKE OATH—The 21 Negro defendants took to oath yesterday in their trial on charges of violating city bus segregation laws. None, however, took the stand. In front at right is Atty. Arthur Shores. At left is Emory O. Jackson, publisher of the The Birmingham World, a Negro newspaper.

SINCE 1952—Det. C. C. Ray testified yesterday that a Negro told him at the time of the latter's arrest that he'd been riding buses in Birmingham in the white section without being arrested. The case was heard by Judge Ralph E. Parker (right).

THREAT OF VIOLENCE—On questioning by City Atty. J. H. Willis (right), Officer R. N. Higginbotham tells of a threat "to kill" a Negro riding in the white section of a bus.

Judge Holds Up Bus Seat Decision

Post-Herald P.1. Tues. 3-19-57 Birm, Ala.

BY GEORGE COOK

Birmingham's city attorney, arguing for conviction of 21 Negroes on charges of violating city bus segregation laws, yesterday charged that the U. S. Supreme Court "has consistently dodged the question as to how such an ordinance violates the 'equal protection' clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution."

The decisions the Supreme Court has handed down, City Atty. J. H. Willis told Judge Ralph E. Parker, have contained a lot of fancy language "apparently making up for lack of thought."

Judge Parker, after hearing arguments by Willis, Asst. City Atty. J. M. Breckenridge and Arthur Shores, attorney for the 21 Negro defendants, took the case under advisement.

The 21 were arrested on Dec. 26 (one also was arrested again the next day) on charges of having violated the bus segregation ordinance.

The group rode the buses after the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, Inc., led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, failed to win repeal of the ordinance by City Commission.

"I want to have time to make a statement in connection with my decision," the judge said. "My decision may come some time this week—certainly by 9 a.m. next Monday."

"The reasoning of a case," Willis argued, "is its soul—the law of the case."

In answering Shores argument that Montgomery and South Carolina bus segregation cases had declared bus segregational ordinances unconstitutional and thus void, Willis went into the logic of the Supreme Court's reasoning.

So far as his office had been able to determine, Willis said, the Supreme Court had based its Montgomery bus segregational ruling (by referral) to a previous decision which declared that segregation in schools is unconstitutional.

The city attorney then turned his attention to the latter decision, breaking it down step by step:

Post-Herald

1. A segregational law which provides equal but separate accommodations for whites and Negroes exists.

2. Negro children misconstrue this law as meaning interiority on their part.

3. This misconstruction hobbles the motivation of Negro children to learn.

4. White children are not restricted by a similar hobble.

5. Therefore this lack of hobble on the part of white children makes the opportunity of Negro children to learn far less than that of white children.

"Isn't that the most amazing reasoning you've ever heard?" asked Willis.

"It makes the validity of the statute depend on the erroneous construction put on it by ignorant Negro children.

"Anybody worth his salt should have his determination to learn spurred rather than hobbled by the feeling that his fellows regard him as inferior. He should want to prove that he is not inferior.

"The reasoning in this case does not commend itself to intelligent people."

Willis went on to say that precedence does not necessarily apply, despite the Supreme Court ruling.

Pointing out that the high court itself had ignored the precedence involved in "six or seven" previous cases in which the Supreme Court had upheld the "separate, but equal" doctrine, Willis declared:

"The Supreme Court is engaged in overruling precedents so fast that we can't keep up with them."

Then the city attorney added wryly:

"I wonder if they (Supreme Court) will contend that bus segregation will deny Negroes an education equal to that of whites."

Willis pointed out that Section 1413 of the City Code "is a nondiscriminatory ordinance," merely providing for equal, but separate seating sections for whites and Negroes on common carriers in the City of Birmingham.

"It does not deprive anyone the equal protection of the law," he said.

Willis said the city reaffirmed and re-enacted the bus segregation ordinance last week in view of the violence which had ensued since the 21 Negroes first rode city buses on unsegregated basis Dec. 26 to test the law.

City Commission had taken this step, Willis said, because it now had concrete knowledge of what would happen if segregational laws were broken down.

Cities such as Montgomery could only anticipate violence that might occur in fighting their cases to the Supreme Court, Willis said.

Willis, reading decisions of a similar nature, also pointed out that an ordinance might be valid—or invalid—in one set of circumstances and vice versa in another set of circumstances.

No testimony was offered by the defense.

In view of this, said Breckenridge, violation of the ordinance must be assumed to be admitted.

The ordinance in question was adopted by the city under the police power delegated it by the Legislature.

Police powers, he said, were left to the states by the Constitution and "are not rendered invalid" by the infringement of "certain rights" of individuals.

The 14th Amendment does not take away the police powers of the state, Breckenridge said, and furthermore the state has the righ to exercise the full scope of its police powers in the event of an emergency.

"Segregation on buses is necessary to maintain peace, quiet and good order for all the citizens of Birmingham," he declared.

Shores, in arguing for the defendants, said they were not being tried "on any subsequent ordinance," but on two adopted by the city many years ago.

He cited a 1910 Louisville zoning case in which "testimony had been introduced at length on the possibility that violence might occur if segregation were broken down," without any of the dire predictions subsequently coming true.

"The city can't give way to mob rule where individual rights are concerned," the Negro attorney declared.

"Police power pertains to law and order, not giving sanction to disorder."

Shores read to the court the state laws and ordinances of Montgomery and Birmingham governing segregation buses to show their similarity.

"An unconstitutional law is a void law," he said. "This law is unconstitutional. It violates the laws of our nation. The city does not have the right under its police power to infringe on the rights of the individual."

In making his statement on "sanction to disorder," Shores obviously was referring to testimony by Officer R. N. Higginbotham.

Higginbotham said he was on duty at the intersection of First-av and 22nd-st, n, as a traffic officer on Dec. 26 when a voice (he thought it was a woman's) called him to the bus.

He said that when he entered he found one of the defendants, Douglas Jackson, sitting in the white section.

He said a white man, whose name he did not know, told him "either get him (the Negro) off this bus or I'll kill him."

The testimony was presented by the city to show the likelihood of violence resulting from the breaking down of racial barriers.

Shores demanded to know what Higginbotham had done at the time of the remark and the officer replied he'd instructed the white man "to sit down and take it easy."

The Negro attorney then wanted to know if Higginbotham had arrested the white man and the officer said he had not.

Other officers testifying in the case included Traffic Officer J. H. Rice, who stopped two buses at First-av and 26th-st, n, to arrest a number of the defendants; Det. C. C. Ray and Officer W. F. Jones who participated in the arrest of Theodore Nelson on Dec. 26 and 27.

Ray said Nelson told him he had been riding Birmingham buses on an unsegregated basis since 1952 and that nobody had ever said anything to him, nor had he ever been arrested for the violation.

One of the Negro men was arrested as an ex-convict who had failed to register when he put in an appearance for his trial yesterday.

He was Andrew Anderson.

Other defendants include: Viola Cherry, Leon Craig, Bertha Elmore, Eugene English, Vann English, Ersey Goins, Elber James Henry, Douglas Jackson, Alice Johnson, Mable Jordan, Rosie Walker, John Strozier, James Phifer, Dorothy Young, Wright Wheat, Charles Billups, Hattie Wilkerson, Lela Baylor and Bert L. Wilkerson.

Birmingham Fines Negro Bus Riders

Constitution p. 2
Atlanta, Ga.

City Judge Assesses Each $55 and Blasts High Court

Fri. 3-22-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 21 (UP)—City Judge Ralph E. Parker fined 22 Negroes $55 each today for defying city bus segregation laws and asserted the U.S. Supreme Court made a mistake in declaring bus segregation unconstitutional.

The Negroes, who jubilantly boarded the buses in a mass demonstration last Dec. 26, listened glumly today while the judge read a lengthy ruling flaying the high court's action.

Judge Parker said to drop segregation on Birmingham buses would create a "state of emergency" and "I will not be responsible for such a calamity."

APPEAL NOT DECIDED

Negro attorney Arthur Shores said whether to appeal had not been decided. But he indicated earlier relief would be sought in the federal courts, rather than in the state courts.

Parker criticized the Supreme Court's order which outlawed segregation on carriers in Montgomery, the Alabama capital, early this year. He said "judicial dictatorship cannot compel social adjustment." The court ruling in the Montgomery case, he said, "does not make the ruling correct either legally or morally."

"Certainly I am not required by the oath taken by me to uphold the decisions of any court which are destructive of the Constitution.

BALL AND CHAIN

"I had rather wear a ball and chain around my ankle than to wear one around my conscience."

Parker said the city of Birmingham should challenge the validity of the 14th (civil rights) Amendment, which he said was forced upon the Southern states without due process of law.

"Knowing that ratification was coerced by military government (after the Civil War), certainly I am not alone in saying that the 14th Amendment is null and void."

The judge said: "I cannot conceive how any right-thinking person who understands the conditions that exist in the South can advocate abandoning our segregation laws, when such a course will inevitably lead to racial amalgamation and mongrelization."

CAN'T SCRAP RIGHTS

And he said "this country cannot afford to scrap the fundamental principles of the Bill of Rights, nor can it let the judiciary assume the function of the legislative bodies of our land."

Shores in his argument had charged all bus segregation laws are dead as a result of the Supreme Court's Montgomery ruling.

But the city attorney, James H. Willis, replied that any federal court ruling is subservient to a local government's "police powers."

TAKE OVER

On this, Judge Parker declared no one until recently ever dreamed that the federal government would attempt to take over the powers and particularly the police powers of our several states and municipalities. . .

"There is certainly nothing in the Constitution that even mentions segregation. . ."

Judge Ralph E. Parker at 9 a.m.

The demonstration was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth Dec. 26, a few hours after his home and church were wrecked by a dynamite bomb.

Shuttlesworth is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, and almost all of his fellow demonstrators are directors of the organization. Shuttlesworth was not arrested in the bus case.

The movement was formed after operations of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People were outlawed in Alabama last summer.

The Negroes have asked a U.S. district court order declaring the ordinance requiring separate seating of the races on Birmingham buses unconstitutional. They also have asked an order restraining the city from enforcing segregation on buses.

No action has been taken on the federal court petition.

The Birmingham city commission March 12 formally went on record that the bus segregation laws will be enforced. The commissioners adopted a new ordinance to "reaffirm, reenact, and continue in full force and effect" the challenged statute.

"Segregated seating on buses for whites and Negroes is necessary for the avoidance of friction, enmity and violence between the races," the commission said. Unsegregated seating, the commission stated, "is not necessary for equality of seating."

The U.S. Supreme Court declared that Montgomery's similar bus segregation ordinance is unconstitutional, and enforcement of the law ended there last December. Most Montgomery bus riders still follow the traditional pattern of whites sitting to the front and Negroes to the rear, however.

Maximum penalty on conviction of violating the Birmingham law is six months in jail and a $100 fine.

From Montgomery to points 'round nation Trailways means fast convenient service. Phone AM 4-5326. (adv.)

City Claims Segregation Necessary

Courier-Journal
Tues. 3-19-57
Louisville, Ky.

Birmingham Defends Ordinance Enforcing It

p. 2

Birmingham, March 18 (UP)—The City of Birmingham declared today that bus segregation is necessary for law and order and the City has the right to enforce it with police powers despite any federal rulings to the contrary.

Recorders Court Judge Ralph Parker heard argument for 2 hours and then took under advisement the City's case against 22 Negroes charged with violating bus-segregation ordinances. They were taken to jail December 26 after more than 100 Negroes staged a mass unsegregated riding attempt.

Says Picture Confused

City Attorney James J. Willis also asserted that the federal courts have "so confused" the segregation picture that it is hard to determine "where we are." The United States Supreme Court has "constantly dodged" giving reasons why segregation ordinances affecting buses or public parks are in violation of the civil-rights amendment, he said.

Willis said the City of Birmingham has seen what happens when segregation is relaxed. He said it must continue to maintain law and order and it is in the interest of both white and Negro that they remain segregated.

The 22 Negroes were represented by attorney Arthur Shores. He entered innocent pleas, but rested his case on the Supreme Court's order voiding Alabama bus-segregation ordinances and those affecting the City of Montgomery. Shores said bus segregation is void.

21 NEGROES INVOLVED

Advertiser p. 1

Racial Law Violation Cases In Birmingham Court Today

Mon. 3-18-57 Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, March 17 (AP)—Twenty-one Negroes who deliberately violated Birminham's bus segregation law face trial in recorder's court tomorrow.

The case is scheduled before

38b 1957

ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM

Bombed minister says South is getting worse

Afro American P. 18

By EDWARD PEEKS

WASHINGTON

"The situation in the South is getting worse, not better. Don't let anybody fool you.

"But we are determined to bring justice to the South. We are just as determined in Birmingham as they are in Montgomery."

So declared the Rev. Fred L. Shuttlesworth, 34-year-old minister whose home was demolished Christmas Day by a dynamite blast.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth made the statement Wednesday before the Ministers National Civil Rights Conference called by the National Fraternal Council of Churches at Mount Carmel Baptist Church, Third and I Sts., NW.

* * *

HE WAS introduced to more than a hundred ministers at the opening session by the Rev. W. J. Jernagin, host pastor and chairman of the Fraternal Council executive committee.

The Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth, president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, spoke at the Wednesday night mass meeting on the Birmingham situation.

Sat 1-12-57

At the afternoon session, the Rev. William H. Borders, pastor of Atlanta's Wheat Street Baptist Church and president of the Georgia Baptist Convention, told the meeting of conditions in his city.

* * *

THE REV. Mr. Shuttlesworth said, "The ultimate solution to the problem rests in laws by Congress that will place human dignity above naked customs and tradition.

"The Federal government must be able and willing to carry out such laws. Colored people themselves must be able and willing with the help of whites."

He stated that the cause for justice and fair play requires individual and collective efforts.

* * *

"THE CAUSE is greater than man," the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said. "If the cause is just and worth living for, then certainly it is worth dying for.

"There are areas of goodwill in the South, but these areas need the help and support of the Federal government.

"The moral force of the Federal government will have to be brought to bear on the situation to bring respect for the law of the Constitution

"When laws are changed, good men will have the chance to bring out their good character and the milk of human kindness can prevail over human prejudices.

* * *

"MY HOUSE was bombed and destroyed, but I have no hatred for anyone."

Three persons suffered minor injuries in the bombing and the close escape from death of 12 sticks of dynamite was described by the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth as "miraculous deliverance."

Injured were his two children, Fred, 10, and Fredericka, 1, and a visitor in the home at the time, Charles Robinson, 59, deacon at Bethel Baptist, of which the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth is pastor.

The minister, his wife and Mr. Charles Robinson escaped injury.

"The blast wasn't to warn me, but to kill me," the Rev. Mr. Shuttlesworth said. "I'm more determined than ever in my efforts against segregation."

* * *

THE REV. MR. HOLMES said colored citizens of Atlanta "will start to ride buses unsegregated in the next 10 days.

"The war against the NAACP in Georgia will not stop efforts for integration," he declared. "If anything, it has made us more determined.

"We ministers of Atlanta are organized. We are going to set the example for the people by riding buses unsegregated."

Afro-American P. 18 Baltimore Sat 1-12-57

REV. FRED SHUTTLESWORTH

Bus statute challenged

Afro-American Sat. 1-26-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Moving in the wake of Montgomery, Ala., citizens who have won the legal right to ride unsegregated in intrastate and city buses in the Federal courts, colored citizens here, through Arthur D. Shores, attorney, asked the U.S. District Court to order an immediate end to bus segregation in this city.

Mr. Shores filed the petition Monday in behalf of the 21 persons arrested Dec. 26 after deliberately violating Birmingham's racial segregation laws.

The attorney told the AFRO, Saturday, that 22 persons so arrested are scheduled to be tried in Recorder's Court Feb. 11.

He will represent them at the time, he stated. He also said he expects the Federal court hearing to be slated for some time in February.

* * *

HOWEVER, the city commissioners named defendants in the suit have 20 days to answer the complaint and they have indicated they will delay the hearing as long as possible by taking the full 20 days to file answers.

The Federal court hearing would be on a request for a permanent enjoinder to the city to cease enforcing the segregation statutes. Mr. Shores has asked a "speedy hearing."

Either Judge H. Hobart Grooms or Judge Seybourn H. Lynne will hear the Federal court case.

Lynne was the dissenting judge in the three-judge panel which first declared Montgomery's bus segregation laws unconstitutional.

* * *

JUDGE GROOMS opened the doors of the University of Alabama to colored persons in 1955 by enjoining the school from barring applicants from admission because of their race.

The latter is also the judge who, this week, dismissed Mrs. Autherine Lucy Foster's request for a contempt order against the trustees of the University of Alabama for refusing to readmit the coed after she had been suspended because of rioting on the campus.

* * *

COLORED CITIZENS of Montgomery won a U.S. Supreme Court order ending the segregation in the state capital less than a month ago, after they had waged a 381-day boycott of segregated buses there.

This order was specifically pertaining to Montgomery, however, and has not been construed by officials in other southern cities to apply to them.

It undoubtedly will influence the decision in the Birmingham case, according to Mr. Shores, and if it goes all the way to the Supreme Court, may have the effect of wiping out segregation on buses everywhere in the nation.

* * *

THE DAY - AFTER-Christmas mass violation of Birmingham's bus segregation laws was led by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, a few hours after his home was wrecked by a heavy dynamite blast.

Three persons, including two children, were injured by the explosion. No one has been arrested by Birmingham police in connection with the bombing.

Those to be tried in city court Feb. 11 face maximum sentences of 180 days in jail and fined of $100 if convicted. But if the statutes under which they are convicted are held unconstitutional by the Federal court, the city will be prevented from punishing them.

City Commissioner R. E. Lindbergh has vowed to fight the attack on the city laws "with every legal means at our disposal." He hinted that the city's strategy would center around delays.

Transit Co. asks Negro complaints here be dismissed

News Sun. 1-29-57

The Birmingham Transit Co. today filed a motion for dismissal of a complaint filed against them by 21 Negroes charged with violating city bus segregation laws.

The dismissal was asked on grounds the complaint failed to state a claim against the defendants upon which relief can be granted.

Harvey Deramus, acting as attorney for the transit company, filed the motion in U. S. District Court here.

Bham, Ala.

THE CITY COMMISSIONERS also were named as defendants in the case. However, today's motion for dismissal is in behalf of the transit company only.

The original complaint was filed Jan. 14 by Negro Atty. Arthur D. Shores. It contends that city bus segregation laws are unconstitutional and asks the court to enjoin the city against enforcing the laws.

Defendants were given 20 days to file an answer.

The 21 Negroes were arrested while riding integrated on city buses.

They face trial Feb. 11 before City Recorder Ralph E. Parker on two counts of violating bus segregation laws.

Judge postpones case of boys who peppered bus

The case of six Negro boys, who admitted shooting rifles at a Birmingham Transit Company bus on Dec. 30, was passed for six months today at Juvenile Court.

Court Referee L. E. Jenkins told the boys parents to return to court with them and if their records had been clean for the half year period he would dismiss the case.

THE BOYS, who range in age from 8 to 15 years, were charged with malicious mischief. All had admitted peppering the Tarrant City bus with air guns at 15th-av, n, and Tallapoosa-st.

Sgt. J. L. Rhodes, of the Youth Aid Bureau, said four bus windows were broken.

"I don't think it (the shooting incident) was connected with the racial situation at all," Sgt. Rhodes said. He said police have recovered two air rifles.

ONE OF THE SIX Negro boys also faces a lottery charge. Det. O. B. Vance testified he had seen the boy drop three lottery books on Tallapoosa last month. The 11-year-old boy denied possessiong the books.

Det. Vance said the books were on the Night Rider Lottery. Referee Jenkins continued the case until Feb. 12.

BUS SUIT IS CHALLENGED

Birmingham Asks U.S. Court To Throw Out Case

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 1.—(UP)—The City of Birmingham Friday asked Federal Court to throw out a suit by 21 Negroes seeking to have local bus segregation laws declared unconstitutional.

The city commissioners and the Birmingham Transit Commission were named as defendants in the suit filed Jan. 14 by the plaintiffs, all scheduled to be tried later this month for riding in the white sections of city buses.

The city listed two grounds in its motion in United States District Court. It said the Negroes' suit "fails to state a claim against the said defendants upon which relief can be granted," and that the constitutionality of the laws should be first decided at the trials of the defendants in recorders court, from which appeals could be made.

The transit company filed a similar motion earlier this week.

In Terminal case—

City asks dismissal on integration suit

A motion to dismiss a Federal Court complaint asking an end of segregation in the Birmingham Terminal Station was filed in U. S. District Court here today.

The motion was filed in behalf of Mayor James W. Morgan and Commissioners Robert E. Lindbergh and J. T. Waggoner. The city commission members were named as defendants in the action brought by Carl L. Baldwin, Negro, and his wife, after they were arrested at Terminal Station.

POLICE SAID they refused to move to a colored waiting room and charged the couple with disorderly conduct.

The city's motion to dismiss contends that the federal courts are without jurisdiction in the case. It further states that the complaint fails to allege any facts or state any claims upon which relief can be granted.

"No justiciable controversy is shown by the complaint," the motion states.

ANOTHER CONTENTION of the motion is that the complaint does not show "that the city commission has enforced or attempted to enforce or threatened to enforce any statute or ordinance or policy, custom or useage rising to the dignity of the law," which requires segregation of races in the Birmingham Terminal Station.

Cause for the arrest, the motion points out, may have been "merely a voluntary policy, custom or useage of private persons, without the force or compulsion of law. . . ."

It is also pointed out that the complaint does not show any threat by the city commissioners to interfere with persons in the Birmingham Terminal Station in the future, and therefore does not show any ground for injunction against these defendants.

The original complaint filed last month, asks for a declaratory judgment and an injunction preventing enforcement of segregation at the Terminal Station.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Critical Of King And Shuttlesworth

I personally go to church every Sunday and I have never heard race relations mentioned in our church. When the Shuttlesworths and the Kings go to church and preach what they should preach and quit plotting against the white people and use the church for the purpose for which it was founded race relations will get much better and I don't believe there would be any more bombs. I believe Shuttlesworth and all the rest of our colored people could go any place without fear. H. M. BURNETT, 1614 North 29th Street.

Arrest of 22 Bus Violators Defended by Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 18 (UP)—The city of Birmingham declared today that bus segregation is necessary for law and order and the city has the "right" to enforce it with "police powers" despite any federal rulings to the contrary.

Recorders Court Judge Ralph Parker heard argument for two hours and then took under advisement the city's case against 22 Negroes charged with violating Jim Crow bus segregation ordinances. They were taken to jail last Dec. 26 after more than 100 Negroes staged a mass unsegregated riding attempt.

City Attorney James J. Willis also asserted that the federal courts have "so confused" the segregation picture that it is hard to determine "where we are." The U.S. Supreme Court has "constantly dodged" giving reasons why segregation ordinances affecting buses or public parks are in violation of the civil rights amendment, he said.

"MUST MAINTAIN LAW"

Willis said the city of Birmingham "has seen" what happens when segregation is relaxed. He said it must continue to maintain law and order and it is in the "interest" of both white and Negro that they remain segregated.

The 22 Negroes were represented by attorney Arthur Shores. He entered not guilty pleas but rested his case on the Supreme Court's order voiding Alabama bus segregation ordinances and those affecting the city of Montgomery.

Shores said bus segregation is "void."

Four policemen testified on details of the mass bus riding. One officer, R. N. Higginbotham, said a white man told him as he attempted to remove Negro Douglas Jackson from a white section: "Get him off the bus or we'll kill him."

Shores asked if Higginbotham arrested the white man for making the threat.

NO CHARGES FILED

"No," the policeman answered. He said also he filed no later charges.

Shores said an arrest would have been exercise of "police powers." He said Jackson had paid his fare and was not creating a disturbance.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge Hobart Grooms still has not set a hearing date on a suit filed by 21 of the Negroes seeking to get city ordinances declared unconstitutional. Shores also is handling that action.

Among spectators at today's hearing was the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Negro integration leader who spearheaded the bus riding demonstration. He had urged it the day after a dynamite blast demolished his home.

Willis said the Supreme Court had not taken into consideration the social and emotional implications of its rulings. He told Judge Parker "you know that as well as I do."

Parker described the matter as "routine" but said he wanted to study some of the cases cited in the argument.

ALABAMAN ASKS AID FOR SOUTH'S NEGROES.

A negro minister whose home in Alabama was dynamited made an appeal here yesterday to President Eisenhower for Federal support of Negroes in the South.

The Rev.Fred L. Shuttlesworth, pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church in Birmingham, made the appeal at morning services at the Abyssinian Baptist Church 132 West 138th Street.

The minister, who came to New York to obtain financial support for three legal battles, told the congregation that "while America swings open her doors to the stricken Hungarians, she fails to hear the cry of Negroes at her own back door."

Mr. Shuttlesworth commended President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon for their prompt action in the Middle East crisis, but, he said, "instead of traveling some 8,000 miles abroad to spread Americanism, he (Mr. Nixon) should travel 1,000 miles to study the problem at home."

As president of the Alabama Christian Society for Human Rights, Inc., he is responsible forthree lawsuits now pending in the Alabama courts. Mr. Shuttlesworth is trying to gain equal rights for Negroes on city buses and in the railroad station, as well as to allow Negroes to take the Civil Service examinations for positions as policemen. He estimated the cost of such legal action at $14,000.

TIMES: P.22s
MON, 2-4-57
NEW YORK, N.Y.

Post-Herald
Wed. 1-2-57
B'ham, Ala.
P. 2

BOMBED—The blast at the home of Otis Flowers, 5, Negro, ripped boards off the side of the house and d extensive damage inside. The Flowers home is cated in a neighborhood inhabited by both whites and egroes.

INJURED IN BLAST — Arthur Lee Flowers, 12, suffered a cut hand when a bomb damaged his home. Here Arthur shows his injury to his mother. Right is John Otis Flowers, 10, Arthur's brother. All three were in the Flowers' home when the blast went off.

Delay Probable In Bus-Riding Trials

Post-Herald P. 1
Wed. 1-2-57 B'ham, Ala.

Latest Dynamiting Incident Still Under Investigation

The 22 Negroes arrested for violating Birmingham's bus segre- gation laws probably won't be tried for at least two weeks, ac- cording to Public Safety Commissioner Robert Lindbergh.

Originally, the cases were set for tomorrow before Recorder's Judge Ralph E. Parker.

Lindbergh said he would meet with city attorneys at 9 a.m. to determine how the cases will be handled and pick a definite date when we'll be ready for trial. And that apears to be, at the earliest, two weeks away."

Meanwhile, Birmingham police were investigating the second bombing of a Negro home within a week and a shooting incident involving a bus Monday night.

The bomb hit the home of Otis Flowers, at 5713 Third-av, n, Monday night, injuring the Negro's son, Arthur Lee, 12, who suffered a cut hand.

A Birmingham bus driver, C. E. McCullough, of 8309 Seventh-ct, s, said his bus was fired on Monday night. A .38 caliber bullet was found in the bus.

Lindbergh said he has assigned "at least a dozen men" to investigation of the bombings and the shooting.

"We've had round-the-clock investigations on since the first bombing of the Rev. (F. L.) Shuttlesworth's home on Christmas night," said Lindbergh.

The Negro whose home was bombed—Flowers—said he bought the house Dec. 3. A white family previously had lived in the house. Both Negroes and whites live in the area near Flowers' home.

Police said the bomb—consisting of about four sticks of dynamite—was tossed at the house at about 8:50 Monday night.

Flowers' wife and two sons, Arthur and John Otis, 10, were sitting in the bedroom when the blast went off.

"I was just sitting there when I heard the boom, and then glass started flying and the house shook," said Mrs. Flowers.

"I guess they did it because white people live on the block," she said, adding, "I'm going to move out of here as fast as I can."

The bomb shattered most of the windows in the house, and damaged furnishings. Some siding was knocked off one side of the house and several bricks were knocked from the foundation.

Mrs. Flowers said that just before the bomb went off she heard a car stop in front of the house and she heard a car door open and then slam shut.

E. P. Johnson, 4241 39th-av. n, said he was in front of the Flowers' home when the explosion went off. He said he saw two cars drive off, but couldn't identify the cars or occupants.

Six Negroes were arrested near the scene of the bombing and held on various charges of vagrancy, carrying concealed and grand larceny.

They were arrested at Second Court-al and 58th-st, n. In their car police officers found a shotgun, a pistol, ice pick, small baseball bat and two knives.

Post-Herald

Arrested were:

John Hendleton, 22, 4302 Georgia-rd; Benjamine Willis, 20, 632 43rd-st, n; Charlie Pearson, 23, 1523 Fifth-st, n; James Brown, 19, 3938 16th-ct, n; James Gillon, 25, 4243 First-av, n, and a 15-year-old boy.

P. 2

The city's third bus shooting incident started, according to bus operator C. E. McCullough, of 8309 Seventh-ct, s, about 10:10 Monday night.

He said his bus was parked on Montevallo-rd, near Loveman Village, when four or five Negro youths—from 18 to 20 years old threw some Christmas trees through the open door of the bus.

The driver told them not to do it again. The boys then used profane language and threw rocks at the bus, he said. Then, as the bus pulled off toward town, a shot was fired through a back window of the vehicle.

Police found a .38 caliber slug in the bus.

In the trials of the Negroes arrested for violating bus segregation laws here, the 22 defendants are apt to find additional charges against them by the time they come before Judge Parker.

The Negroes were arrested on Dec. 26, after a meeting of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights broke up at Smith and Gaston Funeral Home.

The Negroes went downtown after the meeting, and rode in the white sections of several buses.

At least one legal authority here has suggested the addition of two more charges — besides the charges of violating bus segregation laws — against the Negroes.

These charges, which may be considered by the city's legal department today, are:

Disorderly conduct in that violation of the city's bus and trolley segregation laws is an act that tends toward breach of peace.

Conspiracy to overthrow a city law, which is a violation not only of city, but also state laws.

It was pointed out that Birmingham's disorderly conduct law already has been upheld before the U. S. Supreme Court in the famous Sen. Glen Taylor case.

The one-time Idaho senator was convicted of disorderly conduct in Recorder's Court several years ago when he deliberately entered a door reserved for Negroes at a meeting here.

He lost the appeal on his conviction.

The conspiracy charge also poses interesting possibilities in that its legality is something new to be tested in the courts and an appeal from conviction under this law probably could be fought all the way to the nation's highest court.

House Bombing Is Saddening

News P. 10-A
Sun. 1-6-57

I was saddened to hear of the bombing of a Negro home in our fine city recently. The press, radio and TV played up the unfortunate incident.

Each cross burned is an insult to Christ himself, who was crucified for all mankind.

B'ham, Ala.

I feel our thinking colored people prefer to remain segregated, and treated with kindness and courtesy by our white people.

If the NAACP would stay out of our race troubles, as well as Northern white agitators, we could settle things in time by our own peaceful means.

Right thinking people will in time triumph.

May the new year bring peace and settlement to our racial problem.

MRS. MARGARET B. LINDLEY,
7935 Ninth Avenue, South, Birmingham 6.

Ask delay—

City attorneys to prosecute bus riders

City Atty. J. H. Willis and Asst. City Atty. J. M Breckenridge today were assigned to prosecute 32 Negroes accused of violating Birmingham's bus segregation laws.

Willis said he will ask for a delay in the trials until he has had time to prepare the city's case. Willis returned to his office this morning from a three-week vacation.

The trials had been scheduled to begin tomorrow morning before City Recorder Ralph E. Parker.

Twenty-one of the Negroes were arrested last Wednesday in a mass defiance of city segregation ordinances. The 22nd Negro was arrested the following day.

NEGRO INTEGRATION leaders called off the demonstration, saying they had enough cases to take to court to have segregation laws struck down.

They are charged with violating two sections of the general city code making illegal the mixing of races on buses.

Willis said the charges will remain against them for the time being.

"If our investigation indicates other charges would be proper, we will consider amending the counts," Willis said.

City officials have been considering changing the charges to disorderly conduct or breach of the peace to avoid risking a court test of the validity of the segregation ordinances.

WILLIS SAID he will ask for a delay in the trials so he can interview witnesses.

Meanwhile, about 25 or 30 spectators were on hand for the City Commission meeting this morning.

Their avowed intention was to be present in the event Negroes appealed to the City Commission to repeal segregation ordinances, or if the integration question was brought up at the meeting.

THE COMMISSION chamber was crowded to capacity last Wednesday, but the integration issue did not come up.

Negro leaders have asked the commission by registered letter to take segregation ordinances off the books. Commissioner R. E. Lindbergh said he did not expect further requests of that sort.

Lindbergh said the two city attorneys have been given full charge of prosecution of the 22 Negroes.

"We think the cases are in very capable hands. What they do from here will be entirely up to them. We are giving them all the information we have as fast as we get it," he said.

In another integration development, a white radio announcer and a Negro preacher told police they received threats last night that their houses were next on the list to be bombed.

Police Sgt. J. A. Wilson said the threats, made by telephone, were reported by Dave Campbell and the Rev. C. M. Smith.

Campbell, announcer for Station WBRC, conducts an audience participation show called "The People Speak."

Rev. Smith is a member of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, headed by the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth whose home was dynamited Christmas night.

SGT. WILSON said the homes of both Campbell and Smith will be under "round-the-clock" watch.

Meanwhile, police were continuing their investigation of the bombings of the Rev. Shuttlesworth's home and the New Year's Eve bombing of the Otis Flowers residence in Woodlawn.

Also under investigation was another incident in which shots were fired at city transit company buses Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Negro leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, at a meeting here last night outlined the steps he said would speed up the process of destroying segregation in the South.

He said the Negroes must:

1. CONTINUE TO demand that the federal government enforce the laws of the land. He praised the Supreme Court for its "courageous" stand in the issue, but said the executive and legislative branches of the government must be called on to follow the example set by the judicial branch.

"We must say to Mr. Eisenhower," he said, "'Just a word, Mr. Eisenhower, will help down here in the South'."

2. Use the ballot.
3. Give "big" money.

4. SUPPLY COURAGEOUS and able leaders.
5. Protest segregation, "where we find it."

"We must be willing to fill up the jailhouses," he said. At the same time, he warned that violence would halt the Negro's attack.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Emancipation Assn of Birmingham and Vicinity King also outlined three challenges that face the Negro in the "new world" of integration.

THE FIRST, he said, is to rise above individual concerns to obtain a broader outlook on humanity. The second involved achieving excellence in the field of endeavor. "We will be competing with the whole world, not just Negroes," he declared.

He also said the Negro must enter the "new world" with understanding, and the "Christian virtue of forgiveness."

"There is a danger," he said, "that some of us will enter the new age with bitterness." He warned that bitterness would defeat the purpose, and bring a repeat of the "old age."

"BOYCOTTS AND protests are a means to an end," he said "That end is to gain the friendship of the white man. We are not trying to defeat the white people, we are trying to defeat injustice."

Speaking briefly on the program were two white men. They were the Rev. Robert Hughes, of the Alabama Council for Human Relations, and Dr. Glenn Smiley of New York, field secretary for Fellowship Reconciliation. Smiley went along with Dr. King for the first integrated bus ride in Montgomery.

ALTHOUGH THE Emancipation Assn., is principally concerned with observing the anniversary of the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation, the stage was set for the local group to enter the integration fight here.

Prof. B. M. Montgomery, of Rosedale High School, in making an appeal for funds, said "if there ever was a time for us to become an active organization, it is now."

He said last night's crowd was the largest ever seen at one of the meetings.

Montgomery extends 5 p.m. bus curfew

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 2—(AP)—A 5 p.m. curfew on city bus service was continued for another week by the City Commission today because of a recent outbreak of gunplay following the end of racial segregation.

Night runs of Montgomery City Lines buses have been halted since last Saturday under a commission order. A resolution was adopted this morning extending the ban through Jan. 8.

Under the curfew, no bus is allowed to start its run after 5 p.m.

The restriction against night service was ordered after a young Negro woman was shot in both legs while riding a bus last Friday night.

In the resolution adopted today, the City Commission declared an "emergency exists" and said the curfew is necessary to protect the "health, life and property" of Montgomery residents.

The commission also approved an emergency appropriation of $60,000 to the police department for the hiring of 20 additional policemen.

Mobile Negroes called to 'important' session

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 2—(AP)—Mobile Negroes have been called to a mass meeting Thursday night on unspecified "important matters."

The call was issued yesterday by the Rev. J. Echols Lowery, pastor of the Warren St. Methodist Church, at a meeting of what reporters estimated at about 800 Negroes.

Last week a Negro delegation asked the Mobile City Commission what its position would be on city bus desegregation. The Mobile City Lines, Inc., is a subsidiary of the same Chicago company that owns buses in Montgomery.

The commission replied bus segregation laws are still in effect. It directed the bus company to continue to enforce them. The bus company had earlier told its drivers to ignore segregated seating laws.

Tuscaloosa Negroes adopt 'statement'

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 2—(AP)—Tuscaloosa Negroes adopted a statement of principles at a mass meeting here last night in which they expressed belief that "good will and fellowship can more creatively achieve what the law demands."

The statement, adopted at the meeting of the Tuscaloosa County Christian Fellowship Assn. also asserted that Negroes should seek "all the rights of citizenship through due process of law," and that the group would "not become rabble rousers" but would 'work for good will and understanding.

The statement of policy did not specify what rights would be sought, but it urged registration of Negroes to vote and asserted members of the group believed in the courts and would abide by the laws.

The Rev. William B. Shealy, pastor of the First African Baptist Church, was elected president. The Rev. Arthaniel E. Harris of Hunter Chapel AME Zion Church at Holt was named vice president.

IN TALLAHASSEE

In Baton Rouge, the Rev. T. J Jemison, Negro preacher who led the boycott in the Louisiana capital, indicated a change in tactics. Earlier Jemison said he would seek a test case against city bus segregation ordinances by having a Negro board a bus in the presence of a law officer. Wednesday he said he may seek a declaratory judgment against the ordinances.

Jemison announced plans to confer with city officials Thursday, and Louisiana Att'y. Gen. Jack Gremillion Friday, to determine their attitudes toward state laws and city ordinances in light of the recent federal decisions.

Tallahassee buses were idle Wednesday after a New Year's day de-

State Law Not Used

Birmingham Admits It Switched Bus Charges

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (INS) — Birmingham city officials Wednesday admitted switching charges against 22 Negroes arrested for riding buses in an integrated manner, as both sides of the segregation clash altered strategy throughout the south.

Authorities in Birmingham said that charges against 22 Negroes arrested last week have been changed from violating a segregated seating ordinance to disorderly conduct and breach of peace, and planned to ask for a trial delay.

City Attorney J. H. Willis said he would ask for a delay of the trial, which is set for Thursday, so he may interview witnesses.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, a Negro leader in Birmingham had urged his people to obey existing laws until the 22 had been tried. However, he recently said, "if they change or drop the charges against the 22 Negroes, they may have to do the same for thousands."

Two Birmingham men, one white and one Negro report they have been threatened with bombing. The white man, Dave Campbell a radio announced who frequently discusses the integration problem, said he was told his name was "next on the list."

Two Birmingham homes were dynamited during the holiday season.

In Montgomery, Ala. the City Commission extended its emergency cancellation of night bus service through Tuesday, Jan. 8.

ision by Florida Gov. LeRoy Collins to shut down operation "in the public interest."

The Florida governor called on Tallahassee Negroes to move less quickly in breaking down traditional segregation. A federal court order banned city interference with bus operation on an integrated basis.

In New Orleans, meanwhile, a Negro boarded a crowded bus and ripped down a segregation sign. Moments later after the driver replaced the sign the Negro, identified as Frank Johns, 25, allegedly tried to rob him, and was shot in the side by policemen riding the bus as he attempted to flee from the bus.

IN MOBILE

In Mobile, several hundred Negroes attended a rally Tuesday night where Montgomery Attorney-preacher Fred Gray told them, "our purpose is to end segregation in the South any place we can find it."

Gray, who created a minor revolt in Alabama local draft boards when his draft appeal was upheld by U. S. Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey, told the gathering, "in no community where there is a sizeable Negro population can it be said the race problem has been solved."

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA (RAILWAY STATION)
Mr. Lamar Weaver
Rev.&Mrs. Shuttlesworth

Going Into Alabama Is Like Entering Alien Country, Mob Victim Tells Solons

Steelworker attacked in depot case

Afro-American
Sat. 3-16-57
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON —"When you cross the Mason-Dixon line into the South, you enter a foreign country where violence and mob rule are king."

That was what blond Lamar Weaver, 29, fresh from a brutal attack by segregationists in his native Alabama, told the Senate judiciary subcommittee in a statement on the need for proposed civil rights bills Friday.

* * *

BECAUSE HE dared enter the main waiting room of the Birmingham railroad terminal and shake hands with a colored minister and his wife, Weaver was:

1. Showered with stones at the hands of an angry white mob;
2. Slugged with a suitcase;
3. Left to the mercies of the mob which kicked and pummelled him while a squad of policemen looked the other way;
4. Arrested for reckless driving when he fled the pursuing mob in his car which had been rocked and the windows smashed; and
5. Found guilty and fined $25 by a magistrate who piously lectured him about "preserving the Southern way of life."

His statement was submitted in writing to the Senate committee, because hearings had been officially ended March 5.

* * *

WEAVER, WHO had been a candidate for public improvements commissioner in Birmingham, withdrew from the race when enraged whites learned he stood for "gradual integration" and compliance with the "law of the land."

"After announcing my pro-integration stand," he told the Senate committee, "I received threats not only to my life but to the life of individual members of my family.

"My family left the city of Birmingham and I, myself have had to leave the State of Alabama."

Citing the urgent need for the proposed Eisenhower civil rights measures guaranteeing the right to vote, Weaver told the committee:

"Every obstacle devised by man is used to prevent colored citizens from voting in Alabama. There are whole counties in the state where not a single colored person is permitted to cast a ballot."

* * *

WEAVER, PROMINENT in labor circles and a chemical technician, told the AFRO he appeared at the Birmingham terminal Wednesday to witness a test of railroad segregation laws by the Rev. Fred L. Shuttleworth and his wife.

Dr. Shuttleworth, pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church, is director of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, which he organized after the state had succeeded in banning the NAACP.

His organization is leading the current fight against bus segregation and fostered the test of city laws by 21 persons who defied the seating arrangements six weeks ago.

* * *

THE REV. MR. AND MRS. SHUTTLEWORTH, to qualify as interstate passengers, purchased tickets to Atlanta and entered the main waiting room, marked "white and interstate passengers."

A mob of white persons appeared and attempted to block the couple's entrance to the station, but the Shuttleworths, escorted by police, pushed their way through and took seats about 90 minutes before their train was due.

Identified in the crowd of whites was R. L. Chambliss who figured in the Autherine Lucy case at the University of Alabama and now has a million-dollar suit pending against the NAACP as the result of that disturbance.

A cordon of 20 policemen filled the station, supplying them with a guard until they had boarded their train.

* * *

IT WAS while they were waiting that Weaver entered, chatted briefly with them, then shook the Rev. Mr. Shuttleworth's hand.

Police approached and asked Weaver if he had a ticket. When he was unable to show one, he was ordered from the station.

A threatening mob awaited him at the door. Police, when asked if they were going to give him protection, replied: "No, we're going to let the crowd take care of him."

None of the white men who kicked, stoned and assaulted Weaver were arrested, but Weaver was booked for reckless driving when he hurriedly drove away to escape the mob's wrath.

* * *

HEARTSICK OVER the abuse Weaver had suffered, the Rev. Mr. Shuttleworth, whose home was destroyed by bombs in January, said, "This is a blot on our name. We are going to be a nation with laws, or without.

"Colored people are tired of second-class privileges in a first-class country. This is a battle for America."

Despite an order issued on Jan. 6, 1956, by the Interstate Commerce Commission desegregating station facilities, Birmingham has attempted to enforce city laws requiring separate seating facilities based on race.

In announcing a test of this practice, Dr. Shuttleworth declared:

"Colored passengers will sit where men sit and ride where men ride and act like men, and if we are molested for doing so, that will mean the city has stooped to intimidation, harassing and molesting citizens because of their race."

* * *

THE RAILROAD segregation issue was brought to a head Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Seybourne H. Lynn, when he dismissed a suit filed by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Baldwin after they had been arrested last December for sitting in the main waiting room for a train en route to Milwaukee.

It was Judge Lynn who delivered the minority opinion when a three-judge court ruled 2 to 1 that Alabama and Montgomery bus segregation laws violated the Constitution.

Confessing that Birmingham police had made a "mistake" Judge Lynn in his opinion proceeded to accuse them of filing the suit only for "propaganda purposes."

* * *

HE REASONED that since the city had withdrawn charges against the couple, there no longer remained any issue on which the Federal court had a right to rule.

Reaching the odd conclusion that since "there is no city or state law which purports to compel interstate colored passengers to occupy waiting rooms designated colored," the Baldwins had filed "baseless litigation."

"This is but another in the growing list of cases wherein both the tutored and untutored apparently entertain the mistaken notion that the proper function of the Federal courts is propaganda rather than judicature."

Assaulted White Man In Race Row

Post-Times Herald
Washington D.C.
Thurs. 3-7-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 6 (AP)—Angry white men, frustrated in efforts to bar a Negro minister and his wife from a white waiting room at a railroad station, attacked a white man who sat beside them today.

Lamar Weaver, a steelworker who has made speeches advocating racial integration, escaped in a shower of stones. Windows of his automobile were shattered and he was struck in the face with a suitcase.

Police Chief Jamie Moore said that Weaver later was charged with reckless driving as he left the station. He was later fined $25 in City Court on the charge although he protested he was fleeing for his life."

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and his wife entered the Birmingham Terminal Station under police escort after they were twice blocked by the pro-segregation white group.

The Shuttlesworths were in the waiting room for almost 1½ hours before boarding a New York - bound passenger train.

Uniformed officers swarmed into the station preventing any disorder in the immediate vicinity.

After the Shuttlesworths were inside the station, police ordered away a crowd of white men, including R. E. Chambliss, ex-city employe who said he represented the Ku Klux Klan.

A crowd of some 50 persons, many of them hooting and hollering, followed Lamar Weaver from a Birmingham railroad station and pummelled his car with stones. About ten men tried to overturn Weaver's car.

Weaver accompanied the Rev. F Shuttlesworth to the railroad station where Shuttlesworth had announced, Negroes would occupy seats in sections designated for white people. The decision to test Birmingham police enforcement of railroad waiting room segregation followed dismissal of a Federal Court suit this week in which the court held there was no Alabama law against racial integration in railroad stations.

BOUGHT TICKET

The Rev Shuttlesworth, President of the Alabama Movement for Human Rights, bought a railroad ticket and sat in the white waiting room. Weaver sat beside him for about five minutes while they talked.

Police forced Weaver to move, because he held no railroad ticket.

As he left the railroad station, headed for his automobile, a crowd of white people hastily gathered. They jeered at Weaver with shouts of "n----r lover."

When he got into his car someone threw a stone. Others joined in, breaking windows in the car. Before Weaver drove off, a group of white men pushed and pulled on the car, attempting to overturn it.

LED MOVEMENT

Birmingham Train Station

World P.1

Mob Stones Minister Who Sat With Negro

Sat. 3-9-57
B'ham, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (INS) — A white lay minister who shared a railroad station waiting-room seat with a Negro integration leader was stoned by a mob in Birmingham Wednesday.

Birmingham Pastor Tells Of Incident

World P.1
Sat. 3-9-57
B'ham, Ala.

By THADDEUS T. STOKES
Of S. N. S.

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth said in Atlanta late Wednesday night that the Birmingham police did not try to molest him or his wife, Ruby, as they sat in a train station with intra-state tickets. He said they later changed their minds and purchased inter-state tickets to come to Atlanta. He first purchased a ticket for Autalla, Ala.

The minister who is president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, which has been spearheading moves for racial desegregation said it is apparant that segregation in public transportation in Alabama is dead, because a policeman came into the waiting room of the train station, inspected our tickets, but did not comment." They didn't arrest us."

"However, there were a group of men, milling around in the station, who were identified to us as members of the White Citizens Council and the Ku Klux Klan. As we were entering one unidentified white man blocked the entrance and said we don't want you in here," said Rev. Shuttlesworth. "We didn't reply," continued the minister.

He praised the citys police commissioner, Robert Lindburg, as being a "man of high morals." He said the police protected them while they sat in the station.

"Since they didn't arrest us for traveling unsegregated, it would look bad if they would arrest any body in the future. They should take the "segregated signs' down," said the young minister.

Praising many white citizens of Birmingham, the minister said that the cowardly mob action of the true people of the town. "Most white people are lawful. Because this is a nation of law not mob violence, he explained.

Shuttlesworth, pastor of Bethel Baptist church in Birmingham, said "the southern white man is missing a glorious opportunity to show the world that he can meet and master any situation. They would attempt to solve the racial problem by amending some of the segregation laws. If officials would take a stand, that would stop the violence of the Klansman and White Citizens Council, which they claim are safe-guards of segregated laws."

"The white people of the south should know by now that there is no inclination on the part of Negroes to back down now. However, we are not angry with anybody, but we will continue to press until we have won our civil rights.

But Rev. Shuttlesworth and his wife, who was accompanying him, said they don't plan to remain in Atlanta no longer than Thursday. He said he came over to converse with Rev. William Holmes Borders on business matters.

The Rev Shuttlesworth who led a movement by Negroes to disregard Alabama segregation laws on Birmingham buses several weeks ago, had announced earlier today that he would disregard custom at the railroad station.

When he arrived at the station newsmen and a crowd of people were waiting. As the minister started in the front door, he was stopped by Don Doodwin, 24, who told Shuttlesworth not to go in. The minister brushed past him. Three men pushed the Negro minister back from the door. One of them was identified by newsmen as R E Chamblis a well known Birmingham member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Shuttlesworth turned around and entered the station through another door.

Weaver was already there, the two shook hands and sat down together.

Police, in making Weaver move, did not take any action against the Negro minister.

"They should ask all the mob in the terminal station to leave,' the Rev. Shuttlesworth said, referring to a group standing around watching.

WEAVER ESCAPES

Weaver escaped from his attackers when the aroused crowd turned to argue with a newspaper photographer who had slammed the door of Weaver's car.

World P.1

Weaver said a number of the men in the crowd punched at him, and he was hit several times.

Weaver later charged that police made no effort to protect him.

"They didn't follow the crowd that followed me, and police saw men strike me and did nothing about it," he said.

Weaver had announced his candidacy for public improvements commissioner in Birmingham, but withdrew from the race this week, claiming that his life had been threatened because of his stand for an end to segregation.

BEFORE MOB STRUCK—Lamar Weaver, left, Birmingham steelworker, chats with the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Shuttleworth in the main waiting room of the Birmingham terminal station shortly before he was attacked by a rock-throwing mob, slugged, with a suitcase and arrested and fined $25 for reckless driving. The Shuttleworths were headed for New York.

Man, Who Fled Mob Fined For Reckless Driving

World P.1
Sat. 3-9-57
B'ham, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., — (INS) — A white man who narrowly escaped injury at the hands of a mob inflammed by his breaking with southern traditions, was fined Wednesday for the "reckless driving" he did to make his getaway.

A city court judge told Lamar Weaver - who shared a white railroad waiting room seat with a Negro minister -- that he had brought the attack upon himself by his disregard for local "customs and traditions."

Judge Oliver B Hall fined Weaver $25 for wreckless driving because his car struck and dented another vehicle as he sped away from the Birmingham terminal station where a crowd stoned his car, and tried to overturn it.

No one else was arrested as a result of Wednesday's incident - an effort of foes of segregation in railroad waiting rooms.

"A man cannot fly into the face of traditions and customs and not expect to be burned," Judge Hall told Weaver who contended he could not avoid running into the other car because he was "fleeing for my life."

World P.1

Police did not disturb the Rev. F L Shuttlesworth as he sat with his wife in a section of the waiting room normally occupied by only white people. But officers forced Weaver to leave the tation, where a mob was waiting for him.

38b 1957 ALABAMA

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA (RAILWAY STATION)
MR. LAMAR WEAVER
REV.& MRS. SHUTTLESWORTH

White Lay Minister Stoned, Jailed, For Talking To Rev. Shuttlesworth

Journal + Guide P. 11
Sat. 3-16-57
Norfolk, Va.

A young white lay minister, Lamar Weaver, was stoned and beaten about the head at a Birmingham railroad station last week when he made friendly conversation with a courageous colored minister, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, who was testing the Birmingham segregation law by sitting in the "white only" section of the waiting room. Angered because police would not let them harm Rev. Shuttlesworth, the mob of Klansmen and members of the White Citizens Council set upon Mr. Weaver when he left the station on orders of the police.

As he tried to drive his car away from the station, Mr. Weaver was assaulted by the racist mob and stones were hurled into the windows of the auto.

As he tried to drive his car away from his tormentors, he

Birmingham Transit Plans To Halt Runs

Advertiser Fri. 3-29-57 P. 1

Firm Blames Labor Woes, Race Strife

Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, March 28 (AP)—Birmingham Transit Co. today notified the Birmingham city commission that it had "no alternative" but to abandon bus service in the Birmingham area because of labor and segregation difficulties.

At an emergency meeting today with the city officials, the transit company said it expected a strike Sunday midnight.

Mayor James W. Morgan announced he would go before the transit company workers at 8 p.m. Sunday to urge them to remain on the job pending further negotiations.

Birmingham Transit serves Birmingham and suburban communities totalling about 500,000 population. Its buses haul about 30 million passengers annually. Its employes number about 580, represented by the Amalgamated Assn. of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

RIDING DECLINE

Reporting a "general decline in riding," transit company president Don James told the commissioners, "it is very definite that service has been affected because of segregation problems. Negroes were scared to death. Some white people have told us they definitely weren't going to ride the buses."

James also said the company could not meet union demands for a wage increase of 46 cents per hour when the present contract expires at midnight Sunday.

He reported that when the company offered a three-cent per hour pay boost, "they laughed."

The independently operated transit company offered to conrangements for public transportation are made, "if our employes are willing to stay on the job."

James said a decline in the company's passenger load became "very evident immediately following Dec. 26, when 21 Negroes staged a mass violation of Birmingham's bus segregation laws.

FINED $50

The Negroes were convicted and fined $50 and five dollars costs each in recorders court, but have attacked the segregation law in U. S. District Court. No action has been taken in the federal court case.

"Happenings in Birmingham as well as Montgomery, Tallahassee and other Southern cities have made terrific inroads on our revenues," James reported had advised the commission in an earlier letter. "There is no way we can measure the effect of this movement on our riding."

Advertiser

This was a reference to the U. S. Supreme Court order ending segregation on buses in Montgomery, Ala., and the Negro challenge of segregation statutes in Tallahassee, Fla.

LABOR COSTS P. 6-a

James said the three cent per hour increase would amount to $45,000 per year in addition to labor costs. Operators now are receiving $1.69 per hour.

"It is now apparent, James told the commissioners, "we will be unable to agree with our union and they tell us they will strike April 1.

"Our union has demanded a substantial wage increase. We realize, in view of the recent increases in the cost of living, they are entitled to a reasonable adjustment.

"Our revenues and other unfavorable conditions make it impossible to grant such increases."

COMMISSION TOLD

Birmingham Transit took over transportation operations of the Birmingham Electric Co., a subsidiary of the Alabama Power Co. in July, 1951.

James told the commission that operations costs of the company have been increased $50,000 a year because of traffic conditions and "actual revenues presently are running below our projections."

"So far, we have been able to effect economies which have reduced our cost of operation in line with declining revenues even though wages, costs of material and services and taxes have constantly increased. Further losses in revenue cannot be offset in this manner as all practical reductions have been realized."

City officials had no comment as to what future action might be taken if the operators refuse to delay their threatened strike.

Morgan said prior to the emergency session that the city "certainly will not offer to operate the company."

43 cents apart

AT THAT time, the mayor will outline some of his plans for trying to settle the dispute, which hinges primarily over wages. The union has asked a wage boost of 46 cents an hour. The company has offered 3 cents an hour more. The union has indicated, however, it will compromise on its original demand.

At 8 p.m. Sunday, the mayor will go before the entire union membership at a meeting at the CIO Hall, 28½ 20th-st, s, with his complete plans for settling the crisis.

It is believed these plans will set out that if the union will stay on the job for a "reasonable period," 30 or 60 days, the city will "explore the situation thoroughly."

At this juncture such an "exploration" would of necessity mean an audit of the transit company's books.

Reject arbitration

THE COMPANY flatly rejected a proposal from the union that the wage issue be submitted to arbitration.

But company spokesmen said they would accept any suggestions from the city "seeking information about our operations . . . and that means an audit by a recognized firm of certified public accountants."

D. S. James, president of the transit company said the company would never agree to arbitration. "It would mean we would be arbitrating ourselves out of business," he said.

As matters stand at this time, the company has put itself on record as seeing "no alternative" but to abandon service because of labor troubles, a decline in revenues and segregation difficulties. The company, in effect, has asked the city to find another operator for the transportation system.

Novice hands

JAMES SAID the company objects to arbitration because "arbitration would put this dispute in the hands of people who know nothing about this kind of business."

Transit companies which have submitted their troubles to arbitration in the past have been "ruined," he said.

Officials of the busmen's union, Local 725 of the Amalgamated Assn. of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, said the union "out of respect to the mayor and the citizens of Birmingham, will naturally listen to what the mayor has to say Sunday, but . . .

"Our membership has about had enough.

"Still, the mayor may come up with something pretty good."

Those were the sentiments of W. E. Whitt of Atlanta, international representative of the union, who has been sitting in on the negotiations for a new contract. News P. 10-a

They were echoed by Blackie Anderson, president of Local 725.

Mr. Anderson said if the Transit Co. is going to liquidate, "then they ought to say when, so we could tell our people, and the citizens of Birmingham will be properly informed."

In the background were reports that the company would welcome "some tax relief" from the city.

Such relief, one source said, would be of substantial financial assistance to the company. It would, in effect, be a subsidy to the transportation system.

What Mayor Morgan might have to say on this subject Sunday was not known.

The company serves about 500,000 persons in the Birmingham area, and carried 32,442,769 revenue passengers and 7,009,165 transfer passengers during 1956.

Raise costs

JAMES SAID the three-cent an hour raise which the company has offered the union would result in additional operating costs of $45,000 a year.

He said the company had a net operating loss of $54,241 for its 1956 operations, and had suffered a $31,233 net operating loss during the first two months of 1957.

Mayor Morgan issued this statement late Saturday on the dispute:

"Last Thursday Birmingham Transit Co. represented by Harvey DeRamus and Don James, delivered by hand a letter to the City Commission informing us that for a month negotiations have been under way between the company and employe representatives, attempting to work out a new contract.

"No satsifactory results came from the negotiations and a deadlock resulted. The Transit Co. officials stated they recognized the employes were entitled to a reasonable adjustment but due to a number of circumstances, mainly lack of patronage, they find it impossible to grant a fair increase in pay to their employes.

"The two concluding paragraphs of the transit company officials' letter reads:

"'We do assure the city commission of our earnest desire and willingness to cooperate in endeavoring to reach some satisfactory solution to this urgent civic problem. If our employes are willing to stay on the job, even on a temporary basis, we are perfectly willing to continue operations in order to give you a reasonable time to seek other ways and means of providing public transportation. We are willing to cooperate so that you will have sufficient time to interest some other company in the transit field and we will assist you in every way possible.

"This is a serious problem affecting to such a great extent the downtown area. In order to attain a workable solution you need the help and assistance of all interested people. We pledge you that help and assistance. We regret the necessity to abandon our operation, but under the circumstances we have no alternative.

"This declaration very definitely brings the city into the picture, a positive third party and the public's representative. There are thousands of regular riders who are dependent upon public transportation to get to their jobs. These people, in most cases, have no other means of going to and from work. They have been regular customers for many years, and are greatly in need of this type of public service.

"Should our public transportation services stop, much suffer-

Mayor holds last hopes—

Threat of transit paralysis hangs heavy over city

News P. 1 Sun. 3-31-57 B'ham, Ala.

Unless the mayor of Birmingham can change the union's mind, 500 busmen will leave their jobs at midnight Sunday, paralyzing the city's public transportation system.

Mayor James W. Morgan will have two opportunities to work on the union Sunday.

At 5 p.m., he and his associate commissioners, R. E. Lindbergh and J. T. Waggoner, will meet at City Hall with representatives of the union and the Birmingham Transit Co.

ing, financially and otherwise, would result. I'm therefore appealing to the transit company employes to consider these factors to allow us to pursue in every possible way a satisfactory conclusion to the problem. Further, you can depend on your city government to carry forward as quickly as possible the recommendations made in the concluding part of the latter."

Mayor Morgan said he will call together the first of the week the citizens committee of 45 which served in 1954.

"We are again asking the employe group to give the city a reasonable time to explore all factors," he said.

"The company has agreed to make pay retroactive to the expiration of the contract in the event of satisfactory settlement. The city agrees to this proposal."

Passive Resistance In Birmingham

Advertiser Wed. 4-3-57

THE Montgomery bus boycott was hailed nationally and internationally as a "great social experiment" illustrating the effectiveness of "passive resistance."

Montgomery, Ala.

In Birmingham buses have stopped service because of the passive resistance of white drivers, who simply refuse to drive the buses. Thus the striking union has done in a single day what the Montgomery social experiment never succeeded in doing, despite its elaborate car pool and the thousands of dollars received from out of state.

We trust the striking union will be given its due by the Northern press for its Gandhi-like approach which has out-Kinged King—more passive, more effective.

They Don't Believe It

Birmingham is without bus service. The operators are on strike for a wage hike which management says, because of reduced revenue, it cannot grant.

The revenue has decreased, report bus company officials, because colored passengers, tired of jim crow, have decided to walk.

Baltimore, Md.

Disturbed by the situation Mayor James W. Morgan has appointed a citizens' advisory committee on the transit problem.

Sat. 4-13-57

Thus far some 70 persons have been named representing labor, industry, the suburbanites, the churches, the merchants, the schools, in fact just every segment of the community except the 40 per cent of the population, who are colored.

Some Southern officials simply refuse to read the handwriting on the wall.

BUS STRIKE CONTINUES

Advertiser P. 3-B

Birmingham Citizen Group Seeks Temporary Solution

Sat. 4-6-57

Montgomery, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, April 5 (AP)—A citizens committee seeking settlement of a five-day-old bus strike heard compromise proposals by Birmingham Transit Co. and then met with union leaders today.

A spokesman for the utility offered pay increases totalling 16 cents over a two-year period. He also said the financially-harassed bus company is entitled to a return of 6 2-3 per cent net profit after taxes on its appraised value.

The strikers, members of the Amalgamated Assn. of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, now are paid $1.69 per hour. They had asked a 46-cent per hour pay increase.

The citizens committee is trying to get the buses back on operation at least temporarily while city, company and union officials and civic leaders seek a permanent agreement.

The bus company said it has been losing money because of segregation and labor difficulties.

A statement submitted for the utility by Atty. Harvey Deramus said the utility would permit an audit of its books, through which the company's finincial status could be determined.

The proposal by Deramus specified, however, that the audit be performed by a "mutually acceptable non-political national accounting firm."

The company said that it would operate for 60 days while a settlement under which it could operate with "sufficient revenue" is sought. If no solution is found Birmingham Transit asked to be relieved from all conditions of the franchise under which it operates.

Birmingham's Mayor Appeals For Delay In Transit Strike

Advertiser, Montgomery, Ala.

Mon. 4-1-57

BIRMINGHAM, March 31 (AP)—Mayor James W. Morgan tonight pleaded with Birmingham Transit Co. bus drivers to remain at work pending a settlement of their wage dispute with the company.

Morgan soke to the drivers as a midnight deadline for their scheduled walkout neared. Earlier the city commision conferred with company and union representatives in an effort to find some area of agreement.

The commision-union-company meeting began at 5 p.m. and broke up only 10 minutes before Morgan was to appear before some 500 union members. No announcement was made of results of the earlier meeting.

The company notifie the city commission Thursday that it is being forced out of busines by segregation and labor difficulties. The utility offered, however, to continue operations until the city finds a replacement.

The union asked an increase in pay from $1.69 to $2.15 per hour. The company countered with an offer of three cents per hour, which the union rejected.

Birmingham Transit buses erve an area of 500,000 residents, and are the major public transportation of greater Birmingham.

The union is the Amalgamated Assn. of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

Negro Suit Tossed Out As Propaganda Move

Advertiser P.1

BIRMINGHAM, March 4 (AP)— U. S. Dist. Judge Seybourn H. Lynne today threw out a Negro attack on Alabama's railroad waiting room segregation law as an attempt to use the federal courts for propaganda purposes.

His action, unless overruled, means that Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Baldwin will have to carry their case through the state courts, should they decide to press it further.

The Baldwins had asked Lynne to declare the waiting room law unconstitutional, and to enjoin city police from enforcing segregation at Birmingham Terminal Station.

Jul. 3-5-57

"This is but another in the growing list of cases wherein both the tutored and untutored apparently entertain the mistaken notion that the proper function of the federal courts is propagand rather than judicature," Lynne's opinion said.

Montgomery, Ala.

Lynne was the dissenting judge in the two-to-one federal court ruling that Montgomery's bus segregation law was unconstitutional. The ruling was upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

The Baldwins were arrested on disorderly conduct charges at the Terminal Station last December. The charges have been droppe but city attorneys argued that there was no case to be brought before the federal judge.

Stripped of excess of verbiage and argumentative innuendo," said Lynne, "the complaint's factual averments state only that two Negroes were rrested by police while sitting in ainter-stte white passengers' waiting room, while holding tickets entitling them to transportation as passengers in interstate commerce."

He said that oral arguments of attorneys for the Baldwins failed to clarify the theory of the complaint.

Defendants were City Commissioners, Alabama Public Service Commission, and Birmingham Terminal Co.

Unsettled Issues

World Aug. 3-9-57

The decision by United States District Judge Seyburn H. Lynne in which he dismissed a suit challenging both the segregation practices and law regarding waiting rooms at the Birmingham Terminal Station has not in our opinion settled the issues involved. Happily, his present decision does not have to be the final decision in the case which he dismissed.

Birmingham, Ala.

A young Negro couple in December bought tickets at the Birmingham Terminal which would have carried them to Milwaukee, Wisconsin. While waiting for their train, they took seats in the waiting room racially marked for "White Interstate Passengers." Birmingham police arrested them, placed them in jail, brought them to trial, where the charges placed against them were dropped.

P. 8

This couple went to court to have such practices, whether by law or custom or usage, declared unconstitutional. Judge Lynne said in his decision that "in vain the court has searched for the allegation of the complaint for a definitive statement of facts, showing 'that there is a substantial controversy between (plaintiffs and defendants) of sufficient immediacy and reality to warrant the issuance of a declaratory judgment'."

Birmingham Terminal Station maintains separate waiting rooms. There are racial signs designating the waiting rooms for Negro passengers and white passengers. The Alabama Public Service Commission has instructed terminal stations and bus terminals that they are expected to obey Alabama's segregation laws.

Why does Terminal Station maintain separate waiting rooms? Why doesn't the City of Birmingham declare an unmistakable policy that no more arrests will be made of any passenger, intra-state or interstate, who seeks to use any waiting room he chooses at a bus or train station?

The waiting room issue is going to have to be settled, and settled right, in accordance to the dignity of man. Enforced racial segregation has no place anywhere in American life. For that reason, we hope that higher courts will have an opportunity to review Judge Lynne's decision in the waiting room segregation case.

Judge Lynne observed: "The long and short of the matter is that a mistake apparently was made in arresting these plaintiffs. Charges pending against them have been dropped."

But has segregation been dropped at the Terminal Station? What about the humiliation, the embarrassment, and the interruption suffered by this prominent couple? Is it to be said that in American democracy a court is the wrong place to seek to redress the suffering "a mistake was apparently made in arresting them?" Are not the travelling Negro public entitled to protection against "a mistake" of racial segregation?

Why has not the Interstate Commerce Commission made no moves to enforce its own ruling that segregated facilities in interstate travel violate the law. The lunchroom, the magazine counter, everything at the Birmingham Terminal Station and the other like facilities under the ICC ruling should be open without hostile and penalizing discriminations.

Ala. Judge Defies U. S. Bus Ruling

Defender Sat. 3-30-57

Chicago, Ill. P. 6

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.,—(INS)—A Birmingham city judge Thursday upheld the Constitutionality of the city's segregation laws, and declaired that to void the ordinances would be "calamity."

38b

Chief recorder Joseph E. Parker found Mrs. Lila Bayior guilty of violation of the segregation statue.

The verdict in the case of this one defendant applied to 20 others arrested in a mass test of the Birmingham custom of separating the seating of white and Negro bus riders.

"There must be respect for the city laws of Birmingham," Judge Parker declared after holding them constitutional. He added that if the bus segregation law was voided, "there would be a state of emergency in the city of Birmingham," and added:

"I shall not be responsible for such a calamity."

The judge said the test of the law was brought about by a "conspiring small group of Negroes who defy the law in regard to segregation and take matters into their own hands." He added::

"Enmity, hate or prejudice should not burst the bounds of restraint. . . we cannot have good will and domestic tranquility unless our segregation laws are respected and obeyed. They are vital and necessary to avoid friction and calamity. They are constitutional."

The decision will be appealed.

In anticipating this, Judge Parker suggested that the city "present sqaurely to the U.S. Supreme Court perhaps the most important question in our country today — that of legality of the 14th amendment," which he said was ratified by "corecion by military government."

Waiting Room Suit Dismissed

Advertiser July 4-2-57

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 1 (AP) —A Negro couple's suit arising out of their arrest for sitting in a white waiting room at the terminal station last December was thrown out permanently in U.S. District Court today.

Judge Seybourn H. Lynn also assessed the costs of the case against Carl L. Baldwin and his wife, Alexinia.

The Baldwin suit was dismissed by Lynn last March 4, but they were given 20 days in which to file an amended suit. They did not amend it.

Montgomery, Ala.

The Baldwins were arrested on disorderly conduct charges, which later were dismissed. In their federal suit, they asked that a section of the Alabama Constitution dealing with segregation be held invalid. Lynn ruled that the section did not apply to passengers of any race.

Since the suit was filed, the Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Shuttlesworth, both Negroes, used the white waiting room at the terminal station and were not arrested.

Postpone Test Of Law In Ala. Bus Suit

Weekly New Orleans La. Sat. 3-23-57

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA -- (SPECIAL TO THE WEEKLY) The decision of 21 Negroes accused of violating Birmingham's bus segregation laws, was postponed here Monday by Judge Ralph E. Parker.

Judge Parker announced at the trial which began and ended Monday, that he would continue to study the case further.

The 21 Negroes arrested were a part of 100 who rode in the traditional white section of a city bus on December 26, 1956, to test the city's segregation law.

The group arrested pleaded guilty, but contended the city ordinance under which they were arrested is unconstitutional. None of the 21 Negroes were called upon to testify.

Violence in Alabama

Herald Tribune

Once again Alabama has been the scene of mob violence provoked by those who oppose all attempts to end racial segregation. This time it was a white man who bore the brunt of the wrath because he had dared to show sympathy with a Negro who sat in a "white" waiting room in the Birmingham railroad station. Fortunately, there were no serious personal injuries although that is hardly to the credit of the demonstrators.

The circumstances are these. The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, a Negro Baptist minister, and his wife, whose home and church were bombed last Christmas, entered the waiting room before catching a north-bound train. A white steel worker, Lamar Weaver, came in and sat beside them. Mr. Weaver has been a leader in the cause of integration. A number of police were present to prevent demonstrations by a crowd of whites gathered outside. When Mr. Weaver attempted to leave the station, however, his car was stoned and he himself was struck in the face by a suitcase. He was then arrested by the police and fined for reckless driving, a cynical punishment in view of the fact that he was fleeing from an angry mob the police should have controlled in the first place.

There is some legal uncertainty about the waiting room question in Alabama. The Interstate Commerce Commission has banned separate waiting rooms for interstate passengers. But a Federal court in Birmingham recently ruled that there was no state or city law against waiting room segregation.

This is beside the immediate point, which is that violence cannot be justified on any grounds and the law which should have prevented it was used to punish its victim. As an illustration of the explosive nature of the segregation issue and the need for temperate steps on legal lines, the episode has significance. But moderation can only work if the law is applied with equal firmness against all lawbreakers. This was not the case in Birmingham.

File Bus Bias Motion

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Atty. Arthur Shores filed a motion for 21 Negro plaintiffs seeking an end to city bus discrimination laws and asked the U. S. District Court to enter a summary judgment in their favor in the ca

Eject Bishop from terminal in Ala.

Afro-American 8.3

Baltimore Md

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (ANP) Bishop R. R. Wright, president of the powerful AME Church Bishops Vouncil, stated last week that he was ousted from a general waiting room in this city's railroad terminal while en route from Philadelphia to New Orleans.

He made known his experience in his remarks at the noon retreat of the Summer Short Course of the Ninth Episcopal Church in session at Daniel Payne College here.

The incident occurred, the bishop said, as he was waiting in a terminal here during a two-hour layover.

He said he seated himself in the general waiting room as he had done before when a policeman approached him and demanded that he leave the terminal because he might start a riot.

* * *

CHIEF OF Police Jamie Moore confirmed the observation by saying that this city's dual waiting room practice was being enforced as city law.

Suit Attacks Rail Station Segregation

Advertiser P.1

Sat. 1-26-57

Montgomery, Ala

Birmingham Negroes File Federal Plea Against State Laws

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 25 (AP)—Alabama laws requiring separate railroad waiting rooms for whites and Negroes were attacked in a federal court suit today.

Two Negores who were arrested at the Birmingham Terminal Station last month asked a U.S. District Court order declaring the statute unconsitutional.

Named as defendants were members of the Birmingham City Commission, the Alabama Public Service Commission, and the company which operates the terminal. The station is used by five railroads.

The Interstate Commerce Commission last year barred segregated facilities for interstate passengers.

COUPLE ARRESTED

Carl L. Baldwin and Alexinia Baldwin, a Birmingham couple, were arrested by Birmingham police on charges of disorderly conduct last month. Their case is set for trial Feb. 25.

The Baldwins said in their complaint that after buying round trip tickets to Milwaukee, Wis., on Dec. 17 they entered the station on the morning of Dec. 22 and sat in a waiting room marked, "interstate and white passengers."

They said that witin a few minutes they were arrested by city police and placed under bond.

The Baldwins asked for a speedy hearing by a three-judge court, and a temporary injunction against enforcement of the segregation statute until a final judgment is entered.

DEPRIVED OF RIGHTS

The Negro plantiffs allege that they and others similarly situated are "denied and deprived of their rights secured by the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States and equal protection of the laws and the rights and privileges secured to them."

The U.S. Supreme Court has outlawed racial segregation on city buses in Montgomery, Ala. A federal court suit filed here asks the end of segregation on Birmingham buses.

C. C. (Jack) Owen, president of the Public Service Commission, however, has warned carriers that Alabama's laws requiring segregation in public transportation are still in effect.

The terminal station is used by the Southern Railway, Illinois Central, Frisco, Central of Georgia and Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co.

Negroes Drop Bus Strategy At Mobile

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Fri. 1-11-57

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 10 (AP)—Mobile Negroes today postponed a mass meeting to discuss bus desegregation. The action came in parent attempted bombings and three cross burnings at Negro homes.

J. L. Leflore, Mobile Negro leader, said the meeting, tentatively scheduled for tonight was postponed indefinitely. One of the unexploded bombs was found on his front porch early today.

Leflore said the postponement was agreed upon "in view of the earnest desire of Mobile colored citizens to avoid a hasty strategy to effect desegregation which would give the few persons here opposed to law an order an excuse to appeal to hatred and incite violence."

No attempt has been made by Mobile Negroes so far to seat themselves, in white sections of the buses.

Police Chief Dudley McFadyen ordered a 24-hour patrol of areas in which the bombs were tossed and crosses burned.

POLICE ALERTED

"We cannot tolerate such action," McFadyen said. "I have alerted the police to make arrests in all future cases of this nature."

One bomb, believed to have been tossed from an automobile slightly damaged the home of Walter Johnson, 51, shortly before midnight. Johnson, his wife, a daughter, and her five children, were unhurt. The daughter was on a visit from Chicago.

In addition to the dud bomb at the Leflore house, another failed to explode at the home of William Jackson, Negro, in the same section in which Johnson lives.

The three crosses were burned in front of Negro homes in the Toulminville area where some white and Negro residential sections adjoin.

Leflore formerly was executive secretary of the Mobile Chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which now is under ban in Alabama.

Mobile Groups Join To Censor Race Violence

Advertiser P.S.-P. Thurs. 1-17-57 Montgomery, Ala.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 16 (AP)—Thirty Mobile organizations today issued a joint statement condemning racial violence and asking full enforcement of city laws outlawing violence.

The resolution, published in an advertisement in the Mobile Register, also was sharply critical of the Ku Klux Klan, which it termed "an un-American, subversive and terrorist organization."

Within recent weeks, the resolution stated, "a concerted campaign of violence and a promise of future disturbances" has developed.

ORDINANCES CITED

The resolution cited city ordinances prohibiting malicious injury to property, disturbance of the peace, and the burning of materials in streets, alleys or vacant lots. It asked that "all law-abiding citizens join us in demanding that city officials enforce the laws" against cross burnings and related incidents.

It further called on "all patriotic citizens and organizations to join us in repudiating the revived Klan as an un-American, subversive and terrorist organization."

NO KLAN REPLY

The resolution was adopted by religious, civic, mystic, fraternal and civic groups.

E. C. Barnard, Mobile gunsmith who is imperial wizard of the Gulf Coast Ku Klux Klan, was not available immediately for comment.

In recent weeks a Negro familys home has been bombed. There have also been apparent attemptde bombings at two other Negro homes, and numerous crosses have been burned in the Mobile area.

Barnard has denied the Klan was involved.

No attempts have been made by Mobile Negroes to integrate bus seating thus far.

Negroes at Mobile hint at test of bus segregation

News P.22 Birm., Ala. Fri. 1-18-57

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 18—(AP)—A Mobile Negro group hinted last night at a court test of city bus segregation but did not indicate when it might come.

The Rev. W. M. Smith, president of the Mobile United Citizens Assn., asked for contributions at an association rally to help defray expected legal expenses.

The Rev. J. Echols Lowery had said that "when there is no question about the Supreme Court ruling applying to buses in this city, we will ride unsegregated and with dignity."

THE NEGROES were urged to proceed with "caution, nonviolence and respect for the law."

The Hungarian struggle against Russian domination is "inseparable" from Negro efforts toward integration in this country, Lowery said.

"The Hungarians refuse to bow to Russia and communism. The Negroes refuse to bow to white supremacy and racism," the minister added.

Meanwhile, crosses were burned last night in nearby Prichard and Chickasaw.

One was at the home of Irene Autrey, Negro who lives alone on the edge of a white neighborhood. The other was near the home of Sanford Weaver in Chickasaw.

Mobile Negro Defense Fund Is Launched

Post-Herald Birm., Ala. Sat. 1-5-57

MOBILE, Jan. 4 (U.P.)—Negro leaders promised today to provide legal defenses for any Negro who at his own discretion tries to sit in the white section of a city bus and is arrested.

The Rev. J. Echols Lowery told 600 Negroes at a mass meeting last night of a "policy decision" not to attempt mass defiance of the city bus segregation law, and also not to discourage individual integration attempts.

The city bus company last week ordered its drivers to stop enforcing segregated seating on grounds that it had been outlawed by the U. S. Supreme Court. The City Commission countermanded the order, however.

Echols told a cheering throng of Negroes meeting under sponsorship of the Voters League and the United Citizens Assn. to use "sound judgment and calmness" in deciding what to do on the buses.

The Negroes contributed $281.49 to start a legal defense fund.

MONTGOMERY SEEKS PRIVATE BUS 'CLUB'

Journal and Constitution Jan. 1-27-57 p. 14a

Asks U.S. Court Opinion on Legality Of Operating Line on Member Basis

Atlanta, Ga.

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 26—The City of Montgomery has petitioned the U.S. District Court here for an advisory opinion on the legality of issuing a franchise for the operation of a private bus line for whites only.

City attorneys filed the petition asking federal Judge Frank M. Johnson if a group of private citizens could operate a line on the "club" plan in the face of the U.S. Supreme Court's ban on bus segregation which started here Dec. 21.

Judge Johnson was a member of the federal court panel which outlawed segregation. However, he gave the dissenting opinion, saying, in effect, that segregation on buses is legal.

The federal court petition was made after the filing of a memorandum on the proposed system and articles of incorporation with City Clerk Si Cader.

* * *

THE GROUP was incorporated as "The Rebel Club" and asked the city for permission to operate a nonprofit bus line for members only. Although no mention of race was made in the memorandum, informed sources said membership would be confined to whites. Names of some Negroes might be associated with the project on the understanding they would not ride the buses.

A formal court order stated no action on the request will be taken for at least three weeks.

The club proposes to operate 10 buses on five routes at the outset. It would begin operation with a minimum capitalization of $25,000, raised through donations, loans and membership fees.

During the 381-day Negro boycott of city buses, leaders of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., a Negro group headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King, asked the city for authority to operate a private bus service. The request was turned down on the grounds that the service was adequate, and Negroes then initiated car pools.

Pro-Mix Student Asked To Withdraw by School

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP)—Florida State University Saturday asked a graduate student to withdraw from the all-white institution for bringing three Negro students to a Christmas party on the campus in violation of university regulations.

The student, John Boardman of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who regularly attends mass Negro integration meetings in this racially-troubled Florida capital, charges that the action amounts to "suspension" and he would fight it.

University President Doak S. Campbell said the principle reason for the school's move was his action in bringing the Negroes to a holiday party although Boardman had been told it "would be in violation of university regulations."

Briefs Asked Of Attorneys In Bus 'Club'

Advertiser p. 1 Aug. 1-27-57 Montgomery, Ala.

U.S. Court Requests Written Arguments On Proposed System

Lawyers for all groups affected by a recent federal court order banning racial segregation aboard city buses were asked yesterday to file briefs on a proposed auxiliary "club" bus system.

They were requested by the federal panel which handed down the original integration ruling to give their arguments in writing as to whether the projected all-white transit plan would violate the order.

Judge Richard T. Rives of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. suspended their earlier order saying no action would be taken on an advisory ruling request for at least three weeks.

The City of Montgomery Friday asked for an advisory opinion as to whether a charter could lawfully be issued to the Rebel Club which proposes to operate the new bus system.

CITY FRANCHISE

An injunction issued by Judge Johnson Dec. 20 prohibited further segregated seating on Montgomery city lines buses, now operating under a city franchise, or other "public bus transportational facilities."

Whether the proposed club bus operation comes within that category is the big question to be decided.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. which led a 381-day boycott against segregated city buses, has said he feels the proposed all - white bus plan violates the federal court order.

King didn't say whether attorneys for his group would oppose it, however.

REQUEST DENIED

During the boycott Negro leaders sought a city charter for their own "jitney" bus system. Their request was denied by the city on grounds that adequate bus facilities were already available.

Afterward an injunction was issued forcing Negroes to suspend a bus boycott carpool which had been set up to provide transportation for their race while the segregation protest was under way.

In filing for a charter with the city commission, the Rebel Club said its buses would operate exclusvely for members of the club.

A six-man board of directors would have the final say on who could join the club. No membership qualifications were listed in a memorandum filed with the city commission.

J. Jack Ingram, one of the directors, said there was no connection between the Rebel Club and any White Citizens Council organization. He said he didn't know if any of the directors were citizens council members.

Members of the transit club would have to pay $1 membership fees and 15 cents for each ride.

Advertiser p. 1a

The club proposes to operate five routes at the start. A spokesman said tentative arrangements had been made to purchase 10 buses to begin the service.

Club organizers reported a minimum capitalization of $25,000 to be raised partly through donations, partly through loans and the rest from membership fees.

FEDERAL COURT

The City Commission asked the federal court to answer these questions:

Can the city hold a hearing on the application for a franchise by th Rebel Club?

Can the City Commission, provided the bus system is needed, legally issue such a franchise?

Will the City Commission have to enforce racial integration on the buses should the proposal become a reality?

City Extends Curfew Hour On Bus Runs

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala. Wed. 1-30-57

City buses will make their final run tonight 30 minutes later than usual.

p. 1

The night curfew of city buses was extended a half hour by the Montgomery City Commission which set the deadline for bus operation at 5:45 p.m. at its regular meeting yesterday.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said the curfew extension was an effort to use the increasing moments of daylight for the convenience of bus customers.

The Commission amended a resolution passed January 15 ordering buses to halt service after the 5:15 p.m. run.

All bus service had previously been suspended for six days following a renewed outburst of violence here stemming from the racial integration of city buses.

ON FINAL RUN

Police have been following buses which cannot complete their runs before darkness. Patrol cars will continue to follow the last bus runs, Gayle said.

The mayor also said further extensions of bus operating time would be made as the hours of daylight increase.

At the meeting, the Commission also made official its previous announcement of an award of $2,000 for information "leading to the arrest and conviction of a person or persons" involved in recent bombings here.

Gayle had announced the reward after a bomb exploded last Sunday damaging a Negro residence and combination taxi stand-filling station and an unexploded bomb was discovered on the porch of the unoccupied home of a Negro leader, the Rev. Martin Luther King.

The resolution providing the award said the money was offered because:

"There has been a resumption of bombings in the City of Montgomery, threatening the lives and property of our citizens, and this board is of the opinion that the prospects of a reward may materially assist the police in their investigations."

The Commission, subject to approval of the City Engineer, closed Teague Street for use by the Fire Department.

Harvey Lancaster and James Dean Sanford were approved by the commission as new patrolmen. Ruth C. Wood also was approved for employment as a kindergarten teacher.

Ala. guards in trouble after blasts

Afro-American Sat. 1-26-57 Baltimore, Md.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Two sets of guards, assigned to watch the home of Winston Craig, chauffeur and unofficial "assistant" to Governor Folsom, crossed signals Friday, with the result that two were fined and two received rebukes from their superiors. p. 3

The first set of guards, William Singleton Jr. and Marion Smiley, were hired by Craig after he received threats following the bombing of several Montgomery churches.

The second set were state highway patrolmen James R. Farr and Thomas E. Posey; also under orders to look out for the house.

Singleton and Smiley saw a suspicious car circling the block and trailed it. The highway patrolmen saw that they were being trailed and stopped the guards' car.

When they found weapons, they placed the two men under arrest. Smiley and Singleton were each fined $100 because of concealed shotguns in the car.

* * *

JUDGE EUGENE LOE also sentenced Singleton to a 60-day sentence for having a gun on his person, after warning them that he would have no one, "white or colored, taking the law into his own hands."

Shortly afterward, the two arresting officers were given a sharp tongue-lashing by Patrol Chief Joe Smelly for their part in the affair.

Smiley acted, according to reports, on the orders of Public Safety Director Billy Lyerly.

Mr. Craig, in addition to having driven for several recent Alabama governors, was recently appointed to a three-member Tuskegee Board of Trustees which has the responsibility of checking on the spending of $250,000 appropriated annually by the state for use at the institution.

He is also described as the governor's "confidential assistant."

Bomb on Rev. King's Front Porch Fails to Halt Integration Drive

Courier Sat. 2-2-57 P.2

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—"If they kill me, they'll have to kill 50,000 Negroes in this city." These words were uttered by the Rev. M. L. King Jr., leader of the bus integration crusade here, when he found a bomb on his front porch early Sunday morning.

The minister found the unexploded bomb on his porch when he returned from an anti-segregation meeting.

As usual, police said they had no clues.

Boycott-prober obtains evidence in bombings

News Bisbee, Ariz.

Thurs. 1-31-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31—(AP)—A year ago Detective J. D. Shows was collecting evidence used to obtain indictments of 90 Negro leaders on charges of conducting an illegal boycott of city buses.

Last Sunday he collected the bit of information that led to the "first real break" in investigations of violence intended to intimidate Montgomery Negroes, Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said last night.

JACK SHOWS, a 29-year-old former sailor, was at home asleep on his day off when a bomb exploded about 4:40 Sunday morning, damaging a Negro residence and adjoining service station. The first thing his wife knew, he was getting dressed to go to the scene.

Sellers said Shows noticed a car containing some men he knew and jotted down the license number. How he happened to know them wasn't explained.

"We followed up on it" and less than eight hours later in Selma, about 50 miles west of Montgomery, made the first of "seven or eight" arrests, Sellers said. He attributed the break to "the keen eye and observation" of Shows.

For seven weeks last Winter Shows worked with the circuit solicitor's office on the boycott. The only one of the 90 tried so far, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was convicted. His case is now before the Alabama Court of Appeals.

THE BOYCOTT ended Dec. 21 on a federal court order banning bus segregation in Montgomery. Seven bombings and six gunfire attacks on city buses followed bus integration.

Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said Shows would not be eligible for rewards for information leading to arrest and conviction of bombers. The city and the state of Alabama have both posted $2000 rewards.

Speedy Trials Promised in Ala. Bombings

Constitution Atlanta, Ga.

Thur. 2-1-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 31 (AP)—A state's attorney promised speedy trials today for anyone indicted for the recent bombings and shootings resulting from the end of bus segregation in Montgomery.

Police meanwhile worked almost without a letup gathering fresh evidence which Commissioner Clyde Sellers said might bring new arrests in addition to the "seven or eight" already made.

Sellers said last night that "seven or eight" white men were being held in jail in connection with the bombings of four Negro churches and three homes, and that "several" had signed confessions.

Their names were withheld until formal charges are filed.

The criminal division of Circuit Court starts Feb. 18. Circuit Solicitor William F. Thetford said city authorities haven't discussed the bombings with him yet but his policy always has been to "push for an early trial."

Violence Halts Bus Operation

Times-Picayune
New Orleans, La.

Four Homes, Churches in Montgomery Bombed

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 10 (AP)—The worst outbreak of violence since the fight over bus segregation began left troubled Montgomery without public transportation today.

City authorities halted bus service indefinitely after assailants bombed four Negro churches and the homes of two antisegregation ministers today. No one was reported injured.

The City Commission order suspending bus operations "until further notice" forced thousands of bus riders, both white and Negro, to find other means of transportation.

The city commission formally adopted a resolution at an emergency meeting to prohibit further bus service "until further action of the commission."

At the same time police commissioner Clyde Sellers ordered all auxiliary policemen on duty, and the commission suggested a midnight curfew for teen-agers.

There was the possibility of a federal investigation of the violence. The justice department in Washington said the FBI is looking into it to see if a federal law has been violated.

Attempts in Mobile

In Mobile 200 miles to the southwest, an explosion slightly damaged a Negro's home and attempts apparently were made, police said, to bomb the homes of two others.

In Montgomery, the Rev. Robert Graetz, a prointegration white clergyman who has been active in the fight against racial barriers, escaped unhurt along with members of his family when one of the bombs tore down a door at his home.

But police said another bomb tossed in Graetz' front yard might have caused death or serious injury except for a faulty fuse. Officers found 11 sticks of unexploded dynamite tied to a metal tube.

Detective Capt. E. P. Brown said police experts hoped to get fingerprints from a rack attached to the bomb but that the dynamite itself had been "thrown in the river."

'Too Dangerous'

Officers removed the two-foot fuse. Brown said the department has no demolition specialists and the bomb was "too dangerous to fool with."

The bomb throwers also shattered the home of another integration leader, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a Negro minister, and four churches including the Negro First Baptist where Abernathy is pastor.

Part of the basement and roof were damaged at the First Baptist church. Across town, other bombs ripped large holes in the Bell St. Baptist church and the Mount Olive church. The Hutchinson Baptist church near Abernathy's home was the sixth target. Part of a wall and windows were blown out there.

Gov. James E. Folsom inspected the damage and offered a $2,000 reward for arrest and conviction of the bomb throwers.

State Police Offered

Folsom also conferred with Mayor W. A. Gayle and said he is ready to offer state police or the National Guard if needed.

Gayle said "We can handle this situation ourselves. We don't need any additional help."

Abernathy was in Atlanta at the time of the bombings. Negroes there also have begun bus integration efforts. Accompanied by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., another Montgomery integrationist, Abernathy flew back to Montgomery but could not be reached for comment.

Three crosses were burned in front of Negro homes in Mobile along with the bombings attempts there.

Montgomery Buses Halted By Bombings

Atlanta, Ga.
Jan. 1-11-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 10 (AP)—The worst outbreak of violence since the fight over bus segregation began left troubled Montgomery without public transportation today.

City authorities halted bus service indefinitely after assailants bombed four Negro churches and the homes of two antisegregation ministers today. No one was reported injured.

The City Commission order suspending bus operations "until further notice" forced thousands of bus riders, both white and Negro, to find other means of transportation.

Some walked. Others caught rides or used taxicabs.

In Mobile 200 miles to the southwest, an explosion slightly damaged a Negro's home and attempts apparently were made, police said, to bomb the homes of two others.

In Montgomery, the Rev. Robert Graetz, a prointegration white clergyman who has been active in the fight against racial barriers, escaped unhurt along with members of his family when one of the bombs tore down a door at his home.

Constitution

But police said another bomb tossed in Graetz' front yard might have caused death or serious injury except for a faulty fuse. Officers found 11 sticks of unexploded dynamite tied to a metal tube.

The bomb-throwers also shattered the home of another integration leader, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a Negro minister, and four churches including the Negro First Baptist where Abernathy is pastor.

M. 1-11-57

Part of the basement and roof were damaged at the First Baptist Church. Across town, other bombs ripped large holes in the Bell St. Baptist Church and the Mount Olive Church. The Hutchinson Baptist Church near Abernathy's home was the sixth target. Part of a wall and windows were blown out there.

Gov. James E. Folsom inspected the damage and offered a $2,000 reward for arrest and conviction of the bomb-throwers.

Folsom denounced the bombings as the work of "Negro hoodlums, Communist hoodlums or white hoodlums, but whoever did these bombings must surely be a hoodlum."

A group of about 25 white ministers, including Graetz, issued a statement deploring the violence. They called for "an act of repentance" by all citizens and an offer of "fervant thanks" that there were no injuries.

"Whatever our differences of opinion may be, we cannot remain silent and allow our community to lapse into the barbarity of terrorism and intimidation," the Protestant ministers plus one Jewish rabbi said.

Abernathy was in Atlanta at the time of the bombings. Negroes there also have begun bus integration efforts. Accompanied by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., another Montgomery integrationist, Abernathy flew back to Montgomery but could not be reached for comment.

Negro Prays Ike Ask Halt In Violence

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Mon. 1-14-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan 13 (AP)—A Negro minister whose church and home was bombed recently prayed in the damaged church today for "just a word" from President Eisenhower against violence in Montgomery's bus troubles.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a prointegration leader, said he had suspended all night services at his Negro First Baptist Church "because we feel it might endanger the lives of our congregation."

Some other ministers who were the targets of six bombings Thursday urged from their pulpits that their attackers be forgiven. They pledged to continue efforts to obtain complete racial equality. There were no other reports of night church services being canceled.

The bombings came three weeks after Negroes won racial equality on Montgomery buses under federal court order. Bus service was suspended indefinitely by the city commission after the bombings. No one was injured in the attacks.

The Rev. U. J. Fields, pastor of the Bell St. Baptist Church, which the fire department declared unsafe for use after it was bombed, held services for his congregation in the basement of another church. Fields said the city should assume responsibility for repairing his church since, he claimed, it had not provided proper police protection.

NEGRO LEADER'S PLEA

Advertiser P. 1

President Asked To Speak Against Acts Of Violence

Mon. 1-14-57
Montgomery, Ala.

A Negro minister whose church and home were bombed recently prayed in the damaged church yesterday for "just a word" from President Eisenhower against violence in Montgomery.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a pro-integration leader, said he had suspended all night services at his Negro First Baptist Church "because we feel it might endanger the lives of our congregation."

Some other ministers who were the targets of six bombings early Thursday urged from their pulpits that their attackers be forgiven. They pledged to continue efforts to obtain complete racial equality.

There were no other reports of night services being canceled.

The bombings came three weeks after Negroes won racial equality on Montgomery buses under federal court order. Bus service was suspended indefinitely by the city commission after the bombings. No one was injured in the attacks.

The Rev. U. J. Fields, pastor of Bell Street Baptist Church which the fire department declared unsafe for use after it was bombed, held services for his congregation in the basement of another church. Fields said the city should assume responsibility for repairing his church since, he claimed, it had not provided proper police protection.

Fields also called for Eisenhower to step into the situation. The Rev. H. H. Johnson, pastor of the bombed Hutchinson Street Baptist Church, told his congregation at the damaged church that "there seems every reason for the FBI to come into this."

The Justice Department was reported st[illegible] whether the federal gover[illegible]ent has jurisdiction to enter the case.

Abernathy, vice president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn. that has led Negro integration efforts for 13 months, prayed for the President "to speak out on this situation."

Advertiser P. 2-A

With boarded up windows flanking him where stained glass had been, Abernathy said "we know that if the President would just say a word to the city it would have great value."

The minister also asked "more courage for the city officials," who he said are not now providing sufficient police protection. Yesterday was a "dark and bleak Sunday for all churches in our city," Abernathy said, "including our white churches."

The Rev. Robert Graetz, white pastor of a Negro Trinity-Lutheran congregation, took as his sermon theme "How Often Shall We Forgive," and asked forgiveness again for his attackers. His home was bombed for the second time Thursday night.

Graetz reported that since then he had received one threat, "which isn't more than normal." His young wife spoke up to say there had been several more. "Oh," Graetz said, "I haven't heard about them yet."

VIOLENCE STOPS IN MONTGOMERY

Times P. 34-C

City Quiet 2d Day After Halt of Integrated Bus Runs

Sat. 1-12-57

N. A. A. C. P. in Appeal

New York

By PHILIP BENJAMIN

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 11—White residents of Montgomery are involuntarily experiencing what the Negroes of Montgomery went through voluntarily for a year.

For the second day in a row no city buses operated here. Whites having business in town took taxis, organized car pools or walked. So did the Negroes. But they were used to it after their year-old bus boycott. The boycott ended last Dec. 21 following an order by the Supreme Court to end segregation on the Montgomery City Lines.

The Montgomery bus company shut down yesterday after early morning bomb attacks on four Negro churches, the home of a Negro minister and the home of a white anti-segregation minister with an all-Negro congregation. The City Commission ordered the shutdown.

Montgomery, a town of 75,000 whites and 50,000 Negroes, was a peaceful-appearing town today. But merchants along the town's main shopping streets were far from content. The consensus was that many potential shoppers were staying home as a result of the lack of public transportation.

Meanwhile, the possibility of a new all-white private bus system for Montgomery was raised.

It was reported that two city attorneys and a state representative had met with Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. to learn whether such a system might be set up without violating a Federal injunction against segregation on the existing lines.

There was no confirmation of such a discussion, but it was said that the plan envisioned a system in which only members could ride. Membership, it was said, would be limited to whites.

Today The Montgomery Advertiser carried an editorial calling for the resumption of bus travel even "if they run empty." It urged that special police details be assigned to the buses.

"The issue now is no longer segregation," the editorial said. "The issue now is whether it is safe to live in Montgomery, Ala."

N. A. A. C. P. in Appeal

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People called on President Eisenhower yesterday to issue a personal rebuke to those who bombed four Negro churches in Montgomery.

In a telegram to the President, Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., also said the association "deeply regrets omission from your State of the Union message any mention of rising tide of hate-inspired violence in certain Southern communities."

NON-VIOLENCE STRESSED

Times P. 10-C

Montgomery Negro Leader Urges Campaign Continue

Mon. 1-14-57

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 13 —The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. urged Negroes today to hold to their campaign of nonviolence on the bus integration issue.

New York

Mr. King is leading the campaign here. In a sermon at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, he said he was convinced "more than ever" that violence was not the way to win.

Mr. King praised an editorial in Friday's Montgomery Advertiser urging the resumption of bus travel with police protection. He also praised an advertisement in the paper deploring outbursts of violence here. The advertisement was signed by a group of business and professional leaders.

"For the first time," Mr. King said, "elements of the white community are speaking out."

No city buses have run since last Thursday, following an outbreak of shootings and bombings.

BUS IN MONTGOMERY STRUCK BY MISSILES

Commercial Appeal

Official P. 19

Four White Teenagers Held In Newest Incident

Memphis Press

CURFEW STILL IN FORCE

Sun. 1-6-57

By The United Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 5. —Two missiles were hurled at an integrated city bus Saturday, breaking the calm that has prevailed since Monday morning in this racially beset city where segregation laws were declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court.

Police Capt. E. P. Brown said four white teenagers, ranging in age from 11 to 15, have admitted throwing two sparkplugs at a bus as it passed through a white residential section.

First Of Its Kind

Captain Brown said the teenagers will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

Saturday's violence was the first of its kind to take place in a white neighborhood. Other incidents have occurred in areas of the city populated by Negroes.

The City Commission at a special meeting halted all night bus runs until Jan. 1, then extended the curfew through Tuesday to cope with desegregation disorder.

There have been five outbursts of violence since the buses were integrated. Buses have been shot at by unknown snipers, with four of the shootings at night. The last one occurred in the morning darkness.

Minor Damage

Saturday's incident caused minor damage to the bus. A window was shattered by the sparkplugs. No one was injured. The three Negro passengers on the bus left the bus after the glass-breaking.

A Negro woman, eight months pregnant, was shot in both legs a week ago, and was hospitalized after losing a considerable amount of blood. The bullet is still lodged in her right leg.

Doctors at the Oak Street Hospital said the bullet will be removed after the child has been delivered.

Driver E. E. Stubblefield reported Saturday's incident to police and identified the four teenagers, who were arrested minutes later.

Still Integrated

Negroes, meanwhile, continue to seat themselves at will aboard the buses.

One bus, driven by W. H. Fullilove, was struck three times, twice during the same night.

His bus was hit Monday morning in a Negro area, shortly before dawn. He said the bullet, which passed under the driver's seat, was fired from an automobile.

Tell It To Old Grandma

Advertiser P. 4-A

Your name and address must be given on letter ★ But upon request, name will often be withheld at the Editor's discretion ★ We reserve the right to shorten letters ★ No poetry, please ★ Repeat: No letter will be printed unless Editor knows who wrote it.

Montgomery, Ala.

Single-Seat System For Buses

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER — I enclose copy of letter I have written Hon. W. A. Gayle, mayor of Montgomery. I would like this suggestion carried in your great paper.

1-11-57

I honestly believe a plan of this sort given sincere thought in a broad way, with open mind, with fairness and justice to all has great possibilities.

J. E. HATHCOCK

Dothan, Ala.

Editr, The Advertiser:
Hon. W. A. Gayle, Mayor
City of Montgomery
Montgomery, Alabama
Dear Sir:

I am very reluctant to write you concerning the matter of bus segregation as well as segregation in other public transportation, but over the years I have seen it happen so many times that a big problem is solved in a simple way, and I can't get it out of my mind and believe sincerely if the bus and other transportation people would convert to a system where passengers would have a single seat to themselves (similar to the chair car on the trains) there could be no objection as to where the passenger sit.

In this way white and Negro would not be rubbing arms nor would the working men from the machine shop or foundry that might be unable to change his greasy or soiled clothes to fresh clean clothes before he boards the bus or train and reaches home. I am sure many working men feel reluctant or embarressed to sit by a lady with his working clothes on when she has been downtown with her nice clothes shopping.

It would of course cost the bus people some money to convert to the single seat system, but I don't believe anyone would object to paying a penny or even a few pennies more fare to have a seat all to themselves and enjoy that freedom and convenience.

It appears to me this would solve lots of trouble and be much better for everybody.

J. E. HATCHCOCK

Dothan

Capital Negroes fined, one jailed for having guns

News P. 13

Birmingham, Ala.

Mon. 1-14-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 14 —(AP)—Two Negroes arrested with concealed weapons in a car following the bombing of four Negro churches and two ministers' homes here last week were fined $100 and costs today in police court.

William Singleton Jr., and Marion Smiley, were convicted of carrying concealed shotguns in a car and Singleton was given an additional 60 days in jail for having a concealed pistol on his person.

JUDGE EUGENE LOE told the Negroes, "This court will not permit anyone, white or Negro, to take the law in his own hands." He warned that future offenses of that nature would bring much heavier punishment.

Singleton and Smiley told the judge that they were "investigating some suspicious cars" when state highway patrolmen arrested them early Friday morning near their homes.

Capital buses resume runs, daytime only

News P. 14

Wed. 1-16-57

Birmingham, Ala.

BY TRUDY CARGILE
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 16 —After a six-day halt, Montgomery buses resumed operation here this morning under a stricter police protection. Buses were stopped by order of the City Commission Jan. 10 after six bombing incidents in the early hours of that day.

Operation is to be on a daytime basis with final runs leaving the business area of Montgomery at 5:15 p.m. This latest order of the commission restoring bus service came during its regular weekly meeting yesterday.

POLICE COMMISSIONER Clyde Sellers told newsmen later that police guards will be provided for each bus on its final run which will occur at dusk. Sunset here today is at 5:03 p.m.

State court considering King's appeal

News

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18—(AP)—The Alabama Court of Appeals today had under consideration an appeal by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of an anti-boycott conviction. An immediate decision was not expected.

Atty. Fred Gray argued yesterday that the state failed to prove that King "has ever done anything illegal" in a trial last March.

THE BAPTIST minister was convicted of violating an Alabama anti-boycott law dating from the 1920s for his part in the year-long Negro bus boycott.

King was fined $500 and costs. Trials of 89 other persons also indicted for parts in the boycott were postponed pending King's appeal.

Reviewing trial evidence on the boycott, Asst. Montgomery Circuit Solicitor Maury Smith said the protest to segregated buses was carried out largely through "intimidation, threats and coercion."

Asst. Atty. Gen. George Young argued that the court should throw out the appeal because King's attorneys were too late in filing trial records. Atty. Peter Hall, one of five representing King, said the records were late because of a "misunderstood verbal agreement" with state attorneys.

DR. M. L. KING SR.

Dr. M. L. King Sr., pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta, will preach at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery in an exchange of pulpits with his son, the Rev. M. L. King Jr. The public is invited.

King And Father Exchange Pulpits In Sunday Service

Advertiser Sat. 1-19-57

Montgomery, Ala.

In the annual exchange of pulpits between father and son, Dr. M. L. King Sr. pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist Church of Atlanta, will be the guest speaker at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church for the morning worship Sunday. Dr. M. L. King Jr., pastor of Dexter Avenue, will fill his father's pulpit at the same time. P. 6 a

The morning anthem will be "Seek Ye the Lord," by Roberts, with Ernest Warren as tenor soloist. The processional hymn will be "When Morning Gilds the Skies" and the recessional "Take My Life and Let It Be."

Last Sunday the lesson was reviewed in the church school by Mrs. Susie J. Govan. Uniting with the fellowship was Clarence Edmondson, band director of Alabama State College.

A very appreciative audience enjoyed the concert by the choir. The effort to date has realized $534.63, and thanks are herewith expressed to each member and friend of the church who contribut in any way toward the success. Special mention should be made of non-choir members whose efforts resulted in the purchase of one chair at a cost of $25: Mesdames Hattie Alexander, Beulah P. Brewer, and Miss Verdie Davie.

Meetings during the week have been held at the residences of Miss Lamie Davis and Walter Nesbitt. Mrs. JoAnn Robinson entertained a few friends on the occasion of the birthday of the pastor, Dr M. L. King Jr., who also was in attendance at the weekly meeting of the January Club headed by Mrs. Thelma Austin Rice. Dr. King will visit at Hot Springs, Ark. next week for the meeting of the Board of the National Baptist Convention, Inc.

The guest speaker for Sunday is a graduate of Morehouse College and was awarded an honorary doctorate by Morris Brown College. He is a member of the boards of trustees of Atlanta University and of Morehouse College; is moderator of the Atlanta Baptist Missionary Association; is a member of the board of Trustees of the Carrie Steele-Pitts Home of Atlanta, of the National Baptist Convention, Inc., and of the Citizens Trust Company of Atlanta. He has served his present pastorate for more than 20 years and is active in every phse of civicand religious life of Atlanta.

The church family sympathizes with Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Taylor Jr. in the passing of his grandfather.

Appeals Court Delays Ruling In King Case

Advertiser P. 8-a Sat. 1-19-57

Montgomery, Ala.

The Alabama Court of Appeals Thursday took under advisement an appeal filed by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. on his conviction last March of violating state anti-boycott laws.

No immediate ruling in the case was anticipated.

The initial arguments heard by the court were on the state's petition to dismiss the appeal on grounds that the appellant had failed to submit certain records to the court within a time limit.

Asst. Atty. Gen. George Young, representing the state, called for a dismissal because King's attorneys "did not conform with state laws or your rules of appeal in filing the case."

He refered to the admitted fact that copies of the trail record and evidence were not delivered to the Appeals Court within the 60-day limit specified by law.

MISUNDERSTANDING

Atty. Peter Hall., one of a corps of five lawyers representing King, conceded that the records had been filed late, but he insisted this had happened because of a "misunderstood verbal agreement" with councel for the state.

"It was our thought than an agreement had been reached with the state whereby no technical rules such as these would apply in this case," Hall said.

However, when Hall read from the court proceedings the agreement under discussion, Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood observed that it appeared to him the agreement under discussion only concerned the trial of the 89 other Negro leaders who were indicted at the same time as King.

"From what you have read to me here, I fail to sees any relationship between the agreement you speak of and the agreement contained in the court record," Harwood added.

COURTHOUSE MOVE

Hall, in explanation, said it was at this point the misunderstanding had come about.

The Negro attorney also discussed other "extenuating circumstances" which he said might justify the delay. These included the fact that the court reporter was forced to move from the courthouse building and relocate elsewhere, thus causing a delay in the work.

After Hall and Young had each argued on the dismissal petition, the court called for arguments on the merits of the case.

Atty. Fred Gray, representing King, insisted in his review of the trial that the state had failed to prove that his client "has ever done anything illegal."

Maury Smith, assistant circuit solicitor, in rebuttal reviewed at length the evidence in King's trial which indicated the minister had been the leader of the long boycott, which Smith said had been carried out through "intimidation, threats and coercion."

Dexter Church Topics Listed

Advertiser

Montgomery, Ala.

Dexter Avenue Baptist Church plans two services for Sunday. At 11 a.m. the pastor, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., will fill the pulpit. His subject will be: "That Boy Back Home." Sat. 1-12-57

The anthem will be "The Lord Is My Light" by Merchant. Mrs. Essie P. Smart, soprano, and Dr. W. D. Pettus, baritone, will be soloists. The processional hymn will be "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and the recessional "The Church's One Foundation."

On last Sunday the lesson in the Church School's Adult Division was reviewed by J. T. Alexander. Connecting with the fellowship were Mrs. Margaret Foley, who came from the Hall Street Baptist Church, and Miss Helen Williams, whose former membership has been at Acmar, Ala. At the Communion service at 7 p.m. the hand of fellowship was extended to Mrs. Foley, Miss Williams, and to Thomas Jordan who had been baptized earlier.

The financial report for December as released by the committee headed by F. W. Taylor, revealed total receipts for the month amounting to $3,436.84 which included $796.25 for the "bus protest" and contributions from the month clubs of January, February, June, July, and December. Special note was taken by the pastor of a contribution of $50 to the church from the Boys Crusaders, of which Miss Verdie M. Davie is adviser.

Meetings during the week have been held at the residences of Mrs. Ophelia Sippial and J. H. Gilchrist.

The vested choir will be presented in the church sanctuary in a Vesper Musicale beginning promptly at 6 p.m. Sunday. Guest contributor will be Robert E. Williams, tenor, a teacher of voice at Alabama State College, and a member of Dexter Avenue Church.

Proceeds from this concert will go toward the payment for the new choir chairs recently installed by the choir through a committee consisting of J. H. Gilchrist and Mrs. Betsy Bryant.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to share the inspiration of both services on Sunday.

Listed among the sick and shut-ins are: Mrs. Lula Blair, 1423 Tuttle Ave.; Mrs. Lillian Bibb, 2063 Luverne St.; A. G. Carlton, 1533 St. John St.; Mrs. Mattie Capleton, 1619 S. Hall St.; Mrs. Clarissa Chambliss, St. Jude's Hospital; J. C. Cox, 1101 Hutchinson St.; Mrs. Eva M. Neely, 512 LaPine St.; Mrs. Ludie Randall, 484 S. Jackson St.; S. D. Turner, Fraternal Hospital; Mrs. Mamie Thompson, 723 Grove St., and D. D. Williams, 1000 S. Union St.

MONTGOMERY LEADER MEETS "MISS NAACP" — Dr. M. L. King, Jr. Emancipation Day speaker, meets Gwendolyn Everett, the Atlanta chapter's "Miss NAACP." The new queen is a freshman at Spelman College. — (Perry's Photo)

To Be Speaker In Nashville

NASHVILLE — Dr. Martin Luther King, jr., president of the Montgomery Improvement association, will be the guest speaker at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 13, at the First Baptist church here.

The central figure in the year-long bus boycott in Montgomery, Rev. King is being presented by the Social Action committee of First Baptist church.

Pastor of the Dexter Avenue Baptist church which stands in view of the court house in Montgomery, Rev. King holds the AB degree from Morehouse college in Atlanta, the BD degree from Crozer Theological seminary in Chester, Penn. and the Ph.D. degree from the Boston university divinity school.

Many observers throughout the nation have voiced the belief that King's emphasis on non-violence has possibly saved the lives of hundreds of persons of the Negro and white racial groups.

In his Nashville address Dr King will deal in part with the matter of passive resistance and its applicability in current human relations problems.

A native of Atlanta, Ga., King is the son of the Rev. M. L. King, sr., pastor of the Ebenezer Baptist church of that city. A younger brother, A. D. King, preached his initial sermon a few weeks ago. His wife, Coretta, is a concert soprano having graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music.

Chairman of the Social Action Committee is Mrs. J. C. Hull. Rev. Kelly Miller Smith is pastor.

FOLSOM IRE SPARKED BY UNKNOWN BOMBERS

Gov. James E. Folsom vowed yesterday he would do everything in his power to see that the persons guilty of exploding bombs in Montgomery and elsewhere in the state are prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

In a statement made at his weekly cabinet meeting, the governor denounced as "anarchy" the new outbreak of bombings and gunfire in Montgomery during the past weekend.

Folsom also declared that the $2,000 reward posted by the state for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty persons was not limited to Montgomery, but applied to such incidents anywhere in Alabama. The reward also applies to the weekend violence here, Folsom added.

The $2,000 reward was originally posted by Folsom on the day following a major outbreak of violence, which included the bombing of four Negro churches and two homes here.

The governor labeled all the bombings "anarchy, pure and simple, whether they are being done by Negro hoodlums or white hoodlums."

"If the persons responsible are apprehended, and I hope they are—and soon—I will do everything in my power to see that they are prosecuted in any court where anarchy can be prosecuted." Folsom concluded.

Services as usual say Negro ministers

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 12 —(AP)—Ministers of four bomb-shattered Negro churches plan worship services as usual Sunday with special prayers for those "who would desecrate the house of God."

"Despite the wreckage and broken windows we will gather as usual at our church," said the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, pastor of the Negro First Baptist Church and a pro-integration leader here.

Abernathy's church and his home were blasted in separate pre-dawn bombings. Three other Negro churches and the home of a young white minister who serves a Negro church were also damaged by high explosives.

Ministers of the other three churches damaged by bombs were not immediately available for comment but Abernathy said he understood they all planned to hold Sunday services, some perhaps on the lawn outside their churches.

Abernathy said many of the expensive, large stained glass windows of his church were cracked and some smaller panes blown out by the explosion. The basement, he said, was left a shambles.

RACES:

Integration Under Fire

Heartened by the U.S. Supreme Court edict ending segregation on the buses of Montgomery, Ala., Southern Negroes last week began a cautious test of the court's authority in other cities. They moved quietly, hoping to avoid trouble if they could, but the trouble came: Gunfire in Montgomery itself, a bombing in Birmingham, Ala., a menacing crowd of whites in Tallahassee, Fla.

In Birmingham, on Christmas night, a bomb blasted the home and the adjacent church of the Rev. F.L. Shuttlesworth, the leader of the bus-integration there. Two of his children suffered minor injuries. The next day, Shuttlesworth carried on with a planned demonstration for Negroes to "ride integrated." Thus he accomplished his purpose: To force a court test of the constitutionality of the Birmingham segregation ordinance.

Forced Retreat: Much the same kind of demonstration was scheduled at Tallahassee, but Negro leaders, who had gathered at a downtown intersection to board buses, withdrew when a jeering crowd of white teen-agers milled about them. A court test there was forced when the city arrested the general manager and nine drivers.

The constitutional issue, it seems, will have to be resolved in many Southern cities. The Negroes, and others construed the Supreme Court's ruling as applying to all transportation segregation laws, but most local authorities in the South maintain that it applies only to Montgomery.

Montgomery's bright hope for peace among races was shattered the day after Christmas. Nine bullets from a .22-caliber rifle ripped through one bus occupied only by the driver. After four shootings in three nights, night bus runs were canceled temporarily.

But a measure of progress did come notably in Mobile, Ala. There the local bus company quietly disclosed that it has stopped trying to enforce the city's segregation laws. Bus drivers were told to handle seating arrangements "as diplomatically as possible" and so far, the company said, there have been no incidents. But old habits seemed to last. In most cases, Negroes and whites were still riding segregated.

3 OKLAHOMA MEN

Butler Bombing Convictions Given Appeals Court Airing

Advertiser p. 1

The Alabama Court of Appeals yesterday heard oral arguments on the appeal filed by three men sentenced to 10 years in prison for conspiring to dynamite the home of a non-striking union employee of the W. T. Smith Lumber Co. in Chapman.

Montgomery

The three defendants — all natives of Oklahoma — were arrested near Greenville on Feb. 29, 1956, during the height of a wave of violence which followed the strike at the huge lumber firm.

The defendants—Doyce McCary, Cortez Melvin Gaskey and Edward Gaskey—were found to have in their possession four sticks of dynamite, four dynamite caps and a fuse. Also found was a detailed map of Butler County, bearing directions as to the exact location of George Brown, the latter a union member who had walked off the job at the lumber firm in July, 1954 but later returned to work.

Jan. 2-1-57

In the trial that followed in March, 1956, at Greenville, the state charged the men with conspiring to dynamite Brown's home. The men were tried collectively, all being found guilty and given 10-year sentences.

Atty. Roderick Beddow of Birmingham, representing the defendants, was highly critical yesterday of the evidence presented by the state in the lower court.

"The state's case was suffering from pellagra, it has no nutrition at all," Beddow declared.

Beddow further charged that the three men were convicted on nothing but "surmise, conjecture and speculation."

Advertiser

He also cited four errors which he claimed the lower court judge made and was especially critical of a statement made in the closing arguments of the trial by Butler Circuit Solicitor Joe Kettler.

Beddow said that Kettler had told the jury that "the judge wouldn't let you decide this case if there wasn't enough evidence." Beddow insisted this "unfortunate remark" by Kettler was in itself sufficient for the Appeals Court to order a new trial.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Ted Rinehart, representing the state, belittled Beddow's charges of no state evidence.

Jan. 2-1-57

Rinehart stressed the fact that the automobile the defendants were driving had an improper license plate, and that two other sets of plates were found in the car, neither of them having been issued to the vehicle. One of the sets of plates, from New York state, had been issued to an automobile owned by an official of the International Woodworkers of America union, Rinehart said. It was a chapter of this union which was striking at the Smith plant.

MONTGOMERY TO SEEK BOMB DEFENSE FUND

Commercial Appeal

Memphis, Tenn.

Pro-Segregation Rally Set For Today

Sun. 2-3-57

SUSPECT TO BE AIDED

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 2. —A pro-segregation mass meeting was called here Sunday to begin raising a $60,000 defense fund for persons arrested in connection with recent bombings and attacks on city buses.

Jack Brock, onetime state president of the American Federation of Labor, said the money will be used to defend anyone arrested on warrants sworn out by Negro leaders seeking to break down segregation.

The meeting was announced shortly after a seventh white man was charged in connection with a series of bombings which followed a Federal court order to end segregation on city buses.

Released On Bond

Sonny Kyle Livingston Jr., 19, was arrested Friday for bombing the Hutchinson Street Baptist Church last month, police said. He was released on $2,500 bond Friday night.

Preliminary hearings for all seven defendants, who are free on bond, are scheduled Friday in Recorder's Court.

In announcing the pro-segregation meeting, Mr. Brock said "We're not trying to pass on the innocence or guilt of anyone and we don't believe in violence as a cure for anything. We are interested in seeing that justice is done and that each person accused by Negro leaders gets a fair trial."

A notice in a paid advertisement prepared for the Sunday Montgomery Advertiser invited 100,000 white men and women "who believe in segregation and our way of life" to an all-day rally Sunday beginning at 8 a.m.

Funds Are Sought

The meeting is to be held at the local Carpenters Union Building.

Mr. Brock, editor of the Alabama Labor News, said his group proposes to establish an "Alabama segregation fund" and will seek funds primarily in Montgomery but that "contributions from over the state will also be welcomed."

The advertisement invited those attending Sunday's meeting to "share your time and resources to defend our beliefs."

While the money will be used to defend those arrested in connection with demonstrations growing out of the end of segregation on city buses, Mr. Brock said if any surplus is left "we'll throw it in the pot to help others" if similar racial trouble should develop elsewhere in the state.

"Wherever 'Saint' Martin Luther King (a Montgomery Negro minister and leader in the anti-segregation campaign) or his friends stir up trouble," Mr. Brock said, "then we expect to come to the aid of the white people."

RACE VIOLENCE CASES IN ALABAMA SOLVED?

Commercial Appeal

Memphis, Tenn.

Montgomery Police Mum On Arrest Reports

Thurs. 1-31-57

7 BOMBING INCIDENTS

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 30. — Rumors of an impending break in the investigation of racial violence gained momentum Wednesday but police kept a tight lid of secrecy on their work.

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers declined to comment on published and broadcast reports of the investigation.

Case Is Cracked?

Station WSFA-TV said in a newscast that police "for all practical purposes have cracked the case of the recent wave of bombings." The broadcast said "several white people" have been arrested and that police "are about to announce the completion of their investigation."

Earlier, the Montgomery Advertiser said at least two men "and possibly more" were held in connection with the outbreak of bombings which followed the end of segregation on Montgomery city buses.

The afternoon Alabama Journal, which also printed the story added that there were unconfirmed reports of "a confession or confessions, implicating some two dozen men."

The home of a Negro hospital orderly and an adjoining filling station were damaged in a dynamite explosion Sunday, the seventh bombing in less than three weeks.

Second Is Dud

Another bomb, which failed to explode, was found at the same time on the front porch at the home of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. He led the successful fight against bus segregation which brought a Federal court integration order Dec. 21.

Buses were ambushed with gunfire six times after the segregation barriers were lowered. Then, on Jan. 10, four Negro churches and the homes of two ministers active in the integration campaign were bombed.

Montgomery's Bombing Prone

Editorial The Birmingham News 2-8

REPORTS from Montgomery indicate that vigorous investigations of the bombings of Negro homes and churches is going forward. Some arrests have been made and law enforcement officials appear to be encouraged by the results of their work in seeking evidence.

Montgomery, Ala.

So long as outrageous incidents of violence occur in the troubled and complex field of racial relations, it is to be emphasized repeatedly that bombings and shootings and any other similar lawlessness can only make common difficulties greater.

Jan. 2-3-57

Violence certainly is deeply opposed by the vast majority of citizens who realize that unless it is curbed decisively, it may grow worse and worse. Arrest and punishment of guilty persons in such cases will be a major influence in curbing such crimes.

Here in Birmingham, also, we have some unsolved violence cases. Law enforcement officials here, in Montgomery and in other communities in which there has been such violence, should press on intensively in combating the outrageous menace in such activities.

Break Seen In Probe Of Bombings

Post-Herald Birmingham, Ala.

Thurs. 1-31-57

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 30 (AP)— Rumors of an impending break in the investigation of recent racial violence gained momentum today but police kept a tight lid of secrecy on their work.

Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers declined to comment on published and broadcast reports which told of the progress of the investigation.

Station WSFA-TV said in a newscast today that police "for all practical purposes have cracked the case of the recent wave of bombings."

The broadcast said "several white people" have been arrested and that police "are about to announce the completion of their investigation."

Earlier, The Montgomery Advertiser said at least two men "and possibly more" were being held in connection with the outbreak of bombings which followed the end of segregation on Montgomery city buses.

The afternoon Alabama Journal, which also printed the story, added that there were unconfirmed reports of "a confession, or confessions, implicating some two dozen men."

Sellers ordered his officers to refrain from talking to newspapermen about the bombing investigation. He said any information out of the Police Department must come from him.

The Bomb Fever's Contagion

Dallas Tex. Fri. 2-9-57

The recent outburst of the bomb-fever out at Beaumont, Texas promises to restrict itself to no special quarter in an area so pronounced at challenging a high court order in this segregation business.

Atlanta Ga. P. 4

Possibly getting its cue and wind from a further eastern sister, Montgomery, the Beaumont affair partakes of the same pattern, the bombing of homes and churches; seeking reprisal upon those who would either abet or take a "middle of the road" attitude in this integration issue.

Out at Beaumont, there are some Negro students attending the Technological College and threats and picketing in a measure have been in evidence.

It is well that the local authorities took off in an investigation of this outlawry and while they say no arrest has been made, there are hopes that those guilty of taking the bombing contagion to that western city will be speedily brought to book.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good; while it is unfortunate that human life and property are openly subjected to such peril, it might in the course of things suggest that the federal government take a try out in prohibiting this bombing pastime resorted to by those who would set themselves up as superior to the law.

There is definitely a crisis in Beaumont and it is entirely up to the law enforcement officers to set the pace that they are either able or unable to defend the safety of the people.

Bombing Halts Integrated Buses

World-Telegram

Montgomery Orders All Service Stopped; Atlanta Awaits Trial

Fri. 1-11-57 New York

By the United Press

Mass bombings in Montgomery, Ala., and rrests of Negro minister leaders in Atlanta halted all integrated bus riding in the Deep South today.

In Montgomery, the only Deep South city in which Negroes had established a right to sit with whites, authorities halted buses during a state of emergency following a wave of dynamite blasts.

Atlanta Negro leaders, six of them free on $1000 bonds after a police roundup, called off their defiance of a local bus segregation law until their cases can be settled by the courts.

Police in Chattanooga, Tenn., said two flaming gasoline-filled bottles were thrown at a city bus last night. No one was injured. The first bottle hit the pavement in front of the bus and the driver whipped around it. The second bounced off the rear bumper. The city bus company has been running its buses without segregation signs since Monday.

A grand jury in Atlanta may be asked today to indict the ministers charged with making a "test" ride in the white section of a trolley two days ago.

The Montgomery City Commission, following its declaration of a state of emergency, imposed a midnight curfew for children, both white and Negro.

In Atlanta last night more than 1000 Negroes gathered for a second mass meeting in two nights. They sang hyms, prayed and heard attorney S. S. Robinson declare:

"This would be a tough job but with the help of the preachers (who were arrested) and you, it will be a pushover."

38b 1957

King Will Speak At New Orleans In Negro Drive

P 65B

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16 (AP)—United Clubs, Inc., said today the Rev. Martin Luther King, Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott leader, will speak here Feb. 1 in a drive among Negroes to "black out carnival activities and entertainment in general this year."

The Negro organization said the Rev. T. J. Jemison, Baton Rouge leader of a bus integration movement, and other Negro leaders would be on the program with King.

Negro carnival frivolity and other social activites here "will go under wraps for at least a year—maybe more," the orgnization said, because "Negroes have awakened to the shocking fact that only a trifling gain about which only a trifling gin about which we can be happy."

At least 75 per cent of the Negro social, dance and other groups, it said, are cooperating in the move to cancel their annual ball "and instead donate the same amount to the cause of total freedom."

ALABAMA

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The Boycotted

Advertiser P. 4-a

How Some City Bus Drivers, 'Furloughed' By Boycott Survived Last Year

Mon. 1-28-57 Montgomery, Ala.

By Ed Swietnicki

Of The Advertiser Staff

EX-BUS DRIVER George Henderson was all smiles as he began the nightly chore of closing his filling station one day last week.

Exactly one year ago the future didn't look too bright for the husky bespectackled driver. Nor did it for 45 other drivers and mechanics of the City Transportation Lines. Henderson, you see, had been wheeling a city bus through Montgomery streets for the past 13 years. When you're middleaged and have been a bus driver that long, well. . . .

But on Dec. 5, 1955 the boycott began. When the men were paid a salary up until Dec. 24 everyone sensed something was wrong. In January everyone was asked to take his two weeks vacation on the theory that everything soon would be back to normal.

Then most of the buses stopped rolling and 45 employes were put on "a temporary furlough." Henderson's 13 years didn't match up against those who had been drivers for over 20 years, or, in the case of the record holder, over 30 years.

With family savings Henderson bought a franchise on a bright new service station. Soon business began booming for the garage novice in his new work.

Underground

HIS HAPPY SMILE disappears when asked to talk about bus driving days. "I don't want to talk about it. I deal with all kinds of people here. Some know I used to be a driver. Most don't."

For some reason he feels that people blame the bus drivers for all the publicity about the boycott. He doesn't mind the fact that he was shot at once in 1955, at the beginning of the boycott. His wife, however, who was waiting for him that evening, readily points out that the bullet came only inches from the top of his head.

Then there were crank telephone calls. Some told him to stop driving. Others told him to continue. Others hurled unintelligible obscenities.

What happened to other bus drivers like himself in 1956? From his corner vantage point Henderson pointed to a man driving an old furniture truck.

"There's one. Some work on garbage trucks. Some drive cabs. I even have a few working part time for me."

"Please don't mention where my service station is," he added. "We have a good business here and my bus driving days are over."

Another driver—one of the furloughed drivers who returned to duty when the back-to-work summons came last month, also has given bus drivers a helping hand.

H. L. Canterbury, who says, "I'm a young 48" had been driving for 16 years when he was furloughed. He is back on his Day Street route today.

"Mr. Bagley [Bus Superintendent J. H. Bagley] was like a father to us. He even got some of us jobs to help us. We had to go. There was just no work for us. We knew we had to leave the buses."

Back To School

CANTERBURY, when he saw the handwriting on the wall, began taking Auburn correspondence courses in the exterminating business. "When you're my age and you go back to school that's something," he proudly tells his 15-year and 9-year-old daughters. His wife was given credit too for helping out during 1956: "She's a regular cotton picker of a saver," he explains colorfully.

After five months of self-taught study, Canterbury began work in his own exterminating business. This helped family finances a bit. Mrs. Canterbury began working too. But after a week, Canterbury asked her to quit. "That'll be the day when my wife will have to work," he explained.

Rough, But They Made It

THE FAMILY survived 1956. It was rough for them, they explain, but "we don't drink, smoke, or spend lavishly."

He, too, rattled off the names of a few who did not return to work for the bus company—"Let's see there's Henderson, there's Barker, he operates a filling station, Johnson's on Fairview Avenue in a garage."

Some 10 to 15 of the furloughed 45 did not return to work as bus drivers when the boycott ended last December. "They'll return though as soon as they can," Superintendent Bagley explained, optimistically.

Canterbury employs two or three bus drivers in his exterminating business. He works at that about 20 hours a week, in addition to a full week as a driver. As soon as he receives his pension he's going to open his exterminating business on a full-time basis.

"And it's a real interesting and complicated business with a lot to be learned," he says.

Other drivers don't mind his enthusiasm for he can always supply part time work, if needed.

EXTERMINATOR-BUS DRIVER CANTERBURY

2 Federal Judges Say—

Post-Herald

All-White Busline Would Violate Ban

Thurs. 2-28-57 P. 1

B'ham, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 27 (AP)—Two federal judges joined today in an informal warning that a proposed new all-white busline in Montgomery would violate the Supreme Court ban on racial segregation.

Six white men, as charter members of the Rebel Club asked the City Commission last month for permission to operate a "private" busline for members only as a means of combatting the recent integration order.

The city, unwilling to act in the face of an injunction against continued enforce- of segregation laws on public buses, petitioned a three-judge federal court panel for instructions.

The panel refused today to hand down an advisory ruling, but two members wrote into the order their "personal" opinion that the new busline would, in effect, be a "public" transportation system.

And as such, they said, it would be subject to the same restrictions against segregation now in effect on Montgomery City Lines buses.

Judge Richard T. Rives of the Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals and U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., of Montgomery said use of the word "private" to describe the proposed all-white busline would be "inappropriate."

They said the city could grant a franchise for the Rebel line but that it would have to see that "the holder of the franchise does not discriminate between white and colored passengers."

Post-Herald

Since the court made no formal ruling, the statements by the two judges aren't binding. But they indicate how Rives and Johnson would rule if the busline does operate and is challenged. Negro leaders have indicated they would contest it.

Mayor W. A. Gayle declined to say what the city's next step might be. So did State Rep. Joe Goodwyn, an attorney speaking for the officers of the Rebel Club.

The charter of the Rebel Club makes no mention of race or color but says only members of the club would be permitted to ride the buses and that "only one class of membership" would be allowed.

Memberships would have to be approved by directors of the club, all pro-segregationists.

The court refused to make a formal ruling because, it said, the Constitution prohibits federal judges from handing down advisory opinions or acting on "abstract, hypothetical or contingent questions."

A decision can be rendered only on "actual cases or controversies," the brief order said.

Nevertheless, Rives and Johnson did express their personal beliefs as a guide to city authorities. The third judge, Seybourn H. Lynne of Birmingham, declined to give an opinion.

Lynne also disagreed with the other two last June when they ruled city and state bus segregation laws unconstitutional. It was that decision which led to the Supreme Court ruling.

Montgomery Deputies Hunt Indicted Persons

Post-Herald Mon. 2-18-57 P. 9

No Arrests Made After Jury Report

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 17 (AP)—Sheriff's deputies today sought persons indicted in connection with Montgomery's racial violence but no arrests were reported yet.

A grand jury returned an unspecified number of indictments yesterday after investigating the seven bombings and six city bus ambushes with gunfire that followed the end of segregation on city buses Dec. 21.

Six deputies were sent out to make arrests on the grand jury warrants but 24 hours later no one had been reported booked at county jail on the charges.

Alabama law says names of those indicted and charges against them cannot be disclosed until they are in custody.

Seven white men were arrested last month and released on bond after being charged with participating in the bombings. Their cases were passed from city court to the grand jury.

Circuit Clerk John Matthews said no indictments were returned against three of the seven who had been charged with misdemeanors in connection with dynamite bundles that failed to go off at homes of pro-integration ministers.

City Judge Eugene Loe said earlier that charges in his court would be dropped against any of the seven not indicted.

Four Negro churches, three homes and a service station-taxi stand were damaged by the bombs that went off. No serious injuries were reported. In one of the bus shootings a young Negro woman was shot through both legs.

Panel Fails To Rule On City Petition

Advertiser Thurs. 2-28-57 Montgomery, Ala.

By JO ANN FLIRT

Opinions expressed by federal judges yesterday may have struck a death blow to plans for an all-white bus line in Montgomery.

Although a three-judge panel declined to hand down an advisory opinion in the bus matter, two of the jurists expressed individual opinions that the proposed system would be "public" and subject to a recent federal court order banning segregation. P. 1 group of six white men, charter members of the proposed Rebel Club, asked the city last month for permission to operate a "private" bus line for members only.

CITY STUDIES PLEA

City commissioners yesterday had not ruled on the Rebel Club request but said it would be studied "in ligh of" yesterday's opinions.

Commissioners W. A. Gayle and Frank W. Parks joined in a statement that in their understanding the judges' opinions rendered the Rebel Club plan a public system "subject to the same regulations as the present Montgomery City Lines bus transportation system." Commissioner Clyde Sellers was out of town.

An attorney for sponsors of the club plan, Rep. O. J. Goodwyn, said he would confer with his clients before revealing any future steps in their efforts to provide segregated bus transportation.

COURTS AUTHORITY

Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives and District Judges Seybourn H. Lynne and Frank M. Johnson Jr. dismissed a City Commission petition for instruction. They explained that the court did not have authority to give advisory opinions on "abstract, hypothetical, or contingent questions."

The court's authority, they ruled, was limited under the U. S. Constitution to "actual cases or controversies."

However, Judge Rives and Judge Johnson, feeling "that it will be of some public service," expressed their individual opinions on the three questions put to the court by the commissioners in their effort to avoid contempt of the federal order banning segregation on city buses.

This is the way the two judges answered the city's questions:

(1) Yes. The city commissioners could grant a hearing on the application of the proposed Rebel Club for a franchise to operate a transportation system here.

(2) Yes. The commission could, if the need were found, grant such a franchise.

(3) And yes. If such a franchise were granted it would be "incumbent" upon the city commission "to see to it that in the course of the operation of this private enterprise the holder of such franchise does not discriminate between white and colored passengers." Advertiser

They then stated that the word "private" referring to the bus system was "inappropriate."

NOT BINDING P. 2-a

Since the dismissal order ruled that the court did not have jurisdiction to grant the requested advisory opinion, the statement by the two judges is not binding. It is, however, indicative of how they would rule if presented with the actual situation described by the city in its petition for instruction.

Judge Lynne, the third member of the panel, declined to express any opinion on the proposed bus service.

The same three-member panel, with Judge Lynne dissenting, ruled last June that segregation on Montgomery public buses was unconstitutional and a Supreme Court decision in November upheld that ruling.

Last month city officials petitioned the panel for further instructions pursuant to the Supreme Court order in light of the Rebel Club's request for a franchise.

BRIEFS ASKED

The court then announced it would withhold its decision for three weeks and invited briefs from opposing attorneys in a case in which four Negroes contested city and state bus segregation laws here.

Negro attorney Fred Gray was the only one submitting such a brief.

Atty. Goodwyn said an informal request to submit a brief in behalf of the members of the Rebel Club was denied by the court since his clients were not involved in the older segregation cases.

The Rebel Club, which has not yet filed papers of incorporation in Probate Clerk's office here, has nonetheless submitted proposed articles of incorporation to the City Commission.

Headed by a six-man board of directors, the club would restrict patrons to the membership of the corporation which would operate five scheduled routes in the City of Montgomery.

Turnabout Sees Persons Recruited For "All-Negro" Bus Line In Ala.

Journal Sat. 2-9-57 Wilmington, N. C. P. 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (ANP)—To circumvent integration on city buses, a group of whites have formed a private "club" and are attempting to get Negroes to a-

Brave Bombs, Bullets, Beatings

Alabama Diehards Fail To Make Negroes Fight Back

* * * * *

MONTGOMERY, Ala — Nine persons have been injured, one seriously, as the results of dangerous violence by pro-segregationists in Montgomery and Birmingham, Alabama, as an aftermath of the recent Supreme Court ruling which outlaws bus segregation.

The first report of violence was reported the day after the desegregation order, when diehard whites employed every tactic in the book to goad Negroes to "strike back" in riotous fashion and that Dixie soothsayer's prediction that bloodshed would result from integration" would become a reality.

An unidentified Negro man who had followed his wife into a bus and was paying their fare was struck down by a white passenger. The incident was the first reported.

Another act of violence was reported by a Negro woman who said she had been slapped and shoved to the ground by a young woman as she got off a bus. The victim of the attack was identified as Mrs Jonie Ruth Wilson, a domestic worker. She suffered a cut lip.

Then a teenage girl was beatn by a group of white youths at a Montgomery bus stop.

But these acts were "lulls before the storms." Serious, bloody incidents followed.

In Birmingham, a bomb blast destroyed the home of the Rev F. L. Shuttlesworth, prominent civil rights leader, and injured five persons Christmas night. The minister was slightly injured, but the explosion also injured Mrs Shuttlesworth, their two children, and a visitor, Charley Robinson, 50. Several adjacent homes were damaged.

A Negro woman was shot in the leg while riding a Montgomery city bus Friday night and the same bus was fired on a second time a short while later. No one was reported injured in the second shooting.

Police ordered all city bus runs stopped for the rest of the night as a safety measure.

It was the most serious outbreak of violence since racial segregation ended on city buses a week ago, although two other buses were fired on Wednesday night. No one was injured then.

The victim of last Friday night's shooting was identified as Mrs Rosa Jorlan, a 22-year-old expectant mother of Montgomery. Police said her wound was serious.

The first shooting occurred in a Negro residential area.

The bus, its driver, and all passengers aboard were questioned by police.

After the bus left to resume its run, another shot was fired at it in the same neighborhood where the first shooting occurred, police stated.

Mrs Jordan was seated toward the rear of the bus where she was struck in the leg. The bullet pierced the metal side of the bus near the floor.

The driver told officers he was unaware of any trouble until passengers shouted, "Stop the bus. A woman's been shot"

Just 48 hours earlier, shotgun and rifle fire hit two other city buses but no one was injured. Nine .22 calibre rifle pellets struck one bus while the other was blasted by bird shot.

Police are still investigating the case but have made no arrests.

Meanwhile, in Tallahassee, Fla, a bus driver asked two white passengers to get off rather than have them sit behind a Negro couple who refused to move from front seats.

At Camden, S. C., hooded vigilantes flogged a white high school band director "about 80 or 90 times" for alleged pro-integration views.

Night runs of the Montgomery buses were suspended Dec 29 to prevent further bloodshed from sniper's bullets while in Tallahassee, a Negro minister active in the campaign to integrate buses reported his life threatened by an anonymous telephone caller.

The Montgomery City Commission acted quickly after Mrs Jordan was shot and wounded. Doctors postponed an operation on Mrs Jordan because she is expecting a child.

The City Commission held an emergency meeting and adopted a resolution halting all bus runs after 5 PM through January 1. The action was taken as thousands of out-of-town visitors crowd the city for the annual Blue-Gray football game, dedicated to good will between the North and the South.

Buses operated normally during the day in both the Alabama and Florida capitals. At Birmingham, however, a Negro man was arrested again for sitting in the white section of a bus. He was one of 22 Negroes charged earlier in the week with violating the city bus segregation law.

At Tallahassee, the Rev J. Metz Relins said he received an anonymous telephone call Thursday night threatening his life after Negro leaders called off plans for "integrated bus rides to avoid possible conflict with some 200 white persons at the central bus station.

At Birmingham, police said Theodore Nelson, 50-year-old Negro, was arrested while seated in the white section of a bus and later released on $100 bond. He is scheduled to be tried in Recorder's Court with 21 other Negroes arrested earlier in the week during mass demonstrations and also charged with violating the bus segregation law.

At Clinton, Tennessee, segregationist Clyde Cook was fined $50 by City Judge Paul W. Horton on charges of assaulting a Clinton Baptist minister who had escorted six Negro pupils to integrated Clinton High School. Mr Cook was released on $250 bond pending appeal.

ALABAMA VICTORY — The Rev. Martin Luther King (right), leader of the Montgomery (Ala.) bus boycott that started one year ago, rides up front in a public bus less than a week after segregation on Montgomery buses ended in accordance with a Supreme Court ruling. Seated beside the Rev. King is the Rev. Glenn Smiley of Texas. (Newspress Photo).

Bus Integration Picture Today

Across the South, there were these developments on the bus front.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The City Commission approved resumption of night bus service, suspended after a series of shooting incidents. The movement to end separate-seating on buses began in Montgomery, spread after a Supreme Court ruling to touch Birmingham, Mobile, Tallahassee, Miami, Baton Rouge, with agitation among Negroes for action in Jackson, Miss., and Atlanta.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A Federal court is asked by parents of 14 Negro children to order admission of Negroes to two all-white high schools and two all-white grade schools.

NEW ORLEANS — Federal appeals court is to hear Wednesday argumen's to upset a decision that New Orleans public schools must end segregation.

BATON ROUGE, La. — Gov. Earl Long said he will enforce segregation laws "so long as colored people get seats," adding: "I don't see where it should make any difference to Negroes whether they sit in the front or the rear of a bus."

ATLANTA — Georgia Gov. Marvin Griffin asks legislators to "stand resolute" against race integration in any degree declaring "We will not be kicked around and subjected to crackpot theories."

COOK OBJECTS

Georgia's Attorney General, Eugene Cook, said Florida Gov. Collins "should know better" than to expect that sta'e can permit bus integration and long retain school segregation. Agitators, Cook said, "will not stop short of complete integration."

Montgomery Buses Halted By Bombings

Constitution Atlanta, Ga. Fri. 1-11-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 10 (AP)—The worst outbreak of violence since the fight over bus segregation began left troubled Montgomery without public transportation today.

City authorities halted bus service indefinitely after assailants bombed four Negro churches and the homes of two antisegregation ministers today. No one was reported injured.

The City Commission order suspending bus operations "until further notice" forced thousands of bus riders, both white and Negro, to find other means of transportation.

Some walked. Others caught rides or used taxicabs.

In Mobile 200 miles to the southwest, an explosion slightly damaged a Negro's home and attempts apparently were made, police said, to bomb the homes of two others.

In Montgomery, the Rev. Robert Graetz, a prointegration white clergyman who has been active in the fight against racial barriers, escaped unhurt along with members of his family when one of the bombs tore down a door at his home.

Constitution

But police said another bomb tossed in Graetz' front yard might have caused death or serious injury except for a faulty fuse. Officers found 11 sticks of unexploded dynamite tied to a metal tube.

The bomb-throwers also shattered the home of another integration leader, the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a Negro minister, and four churches including the Negro First Baptist where Abernathy is pastor.

Fri. 1-11-57

Part of the basement and roof were damaged at the First Baptist Church. Across town, other bombs ripped large holes in the Bell St. Baptist Church and the Mount Olive Church. The Hutchinson Baptist Church near Abernathy's home was the sixth target. Part of a wall and windows were blown out there.

Gov. James E. Folsom inspected the damage and offered a $2,000 reward for arrest and conviction of the bomb-throwers.

Folsom denounced the bombings as the work of "Negro hoodlums, Communist hoodlums or white hoodlums, but whoever did these bombings must surely be a hoodlum."

A group of about 25 white ministers, including Graetz, issued a statement deploring the violence. They called for "an act of repentance" by all citizens and an offer of "fervant thanks" that there were no injuries.

"Whatever our differences of opinion may be, we cannot remain silent and allow our community to lapse into the barbarity of terrorism and intimidation," the Protestant ministers plus one Jewish rabbi said.

Abernathy was in Atlanta at the time of the bombings. Negroes there also have begun bus integration efforts. Accompanied by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., another Montgomery integrationist, Abernathy flew back to Montgomery but could not be reached for comment.

Let Not The Mania For Bombing Of Churches Spread

Daily World Wed. 1-12-57

The laudable example of non-violence on the part of an aggrieved segment of citizens of Montgomery, Alabama in the bus segregation affair assuredly had no effect upon those responsible for and participating in the recent bombing of a church in that same city.

Atlanta Ga. P. 6

Hardly would the dark ages produce a picture more gruesome in its sordid aspects of the last degree in intolerance and cowardly reprisal than the recent attacks on churches and homes in Alabama's capital city and otherwise rendering a disservice to the community and nation in general.

Kidnaping and lynching individuals were not enough; lawlessness practiced on an unsuspecting minority would extend on into doing violence to places of worship. The church is not even to be spared in that cancerous infection unleashed in these hours of unrest and frustration.

The beginning was the harmless and "painless" pastime of "threshing" individuals; it grew into night riding and horse-whipping, thence to kidnaping and finally lynching. In this school many quirks were let in to condition a criminal personality now emerging in the forms of outlawry, open defiance to a court order threats and counter threats, underworld tactics of scare-phobic and finally, but regretably the blaming of a house of worship for its contribution to religion which teaches tolerance, long-suffering and non-violence.

Sad days are in the offing when churches would be suspected for carrying out the provisions of the gospel and the word of God to the extent that they are not to be immune from such intolerant treatment accorded citizens and fired upon by bombs.

We cannot remain effective in our preambles of faith and those exhortations we would commend to a famished world should the bombing of churches be allowed along with those quirks of lawlessness visited upon minorities and in open defiance of the law of this land.

Negroes Ask Courts To Rule Against Bus Segregation

World Wed. 1-16-57 P. 1

B'ham, Ala.

Twenty-one arrested transit bus riders Monday, Jan. 14 asked a Federal District judge here to declare Birmingham's travel segregation laws unconstitutional and to enjoin city officials from enforcing them.

The suit was filed by Atty. Arthur D. Shores on behalf of a group of Negro bus riders who were arrested Dec. 26 and charged with violating Sections 1002 and 1413 of the general code of Birmingham which require segregation in bus seating and related facilities.

Named as defendants were Mayor James W. Morgan, public safety Commissioner Robert L. Lindbergh, public improvement Commissioner J. T. Waggoner, as individuals and city officials and the Birmingham Transit Company.

Seeking the declaratory ruling and injunction were the arrested bus riders, namely Viola Cherry Leon Craig, Berthea Elmore Vann English, Eugene English, Ersey Goins Elbert James Henry, Douglass Jackson, Alice Johnson, Mabel Jordan Theodore Nelson, Rosie Walker John Strozier, James S. Phifer Dorothy Young, Wright Wheatt Charles Billups, Hattie Wilkerson Lela Baylor, Andrew Anderson and Bert L. Wilkerson.

City officials under normal court procedure have 20 days to file their answer to the complaint.

U. S. Judge H. H. Grooms, in whose court the complaint was filed, did not set a date for the hearing.

The complaint asked for a temporary and a permanent injunction that would prohibit the enforcement by city and transit officials the Birmingham bus segregation laws.

38b 1957

ALABAMA

AIRPORT
MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA

Montgomery judge postpones Gray trial until Oct. 11

The American Baltimore Md.
Sat. 10-12-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Recorder's Court Judge Eugene Loe this week postponed a preliminary hearing until Oct. 11 in the case of Fred Gray, 27 - year - old attorney here who was arrested Friday afternoon on disorderly conduct charges.

Gray, whose activity in the successful year - long bus boycott and his activity in behalf of integration here catapulted him into the national limelight, was jailed after he refused to move from a white waiting room at Dannelly Airport Field.

The maximum penalty if he is convicted of the charge is a $100 fine and six months at hard labor. Minimum penalty is a fine of $1 and court costs.

The noted attorney is expected to plead not guilty.

Gray Case Set For Trial Today

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Wed 10-2-57

Negro attorney Fred D. Gray is scheduled to go on trial here today on a disorderly conduct charge for refusing to leave a white waiting room at Dannelly Field last Friday.

His case was set down on the Recorder's Court docket about midway. Judge D. Eugene Loe said no definite time has been set for the hearing.

Gray was arrested and later released on $100 bond when he refused to heed an airport official's request that he leave the waiting room after several white persons complained.

38b-a

Gray declined to say whether he will represent himself or plans to have another attorney along.

Appeals Court Upholds Fine In Parks Case

Advertiser Wed. 2-13-57 Montgomery, Ala.

The conviction of a Negro seamstress whose arrest touched off a long mass Negro boycott of Montgomery city buses was upheld yesterday by the Alabama Court of Appeals.

But the court didn't go into the issue of constitutionality of the city bus segregation ordinance Mrs. Rosa Parks was convicted of violating and which has since been held invalid by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Instead, Mrs. Parks' fine and costs totaling $41.35 were upheld on technical grounds—because her attorneys failed to spell out any errors made by the lower court.

ARRESTED IN 1955

The seamstress was arrested Dec. 1, 1955 for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus in violation of a city ordinance requiring separate seating of white and Negro passengers.

She was fined $10 and costs in city court four days later, and on that day Montgomery Negroes started a boycott of the segregated buses. It lasted for more than a year until the segregation laws were knocked out by the Supreme Court.

The boycott ended last Dec. 21, the day the integration order went into effect. The federal court suit which led to the Supreme Court decision was filed on outgrowth of the Negroes' refusal to ride the buses.

Mrs. Parks appealed her city court conviction to circuit court and Judge Eugene Carter upheld it. The appeal brought the fine costs to $41.35.

Presiding Judge Robert X. Harwood, speaking for the court of appeals, said the failure of defense attorneys to file an assignment of errors made it mandatory on the court to uphold the conviction.

"Where no errors are assigned in appeals from convictions for violations of municipal ordinances," he wrote, "the judgment appealed from must be affirmed."

Mrs. Parks can appeal the decision to the state supreme court.

Negro Atty. Fred Gray said last night he had not yet seen a copy of the court's ruling, and until he did he would not comment on the possibility of an appeal to the higher court.

ROSA PARKS LOSES APPEALS COURT PLEA

Commercial Appeal Wed. 2-13-57

Negro's Arrest Brought On Bus Boycott

Memphis, Tenn.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 12. —(AP)—The conviction of a Negro whose arrest touched off a long mass Negro boycott of Montgomery city buses was upheld by the Alabama Court of Appeals Tuesday.

But the court didn't go into the issue of constitutionality of the city bus segregation ordinance which Rosa Parks was convicted of violating. The ordinance has since been held invalid by the United States Supreme Court.

Instead, Rosa Parks' fine and costs totaling $41.35 were upheld on technical grounds — because her attorneys failed to spell out any errors alleged to have been made by the lower court.

The seamstress was arrested Dec. 1, 1955, for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus in violation of a city ordinance requiring separate seating of white and Negro passengers.

She was fined $10 and costs in City Court four days later, and on that day Montgomery Negroes started a boycott of the segregated buses. It lasted more than a year until the segregation laws were knocked out by the Supreme Court.

The boycott ended Dec. 21, the day the integration order went into effect. The Federal Court suit which led to the Supreme Court decision was filed an outgrowth of the Negroes' refusal to ride the buses.

Rosa Parks appealed her City Court conviction to Circuit Court and Judge Eugene Carter upheld it. The appeal brought the fine costs to $41.35.

Negro's conviction in bus-seating case is upheld

Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 2-13-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 13 —(AP)—On technical grounds, the Alabama Court of Appeals has upheld the conviction of Mrs. Rosa Parks for violating a since-invalidated city bus segregation ordinance.

The Negro seamstress was arrested Dec. 1, 1955, and fined $10 and costs in city court Dec. 5. The case touched off a 381-day bus boycott by Montgomery Negroes that ended when a Federal Court injunction banned enforcement of segregation laws on Montgomery buses.

The appeal court said failure of defense attorneys to spell out any errors made it mandatory for the court to uphold the conviction.

"WHERE NO ERRORS are assigned in appeals from convictions for violations of municipal ordinances," Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood wrote, "the judgment appealed from must be affirmed."

Fred D. Gray, Negro attorney who has represented Mrs. Parks, said he didn't know immediately whether the case would be appealed to the Alabama Supreme Court.

The city ordinance required separate seating of white and Negro passengers. The woman was arrested for refusing to move to the rear of a city bus.

Circuit Judge Eugene Carter upheld an appeal of the City Court decision, with fine and costs rising to $41.35.

A suit filed in Federal Court as an outgrowth of the boycott resulted in the decision that bus segregation in Montgomery was unconstitutional.

'Private' bus line plan stalls

Baltimore, Md. Sat. 3-9-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Plans of a group of Montgomery citizens to establish and operate a "private" bus system for whites only received a sharp jolt Wednesday.

A three-judge panel of federal jurists who had been asked for an advisory opinion on the proposed line, to be operated by the Rebel Club, stated that they were without jurisdiction to make such a ruling.

Two of the jurists, however, dealt what may be a death blow to the project by expressing individual opinions that such a bus line would be "public" and therefore subject to previous court rulings against racial segregation on buses.

* * *

THEIR ANSWERS were based upon three questions put to the court by the Montgomery City Commission after it received the request of the Rebel Club for its "private" line franchise.

The three judges who received the City Commission petition for an "advisory opinion" are U.S. Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives and District Judges Seybourn H. Lynne and Frank M. Johnson Jr.

Mrs. Rosa Parks Hated Segregation From Her Childhood

Call 7-3

The auditorium of the Metropolitan Missionary Baptist church at 31st and Bellefontaine was only sparsely filled Wednesday night but the few people in attendance heard a moving story of courage told by Mrs. Rosa Parks, the woman whose refusal to move from her seat on a bus in Montgomery, Ala., led to the bus boycott there in December, 1955.

Mrs. Parks, who is currently on a speaking tour under the auspices of the NAACP, said that from early childhood she resented the fact that she could not do certain things and go certain places "simply because of the color of my skin."

"Down in Alabama," she said, "the only law we had to obey was the white man's word. Early in life I found myself very unhappy at what I saw going on around me."

She said that as a child she saw Negroes toiling in fields of cotton while white landlords "enjoyed the benefits of our labors." As a child of 6, she remembers being forced to stay awake one night with the adults because the Ku Klux Klan was coming. Her grandfather had a shotgun ready to defend his family. The child wanted to go bed but couldn't because of the Klan.

Mrs. Parks said that she also recalled being scolded after she had exchanged words with a little white boy. Her grandmother told her that she would have to learn "how to talk to white folks" or else she would be lynched before she got grown.

Mrs. Parks told the audience Wednesday night that she would "rather be lynched than accept passively the injustices heaped upon Negroes in the South." All around her, she said, were Negroes who "didn't have the courage to stand up for their rights."

Mrs. Parks said that there were times when "I looked at our Negro men and wondered what was happening to our manhood." She said that she was concerned about the future of little Negro children to whom it was hard to explain the meaning of prejudice and segregation.

In 1943, Mrs. Parks joined the NAACP and became secretary of the Montgomery branch. During the war, she took an interest in veterans and the conditions to which they would return after the fighting was o[illegible] She helped to organize the m[illegible] to encourage Negroes to register and vote.

ROSA PARKS

All of her early experiences played a part in her refusal on December 1, 1955, to move from her seat when the white bus driver at Montgomery ordered her to stand up and give a white person her seat.

Mrs. Parks said that she just simply refused to do so.

A seamstress, Mrs. Parks was riding the bus home from work. "I was extremely tired that day" she said, "and had some NAACP work to do when I got home. I took a seat just beyond the "white reserved section." It was the custom in Montgomery to reserve several rows of seats in the front of the bus for white passengers whether there were any whites on the bus or not. Negro passengers were standing in the rear.

Mrs. Parks said that she sat behind the reserved seats for whites which at the time were empty. Several stops later, white passengers got on and filled all the reserved seats. This made Mrs. Parks seated immediately behind the white passengers. When more white passengers boarded at another stop, the bus driver approached Mrs. Parks and asked her to get up. Three other Negro passengers seated near her got up and stood. Mrs. Parks said that she told the bus driver she was not going to move. The bus driver said that he would call the police. She told him to go ahead. Mrs. Parks was handcuffed, taken to jail and fingerprinted. She was released on bond and her trial set for December 5.

Word of her arrest spread around Montgomery. Spontaneously, the movement to stay off the busses developed. By word of mouth, the plan grew. This was the beginning of the boycott which continued until December, 1956, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that segregation on busses was unconstitutional.

Mrs. Parks paid a glowing tribute to the Rev. Martin Luther King for his leadership in the nonviolence, passive resistance movement. The people of Montgomery were quick to respond to the boycott suggestion "because almost everybody had experienced some type of humiliation" on the busses, she said.

Mrs. Parks, who was born in Tuskegee, Ala., said that she was not disturbed about the small crowd. "As long as one other person is going in your direction," she commented, "you have company."

Mrs. Parks was introduced by the Rev. C. S. Scott, pastor of the East Side Baptist church and vice president of the NAACP branch.

The Rev. Fred Stephens, pastor of the Bethel AME church, presided.

Opening remarks were made by Clarence Laws, field secretary for the NAACP, who urged that Kansas Citians reach their goal of 6,000 NAACP members in the current membership drive.

Closing remarks were made by Judge Carl R. Johnson, president of the branch. Invocation was offered by the Rev. Preston Allen and benediction by the Rev. Therion Cobbs. Others seated on the platform were the Rev. J. J. Washington, assistant pastor of the Metropolitan church: and Mrs. Jessie Powell, chairman of the 1957 membership drive. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Edwin H. Branch, was out of the city.

Negro Girl Found Guilty In Bus Row

A Negro girl found guilty yesterday of assault and battery against a 15-year-old white girl in a scuffle over a bus seat immediately appealed the conviction.

Recorder's Coury Judge D. Eugene Loe fined Fannie Robinson $50 and costs after hearing conflicting testimony describing the fight which followed the Negro girl's attempt to sit down beside Barbara Anne Heflin Smith.

Mrs. Smith, married since the incident, swore out a warrant against the Robinson girl and the case came before Recorder's Court Nov. 7.

AGE QUESTION

At that time, Judge Loe turned the case over to Juvenile Court when the Negro girl and her mother said the defendant was only 17 years old. Later investigation revealed the girl was actually 18.

During yesterday's proceedings, Judge Loe fined the Robinson girl and her mother $10 each for contempt of court in connection with the false swearing about the girl's age.

Mrs. Smith testified that she was sitting in an aisle seat, with schoolbooks beside her, when the Robinson girl entered the bus and asked permission to sit down. "No, you're not going to sit by me," Mrs. Smith said she replied.

SLAPS EXCHANGED

The Negro girl then sat down in the available space beside her and "bumped" her over, Mrs. Smith testified. She said the girl then sat in her lap "and I gave her a push."

"She turned around and slapped me and I slapped her back," Mrs. Smith said, and a fight ensued.

Mrs. Smith and a state witness testified that there were other seats available at the time of the incident, while the Robinson girl and three defense witnesses also differed from Mrs. Smith's testimony in regard to the first blow struck. The defense maintained it was Mrs. Smith who first slapped the Negro girl.

Negro attorney Fred Gray, representing the defendant, said he felt it was unfortunate that the incident had occurred and had been magnified.

38b 1957

ALABAMA

Tell It To Old Grandma

Advertiser 1-4-A

Your name and address must be given on letter ★ But upon request, name will often be withheld at the Editor's discretion ★ We reserve the right to shorten letters ★ No poetry, please ★ Repeat: No letter will be printed unless Editor knows who wrote it.

Montgomery, Ala.

Single-Seat System For Buses

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER — I enclose copy of letter I have written Hon. W. A. Gayle, mayor of Montgomery. I would like this suggestion carried in your great paper. 1-11-57

I honestly believe a plan of this sort given sincere thought in a broad way, with open mind, with fairness and justice to all has great possibilities.

J. E. HATHCOCK

Dothan, Ala.

38b

Editor, The Advertiser:
Hon. W. A. Gayle, Mayor
City of Montgomery
Montgomery, Alabama
Dear Sir:

I am very reluctant to write you concerning the matter of bus segregation as well as segregation in other public transportation, but over the years I have seen it happen so many times that a big problem is solved in a simple way, and I can't get it out of my mind and believe sincerely if the bus and other transportation people would convert to a system where passengers would have a single seat to themselves (similar to the chair car on the trains) there could be no objection as to where the passenger sit.

In this way white and Negro would not be rubbing arms nor would the working men from the machine shop or foundry that might be unable to change his greasy or soiled clothes to fresh clean clothes before he boards the bus or train and reaches home. I am sure many working men feel reluctant or embarressed to sit by a lady with his working clothes on when she has been downtown with her nice clothes shopping.

It would of course cost the bus people some money to convert to the single seat system, but I don't believe anyone would object to paying a penny or even a few pennies more fare to have a seat all to themselves and enjoy that freedom and convenience.

It appears to me this would solve lots of trouble and be much better for everybody.

J. E. HATCHCOCK

Dothan

Thousands Cheer Leader Of Montgomery Bus Protest

BY THADDEUS T. STOKES

Every branch of the Federal government must speak out against racial segregation if democracy is to survive, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., 28, of Montgomery, Ala. told a cheering crowd of more than 7,000, New Year's Day. "We must demand the judicial, legislative and executive branches to use all constitutional powers to enforce laws of the land," said the speaker.

Rev. King, a native of Atlanta and a graduate of Morehouse College, was speaking at the 94th Anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation during a noon-day celebration at Big Bethel AME Church on Auburn Ave., N. E.

"So far the judicial branch of the Federal government has fought all of the civil rights battles. We must seek to have the legislative branch to take a stand on civil rights as well as ask President Eisenhower to do all he can. The federal government has made it obvious that it is more concerned with what is happening in Budapest than in Birmingham or in Hungary than in Mississippi" declared King, pastor of a Baptist church in Montgomery and president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, which spearheaded the famous bus boycott, there a year ago.

PRAISES NAACP

Praising the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for its continuous fight for racial equality he called on the congregation to contribute more to the organization. He added, "and where the NAACP is outlawed in the various Southern states, the churches must carry on its philosophy. We must give big money for civil rights and freedom."

At this point he struck out at Senator Eastland of Mississippi by saying: "I can never like Eastland. I will not ever like him until he changes his ways. I don't like what he is doing in Washington (D. C) and I don't like his attitude toward Negroes."

However, he hastened to explain to the audience the differences between "like" and "love". He warned them against the evil doom of hate, bitterness. "Understanding and good will in the heart cause love, mercy and forgiveness."

"I do not hate Eastland, but I do dislike his way," said Rev. King who is also a graduate of Boston and Harvard universities.

DEATH GROANS

Rev. King called the racial uprising in Tennessee, Alabama, Florida and other southern states as "the death groans of a dying period in history." He said, "let nobody fool you, nothing can nullify it. The noise from the southern legislators about public school segregation and segregation on public transportation is only a symbol of a dying order.

He warned his Negro audience about the new order with "a new day in American history brings new responsibilities as the birth and growth of anything in the biological or psychological sphere brings pains.

The speaker said "the Negro has made a revaluation of himself. He has discovered that racial segregation produces false concepts in the segregated, who is made to feel inferior and in the segregator, who wrongly feels he is superior.

NON VIOLENCE

"The new order of the day should be met with non-violence because if Negroes use violence like the white man in America has, the struggle for racial equality will be lost," said King.

"With the passing of the old world and the coming of the new, there comes certain responsibilities. He advised the congregation to:

(1) Rise above narrow individualism. Be concerned with broader concepts. Live together or die separately. Scientists have forced us to live together.

(2) Make a spiritual contribution to the brotherhood of all mankind.

(3) Be ready and prepared in every area, because we must be able to compete in the new age with people, not racial color. The new age brings the challenge of excellence in achievement.

(4) Learn tolerance, understanding, good will, love, mercy and forgiveness because there is a danger of carrying these qualities from the old into the new day, which would cause the new order to tumble. Blot out all bitterness.

(5) Oppose violence. Because unborn generations would be recipients of bitterness, which is presently the cry in Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery and many other places.

(6) Aim not to defeat white men if we do, we have lost. We are out to fight injustice, dark evil of inequality, and racial segregation which keep down white and black men alike.

REMEMBER GOD

"Remember God the universe, and all christianity is on the side of justice and all that is good and dignified," said Rev. King.

However, he readily warned, "there is a danger if you stop fighting at this point. We must hasten the death of old-man-segregation. He is on his death bed, however, an oxygen-tent can keep him alive a long time."

Segregation is a cancer in the body politic, which must be removed if democracy is to live.

He blasted the Republican and Democratic parties with "the right wing of the northern Republicans and the prissy wing of the Southern Democratics have formed coalitions to prevent any civil rights legislation from becoming law." He added, both parties over the years have defied the Negroes.

SEEK EDUCATION

Rev. King continued "we must use legislation and education. We don't want to control the internal feelings by legislation however, he can use law to control the external treatment perpetrated.

The native Atlantan criticized the Negro for the amount of money spending on the frivolous things of life. "We need calm but determined leaders. Atlanta should be a leader in civil rights because "you have the resources."

He referred to Auburn Avenue as the richest street in America with Negro businesses.

Criticizing men of his own profession, Rev. King said "any minister who, at this period of history, is not a leader of his people is not worthy of being called a minister."

He warned the people to use passive resistance, but "have courage and oppose segregation with all our soul. It might mean going to jail. Then fill it up. Because physical death is the price we must pay to prevent a psychological death. Going to jail or dying is worth it. It is better to be a free pauper than a rich slave.

REV. KING CITED BY ATLANTA MINISTERS — Rev. Benjamin W. Bickers (R) awards Rev. M. L. King, Jr. special plaque on behalf of Atlanta Ministers — (Perry's Photo)

In conclusion he told the applauding congregation which was standing in every available space inside, in a basement room and all on the outside, "the segregators will stand before the world splattered with Negro blood and smelling with the stinch of his deed, said Dr. King.

He wa sintroduced by Rev. Samuel Williams, pastor of Friendship Baptist Church.

Dr. King was presented with a plaque for his "outstanding contribution to his race, the United States and to the world," by Rev. Benjamin Bickers, pastor of Mount Pleasant Baptist Church.

Immediately after the main speech, officers of the local NAACP were installed: They were: John H Calhoun, president; Dr. C. Clayton Powell, first vice-president; Rev Samuel Williams, second vice-president; Mrs. Eunice Cooper, secretary; Mrs. Charlie Mae Smith, assistant secretary and John Gloster treasurer.

Several donation to the NAACP during an appeal by Rev. M. L King, Sr., father of Dr. King and pastor of Ebenezer Baptist Church

Others appearing on the program were:

Big Bethel Choir No. 2, under direction of H. J. Furlow; Baritone Ulrich George who sang "Invictus"; Mrs. Eunice Cooper who crowned Miss Gwendolyn Everett "Miss NAACP"; Raphael McIver, who read excerpts from the Emancipation Proclamation; Mrs. Victoria Weldon Butts, Atlanta NAACP Youth Council, who read excerpts from the 1954 U. S. Supreme Court decision on segregation in public schools; and Organist Graham W. Jackson; Rev. R. B. Shorts, a CME presiding Elder; and Rev. H. I. Bearden, pastor of Big Bethel and master of ceremonies and President J. P. Brawley of Clark College.

An estimated 1,000 were turned away after they could not gain entrance.

Posts new rewards—

Violence anarchy, Folsom declares

News
Birmingham Ala.
1-28-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 28—(AP)—Gov. James E. Folsom denounced as "anarchy" today the renewal of violence in racially troubled Montgomery. He posted a blanket $2000 reward for the arrest of anyone convicted of throwing bombs.

Mon. 1-28-57

Folsom's statement to a meeting of his cabinet came after a Negro home and filling station were bombed yesterday and another bomb containing 12 sticks of dynamite was found unexploded at the home of the Rev. M. L. King Jr.

The governor had posted a $2000 reward Jan. 10 after an earlier series of bombings following the end of racial segregation on Montgomery city buses.

TODAY HE announced the reward would apply to "all bombings throughout the state" and that the same amount would be offered in each incident. Negro leaders in Birmingham and Mobile also have been targets of bombs and bomb threats.

The Montgomery city commission posted a $2000 reward yesterday.

Folsom declared that "as far as I'm concerned, these bombings are anarchy pure and simple whether done by Negro hoodlums or white hoodlums."

He said he will "insist on" prosecution of anyone charged with the bombings and that they will be "prosecuted in any court where anarchy can be prosecuted."

The governor didn't elaborate on the latter statement or explain whether he meant prosecution in federal courts.

King, a Negro minister who has led the campaign for racial equality in Montgomery and whose home was bombed last Jan. 30 and fired on by a shotgun blast later, told his congregation yesterday that the state capital has become "dangerous to live in."

A dynamite bomb damaged a home and a service station-taxi stand near King's unoccupied home, flying glass slightly injuring three men. A 12-stick dynamite bundle, fuse still smoldering, was found on the front porch of King's home and dismantled by authorities.

AND LAST night in incident No. 15 a white television newscaster was shot at twice but not hit. He said he had been threatened by persons he thinks were Negroes.

Bob Underwood of Station WCOV-TV said "I would assume this was connected with the threatening telephone calls." Two large caliber bullets hit his car as he was leaving his studios, one penetrating the windshield about a foot from him, police reported.

Underwood said he had "tried to be fair with white and Negro" in his news coverage but callers who "judging by their voices" were Negroes accused him of slanting his reporting against Negroes. He reported "about two dozen" threatening calls since a Negro bus boycott began.

Montgomery's city buses were racially integrated by federal court order Dec. 21 at the end of the 381-day boycott. Two days later King's home, which had been slightly damaged by a bomb last Jan. 30, was hit by a shotgun blast.

Within the next two weeks buses were ambushed by gunfire six times and, after several bus operation restrictions including a complete stop, bus service is now restricted to daytime trips with police cars following the last runs at dusk. A young Negro woman was shot in both legs in one of the bus attacks.

King said he and his family are "very seldom there at night" since earlier attacks on the floodlit white bungalow.

He told his Baptist congregation that Negroes must stick to a policy of non-violence that he has advocated since the boycott began.

"Our oppressors control the police, the National Guard even, and if they send the federal government in here that will be white folks too," King said in his Sunday sermon.

Negroes have asked President Eisenhower to speak out on the racial situation in Montgomery. City authorities have refused outside help to curb violence.

As he had after the Jan. 10 bombings, FBI Agent Fred Hallford of Mobile said "the available facts" of yesterday's bombing were sent to the Justice Department "to determine if there is any federal jurisdiction." So far federal agents have not been publicly involved in investigations of the Montgomery violence.

SPEAKING OF Negro fear, King said in his sermon that he had been "scared to death" by threats when the boycott began. But one sleepless night in January, 1956, when "rationality left me . . . almost out of nowhere I heard a voice" saying not to be afraid in leading the movement.

"Let us not get our guns because that will not solve the problems," King earlier told a crowd gathered in the dawn at his home. He urged them to "remain calm."

But anger was visible on Negro faces. Police Chief G. J. Ruppenthal said one Negro was "trying to incite a riot" and accusing police of not trying to solve the bombings or shootings.

The Negro was booked for disorderly conduct at city jail as Vurlie Wilkins, 28. He and another Negro, Samuel Wallace, 26, jailed on the same charge, were bonded out at $100 each.

The damaged home was occupide by Allen Robertson, 59-year-old hospital attendant who said he knew of no reason why he should have been attacked, and his wife and daughter. The injured Negro men were around the taxi office.

Folsom cabinet meets in prayer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (AP) — Gov. James E. Folsom called in the pastor of his church today to deliver an invocation and short talk to his weekly cabinet meeting.

Dr. J. R. White, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Montgomery, told the cabinet members, discussing bad and evil actions, that "every angry word bounces back," but that goodwill also returns manyfold.

White came here recently from Jacksonville, Fla.

Negroes' trials in bus cases delayed

News 1-44
Fri. 2-8-57
Birmingham Ala.

Recorders Court trials of 22 Negroes charged with violation of the city's bus segregation ordinances have been continued until March 1.

City Atty. J. H. Willis said the trials that were originally scheduled Monday have been continued to allow U. S. District Court here to rule on whether jurisdiction falls to federal or state courts.

Willis said Recorders Court trials were passed by agreements between Atty. Arthur D. Shores and city attorneys with the approval of Judge Ralph E. Parker.

The City Commissioners and the Birmingham Transit Co. have been named as defendants in a federal court complaint asking an injunction against enforcement of the bus segregation ordinances.

Both the bus company and commission have asked that the complaint be dismissed and hearings on those motions have been set Feb. 21 before Federal Judge H. H. Grooms.

Birmingham Bus Protest Leader To Speak At Wheat Street

Daily World
Fri. 2-15-57
Atlanta, Ga.
P. 3

REV. F. L. SHUTTLESWORTH

One of Alabama's famed bus protest leaders will appear Sunday at Wheat Street Baptist Church, Dr. William Holmes Borders, pastor, and will bring the message at 11 A. M. He is the president of the Alabama Christian Movement and leader in civic affairs in Birmingham, Alabama and since becoming leader of this militant group, Dr. Shuttlesworth has been in much demand throughout the nation as a public speaker.

Super Committee Proposed—

Work On Racial Bills Slowed By Kaul Plan

Post-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.
Thurs. 5-30-57

MONTGOMERY, May 29 (AP) — Legislative committee put the soft pedal on racial bills today as Alabama lawmakers talked seriously about setting up a super committee to pass on such legislation.

The plan was advanced by Jefferson County's Rep. Hugh Kaul during a session of the House Local Government Committee on a bill to ban race-mixing in sports, public amusements and recreation.

Kaul's proposal gained quick support in the committee and prompted Rep. Charles W. McKay of Talladega, the sponsor, to move that no action be taken on his bill until the super committee idea is pursued further.

At a closed door session the House Education Committee took a look at a series of bills by Rep. Gregory Oakley of Wilcox proposing to lay the groundwork for a private school system if necessary to retain segregated classrooms.

KAUL

The committee chairman, Rep. Vernon Summerlin of Crenshaw, announced afterward that no action was taken on Oakley's bills.

Among those appearing before the committee was Dr. A. R. Meadows, state school superintendent, who previously had come out in opposition to the private school plan.

The proposed super committee for racial legislation appeare dto be gaining support among the lawmakers as a means of culling out bills which might weaken rather than strengthen the Legislature's hand in attempting to preserve segregation.

Kaul suggested that a joint Senate-House Advisory Committee composed of some of the ablest members of each House screen all bills involving the racial issue in order that only best measures be presented to the Legislature for passage.

After the special committee gave its approval, he said, the other committees and members of both Houses could run the legislation through with a minimum of opposition or delay.

Lawyers and jurists from over the state came before the Senate Judiciary Committee to give their view on the judicial reform bill now pending in the Senate. A companion bill has passed the House.

Post-Herald

Circuit Judge L. S. Moore of Centreville spoke against the bill, which he said would cause confusion rather than simplyfy and streamline court procedures.

He said only about 10 per cent of Alabama lawyers know how to practice under federal rules on which the proposed new rules are based and the others would be lost in using them.

Birmingham, Ala. Thurs. 5-30-57

Moore suggested that no one would know for sure how some of the rules apply until they were brought to the Supreme Court for clarification.

Montgomery's Walter B. Jones, dean of Alabama's circuit judges, testified for the new rules, which he said would serve the cause of justice in state courts and make it "more certain and prompter."

"Frankly, I am not so much concerned with the effect the rules will have on the members of the legal profession in Alabama, as I am with the good effect the rules will have on Alabama and her people," he said.

"After all is said and done, the courts of this state belong to the people. While they let us judges and lawyers run the courts to a large extent, we are in the administration of justice, but the trustees of the people."

Jones discounted arguments that the new rules would restrict the authority of juries or weaken the jury system.

The new rules in no way disturb the fundamental principle of jury trial, he said.

"If there is the slightest evidence supporting the case on one side, or if it is contradicted by the slightest evidence on the other side," he said, "under the sintilla rule the judge cannot take the case from the jury or give them a conditional direction as to how to decide it."

Sen. Albert Davis of Pickens, a committee member who has been waging a one-man delaying campaign aimed at the judicial reform bill, questioned Jones vigorously as to powers that would be given to judges under the new rules.

After a public hearing which brought strong opposition from the milk industry and farm groups, the Senate Education Committee voted 10-4 to postpone indefinitely a bill proposed to let school boards purchase school milk under competitive bids.

School officials said they probably could save as much as two cents on a pint of milk if they were not bound by the price fixed by the State Milk Control Board. School milk now sells at 6¾ cents per pint.

By the saving possible in contracting for milk in quantity and under competitive bids, several spokesmen pointed out that schools would be able to serve more nourishing meals and provide additional free lunches for children who couldn't afford them otherwise.

Sen. Herman Vann of Madison commented at this point that he wasn't too much interested in the free lunch program and felt that, in many instances parents could dig up the money to pay for their children's lunches if they knew they wouldn't be fed otherwise.

He said many such children probably are given money to attend picture shows on Saturday which could have been applied to paying for their lunches.

Two administration-sponsored bills to set up a system of inland dock facilities on Alabama's navigable waterways were unanimously approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

One would empower the State Docks Department to float a $10-million-bond issue for inland docks development projects and the other is a constitutional amendment to waive the barrier to the state engaging in internal improvement works.

The ways and means group also voted 9-3 to give a favorable report to a bill by Rep. Emmett Oden of Franklin to knock off the state sales tax on farm tractors and farm machinery.

But later the group postponed consideration of a measure by Rep. Charles Nice of Jefferson proposing to lift the 3 per cent sales tax on uniforms for Boy and Girl Scouts.

Rep. Bryce Davis of Cullman moved to carry the bill over a week because he objected to "nibbling away" at the state's revenues for public schools.

Davis also moved to delay action on another bill by Rep Nice to allow the federal government to look at state income and sales tax returns. Nice said the state now has access to federal income tax returns and the federal government wants the same right.

The Cullman representative said he was against the bill "because we've already given away too much power to the federal government."

Folsom May Ask School Fund Hike

Post-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

Bigger Request Is Predicted

Wed. 6-12-57

MONTGOMERY, June 11 (AP) —An administration leader in the Alabama House of Representatives predicted today Gov. James E. Folsom will raise his request for educational funds for the next two years because of increased school tax revenue.

A short time later across the corridor, Sen. George Yarbrough of Randolph County introduced a new educational appropriation bill calling for budgets of $109,878,000 a year.

Folsom recommended $104 million when the Legislature opened.

The indications of more money for education came after presidents of Alabama's white colleges warned Folsom and the Legislature in an open letter that lack of school funds might force an "arbitrary limitation" on student enrollments.

Noting that Negro colleges face similar problems, the seven presidents warned:

"We cannot expect to meet the minimum requirements for accreditation of our several institutions during the next few years" without substantially increased operation funds. "In some cases, threatened loss of accrediation may require an arbitrary limitation of enrollments.

"Accreditation, once lost, will cost far more to regain than to maintain what we now have."

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery told the House school taxes should produce between $113 and $114 million next year.

Folsom's budget message to the Legislature May 7 recommended $104 million per fiscal year but Dawkins said the indications of more money probably will move Folsom to raise the recommendation.

Post-Herald

The next fiscal year begins Oct. 1. Educational funds have been prorationed this year because revenue fell short of expectations for a number of months, although it is picking up now according to recent financial checks.

Wed. 6-12-57

The college presidents said they originally were granted $11,065,000 for this year. The Legislature cut that and then proration further reduced it to about $9,750,000 over-all.

But now, they said, the governor has recommended a "considerably less" amount of $9,800,00 a year.

With students' fees already up from 20 to 40 per cent, "Alabama simply cannot afford to discourage college enrollments by further increases in student fees.

"The economy of the entire state will falter if education at the highest level is not adequately and competitively supported," they wrote.

Competition from neighboring states is making it difficult to hold faculty members, the letter said, and "faculty losses, if continued, will mean the loss of accreditation."

Southern Bell fights excise tax for cities

News P.-I.
Sun. 5-26-57
Birmingham, Ala.

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 25—House and Senate bills authorizing Alabama cities and towns to levy a 3 per cent excise tax on telephone company charges to users were strongly opposed Saturday by the head of Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. in this state.

It has been estimated that such a tax would bring in about $1 million more yearly to the municipalities.

Harry B. Lackey, Southern Bell's Alabama commercial manager, declared "the total taxes already paid by users of telephone service is in excess of any other utility in the state."

TAYLOR

Slapping at House Bill No. 369, introduced by Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa and others, and at Senate Bill No. 206, introduced by Sen. E. L. Roberts of Etowah, Lackey said:

"The pending bills now before the Legislature are not designed to equalize taxes, but rather to permit municipalities to raise additional revenue."

He pointed out that the state already levies a 2½ per cent privilege license on telephone and telegraph companies, with the revenue from this earmarked for schools throughout the state. But he said this tax is not levied against other public utilities in Alabama.

Part of a series

THE ROBERTS and Adams bills are part of a series sponsored by the Alabama League of Municipalities to raise some $10 million more yearly for cities and towns.

Ed Reid, league executive director, said the measures would permit municipalities levy the same local tax on telephone companies that already is being collected from other public utilities. He cited Alabama Power Co., Southern Natural Gas Co. and Alabama Gas Corp. as among those already required to pay cities and towns 3 per cent taxes.

Reid pointed out that present municipal licenses on telephone companies are based on population, with total annual payments being about $70,000 in the state.

He added that under the Roberts and Adams bills, Southern Bell would have to pay approximately $1 million, as compared to $1.5 million paid by Alabama Power Co. under a law already on the books.

Additional tax

LACKEY SAID, however, the proposed municipal excise tax "would be in addition to all other taxes over every kind, such as federal, state and local taxes now assessed."

"A thorough study of taxes now paid by Southern Bell in its 92 exchanges, and by the 68 independent telephone companies in their 152 exchanges in Alabama was recently completed by the legislative interim committee on municipal government in Alabama," Lackey added.

(This interim committee was headed by Rep. Adams, the League of Municipalities' House floor leader).

"This committee found that the municipalities already have authority to levy a license tax not to exceed 3 per cent of the gross receipts of power, gas and water utility companies, and have authority to levy fixed rate license taxes, based on population of the municipality, on telephone companies."

Lackey cited the printed report made by Rep. Adams' interim committee, which stated:

"However, the committee calls attention to the fact that the state presently levies a privilege license of 2½ per cent on telegraph and telephone companies, which receipts are earmarked for the Special Educational Trust Fund, while the state does not levy a like license tax against the other utilities."

Telephone tax high

THE LEGISLATIVE committee report stated further that "the total license tax paid by the various utilities to the municipalities or to the state are approximately equal at the present time."

Lackey's statement added: "This committee found that the tax rate for telephone companies is higher at the state level and lower at the municipal level than the taxes for the power, gas and water utility companies.

"In addition to the state and local taxes, there is a 10 per cent federal excise tax on all local and long distance service rendered by telephone companies. Therefore, the total taxes paid by the users of telephone service is in excess of any other utility in the state."

The Southern Bell manager pointed out further that "each city and town in the state benefits directly or indirectly from the state privilege license tax of 2½ per cent (collected from telephone companies) because these funds are dedicated exclusively to education throughout the state."

Certain exemptions

THE ADAMS and Roberts bills provide that "no tax shall be imposed on local telephone service billed to the United States, State of Alabama and the political subdivisions and agencies, board commissions and authorities thereof."

Section 4 of the bills, which are identical, says the 3 per cent tax "shall apply to all charges made for local exchange telephone service, exclusive of federal excise and similar taxes."

This section also states that "the amount of the guaranteed charge on each bill rendered for semi-public coin box telephone service shall be the amount subject to such tax."

But it adds that "messages which are paid for by inserting coins in coin-operated telephones shall not be taxable, nor shall the seller be liable for the collection or payment of such tax upon uncollected charges or accounts."

Roberts' bill was sent to the Senate municipalities committee, while Adams' bill was sent to the House local government committee, of which he is chairman. Sen. Roland Cooper of Wilcox is chairman of the upper chamber committee.

ONE OF THE MOST hotly fought-over pieces of legislation was the so-called "unfair" cigaret sales act, which was finally pushed through during the 1951 session, after numerous attempts to get it enacted.

This measure, which prevents cigaret dealers from selling below cost as a "loss leader" item, also has been attacked in the courts. And two or three attempts have been made to repeal it.

Friday, Rep. Roland Faulk of Geneva, who fought the passage of this act, dropped in a bill (House Bill No. 341) to repeal it. The bill was sent to the ways and means committee.

Requires Ignoring Decisions 'Voided' By Legislature

Post & Times Herald
Ala. 5-25-57 P.1

MONTGOMERY, May 24 (AP)—The Alabama Legislature saw the start today of efforts to investigate recent attacks on segregation laws and at the same time compel public officials to disregard Supreme Court integration orders.

A resolution to create a joint Senate-House racial investigation committee was introduced in the Senate. It went to the Rules Committee for study.

Across the corridor, Rep. Charles W. McKay Jr., of Talladega County offered a bill to require the governor and other elected state and city officials, including judges, to refrain from carrying out any Supreme Court decisions which the Legislature has declared "null and void."

A strong new nullification resolution which previously passed the House was approved by the Senate three days ago attempting to set aside the school integration decision and all others which the Legislature contends violated states rights.

McKay's bill introduced today would compel public officials to follow the Legislature's mandate despite the fact that they are sworn to defend the federal as well as the state Constitution.

Failure to comply with the law would be regarded as "malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance" in office.

Sen. Vaughn Hill Robison of Montgomery introduced a resolution to investigate recent activities of Negro groups who are challenging segregation laws in Alabama. It didn't mention any organization by name.

The resolution, which also bore the names of about a dozen cosigners, provides for an eight-member committee empowered to subpoena witnesses and records and to compel witnesses to testify under oath.

A report on the findings of the investigation would be made to the Legislature within 40 days after the committee was created. The committee would be composed of six members elected by the House and Senate, plus the lieutenant governor and speaker of the House.

No mention was made of the Supreme Court decision outlawing city bus segregation in Montgomery or the Federal Court ruling in Birmingham which ordered the University of Alabama to admit a Negro student. The co-ed, Autherine Lucy, later was expelled.

The resolution referred only to "recent attacks on our traditional way of life," and said they "apepar to be the result of a planned attempt on the part of a certain undesirable, irresponsible element in our society to subvert and destroy the established order of the state."

Such attempts to challenge the racial tradition, the resolution added, "can only result in racial turmoil, strife and tension . . ."

A one-man filibuster which developed in the Senate during the day managed to delay consideration of a controversial court reform bill at least one day.

Sen. Albert Davis of Pickens County, determined to stall off the House-approved bill as long as possible, forced the Senate to listen to the reading at length of all bills, messages and resolutions.

The court measure was on the secretary's desk for first reading after clearing the House Tuesday and Davis said he would insist on having that read word for word, too. The bill is 30 pages long.

But the Senate never got to the court measure today, so officially it has never reached the upper chamber. The members recessed for the week-end while new Senate bills still were being introduced.

Among the new Senate measures received aws one to allow cities to levy a $5 a year automobile license tax.

Another would authorize them to put a 3 per cent excise tax on telephone users. Customers would pay the tax on their phone bills. The cities already have the right to levv similar taxes against other utilities.

Post-Herald

The Senate approved a resolution by Sen. Gerald Bradford of Clarke County opposing any move in Washington to give the U. S. Labor Department control over vocational education in the states. Bradford said an effort in that direction seems to be building up.

Lawmaking activity in the House was on the routine side. Members confined their attention to non-controversal local and general bills. Some were brought up out of order by special permission.

An impending floor fight over three bills proposing to raise salaries of Alabama's Circuit Court of Appeals and Supreme Court judges by $5000 a year was averted when the sponsor, Rep. Joe Goodwyn of Montgomery, asked that they be carried over until next Tuesday.

Among the measures passed and sent to the Senate was one by Rep. George Hawkins of Etowah to make a special $100,000 appropriation for purchase of property in Birmingham for a state health center.

Hawkins said arrangements have been made to buy some 11½ blocks of slum clearance property adjacent to the University of Alabama Medical School for a price of $2,750,000 to be paid over a period of years.

For the third time in recent years, the House passed a bill to substitute a county mineral documentary stamp tax in place of the present ad valorem tax on non-producing oil, gas or other mineral interests.

It is virtually the same as a bill passed by the Legislature in 1953 but knocked out as unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court. The court said that as a revenue bill, it should have originated in the House rather than the Senate.

A series of bills to put stiffer penalties in Alabama's narcotic laws and bring them in line with the federal statutes was introduced by Sen. Neil Matcalf of Geneva in the Senate, and Rep. Walter Perry of Jefferson, in the House.

Maximum penalty would be a $20,000 fine and 20 years in prison for each offense. One of the bills outlawing traffic in heroin carried the death sentence for selling the drug to a minor.

Other new bills offered today included those by:

Rep. Roland Faulk of Geneva—To repeal the unfair cigaret sales act passed several years ago.

Rep. W. L. (Doc) Martin of Greene—To authorize special food for some '0 tuberculosis patients now confined in state prisons.

Rep. E. K. Hanby of Etowah—To allow the U. S. Internal Revenue Service access to state income tax records.

Rep. Ralph Windle of Pickins—To specify that nominees for board of registrars must be submitted to the state appointing board by county commissioners, city governing bodies and county boards of education.

Daily World
Jan. 1-12-57
Atlanta, Ga.
P.

SOUTHERN NEGRO LEADERS view one of two telegrams, criticizing recent bombings and acts of violence, that were sent at the close of a conference here to leaders of the current southwide bus integration movement. Reading the telegram are, left to right, C. K. Steele, Tallahassee, Fla.; T. J. Jemison, Baton Rouge, La.; M. L. King, Jr., Montgomery, Ala., and F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham, Ala. The two messages came from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and author, Lillian Smith. — (Perry's Photo)

NEGRO LEADER'S PLEA

Advertiser P.1

President Asked To Speak Against Acts Of Violence

Mon. 1-14-57

Montgomery, Ala.

A Negro minister whose church and home were bombed recently prayed in the damaged church yesterday for "just a word" from President Eisenhower against violence in Montgomery.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, a pro-integration leader, said he had suspended all night services at his Negro First Baptist Church "because we feel it might endanger the lives of our congregation."

Some other ministers who were the targets of six bombings early Thursday urged from their pulpits that their attackers be forgiven. They pledged to continue efforts to obtain complete racial equality.

There were no other reports of night services being canceled.

The bombings came three weeks after Negroes won racial equality on Montgomery buses under federal court order. Bus service was suspended indefinitely by the city commission after the bombings. No one was injured in the attacks.

The Rev. U. J. Fields, pastor of Bell Street Baptist Church which the fire department declared unsafe for use after it was bombed, held services for his congregation in the basement of another church. Fields said the city should assume responsibility for repairing his church since, he claimed, it had not provided proper police protection.

Fields also called for Eisenhower to step into the situation. The Rev. H. H. Johnson, pastor of the bombed Hutchinson Street Baptist Church, told his congregation at the damaged church that "there seems every reason for the FBI to come into this."

The Justice Department was reported studying whether the federal government has jurisdiction to enter the case.

Advertiser

Abernathy, vice president of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., that has led Negro integration efforts for 13 months, prayed for the President "to speak out on this situation." P. 2-a

With boarded up windows flanking him where stained glass had been, Abernathy said "we know that if the President would just say a word to the city it would have great value."

The minister also asked "moral courage for the city officials," who he said are not now providing sufficient police protection. Yesterday was a "dark and bleak Sunday for all churches in our city," Abernathy said, "including our white churches."

The Rev. Robert Graetz, white pastor of a Negro Trinity-Lutheran congregation, took as his sermon theme "How Often Shall We Forgive," and asked forgiveness again for his attackers. His home was bombed for the second time Thursday night.

Graetz reported that since then he had received one threat, "which isn't more than normal." His young wife spoke up to say there had been several more. "Oh," Graetz said, "I haven't heard about them yet."

MONTGOMERY LIFTS CURFEW FOR BUSES

Commercial Appeal

Collins Says Florida Ready For Mixed Seating

Wed. 1-9-57

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 8. —(UP)—The City of Montgomery decided Tuesday to lift the sundown curfew on buses because of "good co-operation" form the public. In Florida, Gov. Leroy Collins said in his inaugural address the state is ready for bus integration if it is not made compulsory.

Memphis, Tenn.

While tension appeared to be easing in Dixie's bus seating crisis, Negro leaders were marshaling their forces against a "small but willful minority" of whites "dedicated to violence' 'to prevent integration. P. 29

Negro spokesmen will hold a two-day meeting in Atlanta starting Thursday to "spur the campaign" and discuss "violence directed toward the Negro communities."

A series of sniper shots from the dark prompted Montgomery to put a curfew on bus runs after 5 p.m. during the Christmas holidays and the curtailed service later was e xtended through Tuesday night. One pregnant Negro rider was wounded by the sniper fire.

It was in Montgomery that the first court-approved integration of buses began last month when the United States Supreme Court rejected appeals to save the local and state Jim Crow laws. Negroes boycotted the bus line for a year before they won their case.

The city commission decided not to extend the curfew further when Mayor W. A. Gayle reported "we have had a number of requests" to reinstate the service.

"We have had good co-operation fro mthe public,' 'he said.

When the buses return to normal night service Wednesday no extraordinary precautions will be taken, said Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers.

Puts Blame On Police

Post-Herald
Tues. 5-12-57

Your editorial here is very good ("The Law Must Apply to All") but why do you try to defend the disgraceful actions of Commissioner Lindbergh and every member of the police department.

Birm, Ala.

I do not approve of Mr. Weaver's actions but he was entitled to protection from the police department and every police officer on duty at the Terminal knew just what was going to happen to Mr. Weaver when he left the Terminal. Still not one policeman gave him any protection whatever. P. 12

